The portrait, which was watching Joo-hyun's reaction, asked.

“Why did you call the evil spirit?”

“…That’s unexpected, I thought God would know without me having to say anything….”

“That’s an invasion of privacy.”

“……”

“And now I am human.”

“…Oh, yes.”

The being that jumped out of the frame didn't seem very convincing, but I can tell that it's doing its best to live up to human standards. The fact that no witnesses have ever died of a brain explosion upon seeing the black cloak, despite the being claiming to be an evil spirit, is proof of this.

If he had not been considerate, there would have been countless casualties just by looking at it. God could be a disaster just by looking at it.

“Why did you try to summon the evil spirit?”

Joohyun muttered and soon closed his mouth.

“…….”

well.

“…I don’t know.”

“You have no talent for revenge.”

“You know all about my circumstances, don’t you?”

“I just came here smelling the anger.”

“I guess so, I guess so….”

Surely the author, who is an evil spirit, could not be unaware of the circumstances of a mere human being, so his whining about invading privacy seemed like a kind of disguise or consideration.

'No, how could an evil spirit show any consideration?'

Then, wouldn't it be a human imitation to appear as friendly as possible? Most evil spirits are skilled and clever at digging into the human mind, so imitation to that extent wouldn't have been a problem.

I feel more at ease now.

“I trusted people.”

"someone."

“I trusted everyone.”

Joo-Hyeon was the one who had tried to summon Sankalut without any wish. He wanted to relieve his inexplicable impulses even in such a foolish way.

So now, it wouldn't be a big problem to go along with the other evil spirits. Rather, the black cloak that my family talked about felt more familiar, so Juhyun continued talking.

“I trusted my family, I trusted my friends, I trusted my colleagues.”

“Are you a person who is overflowing with trust?”

“I thought I had my doubts… I’m embarrassed that it ended up like this.”

“What happened to this?”

“Some of my people died because of my stupidity, some betrayed me, and some abandoned me.”

“It’s a very sad thing.”

“I’m so angry. I want to ruin everything, but I don’t know how to do it.”

“So you summoned the evil spirit?”

“I thought if I just called it out, something would get better. I tried to show off my skills because I thought I could mess something up. I ended up doing pretty well.”

Even though the evil spirits were authors who were easy to summon, considering that they were able to create something this quickly, it was clear that they had talent. Joo-hyun laughed at his own situation and talent, and also admired them.

“I wanted to do something good.”

There was no need for honor.

“Just… anything….”

"okay."

“I wanted to make a better world.”

“You have a beautiful heart.”

“…That would be fine….”

I knew it would be difficult, but it was harder than I imagined.

“Isn’t this too much?”

It was a complaint that could be made when dealing with evil spirits.

“I know that having good intentions doesn’t mean that I will only receive good results. I knew that I couldn’t just struggle alone, so I made a lot of family, friends, and colleagues… but they all died, betrayed me, and left me.”

“…….”

“Look at this. It’s a symbol that can summon Sankalut. If I hold this, the evil spirit can gaze at me more easily. You’re using the knowledge you learned at the Association’s research institute like this. You even made it so well. And you tried to summon the evil spirit without even asking for it.”

really.

“It’s the worst.”

The circumstances surrounding me, and myself.

“It couldn’t be worse than this….”

“Do you feel better after saying that?”

“…Black Cloak, are you an evil spirit?”

“There was a time when quite a few people called me that. Not anymore.”

“I believe you were last seen in Korea quite recently.”

“It happened before I was here.”

“I see, that could be possible.”

“Your work too.”

“…….”

“What do you want?”

It was like the devil's whisper demanding an evil price.

Whether the black cloak was truly an evil spirit, or something similar. In the first place, whether it was a god or a monster. It was a situation where nothing could be known… .

There was no reason not to answer.

“…a town where people die worthlessly, lose loved ones for no reason, and helplessly fall to the ongoing disasters…in hell, where you have to live in fear…”

The terrible karma created by humans, monsters, and nature indiscriminately destroys everyone, regardless of good or evil. No one can be happy or at peace.

“I hope such a tragedy will never happen again.”

“Why?”

“I don’t have the confidence to see that happen any longer.”

“Hmm.”

“I don’t want to see it.”

I tried really hard.

The world continues to create unbearable tragedies as the cruelty of humans and monsters mixes together.

“Can you grant my wish?”

The black cloak answered him.

"? no?"

“…….”

Joohyun raised his head silently and looked at the black cloak.

“…Wasn’t this the time to propose a deal and grant my wish?”

“I’m sorry, but I don’t interact with the physically and mentally weak. Talking about trading is a big deal.”

“Isn’t it usually more profitable to deal with the mentally and physically weak? Can an evil spirit say something like that in the first place?”

“Above all, God is more insignificant and incompetent than you think.”

The black cloak asked with a pitiful look.

“You weren’t thinking of wishing for something like world peace, were you?”

“…I also thought it wouldn’t work, but I think it’s too honest.”

“Look, gentleman. I just came here to find a friend to exchange letters with. I’m sorry, but I think you’d better give up on your dream of world peace.”

“So, it’s not that I want world peace, I just want to try to contribute in some way….”

“Isn’t it the same thing in the end?”

“…I can’t say no.”

No, wait a minute.

“…A friend to exchange letters with? So, you mean a pen pal?”

“Will you do it? I can send it to you in the prettiest handwriting possible.”

“I don’t even know why that would be necessary… but what would be good or bad for me if you did it?”

“That you won’t have to go hungry in the future, and that you might end up like a pig?”

“They all sound so similar that it’s hard to tell which is better and which is worse.”

“You’re so prickly. Why, you’re the type of person who has a lot of friends, so why don’t you include me in some of them?”

“There’s something else to add….”

Than that.

“…Was it true that I asked you earlier if you were hungry?”

“I said that because you look like you could explode a nuclear bomb in this small country called Korea.”

“You know about nuclear bombs? No, but why did you ask me if I was hungry? That doesn’t make sense.”

“Usually, people who try to buy something without thinking do so because they are hungry.”

“Doesn’t it seem unusual?”

“You could say it’s a human error that occurs when the stomach is not strong.”

“I think you’ve misunderstood humans. What does causing an accident have to do with having a strong stomach…?”

“That’s why I’m asking.”

The portrait seemed to be smiling in the shadow of the cloak.

“Aren’t you hungry?”

“…….”

He kept asking me if I was hungry, so he was really persistent in a strange way.

‘… What is his intention? Since he is an evil spirit, it cannot be seen as the traditional mercy of God. It is clear that he wants something… .’

Joohyun tried to think calmly.

“…….”

I tried my best to do that, but it was hard to expect my usual rationality from him, who hadn't eaten or slept for a while.

Half swept away, half captivated by the sweet voice. Joo-hyun did not rebel but agreed.

“…I guess you’re hungry too.”

Suddenly, a thought occurred to me. 'What would happen if I prayed to the evil god for world peace?'

In a dream-indistinguishable unreality, Joo-Hyeon briefly had a meaningless, worthless fantasy.

* * *

The black cloak reached out his hand.

Joohyun was invited to the cabin.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (133)

Episode 133

By the way, 'not associating with the physically and mentally weak' was Argio's opinion.

“I’m a picky eater.”

“You are saying some pretty evil things.”

“If possible, it’s better to be a healthy person.”

Argio took off his hood and continued speaking.

“That kind of person is also fun to watch when he’s angry.”

“…….”

“Hey, gentleman. What’s the problem now?”

“…Oh, I’m sorry.”

“Is it because I’m so handsome? I understand, it’s common.”

“Why am I so unlucky…?”

“What a fun friend to tease.”

"no…."

Joo-Hyeon asked, frowning subtly as if on guard while looking around.

“Aren’t you angry that I’m acting so arrogant?”

“It’ll be expensive to see me angry, but are you sure you can afford it?”

“It’s not that I want to see you angry, it’s just… I’m wondering if you’re not annoyed.”

Whether the opponent's identity was a monster or an evil being, there may not be any real meaning in distinguishing between them, but in any case, he would not leave an arrogant human alone. This was because monsters who could think fundamentally had high pride.

On the other hand, even though he was aware that he was going out of his way, Black Cloak did not show any discomfort. Rather, he seemed to enjoy that sight.

“Why should I be angry?”

“Because you’re arrogant?”

“Then I guess I’ll be the first to die. There’s no one more arrogant than me.”

“That… I don’t really know the criteria for that.”

"so do i."

The evil spirit laughed, his golden eyes gleaming.

“I’m just trying to be careful not to think about things that will cause headaches.”

“You really live so coolly.”

“In a world with so many things to enjoy, why must it always be difficult?”

“Ah… that kind of thing….”

He had the appearance of a considerable hedonist.

“…….”

Rather, the colors were more splendid than I had imagined. Joo-Hyeon’s eyes narrowed slightly.

'It's a color I could never have imagined when I was covered in a dull black cloak.'

Bright red hair and cold golden eyes.

“…What a nice color.”

“Do you like this color the best?”

"yes?"

“It seems like you like provocative and honest people.”

“I’ve never really thought about that….”

“So, today I will try to be Argio, especially to suit your taste.”

“…Hmm? Huh?”

Joo-hyun, who was sitting on the sofa without realizing it, asked.

“Is that what you call your current appearance ‘Argio’?”

"yes."

“Then… there are other appearances too?”

“The shape is the same, only the color is different.”

“It’s not like I’m a chameleon.”

“Chameleons, you could say they’re my distant cousins.”

“Are you kidding…?”

“I guess the ability to change this way and that depending on the situation is similar.”

Soon his color changed to a brilliant platinum, as if bathed in sunlight.

“Isn’t that so?”

“…….”

What is this?

“…Is it the same thing as split personality?”

“It’s not that our personalities are different.”

“The way you speak and your facial expressions are so different, but aren’t they different personalities?”

“It literally just changes color.”

“…Oh, I see.”

I kind of understand it.

'It feels like changing clothes.'

Changing clothes doesn't change the person inside, so from God's perspective, it could be said to be a similar game. Certainly, we shouldn't judge mystical beings by human standards.

Joohyun nodded.

“I know what you mean.”

“Thank you for your understanding.”

“…But I, uh, I feel more comfortable with the red one.”

“Is that so?”

The black cloak, which had suddenly changed into a splendid impression as if it were burning fire, introduced itself.

“I am Argio. If you promise to be my friend, I will tell you my other name. I promise on the honor of my friends that it will not harm you.”

"…that…."

There were still some parts I didn't understand.

“Why do you need friends or pen pals in the first place?”

“I’m shy.”

“Have you come here after killing all the timid people in the world?”

“It’s so hard to make friends.”

“Was it easy for me?”

Strictly speaking, it was natural that Joo-hyun's level of difficulty was higher because he had been betrayed by the world and was extremely sensitive. It would have been easier to make friends with anyone passing by, but it was absurd.

Then Argio said,

“Aren’t you afraid of me?”

“…….”

“Everyone is busy giving me strange looks.”

“…Oh, I see.”

That was definitely the case.

'Most people were probably scared or in awe.'

The status of the Black Cloak in Korea right now is exactly like that. He is famous enough that even children know him, but he is actually quite dangerous, and he is strangely kind, so you don't feel a sense of rejection, but you can't help but feel fear...

'That's a real horror story.'

Urban legends and such.

Perhaps, if Joo-hyun had encountered him in a normal situation, he would have had a similar reaction. There was nothing good about being entangled with a mysterious person with a suspicious identity like the Black Cloak.

"……."

It's because I don't have the minimal capacity to act like that right now.

'… I don't even know why things got like this in the first place… .'

I was barely able to keep my wits about me, but reality was slowly starting to fade away.

'It would be much more convincing if I were dreaming.'

So there were also some things that I could respond to more comfortably. I had been half-mad since I made the sign of Sankalut, and because I had done it with the intention of dying from the beginning, I was in a daze afterwards.

In the midst of all this, the black cloak appeared and the invitation to enter the portrait also contributed to the sense of unreality that Joo-hyun was feeling at the moment. He was sensitive and had no energy to react normally.

“…This place… is really nice.”

Joohyun said, looking around.

“It’s much more cozy and peaceful than I imagined.”

“I really like my house too.”

“Is this your home?”

“You can build a home in many places, but it feels like home.”

“I see, it’s my hometown….”

It was certainly an atmosphere that could be said like that.

“So what should I do?”

“Eat and play.”

"yes?"

“Are you going to work?”

“…I was honest.”

“Then I guess we can eat!”

“Why does it happen like that?”

I don't even know why I'm so obsessed with food.

‘Come to think of it, I’ve heard that most of Black Cloak’s gifts are snacks… .’

Is it really the ultimate goal to fatten humans?

'Can you call that an evil spirit?'

I felt strange. I thought it was because he called himself an evil spirit, but the more I talked to him, the less he seemed like an evil spirit to me.

Is this a sophisticated deception? A play to appease a weary human? Or is it the mercy of God, bestowed like a favor on a beggar? Or is it a momentary whim?

“…Can I help you prepare the meal?”

“You can’t leave the kitchen to the guests.”

“Then just wait quietly?”

“Would you like a cup of tea?”

“It’s good, but….”

And then a teddy bear brought tea.

“…A teddy bear?”

“He is my father.”

"father?"

“You’re so soft.”

"why?"

The fruit tea the teddy bear gave me was so damn delicious.

“I’m suddenly not hungry.”

“Oh, no. I made another mistake.”

“Please don’t make mistakes with weak humans.”

“You don’t look that weak.”

“So what kind of mistake was it?”

“Because this is a filling tea.”

“You can’t eat it before a meal?”

“That’s what it is.”

"aha."

Joohyun nodded.

“Is this a dream?”

“It’s reality.”

“I'm sleepy.”

“You can just sleep.”

A large hand stroked Juhyun's head.

“Sleep well, wake up, eat, and even have a snack.”

“…….”

“After you wash up and lie down on the bed, I will sit by your bedside and listen to your screams.”

"…yes."

“After we talk endlessly, we will be friends. Just talk to me.”

"yes."

“I wonder what your anger tastes like….”

A voice full of interest and compassion fell over his head, and soon the hand closed Joo-Hyeon's eyes.

“I can be a good friend.”

I really think that's true.

“…….”

“Don’t dream.”

Putting everything down, Joohyun fell asleep.

* * *

“…Hmm, I see.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“So there’s an association researcher sleeping in your house right now?”

“It’s been two days and he still hasn’t woken up.”

“Has it already been two days? I didn’t notice it because I only stopped by at dawn.”

The background in Geo's portrait changed according to the changes inside it. Morning was morning, evening was evening. Occasionally, a new animal would appear or an unknown flower would bloom.

'By the way, in that short time, two days have already passed in the picture.'

Perhaps because he had a 'pen pal' that he had been calling for all along, Geo seemed very happy about the visit of this guest. In the world of that portrait, the flow of time changes depending on the mood of its owner, Geo.

'When I visited and ate before and came out of the frame, only about 20 minutes had passed. According to the time inside the portrait, when Geo was happy, it passed quickly, and when he was resting, it passed slowly… .'

It seems like he's really happy now. Yoo Seong-un smiled his characteristically innocent smile.

“I’m so glad you’ve made a new friend.”

“He and I are not friends yet. I will always give my guests a chance. He may become my friend, but he may not.”

“I’m glad you have such an open mind.”

How great a disaster would it be for an individual to be forced to become friends with the Eye of Origin?

'You don't know how merciful it is to at least give us a choice.'

Anyway, Yoo Seong-un had something else he wanted to say.

“That prospective friend was trying to summon an evil spirit?”

“Yes.”

“Why did you stop it?”

“If there was an accident, it would be a huge accident.”

"oh…."

Since it was a prediction from the source, it certainly sounded credible.

“You said you wouldn’t go to work because you were working hard?”

“Yes. I don’t think I did anything wrong, so I wonder why I was punished like that.”

“I think he was probably forced to take a vacation. Well, it’s a common occurrence.”

“Is this kind of coercive action common?”

“Yes, it’s a kind of recommendation. The atmosphere of the association and the collector’s shop is completely different.”

In fact, when compared to the world, the top three guilds in Korea, and among them, the Collectors' Guild, were somewhat unique. You could say they were one of the few groups that treated humans as humans.

“We get various benefits thanks to the guild leader stepping up and sucking up to the employees, but the association… feels like a den of cards. Because it’s such a huge group, there are places where people just work without any selfish motives, and there are places where blood is spilled over into factional fighting.”

"okay."

“That new guest was probably part of a team that was quite the battle of wits. The association is so large that each team is assigned a single research building, so there’s a lot of disorganization and things like that happen. It’s because they’re so disconnected.”

There were also many places where they were wiped out right away. This is because there are works that contaminate or infect the mind or body itself. It is impossible for one or two people to die while studying and analyzing such things.

“There are a lot of people working in the association, but the work that the association has to do is much more than that, and it’s also dangerous. There are also various clinical trials being conducted for various projects….”

“Is this a clinical trial rather than a human experiment?”

“They just call it a clinical trial to make the citizens feel better. Well, the team I was in charge of before had a very moderate atmosphere and there were no projects that required human sacrifice. So I don’t know much about it.”

The atmosphere of the research lab varies greatly from team to team.

“So… um….”

Yoo Seong-un said with a slightly awkward expression.

“I guess it’s not that rare.”

“It’s really scary.”

“Of course, it is a bit surprising that he even tried to summon an evil spirit.”

“Is that so?”

“I don’t usually go that far.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed hollowly.

“But even if it had gone that far, I think it would have been handled somehow. If it had been something at the Seoul branch research institute, the research institute director or the association president would have heard the news of the incident, and then they would have stepped in… Even if they had succeeded in making a deal with the evil spirit, it would have been resolved well.”

Geo sorted it out for him.

“It sounds like everything is being maintained by the grace of the association president.”

“That’s not wrong. That’s exactly the situation on Earth right now.”

It is a situation where order is occasionally maintained by the mercy of a few strong people. It is a peace that will be shattered if even one of them has a bad intention.

“That’s the reason why this country doesn’t collapse even though so many dangerous goods are concentrated in Korea. Korea is particularly well organized, and has many strong hunters.”

“It’s a blessing in disguise.”

“Anyway, I feel bad about that customer. I came to this collection store because I was sick of the atmosphere where people are treated as tools and instruments. It really drives people crazy.”

He had the talent to ruin people with intact limbs and beliefs. What's even funnier is that he was able to collect various data, which was a great help in development.

Korea's rapid development was based on countless sacrifices.

“If you want to survive in the Association Research Institute, you need to have the mindset that you will be alone in life anyway.”

Believe in the abilities of others, but do not trust or rely on the people themselves.

“Actually, this isn’t just a story for the association.”

“Is everyone else living like this?”

“The lab is particularly strong, but… well, I guess.”

It is truly a shame, but in this small country, even worse tragedies happen all the time.

“But I don’t usually think of making a deal with an evil spirit. Who instigated me to do so?”

“I don’t know.”

“If the conversation with that guest goes well, would you mind giving me a seat too? I’d like to hear your story.”

“If possible, I will do so.”

“If you feel that there is a danger, I have to investigate that part.”

It was as unsettling as when he had investigated the turbulent sea before the mermaid siblings appeared. Yoo Seong-un let out a short sigh while maintaining his smile.

“…If there’s any problem, send me a letter and I’ll come right away.”

He entrusted the poor man, betrayed by everyone in the world, to the Source, not to humans.

As a gardener, I trusted the mercy of the Source more than my fellow humans.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (134)

Episode 134 Safety ★★☆☆☆ Would you like to check your history? [Yes/No] Name: Ahn Joo-hyun Age: 36 Status: Panic He wanted to help the world to prevent a repeat of the tragedy he had experienced, but all his hard work and affection were betrayed and he became isolated. He knew that it was not an easy goal, but he was faced with an unimaginable misfortune. He is alone. Ahn Joo-hyun is wary and suspicious of you, but he is never aggressive. He is polite and clever. He will obey even if he harbors hostility, and he will be in awe if you harbor favor. As a civilian, he is weaker than an F-class Hunter. He cannot disobey you. You can either let him fall into the clutches of Sankalut and gain awareness as an evil spirit, or you can take care of him and watch him move towards his goal once again. You can choose or not. Ahn Joo-hyun can harbor impure thoughts, but he cannot cause harm. He is a safe person for you. * * * The reason Geo immediately spoke to Joo-hyun was because he had confirmed the above history. “He seems like a good person.” “Gurrrr.” “He said he was safe for me.” It was the best. “The way the system said it was pretty unlucky, but I know for a fact that this Ahn Joo-hyun is a good person. And nothing is more important than that.” There were fewer harmless humans in this world who could have a normal conversation with the ‘Black Cloak’ than one might think. That was a huge problem for Geo, who only knew how to eat and sleep. “I can finally make a pen pal.” “Arrrr…” “Dana, Dad needs friends too. And I’m human, too.” Geo picked up Dana, who seemed to be about to smash the door where Joo-hyun was sleeping. As Dana grew larger, she actively expressed her aversion to humans. Her body suddenly flashed. “I heard from Yoo

Seong-woon that most anti-cats are just busy avoiding, but why on earth does my child have such confidence? It's really interesting." It was clear that she took after her father. "Father." "Kuu?" "I think we need to appease Dana a little." "Kukukukuk…" "Can you let me know when the guest wakes up?" "Ku." "Thank you." Geo thought she might wake up and went down with the tray of food he had brought. Dana, who had grown considerably, moved her body from her father's arms to his shoulders. His shoulders were warm and heavy. "Cool, jewel fur ball…" Isn't that a cute cool mat? When summer came to Earth, I thought about taking Dana instead of Honey. "Honey, let's go." "Kur." "You can eat this." "Kurururururur." "I should eat it too." It was porridge made by boiling rice grains until they were no longer in their original form, and adding various vegetables and a little minced meat. The side dishes of the previously prepared bibamnil and pickled goby nuts were also delicious, and Honey ate them all by herself. "……." "Kkung." "Pig." "Kungkungkungkungkungkungkung…!!" "So cute." I didn't think she would eat all of that by herself, but anyway, it was a bonus point that she didn't have to throw away the food that the guests didn't eat. Geo dragged Dana, who was slumped over his shoulder, and sat her on his thigh. "How can our Dana be so confident?" "Kid?" "Does she think the world revolves around her?" "?" "I see, that's just the kind of confidence our child has." Still, it would be awkward if she bit the heads off of everyone she met. "Honey used to be like that too." "Huh?" "Did you learn it from watching your brother?" "?" "I don't think so, but then it must be instinct." "Gyarrrr." "It's cute." Geo gently stroked Dana's belly, which was acting cute as she rolled over. Unlike other cats who are sensitive to having their bellies touched, Dana just lay there as if she was happy. Since she was a long-haired cat, it felt like there was a heavy carpet on her. "Your brother used to bite people without permission at first. It was only once, but when he found out, my father's heart sank." "琉?" "I hope you don't bite or hurt other people without permission, even for the sake of this Daddy. As a monster, I would say that every time you cause harm, I have to go far away to fix it or pay money." "……!" "Daddy can draw jewels and gold, but it seems that bartering isn't that popular in Korea yet. In short, he's a beggar, and I could be branded a debtor and get teased, so I wish Dana would think of me just a little bit." "Ahhh?" "You're pretty, you're pretty." Dana apologized after learning of her father's poor financial situation. Building trust with the dependable daughter who promised not to cause trouble, Geo sat Honey, who was poking the empty tray, on his hand. "Honey, come here." "Gulp." "The tray will be worn out soon." I don't know who he resembled to grow into such a wonderful pig. Of course, he knew very well that he resembled Geo himself. "The guest must have been quite tired, considering he slept for almost five days." Geo really liked this guest. He was a 36-year-old adult male, older than Geo, and he didn't get scared or rush at the black cloak when he encountered it. He was even a polite and harmless human recognized by the system. "And he's skinny." He had to gain weight right away. It had been a long time since he had seen someone who seemed worth gaining weight for. An Ju-hyun was truly qualified to be Geo's friend. "I prepared lamb skewers to eat together..." "Gulp." "Okay, if you don't wake up, let's eat together in the evening." "Ah?" "If you wake up, we can all eat together." If we eat, we'll become Anne of Green Gables and her friend Diana. In this harsh world, Geo has finished preparing to hunt to make new friends. * * * Joo-hyun woke up early in the morning. "……." He got up from his soft bed with a dazed mind. The dawn of the world where spring had fully descended was cool, and a gentle breeze carrying the scent of flowers and the forest was blowing gently. Joo-hyun turned his head toward the direction where it touched his cheek. He saw a world sparkling with dew beyond the wide-open terrace. "…Wow..." It was beautiful. And peaceful. "… Here, right now..." He frowned in a daze. He felt around with his raised upper body, and his hands were caught in the soft blanket that seemed to contain only feathers. The rustling and fluffy texture of the sun-dried cloth brought back the feeling of caressing moss as a child. Joo-hyun was momentarily speechless at the sensation, then looked at the world beyond the terrace again. It was an instinctive gaze. “…Was it inside the frame of the black cloak?” It was a world more like a fairy tale than he had imagined. ‘The sun is just rising.’ The dark dawn clouds were a deep blue that reminded him of the cold spring weather, but the warmth and starlight that lingered next to the rising sun were a gentle color like forsythia or cherry blossoms. If he took a bite of it, it would be as sweet as honey given by the flowers. “…….” Ju-hyun unconsciously went out to the terrace. “…Stars.” There were stars in the sky, there was the moon, and with them the sun. The stars, which did not fade even in the bright and soft light, showed a vividness that seemed as if they would fall at any moment. They were still twinkling. “The Milky Way….” The dreamy sight suddenly made his fingertips tingle, and his tightly closed lungs throbbed. Ju-hyeon felt a heavy air along with an inexplicable longing for a sight he had never seen before. “…….” In the place where the shadows of dawn still remained, he could see an endless forest and a sparkling lake. Ju-hyeon’s eyes were momentarily captivated by the lake. He felt a deep richness from the enchanting golden light that glittered. It was cold and warm. “… This feels strange.” Ju-hyeon hesitated and stepped back, muttering to himself. “… This place, um, yes. Yes…” He tried to come to his senses. “Is it some kind of dungeon?” It didn’t go well. It had been like this all along. While thinking rationally that he could recover by doing this and that, he had no motivation to actually do it. It seemed like his brain had frozen, refusing to work. However, a cool breeze blew from the terrace, cooling the heat on his forehead. “…….” Joo-hyun let out a slow sigh, laughing at himself for thinking such a thing, at the gentleness that seemed to tell him not to be impatient. “…Haaah…” He thudded. He sat down on the bed. “…Let’s calm down.” It was okay. It wasn’t okay, but it could be okay. Just like always, he could overcome it this time too. ‘I feel a little more rational now that I’ve woken up.’ The terrible listlessness that had been tormenting Joo-hyun recently had disappeared. Yes, he was listless. An impulse he had never felt in his life shook Joo-hyun violently, and his head, which had always been cool and determined to achieve results for his own benefit and goals, had become rigid. ‘But now…it’s not like that.’ He felt like he could breathe. “……” “Gulp?” “…Huh?” “Khu, gurgle.” “Bird?” When he came to his senses, there was a golden bird sitting on the terrace railing. “No, water?” Joo-hyun soon realized that it was living water in the shape of a bird. It looked like the extinct squint-eyed hawk, had a much longer tail, and carried jewels that stood out like a treasure chest. “Why are you here…?” As he froze, not knowing how to react, the bird flew over and landed on Joo-hyun’s thigh. It was almost weightless, and although it was water, it felt warm like a living creature. “Kurr.” “… Hello?” “Kukkururur.” As if responding to the greeting, the water bird let out a long cry and flew up again, flapping its wings. It soon grabbed Joo-hyun’s white pajamas sleeve with its beak and pulled it tight. “… Should we go out?” “Kurruk.” “…That’s strange, isn’t its vocal organ in its mouth…?” Joo-hyun was still half asleep, and he was more curious about the fact that the bird, made entirely of water, had its sleeve in its mouth and its cry didn’t distort. Joo-hyun followed the bird down, feeling a strange sense of unreality. There was a pitch-black man there. “Honey.” At his call, the honey-colored bird landed on the man’s hand. It was a soft landing. The man gave a short compliment, saying he did a good job, and lifted the bird onto his shoulder, and at his feet was a large cat shining with a cold light. Joo-hyun realized that it looked quite similar to the Anti-Cat. Not knowing what to do, he hesitated, and soon the man spoke to him. “Good morning.” “Oh, yes. Good morning.” “I was worried because you didn’t wake up for a long time.” “You didn’t wake up…?” “You slept for eight days.” “……” Joo-hyun’s dark skin turned pale as he chewed on those words. “…Eight days?” “A total of three days have passed in reality.” “Ah, ah. Ah… I see. I understand.” Joo-hyun let out a sigh of relief. After being startled once, he felt like he had come to his senses. With his reasoning clearer than before, Joo-hyun looked at the pitch-black man in front of him and thought to himself, ‘… Is this the true form of the black cloak?’ There were no witnesses who saw the inside of the black cloak, to the point where there was a hypothesis that the cloak or suit itself was the main body. And the main body of the black cloak that Joo-hyun confirmed was a man who was more handsome than he had imagined. 'I think I saw it before I fell asleep, but his impression is completely different then... What exactly is different?' While he was pondering the differences in the black cloak's transformation, the other person asked him politely with calm, sunken eyes. "Would you like to eat?" "...." "Are you hungry?" Oh, that expression. '... A person can change completely with just one expression.' The black cloak that had been asked just a moment ago, 'Are you hungry?', had looked extremely gentle and affectionate even though its color had not changed. His eyes and lips naturally curved and curved, and he was unknowingly drawn to them. Joo-hyun was finally able to answer after a beat. "... Yes, I'm hungry." Look at this terrible peace. 'There's no way this kind of peace could exist in the world.' From that unrealistic comfort, he realized that he was in a painting. Oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (135)

Episode 135

Now that he has come to his senses, Joo-Hyeon is no longer afraid of the black cloak.

“It’s been a while since you woke up, so I prepared porridge for your first meal.”

“Do you know how to kill someone?”

“Even though I look like this, I can cook just about any dish.”

“It smells really good, thank you.”

Joo-hyun, who had regained her energy while sleeping, smiled brightly and expressed her gratitude.

'Boiling a monster to death??'

Of course, it was different from his true feelings. Joo-hyun was inwardly sweating with deep embarrassment and a feeling of being truly absurd.

An evil spirit who cooks his own food, serves it to humans, and takes pride in his own actions. The reason he wasn't scary right away was largely due to this absurdity.

‘No, even if you say it’s an evil god, this… It’s even stranger if you say it’s an evil god.’

The association reported the black cloak as a monster, but Joo-hyun, who had accumulated some experience, also knew the truth. The association often hid the truth for various purposes under the pretext of a greater cause. This time it seemed similar.

But I still didn't understand. It's very rare for God to treat humans to a meal, but even then, he doesn't cook for them.

'Furthermore, if you think of this world as a kind of dungeon, it becomes even more difficult to explain. Among the monsters, only those that meet the qualifications can create their own dungeons. But God... God doesn't have a dungeon that he can stay in, right?'

Joohyun stopped thinking at that point.

“…It’s delicious?”

It was because the porridge was delicious.

“It’s the most delicious porridge I’ve ever had in my life.”

“I feel good because you are eating happily.”

“Why is this meat so delicious? Is this okay?”

It wasn't some kind of petty flattery, it was genuine shock and amazement.

Joo-hyun didn't really like porridge. Porridge was usually something to make rice bigger, or something to eat when you're sick. However, the porridge that Black Cloak gave him was so delicious that it made his brain hurt.

“Even porridge can be this delicious.”

“It was the most gratifying compliment I could ever hear as a cook.”

“Wow, this is amazing, with such a taste and texture… I could eat this every day without getting tired of it.”

It's been a long time since I felt not a sense of worldliness, but pure admiration.

“It’s really delicious.”

He keeps saying the same thing over and over again like an idiot, which is unusual.

The dead rice grains were almost melted, and their softness was similar to that of rice cake soup. However, the traces of fluffy rice still remained, and it had a soft, crumbly texture, as if the rice grains of well-cooked shikhye were warm and nutritious.

And the unique nutty and sweet flavor of rice spreads gently in the mouth. The vegetables interspersed between the rice were chewed with a soft warmth, and the meat, which was generously included, added a sense of solidity.

‘I feel very full…’

ethmoid?

“…Did you put in bone broth?”

“You got it right, you have a talent for cooking.”

“Well, I guess you could call it talent….”

“Thank you for your deep consideration.”

A bright smile bloomed across his pale face. For some reason, Black Cloak looked truly happy.

“I gave you a small amount because it’s just the beginning. Do you need more?”

"ah…."

When I came to, I saw an empty bowl.

“…If you don’t mind, I would like to ask you a favor.”

I felt very embarrassed, as if I was bothering an evil spirit, but I shamelessly accepted another bowl.

“Do you need more side dishes?”

“Yes, by all means….”

“I’m glad you enjoyed it.”

It was a very filling dish despite the fact that it was dead, but the sight of people eating so well was so pleasing that Black Cloak brought a larger bowl full of porridge.

“I think the first serving was too little, so I increased the amount.”

“Thank you.”

“We’ve made it so that it’s as easy to digest as possible, but we recommend that you don’t overeat.”

“Yes… I will do that.”

The porridge that Black Cloak served melted in my mouth like cotton candy. I could feel the shape of the rice grains, but the texture melted on my tongue, and I could tell how much care had been put into rolling the rice.

'And it feels like some kind of nutritious food.'

It seems to have a slight medicinal scent… .

“…….”

Medicinal herbs?

“…Hey, Black Cloak… Teacher?”

“Mr. Joohyun, you can call me Geo.”

“Yes, Mr. Geo. Is there any medicine in this?”

“…? I didn’t put any medicine in it.”

"okay."

“Except for rice, all the ingredients used are locally grown.”

“Aha, thanks for the explanation.”

Joo-Hyeon, who expressed her gratitude with a kind face, was not at peace inside.

'Food from here?'

It was information that made me break out in a cold sweat. My smiling lips gained strength.

As soon as Joo-hyun woke up, he recalled the fairytale-like scenery he had seen before. That dreamlike sight that shook people just by looking at it.

'What are the odds that the food ingredients from the mystical land of a divine being are ordinary ingredients?'

In an age overflowing with all sorts of strangeness and mystery, Ju-hyeon studied hard to be of help to the world. He especially knew the influence that the act of 'eating' had in the midst of mystery.

'I just now… was I… perhaps too boldly devouring the mystery in the form of a porridge?'

But the death was delicious.

“…….”

Yum.

There was no sin in the food.

‘… It’s already a discarded body anyway.’

Joo-hyun had given in to his impulse and even thought of becoming a sacrifice to Sankalut. Even if he were to become something inhuman in the embrace of an unknown mystery, it wouldn't be a big blow.

After finishing the meal with a strangely bittersweet heart, the black cloak asked.

“For dessert, would you rather have something light or sweet?”

“…Light tea?”

“Do you not enjoy sweets?”

“That’s not it, but I like my tea to be on the spicy side….”

“It’s a sophisticated car.”

The black cloak was seen blinking twice as if thinking about something.

“Most teas brewed from grains have a strong, nutty flavor.”

“That is true.”

“I’ll keep that in mind for my next meal.”

"…thank you?"

Joo-hyun suddenly felt afraid as he seemed to be showing a will to improve in hospitality. Even now, he wonders, 'Have I ingested something that is not supposed to be eaten by humans?'

Soon after, the black cloak brought out a cup of tea with a warm blue tint.

“This tea is excellent for restoring immunity.”

“Oh, I see. Thank you for your consideration.”

For a moment, he had doubts about whether his immune system was recovering, but half in self-abandonment because he had abandoned his body, and half in a state of ecstasy, he took a sip of the tea. The scent was sweet like cream, but the taste itself was light.

“…Good.”

“We dry the flowers that grow in this forest and make tea.”

“I saw the forest you mentioned from the terrace of the room you gave me.”

“Isn’t it peaceful and beautiful?”

“Yes, I felt at ease while watching it.”

The moment the tea warmed her body, Joo-hyun felt her reason gradually becoming clearer.

“……?”

Is it because of my mood?

'It seems too unconscionable to say that this was just a feeling.'

What am I drinking now?

'I feel uneasy. If I had awakened my emotional skill, I might have been able to check it out.'

Although Ju-hyeon, who was not an Awakened One, did not know, the Vivamnil flower tea reconstructed the cells in the body of an ordinary human, making them always immune to minor illnesses.

It was impossible for a mere human brain to remain sluggish while taking the elixir of origin. It was not for nothing that the previous visitor, Yoo Seong-un, was afraid, saying, "If I continue like this, I will not be able to live my life in another way."

But Joo-hyun, who didn't know the truth, just sipped the delicious tea.

"hmm…."

Only when my head cleared did I feel like I could breathe.

“Am I drinking too much precious tea?”

“What’s precious about food? After all, it goes into people’s mouths.”

“That’s true too.”

A human society that risks its life for a single elixir or potion came to mind, but Ju-hyeon did not refute Black Cloak’s words by mentioning the greed and desperation of such people. Ju-hyeon possessed an excellent sense of worldliness.

Only then did Joo-Hyeon begin to gradually understand the situation and gain the will to sort things out.

“When we first met, I was very rude. I think I was rude because I was in a very chaotic situation. I think I was able to recover a lot thanks to your consideration.”

At the time, when he was consumed by destructive impulses, he had literally given up everything. However, Joo-hyun, who had regained some clarity of reason, began to calculate the situation he was in.

There was no particular reason for that, it was just a habit of someone with the ability to deal with the world who had lived his whole life judging everything. It was a habit that allowed him to endure everything even when he was in a disadvantageous position.

“Can I introduce myself properly?”

“As much as you want.”

“My name is Joo-Hyeon. I don’t have a last name, and I’m 36 years old this year.”

“My name is Geo. I have many names, but I am 29 years old now.”

“I feel so embarrassed to be receiving help from someone so young.”

Although she spoke coquettishly, Joo-Hyeon's mind was still in chaos.

'29 years old…? Surely that can't be true, and is it some kind of game? Or is it a role? Considering that most evil spirits enjoy some kind of game, it's possible that Jio was absorbed in the setting of a 29-year-old youth… Does the fact that he has various names refer to the color of his black cloak changing?'

He was busy acquiring and organizing as much information as possible about the Black Cloak.

'If I remember correctly, she has black hair now, but there were times when she changed to platinum blonde or red hair. However, even if the color didn't change, there were times when she acted as if her personality changed. If we consider her as a human, is she an actress? Or maybe it would be more correct to say that she changes clothes.'

Joohyun touched the transparent glass teacup with blue tea water rippling in it.

“As you may know, I worked in the association’s research institute.”

“It is an association research institute, so I understand that the working environment is quite harsh.”

“Yes, although there have been various incidents and I have now been suspended.”

“You must have been very tired. You need some rest.”

The black cloak nodded and asked.

“Then what would you like for dessert?”

“…….”

Are you listening to me?

‘… I can’t tell if this is a consideration because the other person isn’t human, or if he really isn’t interested. He introduced himself as an evil spirit, so I recited my misfortunes, but there was no response… Why?’

The purpose of the evil spirit, or rather, the god, coming to visit humans was to use the toys he liked for the purposes he liked. However, the black cloak did not seem to be interested in Joo-hyun's unfortunate circumstances.

Joo-hyun, who had thrown a kind of bait, was inwardly embarrassed, but as expected, he smiled brightly and answered without letting it show.

“Well, what kind of dessert do you have?”

“We have small cakes, fruit pudding and ice cream.”

“Then, may I have it as pudding?”

“Of course.”

Pudding was soon brought by a fluffy teddy bear.

“…….”

“Thank you for your help, Father.”

Is the teddy bear your father?

“Thanks to you, I always receive a lot of help.”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

Did you laugh out loud?

'I think I had similar thoughts before I fell asleep.'

Feeling a strange sense of deja vu, Joo-hyun tried to straighten his face, which was trying to distort subtly. As he was not an awakened person, he did not know that the soft-looking teddy bear in front of him contained the sun god, but he knew that it was not ordinary.

When Geo looked back, Joohyun immediately smiled brightly.

“Thank you for the pudding.”

“Kukuku.”

The teddy bear nodded, took his share of pudding, and went out of the house with the big cat. Black Cloak added an explanation as Juhyun watched the cat's fluttering jewel tail.

“There are chairs and a table outside the cabin. The sun is rising, so maybe you and Dana want to enjoy a snack while watching it.”

“Ah… Dana?”

“That’s the name of the long-haired cat you saw earlier. I brought her from the dungeon called ‘Jewel Vein’ and started raising her, and she’s grown up quite a bit. I also raise her like a daughter.”

“I see, I can feel your affection.”

As expected, Joo-Hyeon's mind was noisy.

'If it's a cat that you meet in the vein of jewels... jewel hair... long-haired... is it an anti-cat after all? However, it is said that the anti-cat is a monster with a body as small as a kitten. No matter how much time passes, it never grows from that state, so people thought it was perfect. But was there room for it to grow more?'

If it had been reported to the academic society, it would have been enough to grab someone by the collar and ask, “Where on earth did you come across such valuable information?” But Joo-hyun quickly swallowed a hollow laugh. He wondered why he was worried about this when he had already been suspended from the association.

“Puding is….”

“I put in a fruit called a mango fruit.”

“There is a fruit like that, it’s the first time I’ve heard of it.”

“This is the most common fruit in this forest and is very sweet.”

“It smells good.”

“We also ripened the fruit called the weeping berry there.”

“I think a lot of effort went into it.”

I took a bite of the pudding, smiling kindly as if it were my habit.

“…….”

“Is it delicious?”

“It’s so delicious that I don’t know if I can eat it.”

“You don’t deserve such praise.”

“No, really….”

The pudding, which had a rich, fruity flavor, probably due to the milk, literally melted in my mouth and disappeared onto my tongue. It was a pudding with a creamy flavor that left a faint sour taste.

“…….”

And I felt healthier.

“…It’s so delicious.”

I'm not sure if it's just my mood.

Why did your eyesight improve?

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (136)

Episode 136

"so."

Yoo Seong-un smiled with a resigned expression.

“Are you turning that guy into a pig?”

“I'm glad you know.”

“I couldn’t help but know, I almost became a pig too….”

“I apologize if this came across as rude.”

“No, the food was really delicious.”

He continued with a carefree smile.

“I did feel a bit of a crisis though.”

This is a crisis that could change the human race itself.

'Or die of a stomach explosion.'

Perhaps because they had gone through such a difficult time of great disaster, the elders of that generation were particularly sensitive to the idea of fattening their children. Geo also had a similar vibe.

‘Mostly in the part where they constantly give you food….’

Perhaps if he hadn't encountered the Mermaid Princess back then,

Yoo Seong-un would not have been able to escape the cycle of repeated meals and snacks. Most hunters felt that way even though they had large stomachs.

“…I’m sure you’ll figure it out, but he’ll eat less than I do. Just don’t make him overeat.”

“I didn’t mean to make you overeat either… but I made a mistake, you overeat.”

“It’s surprising that you can still get sick after eating such heavenly food, but then again, eating too much of anything isn’t good for you.”

“It’s too much praise to say it tastes heavenly. But I think I pressured you a little because it was so nice to see you enjoying it so much.”

“In reality, they probably ate deliciously without even realizing that they were full. Even though they were researchers at the association, most of them were just civilians, so they probably didn’t have much self-control.”

I understood what the situation was. Geo, who liked the sight of fat humans, would have continued to offer food, and the person would have lost his senses from the ecstatic taste, or he would have felt pressured by Geo and couldn't bring himself to refuse.

'It was too delicious to refuse, and it must have been a meal in Geo's stomach.'

Even if he was a civilian with no skills, he was a researcher for the association. There was no way that Joo-Hyeon didn't know that the flow of time and the weight of the air in this portrait, which changed depending on Geo's mood, were literally on the dungeon master's tongue.

'But seeing as Geo doesn't seem to be upset, I guess he has great worldly skills.'

I don't know how much chaos there must have been inside, but it was a bold attitude for a civilian. It's not easy to act so cool in front of someone like Geo.

'If it were easy, Geo would have succeeded in making a pen pal a long time ago… .'

Well, it could just be that I was in a state of despair.

"……."

It looks like things are a bit messed up.

"I looked into that person named Ju-Hyeon separately."

"Thank you for always helping me."

"Never mind. But in this case, your team leader… seems to have done something."

"Does that mean that his superior intervened in Ahn Joo-hyun's circumstances?"

"An Joo-hyun?"

Yoo Seong-woon found out that Joo-hyun was from an orphanage affiliated with the association. Since the orphanage was a place where children would leave their last names when they entered, he didn't bother to check that part, but it seemed like Geo even knew Joo-hyun's last name.

'Well, it wouldn't have been difficult for Geo to find out the identity of a mere human in some way.'

Whether he had a separate emotional skill and used it, or he used his unique social skills to pry, it wouldn't have been strange if Geo knew the last name of the researcher from the orphanage.

The meteor passed by without a trace.

“That’s what I saw. Most people don’t seem to know each other, but some are a bit…”

Yoo Seong-woon, who was thinking about what to say, continued speaking.

“It felt like a hush.”

“You know but you’re hiding it.”

“I don’t really know why.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“I’m not that person anymore.”

In particular, the research institute of the association could be considered a single country under one team leader. Other than the minimum system, the rest of the policy was held by the team leader in charge of the research institute, who enjoyed absolute power.

“Anyway, I wonder what the team leader was thinking, he must have ruined the situation for that guy named Joo-Hyeon.”

“Why does the team leader, and not the director of the research institute, have that much authority?”

“Perhaps it’s because the director doesn’t actually go to work at the research institute. Usually, the director of an association’s research institute manages multiple buildings.”

In the association's research institute, within that one building, one team leader is assigned. However, that does not mean that the research institute itself belongs to the team leader.

“The research institutes of the association are divided into Seoul Branch 1, Seoul Branch 2, and Seoul Branch 3… and the one who manages all the research institutes in Seoul is the research institute director. The research team leader works within one branch.”

“How many branches are there in Seoul?”

“There were up to Branch 184 when I started working, and now there’s Branch 221. Seoul isn’t that big of an area, but most research institutes are built using space expansion magic. That’s quite a lot, isn’t it?”

Since there are so many research institutes to manage, the research institute directors are not actually able to participate in the work. They are already busy checking the experimental reports and permission requests that are piling up.

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“Of course you won’t understand why such an inefficient structure was formed.”

“Honestly, is there any reason why we shouldn’t have one research director and several research team leaders within one research institute?”

“There are various reasons, but the main reason is… the problem is that there is no reliable manpower.”

The association's research institute was located in that location.

“It’s still full of information that citizens find difficult to accept and dangerous information that can be exploited in various ways. That’s why we’re trying to sort out the information appropriately, but there are dozens or even hundreds of such research subjects coming out every year….”

It is a space filled with extremely dangerous information that would make anyone's eyes roll around.

“Didn’t Joohyun say that he felt the same way? If it’s as you said, then that person created the Sankalut’s sign, of all people. A good person who has never done anything wrong in his life made such a bold choice.”

"okay."

“The association’s research institute is overflowing with information that can be easily exploited in that way. Therefore, the research institute director must first of all not be greedy for such information, secondly, he must have the ability to handle incidents in his jurisdiction, and thirdly, he must stay far away from the scene.”

“Why do I have to stay away from the scene?”

“Even if you’re not greedy, humans are creatures of adaptation. If you only see each other in person through documents or occasionally go to the scene to see each other, well, the weight is lighter, so the probability of exploitation may increase… If your body is far away, your heart is also far away, so the possibility of being deceived is lower.”

The association's research institute was a place that was more than just a den of evil. It was a dangerous place where even a healthy person would come out mentally and physically broken, and even the most talented research institute director would likely lose his faith if he was exposed to such an environment for a long time.

“And it’s not something that can be done just by having a strong will of one’s own. Quite a few project subjects have their own will, and the field workers at the research institute have to endure the temptations and accusations of such strange mysteries every hour.”

“Why are there so many people working in places like that?”

“Some people are brought in because the association did a great job promoting it, and some are supported by orphanages sponsored by the government or the association. So at first, they are usually given chores that are not mentally demanding.”

But it won't be long before you face reality.

“And above all….”

Yoo Seong-un hesitated for a moment, then continued speaking.

“To become the director of a research institute, you have to go through some kind of procedure.”

“Is it a procedure?”

“To put it badly, I guess you could call it brainwashing, or training….”

“It’s an unexpected method.”

“I think it’s a problem from an ethical standpoint.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“The first step is to find a Hunter with the ability to become the head of the research institute in the Association. We will find Hunters who are at least Class A, close to Class S, and among them, we will select those who already have an abundant environment or are not naturally greedy, and among them, we will select those who have administrative and human resource management skills and….”

“…….”

“In addition to that, you have to select and choose people who are capable in various ways. No matter how many A-class people there are, it’s hard to find a hunter who is close to S-class. On top of that, they have to be not greedy and be a jack of all trades… There can’t be many such people.”

Even if you find it that way, there are still problems.

“Even in the final stage, there is a kind of brainwashing process where you have to castrate your greed and absolutely obey the orders of the association president. However unethical it may be, it is not done by force.”

“Isn’t that turning people into document processing machines called research institute directors?”

“It’s more of a problem because it’s not just about processing paperwork. Anyway, it’s really hard to find someone who agrees to this process, so we can’t assign a research institute director to each research institute.”

“Is the reason you insist on hiring such high-quality personnel to ensure the security of your research materials?”

“You could say that. Of course, if we lower our sights, we could deploy more personnel to each research institute, but that would only lead to the rebirth of a giant, uncontrollable den.”

From the beginning, the association's research institute could be seen as a symbol of human arrogance.

“There are many disasters concentrated in Korea right now. The Association’s research institute is the center of them all. If even one of them explodes, this planet called Earth will be destroyed in an instant. That’s why we can’t lower the quality of our personnel even after going through such a difficult process.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was once the research team leader of the association, said, trying hard to hide his skepticism.

“The only fortunate thing is that, as long as there are such research institute directors and… the association president, who is the symbol of eternity, those countless caves are under perfect control.”

“…….”

“In other words, you’re taking too many risks by relying solely on the chairman of the association, but well. After all, you’re putting more effort into the development of humanity and the analysis of its origins.”

Geo asked after a moment of silence.

“What is the symbol of eternity?”

"…ah."

Yoo Seong-un nodded and explained.

“Tell me about the three immortal beings known only in the Republic of Korea.”

“Immortal.”

“Not only is he an Awakened One with incredibly powerful abilities, he also does not die or age.”

Geo told him.

“You must be lonely.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was speechless for a moment.

“…I don’t know because I’ve never thought of the symbol of eternity in that way.”

“It seems like a blessing in disguise that the three of us are together.”

“There is a rumor that they were close friends before the great disaster.”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking with a small smile.

“Anyway, as long as such a symbol of eternity exists, no matter how much risk we take, it will never go to the worst. So experiments become more daring, and more people are being cut off, but since there are too many people compared to the capacity of the population… people die, break, and twist, and in the process, humanity progresses.”

He finally let out a small sigh.

“That is also the reason why Korea has been able to develop so rapidly.”

“Because you boldly threw people in only believing in the symbol of eternity?”

“In summary, that’s probably how it’ll turn out. It’s high risk, high return.”

However, no matter how great the risk, as long as the symbol of eternity exists, the damage will not go beyond the laboratory. No matter what kind of research is done, the maximum damage will be limited to the laboratory building, so the experiments are conducted even more boldly.

“I don’t know if I should say this, but they say failure is the mother of success, and that kind of data ultimately becomes the foundation for avoiding another failure.”

“I understand.”

“If one research institute is completely destroyed, then you think, ‘Oh, that’s how it reacts if you do that. Then, what about this method?’… It’s a structure that can be developed further.”

“It’s a scary world.”

“It’s a world where human rights and such are just empty words. Since this is a country with such a strong culture, the instrumentalization of people basically happens. It’s not a good sight.”

But thanks to that, the development itself could be rapid.

“The Association is trying to research and dig into as many of the roots as possible, in order to shorten the time people suffer as much as possible. If things continue this way, this planet will still be suffering in its primitive state for 500 years… The intention is to shorten that time.”

It was a thought and judgment that could be made because it was a symbol of immortality and eternity.

“I came out because I didn’t want to see that sight.”

"okay."

“It may be a worthwhile sacrifice, but there’s nothing you can do about it being unpleasant.”

“I agree.”

“…Well, that aside.”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“Anyway, I feel like it’s hard for me, who has already quit the company, to find out the details of what’s going on inside the research lab that’s still running smoothly. The people there are basically tight-lipped.”

“I think so.”

“But the atmosphere back then was a little bit strange. From what I saw, it seemed like they were trying to cause some kind of accident through that researcher named Joo-Hyeon. The research team leader, that is.”

Yoo Seong-un lowered his hand and smiled at Geo.

“You stopped it in advance.”

“I’m glad the results were good.”

“I’m always grateful, from my perspective.”

It may be just a coincidence, but Geo often appears out of nowhere before an incident or accident gets worse and abruptly cuts off the flow.

'Should I say that the tension that had been building up was suddenly released in an unexpected way? In the case of the mermaid siblings, it wasn't something that could have been absurdly swept under the rug like that... .'

Yoo Seong-un was still investigating the whereabouts of the mermaid siblings, and traces of them were recently discovered in Gyeongbokgung Palace. It seemed that they were planning to overthrow not only the Sun Bridge but also Gyeongbokgung Palace.

'I'm not sure because there aren't many comparison groups yet, but in any case, it's a truly welcome move from a human perspective.'

I couldn't help but feel grateful that such overwhelming disasters were prevented in advance.

“…….”

In that sense, Yoo Seong-un thought that researcher Joo-hyun could have been the beginning of a disaster.

I'm so glad Geo found me before things got too serious.

“…So, what about Joohyun?”

“I’m eating well and sleeping well.”

“How are you feeling?”

“He still looks a little tense and a little confused.”

“Yeah, I guess so.”

Still, it was almost a miracle that it had become that stable.

“Please be a little nicer.”

“I will make it healthy and send it out.”

“I hope you are moderately healthy.”

If a new species other than Hunters appears, it will be very difficult.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (137)

Episode 137

That moment.

The research institute that manages the evil spirit Sankalut, Seoul Branch 21.

“Sankalute?”

“ ”

“Oh, my God? How can you have such a withered color….”

“ ”

“Lord Sankalut…!”

I was going to make a wish and have him take me home.

Sankalut, who had been excited about going home, became gloomy.

* * *

“Is that really okay?”

Joo-hyun, who had handed over the sign of Sankalut, asked with a trembling face.

“I ate and drank a lot here.”

“I treated you with such hospitality out of personal greed, so this is sufficient repayment.”

The black-haired, black-cloaked man smiled gently.

“What a wonderful jewel.”

“…It’s not a real jewel though.”

“You said it was a sign of the evil god Sankalut?”

“Yes, it is a medium that allows me to communicate with him.”

“There are geometric patterns on the inside. Did you carve them yourself?”

“Yes, it’s my first time making it, so I’m still quite clumsy.”

“You say I’m clumsy?”

Black Cloak exclaimed in admiration.

“You can see that Joo-Hyeon is very talented.”

“I feel embarrassed when you say that.”

“It’s a very small design, but it has all the necessary language engraved on it.”

"haha…."

It felt strange.

'I never thought I would be praised for creating the sign of the evil god.'

More than anything, Black Cloak was not impressed by the fact that he had 'created the mark of the evil god', but rather seemed to be impressed by 'creating such a wonderful jewel'. It felt really strange.

'Is the level so high that the symbol appears more as an ornament than a medium?'

It looked like a wealthy person with a lot of money was looking at the 500 won coin, saying how beautiful it was.

Although he received praise, he was not very happy about it. Joo-Hyeon was not a person with no common sense to be happy about being praised for creating a sign of an evil god by an unknown great mystery.

“Don’t you feel uncomfortable with the fact that it is a sign of the evil spirit?”

“The only time I’ll call him is when I’m asking for a meal, so don’t feel bad about it.”

“Oh, really? Even the evil spirits get to eat… eat… um.”

Joohyun was silent for a moment.

“…….”

And soon, a cold sweat began to run down my face.

Do you really want to turn everything in the dimension into pigs?

“Is there a reason why… you keep trying to feed something to others…?”

“There is no grand reason.”

The smile disappeared from Black Cloak's face, and only a calm, expressionless expression remained. Nevertheless, Black Cloak continued speaking in a soft voice.

“I’m just happy that other people are eating the food I make.”

“I see, you are very considerate.”

“First of all, people these days are so skinny….”

“…….”

“It doesn’t look healthy.”

"will do…."

grandma?

'Why do you say such grandma-like things?'

The trend of seniors from the generation that experienced the great disaster being particularly serious about fattening their children was present everywhere in the world. In particular, the phrase “people these days” seemed to refer to old people.

'With that young man's face?'

Do you have any intention of imitating a 29-year-old Earthling?

Joo-hyun wondered to what beat he should dance to in order to please the giant being in front of him. Should he correct him, saying that his remarks were not befitting of a 29-year-old? Or should he simply agree with him and say that he was right?

"…okay!"

Joohyun decided to just let it go.

“If you don’t mind, can I ask you a few questions?”

“Mr. Joohyun, you can ask me as many questions as you want.”

“Thank you. It is known in the world that the black cloak is a monster….”

"aha."

The hair of the black cloak turned bright red, and a deep smile appeared on his pale face.

“I’m a monster?”

“…I apologize if I was rude. I’m sorry.”

“No, I’m not angry. I wasn’t rude either.”

He blinked a couple of times.

"hmm…."

Then it went back to black hair again.

“I think I got a little excited because Joohyun’s words were funny. Excuse me.”

“No, no. It’s okay.”

I don't know what part was funny, but as long as he wasn't upset by his own question, everything was fine. Joohyun smiled brightly and shook her head humbly.

“But if my question made you feel uncomfortable, I am truly sorry.”

“As I said before, I wasn’t uncomfortable or angry. I just, how should I put it….”

The lips of the black cloak curved gently with interest.

“After beasts, demons, and now monsters.”

“…….”

“I thought it would be pretty fun.”

"…oh…."

It's not fun.

"…okay!"

Joohyun decided to just let it go once again.

“I thought that the Black Cloak was an evil spirit, but it doesn’t seem to be that way.”

“Are you saying that it is not like an evil spirit?”

“A little bit.”

“I don’t really like that.”

The black cloak pretended to think for a moment and then continued speaking.

“Let me say this in advance: I am an ordinary human being.”

“Oh, okay.”

“Sometimes, he is a human being who can become a demon, a priest, or an animal.”

“You are amazing.”

Joohyun persevered once more.

“Then should I think of myself as a normal human being…?”

“Of course.”

Black Cloak nodded.

“The rumor that I was a monster outside was just a warning for my safety and that of others.”

“A warning for the safety of Black Cloak and the others?”

“It’s not intentional, but because we live in a painting, we sometimes threaten others. This is a warning to be careful of each other.”

And although he didn't say it out loud, he had another intention.

Even though he had merged with the battle-mad Argio, Geo was still uncomfortable fighting someone because they hadn't fully fused. That's why he was more of a person who managed his image so that they wouldn't fight each other in advance.

It was the result of thinking that not many people would want to fight the protagonist of a scary ghost story. Geo wanted to avoid conflict if possible.

'I don't know what will happen if Argio's memories are completely restored...'

Anyway, that's what happened.

“…Actually, even if you say it’s an evil spirit, it’s still hard to understand.”

Geo continued speaking.

“What is God, and what is an evil god? It is difficult for me, a human being, to know.”

“…That’s definitely a difficult topic. I can’t really give you a definitive answer.”

“Isn’t that so?”

He nodded.

“It is difficult to clearly define the existence of a country.”

So, even if Joo-Hyeon asked, there was only one thing I could say clearly.

“I can only say for sure that I am just one person.”

“To one person….”

“I may be a bit of an odd person, and I do some strange things sometimes, but that’s about it.”

Geo never once thought that he might not be human.

“Is this a sufficient explanation?”

“…Yes, thank you for helping me understand.”

Joohyun was just amazed.

'Okay, I'll just memorize it like that.'

Then it would be so.

“But I feel like I’m staying at Geo’s house too much….”

“Are you fully recovered?”

“I recovered thanks to your great consideration.”

“Your heart too?”

“…….”

To the speechless Joo-hyun, the black cloak smiled gently and spoke as if comforting a child.

“Isn’t it a peaceful place?”

“…That’s right. It’s so peaceful that I don’t want to leave.”

“There will come a time when you will want to leave.”

Geo knows.

'A human being must be rich in mind and body to avoid having vain thoughts.'

So that's what I did.

'After all, when people are full, they become ten times kinder.'

He said he was trying to summon an evil spirit, so I made his body into one that wouldn't have any frivolous thoughts.

Although he didn't know it, Geo's influence was actually great here. The person eating the food filled with the desire to enjoy his food together became a gourmet without a doubt, and he became one with Geo, the owner of a clear mind without thinking, and his body and mind became at ease.

'It's a good thing.'

Geo wanted Joohyun to be his friend.

“Just tell me whenever you want to leave.”

"…yes."

“You don’t need my permission to enjoy your life.”

"that…."

Joohyun answered, mumbling.

“…That’s right.”

He asked.

“Why did you introduce yourself as an evil spirit?”

“Because that’s what people called me.”

Oddly enough, there was no other reason.

* * *

"…ah."

A newcomer paused.

“Mr. Sergio?”

There was a tall figure standing in the company hallway. As she called out to him, the woman felt an inexplicable sense of discomfort.

Even though it was a weekday afternoon and there were still several employees who had not yet left work, they did not pay any attention to Sergio, who was standing in the hallway wearing a cloak.

It was as if I was avoiding him as if he didn't exist. By the time I realized it, the other person was looking at me.

“I’ve seen you before.”

“That’s right, you remembered.”

“The name is probably….”

He said.

“Ms. Park Joo-hee?”

“…….”

It felt a little strange.

“…Yes, this is Park Joo-hee.”

For a moment, it felt like an unbelievable miracle that the other person was calling my name.

'That's a strange thought.'

She was able to quickly shake off the absurd thought, but an inexplicable uneasiness lingered and tormented her.

Park Joo-hee approached him and asked.

“I thought you were working the early morning shift, but you’re out at this late hour?”

“It’s a hobby. We had some time to ask questions about various things.”

“Is it time for questions about your hobby?”

“If we really have to be specific, would it be correct to call it a survey?”

The eyes that contained the sea gently curved.

“Ms. Park Joo-hee.”

“Uh… yes, go ahead.”

“What do you think the evil spirit is?”

“…the evil spirit….”

Suddenly, a sense of loneliness came over me. Along with that, I felt disconnected from reality.

The employees passed them by without saying a word even at this moment. It was understandable since the company was made up of employees with strong individualism, so the woman answered Sergio’s question without much doubt.

“Isn’t he a god who does bad things?”

“Then, if the evil god does not do evil, would he be an ordinary god?”

“That is… If he has committed evil deeds before, wouldn’t he be an evil spirit?”

“It was a good reference.”

He smiled like a painter.

“I know this was a random question, but thank you for answering.”

“No, I’m the one who should be thankful that you remembered me, a lowly C-rank hunter.”

“Regardless of her rank, Park Joo-hee is a good person.”

Sergio's eyes widened.

“Aren’t you kind to me?”

“Uh… that’s….”

Are you saying that a kind person is a good person?

The woman was a little worried by his sudden, idiotic remark. The scope of the 'good person' he was talking about was too broad.

'Are you being bullied?'

Park Joo-hee looked around, momentarily confused. She would have been concerned about the man standing in the middle of the hallway, who looked like a pole, but no one was looking in that direction.

"…excuse me…."

She asked cautiously, feeling a strange suspicion.

“By any chance, are those… colleagues not on good terms or something…?”

Khuhuluk!!

A loud cough was heard from somewhere.

“……?”

“It looks like someone has heard of the sarees.”

“Oh, I see. Sorry.”

Knock knock, knock… .

Another cough was heard from somewhere.

“It didn’t work….”

Coolook !!

Another cough.

“…….”

At this point, Park Joo-hee couldn't help but understand the situation.

‘… What is it? It seems like you’re hinting at something?’

At that moment, something caught my eye.

"uh…."

Under the cloak.

The tail of an unidentified beast was sticking out.

“…Hey, Sergio. This is….”

“Oh, excuse me.”

He smiled faintly.

“Sometimes I can’t control it.”

“…Control?”

“I’ll be more careful next time.”

Without another sound, the tail disappeared.

“…….”

As if you were seeing things wrong.

“It’s not like Ms. Park Joo-hee thinks the staff here discriminate against me or ostracize me.”

“…Ah, ah, yes. I’m sorry.”

“It’s just that I have a special skill, so everyone is paying attention.”

“It’s special, so pay attention…?”

“There’s nothing to worry about. It’s getting late, so please be careful on your way home.”

“…….”

“Oh, right.”

Sergio held out something.

“This is my thanks for hanging out with me.”

“…It smells sweet.”

“It’s fruit jelly, it’s not that sweet.”

"…okay…."

“Then I hope to see you again with a smiling face next time.”

He nodded briefly, turned around, and walked away.

The black cloak comes into view again. The jet-black fabric… .

“…….”

For some reason, the gift in my hand felt heavy.

"…uh?"

Even if I let out a sigh along with a cold sweat.

Not a single employee looked back.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (138)

Episode 138

Black cloak.

A humanoid monster that was first spotted in the S-class dungeon 'Deep Sea Country' last winter and was listed on the Hunter Association's website. It is famous for tormenting bad humans and giving gifts to good humans.

His characteristics include being very tall, wearing a black cloak, wearing a suit, and being barefoot.

“…….”

In her dorm room alone, new curator Park Joo-hee gritted her teeth.

“…If you think about it, they’re all similar….”

I remember when the curator of Yoo Seong-un first explained about a person named 'Sergio'.

'It is often misunderstood because it has similar characteristics to the Black Cloak.'

It's not that Park Joo-hee didn't think that Sergio and Black Cloak had something in common. However, Sergio was too kind, too human, and had an extremely gentle smile to think that way.

But now that I think about it, it makes me dizzy.

'It was too idealistic.'

I should have been suspicious.

'How can someone who smiles as if he's been stuffed into shape be ordinary?'

Sergio smiled, talked, and cared like an ordinary person, but his actions and expressions were unchanging. She clearly knew that Sergio had an air of non-existence.

“…This…This, is this okay?”

It was confusing.

He felt that the other person was too human, so he could not have thought that he was a monster, and he suspected that he was possessed or deceived by something. There was a high probability that the 'Sergio' that the black cloak showed was a kind of mask.

'We've only just met, so I don't feel betrayed or anything.'

He was someone I had only met twice so far. Even if an acquaintance I had known for over a year had lied to me, I would have let it slide, but now I had no reason to feel betrayed by someone I had only met twice.

'I'm not angry. I'm not disappointed or anything. There wasn't that much trust between Sergio and me. But it's true that I'm confused...'

What should I do with this?

“…I’m not in a position to take action, am I?”

The collection gallery is a place where all kinds of dangerous works are gathered. There will be many protocols for responding to abnormal phenomena, and safety devices and information control will also be in place.

“Besides, it seemed like all the other employees knew.”

Only the new recruits didn't know that 'Sergio' was the black cloak.

“But, it’s not like I’m hiding it thoroughly or anything….”

Park Joo-hee herself is so dull that if they had this many things in common, her classmates would have already noticed.

For some reason, the collector simply tolerated the existence of the black cloak.

“…….”

After thinking about it for quite some time, she soon knocked on the door of another dormitory.

“…What’s going on?”

“Excuse me. I have something to discuss.”

“To me, a fellow newbie?”

“Mr. Binary, have you met Mr. Sergio?”

“…….”

Binari, one of Park Joo-hee's classmates, nodded.

“Come in.”

"…excuse me."

In the deep dawn, the story was getting longer.

* * *

Binary Curator, the only one among the new recruits in this collection to be in charge of the 3rd floor works.

“I knew it.”

“I see… I see. Was I the only one who didn’t know?”

“That’s not it.”

He was one of the first to realize that 'Sergio' was the Black Cloak.

“In my case, I had a gut feeling about this guy Sergio ever since Curator Yoo Seong-un first warned me about him. Other than that, I was suspicious of Jeong Eun-byeol, who introduced me to a B-class hunter.”

"ah…."

“Curator Yoo Seong-un also seemed to have noticed that we had noticed something strange. However, he never said anything. It seemed like it was common knowledge within the collection that there was a person called ‘Sergio’ who wore a black cloak.”

Binary added.

“There is no such thing as a dawn shift at the collection center in the first place.”

“…There was definitely no such introduction on the website, but I thought they had hidden it because he was an important person.”

“After asking around among my seniors, I found out that Sergio was the only one working the early morning shift.”

“But it could have been a measure taken for some kind of justification.”

“Yes, you could think of it as a special privilege to take care of very special personnel.”

He shrugged.

“Just like what other classmates are thinking right now.”

“…That’s true. I still think it’s being hidden too sloppily, though….”

“I think that, as Ms. Park Joo-hee just found out today, she must have decided that it was worth hiding from the new recruits.”

“What happens to people like us who discover Sergio’s true identity?”

“At least I don’t think there will be any disadvantages. We may just see how we adapt.”

“Why in the first place… why is it like this….”

Park Joo-hee, who had been stuttering, let out a short breath and opened her mouth again.

“There are more than one or two things that are puzzling. Why didn’t they tell the new recruits about the Black Cloak? It’s a humanoid monster, after all.”

“There was definitely nothing about ‘Mr. Sergio’ in the basic training we received. I think it might be because we were interns who would have to leave the company if things went wrong.”

“Because I was an intern… So, you’re saying that you didn’t tell me because you wanted to keep it a secret? You can’t tell important things to an intern who could be fired at any time.”

Park Joo-hee was worried.

“But if we don’t receive safety training and cause an accident, isn’t that a bigger problem? Even the seniors at the gallery keep emphasizing that if we’re going to die, at least the curator should die.”

I've heard that when dangerous works cause accidents, they often grow out of control.

“Whether it’s the artwork or the monsters here, the important thing is the rules. If we, who don’t know anything, don’t know Mr. Sergio’s… conditions and end up getting angry, wouldn’t that be a bigger problem?”

“I and Jeong Eun-byeol, who I just mentioned, had similar thoughts for a while. And we came to the conclusion that there would probably be no problem if we treated Sergio as a regular employee.”

Binary sighed.

“I’m sure the collectors have thought about it all. So, if you treat the Black Cloak like a regular employee, it won’t cause any problems, and even if something unusual happens, it won’t be something that will cause a major accident.”

“…Is this just a problem that will lead to our deaths?”

“I was guessing it would be something like that. So I thought it would be a test of sorts. To see if we were worthy of being a collector’s collection, or an employee of a collector’s shop, or a colleague of Black Cloak’s…”

“I think that just the fact that we are here qualifies us as a collectible.”

“The collector’s prize is a good one. If we continue to think of them as ordinary early morning shift workers, then it won’t be against the conditions. And if they notice the presence of the black cloak, we can see how well they adapt.”

He smiled awkwardly.

“So we were thinking that the sooner we figured out Mr. Sergio’s identity… the sooner he would be promoted to a regular employee. This is just a guess, though.”

“…Ah, I see. If all the other employees already know the identity of the Black Cloak, well, the prerequisite for becoming a full-time employee is… well, you have to know the identity of the Black Cloak.”

They also knew how devoted Bisabal was to his collection. Once he was promoted to a full-time employee, he could no longer leave Bisabal’s collection, and he could not be kicked out of the collection.

“But if you show that you are adapting well even after learning the identity of the Black Cloak during the internship….”

Wouldn't it be possible to embrace it with peace of mind in many ways?

“It means that not only us, but also Black Cloak doesn’t dislike this new recruit, right?”

“That’s right. So this lax security probably seems like a device to confirm the intentions of the two of you, the guild leader and Sergio.”

“No matter what, it would be good if we could know the exact information… such as the monster’s permission conditions.”

“It’s not that our position is important. And it’s not something that can be achieved just by trying hard. It’s something that can only be achieved if Sergio approves.”

“…….”

Park Joo-hee's expression distorted subtly.

“…So… why is that?”

“…It certainly feels like the collector sees the black cloak as a basic component.”

“I guess that’s because they are called basic components and cannot be excluded….”

“…….”

"…ah."

I raised my head.

"no way?"

"well."

“To the gallery?”

"…well."

“It was a work of art?”

“…Phew….”

Binary sighed and opened her mouth.

“It is a well-known fact among the general public that the Black Cloak is a portrait. There are even some fans who covet the series of portraits drawn by the portrait artist.”

“I wonder if the guild leader brought it in because he thought it was a work of art? When curator Yoo Seong-yoon explained ‘Mr. Sergio,’ I think he also said that it was one of his collections.”

“There are quite a few monsters in the collector’s gallery that are in the form of artwork. It is obviously illegal to breed monsters, but once they enter the gallery, they are treated as objects….”

“The black cloak was also treated as part of the guild master’s collection? Really? Does that make sense?”

“I think so. Maybe the guild master brought Sergio here because he didn’t want to leave the collection shop and was wandering around. Well, there are many possibilities.”

But these were not things a newbie would know.

“Anyway, the important thing is that the collector is no different from the gallery of the guildmaster of the Victims’ Guild. I heard that collectors are quite greedy, no matter what damage they incur or what changes they endure… They wouldn’t want to throw away a unique collection that they regularly produce like the Black Cloak.”

Binary made a strange expression.

“Even if I throw it away, I wonder where I should throw it away.”

“Oh, right….”

“What is certain is that the collectors have already adapted to Sergio’s presence.”

“…Can you think of it as a kind of executive or a flower pot…?”

“A flower pot?”

“Something like a flower pot in the hallway….”

“Wouldn’t it be better to think of it as a piece of art hanging in a hallway?”

“That would be more correct, after all, it is a work of art.”

Park Joo-hee barely managed to gather her thoughts.

“So, the work that is currently in the gallery is being circulated around the company.”

“There may be many other works besides Sergio’s that we don’t know about.”

“I think it would be easier to think of this as a manual within the office building rather than a gallery.”

The collection gallery had different activities on each floor, so there was a separate internal manual prepared. For example, knock three times before opening the 39th door on the 2nd floor, or drink water before passing through the 1st hallway on the 4th floor…

“Well, I have a rough idea of how to make the piece appealing.”

All of those manuals were rules to avoid upsetting the numerous works in the gallery. If you think about it, Sergio, who is hiding the fact that he is a black cloak, is similar, it wasn't that difficult.

“Thank you for helping me understand.”

“We should help and live together with people of the same motive.”

“They say motivation is important.”

“I guess there are many times when I need help….”

But I still felt uneasy.

“…….”

“…….”

“…No matter how much I think about it, isn’t it too complacent?”

“…I think that’s the collector’s motto….”

“Love the work?”

“Yes, that’s it.”

"this…."

It was nothing more than a humanoid monster roaming around, and the collector was in charge with the mindset of, 'If an accident happens, there's nothing we can do about it.' There was no safety training or forced secrecy here.

“…We may not know it, but surveillance and evaluation will be ongoing. The moment you leave the company, there will be measures taken to maintain confidentiality.”

“That may be true. There may be countermeasures and such, but I’m not sure if there are any means to protect interns like us.”

“We may not be full-time employees yet, but we have already stepped into the collection of the guild leader. I hear the collections are treated so well, so let’s look forward to it.”

Binary asked next.

“But you’re not as flustered as I thought, are you?”

“Oh… So you found out Sergio’s true identity?”

“It’s not like we’ve never met before, you only talked to each other twice.”

“It’s just too unrealistic to react….”

Park Joo-hee, who had been hesitating, continued speaking.

“…From the first time I saw him, he didn’t seem like a human being at all.”

And their conversation also reached the security management department within the collection center.

* * *

The Safety Management Department is the only department that operates 24 hours a day.

The employees who had finished eavesdropping were in an uproar.

“You figure it out quicker than I thought.”

“It’s because Sergio has been visiting the company a lot these days.”

“It used to only come out late at night….”

“Yes, I see you often during work hours these days, right?”

“Have you had any change of heart?”

Horok.

The employee who was drinking coffee asked.

“Three people have already noticed this. Should I just promote you to a full-time employee?”

“That’s not for us to decide.”

“The guild leader hasn’t decided yet?”

“I need to check with the black-cloaked doctor too.”

“Well, I think you like this group.”

“First of all, it’s a passing grade if you weren’t immediately dragged into the portrait.”

“It seems like the new recruits this time are all people with good manners and kindness.”

“In the end, it will be Sergio’s standards.”

“Even if you can do that much, you can still pass as a human….”

The employee, sipping coffee of a similar color to poison and staring at the CCTV, opened his mouth.

“But Sergio’s activities have increased significantly recently.”

“It comes out often even when there are a lot of people.”

“Did Curator Yoo Seong-un have anything to say?”

“There was no separate report or request, they just asked me to keep an eye on it.”

“I heard that too. Well, there was no separate document posted….”

“But I know what Sergio has been interested in recently.”

“I don’t know that?”

The safety manager sighed.

“You’re asking about the evil spirits.”

“Why are you suddenly an evil spirit?”

“To be exact, I was asking about the definition and qualifications of an evil spirit.”

“Could this be Sergio’s own story?”

“It’s not impossible.”

“Well, I’m not sure since it’s a work that hasn’t even been tested yet….”

The employee who was about to say something stopped.

“Uh huh.”

“Oh, Mr. Gyeong-woo. That guy is watching the CCTV.”

“Screen 53 on the 14th floor is temporarily closed.”

The employees cut off the screen feed just before the black cloak walking down the hallway turned to the CCTV. As soon as the screen went black, the other employees who were staring at the other screens also breathed a sigh of relief.

The manager then opened his mouth.

“Last time, there was that employee who fainted after kissing Sergio on screen.”

“Not quite fainting… but fainting? Right?”

“Isn’t that it? Anyway, yes, Mr. Haryu. When are you coming back?”

“I’m still going around the counseling room.”

“Isn’t it time? Hey, we’re short on manpower….”

“He said he couldn’t send it yet because he thought it would make a fake one if he was careful.”

“Oh my, is that it? This is a big problem. We can’t use our vacation days.”

“What the heck… I should get paid for it.”

“I want to take a vacation without receiving any pay.”

"me too."

The employee turned the screen back on, and in the place where the black cloak had disappeared, only a portrait remained.

The manager spoke, looking at the only portrait in the empty hallway.

“Hey, this is killing the mood.”

The screen is distorted.

In the portrait, Sergio was looking into the 'eyes' behind the black paint.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (139)

Episode 139

A meteor came running.

“Geoya.”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“Did we do something to upset you?”

“I don’t know why you’re asking that, but there isn’t.”

“That’s fortunate.”

Yoo Seong-un asked, laughing hollowly.

“I feel like I’ve been talking to other employees a lot lately.”

“Was this a distraction from your work?”

“Just a little? Well, I’m not saying you were terribly rude….”

It was somewhat ambiguous to see the creation of fear as a nuisance. This was especially true for Yoo Seong-un, who knew that Geo's true identity was neither a monster nor a god, but a part of the source.

I was just curious.

“I heard that you were asking about the evil spirits?”

“You are right.”

“Ugh.”

Yoo Seong-un was startled when Geo suddenly leaned in in the portrait.

“You could have come out like that too.”

“It’s just half-covered.”

Beneath the black cloak that swayed like a wave, a low-saturation red hair caught my eye. Judging by his characteristically provocative and sharp tone, it seemed to be Argio, who introduced himself as an evil god.

He leaned against the frame. His fingernails, which were lightly tapping, seemed to have grown long like those of an animal. Argio continued.

“I’ve been having doubts about the evil spirits lately.”

“Question? What kind of question?”

“What is an evil spirit? How can we call it an evil spirit?”

“That’s… really hard to tell the difference.”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“Humans call gods who harm them evil gods.”

“Then is it also evil to crash a festival and drink alcohol or interfere with a hunting ground?”

“I guess it depends on the local customs, but I don’t really get the feeling that it’s an evil act.”

“What is it that you hang the necks of those who attacked me and decorate the forest with?”

“That certainly deserves to be called an evil deed…?”

There is a saying in the world called self-defense, but humans are not such fair creatures that they return only as much as they have received.

In areas where awareness of inherent human rights is high, such blatant retaliation would be especially unwelcome.

“No, I personally don’t think it’s an evil deed. I don’t necessarily let someone who attacks me live. I don’t decorate them either….”

“I wonder if I decorated it because I thought it was beautiful. If I didn’t, there would be idiots coming in to find fault with it, so that would be a problem. Anyway, you don’t feel that it’s particularly evil, do you?”

“If you think about killing someone else, you should think about dying in return. I’m not the only one who thinks this way, right? But why are you asking this question?”

“…….”

Argio, who had been silent for a moment, opened his mouth again.

“I thought I was an evil spirit, but I guess I fall short of that standard.”

“It’s a standard. On our Earth, there is a clear standard for defining evil.”

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“Have you ever killed innocent people?”

“What kind of person is innocent?”

“People who have not harmed you or have done you a favor.”

“Could it be that they killed those people?”

“Have you ever repaid a favor with enmity?”

“I’ve never done anything like that, so if you ignore me, you won’t know.”

“Then why is it an evil spirit?”

I didn't quite understand.

“People called you a demon.”

“That’s right.”

“Why did you call me that? Even the name Argio is a derogatory term.”

“Because you’re unlucky?”

Argio continued, snapping his long fingernails.

“A beautiful beast that doesn’t even look human deserves to be hated by people. There were many other reasons besides that, but they called me the evil spirit of greed and anger.”

“Greed and anger….”

“I love wealth. Gold, silver, and fine wine are my best friends. I grew up like an animal, so I had no need to be patient. It’s a pleasure to turn my anger on those who offend me.”

“But that’s a bit too much to call him an evil spirit.”

“…Ughhhh….”

Argio rested his chin on his hand.

“I see.”

“Is there anything you don’t like?”

“I had some pride in myself….”

“Did you have any pride in being an evil spirit?”

“Of course, it is also one of my honors.”

“It’s an honor….”

“It is mine that has come into my arms.”

“…….”

“But now that I look back, my notoriety wasn’t all that great.”

Although he couldn't be seen clearly because of the cloak, Geo looked quite bored.

“How can I be this empty?”

“…Uhm, uh… I see….”

Yoo Seong-un roughly understood the situation.

'The size of the mysterious body varies depending on the story surrounding it.'

Even evil spirits are ultimately gods. Their size varies depending on the favor or hostility of the creatures who believe in their existence, and it seems that Argio actively accepted even the notoriety for things he did not do as his own.

'Then it is possible that one may have an evil divinity that is excessively evil compared to the evil deeds one has directly committed.'

Isn't that the case with the Sankalut religion? An ordinary jewel that couldn't even speak, let alone kill, became a proper evil spirit through national beliefs and sacrifices. It's a similar case to Argio.

'In particular, this person was able to speak and act, while actively accepting the misunderstandings directed at him… .'

It was an extremely rare case.

“So, does that mean you didn’t do anything?”

“I visited the mansions of unlucky authors without permission and took alcohol and goods.”

“Who were these unlucky authors?”

“Those guys who ruined my drinking. They made a scene in front of me.”

“Were you talking too loudly?”

“He bragged that he had annihilated the village that had prepared food for him.”

“Oh, that’s definitely self-defense. Then it’s hard to say what you did was evil.”

“That’s really sad news.”

"hmm…."

Yoo Seong-un smiled as if he was embarrassed.

“Is it because you think your reputation was just a facade?”

“Because evil is more enjoyable than good.”

“…….”

For a moment, Yoo Seong-un was speechless.

“…Can you give me some information about the battlefield?”

"no."

Geo's voice suddenly took on a blunt tone.

“I’m not yet perfect as Argio.”

“You’re saying you don’t really like fighting these days?”

“I originally hated fighting.”

“It’s a little different from what I said earlier.”

“I think it depends on the situation.”

“Hmm, I see.”

After thinking for a moment, Yoo Seong-un asked.

“Is Joohyun still at home?”

“Yes, he is sleeping.”

“Every time I ask you, you seem to be sleeping.”

“I put you to bed early because you seemed tired.”

“Nothing else, I was just wondering if you could leave.”

“Do you have any recommendations?”

“You said you were curious about the evil spirits.”

It was always better to practice in practice.

“Korea has an evil spirit that is officially recognized as a common religion.”

“It must be an evil spirit that doesn’t harm humans.”

“Rather, I think it was a kind of natural order, even if it was harmful.”

Mysteries related to the gods were not Yoo Seong-un's specialty, but he remembered the basic flow.

“The most representative example of this is the God of Death.”

“Death is certainly the natural course of things.”

“Yeah, you’re right. But people don’t like it.”

“For most people, death is a harm.”

“The God of Death has only recently become recognized as a mainstream religion in the last 14 years.”

“Wasn’t it before that?”

“It was a very sensitive time, and in many ways….”

Yoo Seong-un laughed innocently.

“It could be said that in a world ruled by evil spirits, there was no room for distinction.”

“You’ve hit the nail on the head.”

“Thanks to the symbol of eternity, I feel like things are somewhat organized now.”

He shrugged.

“Would you like to meet up? If you want, I’ll ask for your understanding in advance.”

“Then I would like to meet you.”

That's how the black cloak was launched into the world again.

To be exact, as the A-class hunter 'Sergio'.

* * *

“…….”

“…….”

“Hey, look here.”

Visabal looked at Yoo Seong-un, who had come to ask for permission, as if he found it ridiculous.

“When did you tell me not to let Sergio go outside?”

“Isn’t that because the guild leader is someone who threatens world peace?”

“Do you know how much I am contributing to world peace when you say such nonsense?”

“At least I’m not clapping from the side and telling Geo to make some mess.”

“That’s true, that’s true, but I feel so wronged. How can I live while being treated like this?”

Yoo Seong-un knew that he had lived very well despite all that, and Bisabal knew that.

“As expected, our employees don’t know how to rub their palms together.”

“These are the people who will gladly help you out if you add them to your work.”

“Or else you wouldn’t, I like you guys so much.”

“We know that too, we know that and that’s why we’re being so cocky….”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been mumbling, soon smiled and asked.

“The Temple of Death is in Gyeonggi-do, so I came here to get permission in advance. Unlike before, we will be going quite far, and since it will be an encounter between two evil gods, we don’t know what kind of chemical reaction will occur.”

“…….”

Bisabal, who had been tapping the table as if calculating something, soon nodded.

“I wonder what would happen if the evil spirit Geo and the quiet evil spirit met.”

“I knew you would say that.”

“Isn’t there a much more interesting and fun topic than preserving the peace of mankind?”

“Interesting… When you say it like that, it seems like you resemble Argio a bit.”

Argio said that he likes evil more than good because it is more stimulating and interesting.

There was something distinctly similar about Bisabal and Argiona in that they advocated goodness for the sake of enjoying more without much interest in the peace of mankind.

At that, Visabal smiled broadly.

“Did Argio also say that my color is similar to yours?”

“It’s a more calming color than the guild leader’s.”

“If anything happens, I’ll tell you that you’re my nephew.”

“You said you were the fourth reader.”

“Hmm.”

Bisabal added his words under Yoo Seong-un's deep gaze.

“Like a hidden son?”

“Aren’t you over eighty?”

“It looks plump.”

“You have a body that is too firm for someone in their 50s.”

“Then let’s say it’s correct.”

Up until that point, Yoo Seong-un didn't say anything.

“…Geo already has the sun’s divinity. I don’t know if the evil divinity of the evil god is superimposed on it, or if they coexist, or if they can be switched….”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking.

“The Seoul branch of the Solar Church was friendly to Geo. The evil spirits of the Gyeonggi branch in particular do not enjoy conflicts between divinities, so I thought there would be no major problems, and so I came to ask for permission.”

“But did you think it was dangerous?”

“Since Geo introduced himself as an evil spirit, we should be careful. He especially likes things that are provocative, and more than anything, he is not afraid of conflict. I thought we should prepare for it.”

“I can help you with that.”

Although the collection of the Visabals took the form of a business corporation, that did not mean that his guild members were not skilled in battle. Some of them even had a troop that followed only his orders.

“I’ll ask my friends to do it for me.”

“It gives me peace of mind knowing you’re looking after me.”

Yoo Seong-woon expressed his gratitude with his characteristically innocent smile.

“I feel like I always get help.”

“I feel the same way. But….”

"but?"

“When you go out, you will go out as ‘Mr. Sergio’, right?”

“…Shouldn’t that be the way to go?”

“Hmm.”

The visage stroked my chin.

“I think it would be okay to hire a secretary for Sergio soon.”

“Are you thinking of making Geo an official hunter?”

“It’s because I blocked it, but attention is already focused on it.”

No matter how quietly things proceeded, quite a few people noticed that the sea had become calm after Sergio and other hunters visited the S-class dungeon, 'Deep Sea Kingdom'.

The A-class hunter appeared without a sound, and the sea of Korea became quiet after his visit. Although I wasn't particularly suspicious because there was no evidence, I was curious.

“Sergio used to save people at the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’.”

“You still have that influence? Because of the Hunter who doesn’t even do any official work?”

“A handsome and capable hunter is popular with everyone.”

“…That’s true.”

In particular, Geo had a strong aura that was hard to forget in people's memories.

It is not surprising that there are still people who remember 'Sergio Hunter', who gathered people together and encouraged them during those difficult and scary times.

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“The fact that he is a promising new A-class hunter, but his whereabouts are unknown, probably drew more attention. It could have been read as a kind of mystical strategy….”

“If you knew better, you should have sent Geo out a long time ago.”

“Do you think I don’t know that this is a suggestion full of selfish intentions from the guild leader? Anyway, I guess I’ll have to look for a manager among the staff.”

If you are a hunter who has frequent official activities or is well-known, you would have one or two managers assigned to manage your schedule.

Although Geo didn't plan on being very active officially, he needed a secretary in another sense since there were many people interested in him.

“If we know about the existence of ‘Mr. Sergio’, it will be easier to manage our schedules and image….”

“Let’s try to save people for that part little by little.”

The long, slit pupils of the visage slowly opened.

“I think I’ll find it soon.”

I think your name was Joohyun.

I don't like it, but it looks pretty usable.

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (140)

Episode 140

Most hunters with high name recognition had managers.

Yoo Seong-un said.

“Well, you could think of her as a kind of secretary.”

“Do I need a secretary like that when I don’t even go out much?”

“Of course, secretaries help organize busy schedules….”

There were other missions as well.

“The most important job is managing the inside and outside of a particular person.”

Especially Korean hunters, who have a strong image as celebrities, often hire managers.

“Korea has a strong aspiration for hunters, and as a result, the consumption of images of hunters is smooth. How the hunter is perceived by the public is also an important factor.”

“Wasn’t the hunter’s job simply to catch monsters or criminals?”

“You could say that they’re like a military man and a celebrity. Even so, most hunters aren’t government employees, but if you look at the characteristics of the two professions, they’re somewhat similar.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had moved to the parking lot, invited Geo to get on.

“Get in your comfortable seats, I’ll drive.”

“Then can I sit next to you?”

“Of course. It would be convenient to have a conversation.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was in the car, continued the topic.

“That’s why I recommend that you have a manager….”

Druk.

The engine started with the sound of rolling marbles.

“You don’t really know how the world works these days.”

“That is correct.”

“If you’re going to use the identity of ‘Sergio Hunter,’ it might be a good idea to have an assistant by your side.”

“Help.”

“It’s like a guide that tells you how to deal with things as a hunter.”

In fact, there were many hunters who hired managers in that context.

“Depending on what their major is, a hunter’s job duties can vary greatly, but the basic thing to keep in mind is what kind of image they want to portray to the public.”

“I would like to hear an example of Mr. Yoo Seong-un’s situation.”

“I decided from the beginning that I would not consume images. I have a stronger sense of self as a gardener than as a hunter, and more than anything, I have worked as a research team leader for the association… so it is ambiguous to step forward as a public figure.”

“Is it because there is a risk that important information will leak out?”

“There are things like that, and I don’t have the energy to spend on image management. If I have time to stand in front of the public and give them hope and laughter, it would be more reasonable to secure a little more time….”

Yoo Seong-un is a capable hunter, a veteran gardener, a former research team leader for the association, and now a curator of the Bisabul collection and collection shop. If he were to take care of all of that, even five bodies would not be enough.

All the meteors' eyes were fine, but for some reason they looked dull.

“I need a break too.”

“Oh, if you ever need a sweet treat, just let me know.”

“Rather than a snack… please invite me over one more time.”

“My friend, Yoo Seong-un, is welcome to visit anytime.”

“Thank you, I think I’ll really sleep well there.”

There is a minor downside to the threat of racial mutation, but don't you feel it just by looking at the examples of Chaara and Joohyun? Geo's cabin was optimized for humans to rest and recover.

'That would only apply to people Geo likes.'

Yoo Seong-un immediately laughed it off.

“Anyway, I’m so busy that I don’t want to worry about my image. There are plenty of underground, unofficial hunters who don’t want to appear in front of the public for various reasons. There are even more of them among collectors who take the form of business companies.”

“Shouldn’t I remain as an unofficial hunter?”

“I’m also an A-class hunter like you, and I have various activities, but I’ve been working under a confidentiality clause since the beginning. However, since you’re already quite well-known, it’ll be hard. For some reason, there seem to be a lot of people who remember you.”

“I don’t have confidence that I can maintain my career as a celebrity. I will go downhill due to the controversy over my character.”

“I… I understand how you feel. If it’s too burdensome, you can try to avoid showing yourself as much as possible. People might think it’s a mysterious strategy, but if you keep hiding like this, you’ll eventually be forgotten.”

The Awakened continue to appear, and even more of them become Hunters. In a situation where the number of Hunters who want public recognition is increasing exponentially, if they remain quiet, they will eventually be forgotten.

“But if you continue to work as Sergio Hunter, it will be difficult to completely avoid people’s eyes.”

“If we don’t come forward officially, isn’t it not a problem?”

“People have a bad instinct to dig deeper when their curiosity is piqued.”

“Am I a being that arouses public curiosity?”

“He seems to have enough star power, but he doesn’t appear in the press or in any media.”

What should I say?

“It’s kind of like… a hidden picture game? That’s what it feels like.”

Because Geo is a portrait, he likened it to a 'hidden picture game', but it wasn't exactly wrong.

“And that is similar to the characteristics of the ‘Black Cloak’ known to the world.”

“So you’re saying that there’s a chance that people will realize that I and the Black Cloak are the same person?”

“So, it’s a good idea to show the image you want to portray before anyone comes forward to investigate your identity.”

A handsome, star-like hunter who never shows up in front of the public.

Although there were not many people who remembered him yet, there was no uproar, but the few people who did remember him were still searching for the whereabouts of 'Sergio Hunter'.

“If there are more people like that, it’ll be quite a problem. The paparazzi will follow you.”

“Would that be the case even though I’m not officially active?”

“If something like the last ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’ happens, will you just stay hidden?”

“Well, I’ll just quietly help people behind the scenes.”

“If you act like that, people will have no choice but to keep remembering you.”

Hunters who quietly performed good deeds and acts of mercy without revealing themselves to the public were especially popular.

“To be honest, ‘Sergio the Hunter’ has so many things that people will love.”

It was difficult to forget easily.

“That’s why I’m saying that it would be good to strike first before the idiots who try to find out the truth come out. If you reveal the personal information and image of ‘Sergio Hunter’ first, people who have satisfied their curiosity won’t bother to look into your personal information. It would be best if you completely separate the images of ‘Sergio Hunter’ and ‘Black Cloak’.”

“Will there be people investigating me even though the question has been resolved?”

“Those kinds of people are everywhere, even me. In my case, because I used to be a member of an association, information control is very good. So, since you are not managed by the government or the association, it seems like there is even more room for digging.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed innocently.

“Well, that’s only if you want to continue using your identity as ‘Sergio Hunter’….”

“I don’t fully understand my role yet, but I’m satisfied with where I am now.”

“Then it would definitely be a good idea to manage your image a bit. Even the monsters living in the mountains come down to the houses when they have nothing to eat.”

“Are you a monster?”

“Yeah, when you’re hungry and there’s nothing to fill you with, it’s natural to poke at the poor. That’s what I meant. Throw me some bait.”

“Then I will try to at least manage my image.”

Blond Geo asked with a faint smile.

“Should I hire a manager too?”

“We’ll think hard about that part….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“You can recommend the person you like first.”

After all that talk, the most important thing was that 'Portrait of Geo' would not be offended. If possible, Yoo Seong-un hoped that this gentlemanly source would not hate humans even for a single moment.

“It’s not urgent, so you can think about it slowly.”

"okay."

“And to explain further….”

“I am listening.”

“What a manager does is not just managing your image.”

“As you said earlier, I will act as a guide.”

“Yes, a guide. And an assistant.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“Most hunters are confused at first, unless they learn from their parents who are hunters. They want to become famous and appear in the media, but they don’t know how to do it.”

“I understand.”

“What should a hunter do? Where and what activities should they do to become more famous? Where can hunters make friends? And so on… Help with the hunters’ social lives.”

“That certainly seems like something I need.”

Geo looked as if he was very impressed.

“I’m worried about how I should live as a citizen of the Republic of Korea, let alone as a hunter.”

“Well, there is a limit to how much I can continue to teach you….”

Yoo Seo-woon smiled in vain.

“I’m sorry I’m a busy person.”

“No, I think it’s rather admirable.”

“That’s really… kind of you.”

It was also a burdensome thing to say.

'It's called respect, but it's closer to expectation, but even that is burdensome.'

Yoo Seong-un coughed and continued speaking.

“You often have difficulties when using modern civilization.”

“What Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is correct.”

“I think it would be good to find a manager who can help you in that regard.”

Geo would immediately demand payment in kind, such as jewels, would appear in public places barefoot, and would have many questions due to his lack of understanding of human culture.

“Of course, there aren’t any major problems right now, but wouldn’t it be good for you to learn a little bit about this and that?”

“Yes, I was worried that I should go to school and learn the knowledge necessary for daily life.”

“School? Well, I see. But I guess it’s not very noticeable that you’re going to school at your age….”

Perhaps Geo thought that way because 'school is a place where people learn wisdom related to daily life and social life.' However, even so, Geo could not be admitted to school.

“Then, I think it would be good to have someone who is quite versatile as your manager.”

“I would like someone who doesn’t fear me even though they know I’m a black cloak.”

“…I’m not afraid of you, so yes, I’ll look for you diligently.”

Ah, Yoo Seong-un let out an exclamation and asked.

“Have you ever had contact with other gods?”

“I communicate with my father often.”

“That… is not the previous god, but a completely separate god.”

“That has never happened.”

Geo laughed as if he had heard a funny joke.

“How could an ordinary person like me have frequent contact with God?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled with force on his lips.

"I see."

“Please tell me I’m just an ordinary person.”

“Our Geo is very ordinary.”

There was nothing I couldn't do if the source asked me to.

“Didn’t we exchange glances with the light of fairness at the Solar Bridge last time?”

“When you say the light of justice, you mean the goddess of the Sun Church. We haven’t seen each other since then.”

“So this is the first time you’ve met a god as a god?”

“What Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is correct.”

“Uhm….”

Yoo Seong-un asked with a small groan.

“Do you think there will be an accident?”

“I think I’m past the age of being a mischievous person.”

“As for Argio?”

“I’m not sure because it’s not completely assimilated, but that’s why it’s safe.”

“Because the initiative isn’t yours?”

“It would be ambiguous to say that I am in charge of that appearance as well.”

“Really? Anyway, if you don’t intend to fight, then it’s fine.”

Even Yoo Seong-un knew the mechanism of how 'Portrait of Geo' became the eye of the origin. Argio, who introduced himself as an evil spirit, was simply 'Geo' and not 'Portrait of Geo'.

'Geo said he wouldn't cause an accident, so I guess he's right.'

Still, just in case, Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth.

“The god of death you will meet is a traditional evil god.”

“Traditional evil spirits?”

“A god who, despite being born under providence, exerts a negative influence on humans.”

He was the native god of the Earth.

“He is the god of birth and the twin god, and he has existed on Earth for a very long time, so he is very gentle and reserved. He is not a god who actively influences humans.”

“I don’t know if you’ll react if I come to visit.”

“That could be true, or she could give him a glance like the Sun Goddess did last time. But the God of Death is one of the few gods who has a physical body on Earth, so communication is more likely.”

“What is the present body?”

“It’s like a doll made by a god who is almost intangible to visit the human world. It’s a slightly different case, but it’s similar to the teddy bear your father went into.”

"aha."

Geo smiled and nodded.

“I understand.”

“If that’s the case, then that’s good.”

It was truly surprising, even for Yoo Seong-un, to be able to compare a teddy bear with a real body.

“There is a temple of death not far after passing the toll gate.”

“I am looking forward to it.”

“It’s not that popular because it’s the temple of the evil god…?”

While we were talking about this and that.

Death opened its eyes.

* * *

“…….”

Death saw my daughter.

“My… daughter….”

“Death, why have you opened your eyes?”

“…cruel… divinity….”

“If you say cruel divinity, are you talking about an evil spirit?”

“I see… you… want… an invitation….”

“There was one request for permission to visit.”

The woman bowed her head deeply.

“What should I do?”

“…Guide… me… please….”

Death whispered behind the veil.

“I will see.”

Is it a sin, providence, or a hero?

If not that, then what could it be… .

oh

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (141)

141

Episode 141

Meanwhile, Joo-hyun.

“…….”

“Kyuu.”

“…I will listen.”

I was being treated to a snack by a teddy bear.

“Is this fruit tea?”

"dream."

“It smells good, thank you for your consideration even though it must have been a hassle.”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

“And from now on, I’ll take care of my own food. If that’s okay with you.”

He added.

“I don’t intend to use the kitchen that the owner of this house seems to cherish without permission. But, wouldn’t it be okay for me to bring the food that has been prepared like this?”

Joo-Hyeon smiled her characteristically cheerful smile, being careful not to offend the great mysteries of this place if possible.

“I don’t think it’s polite to only ask for help from elders.”

"dream?"

“If there’s anything else you want me to do, please feel free to ask me.”

The teddy bear tilted its head in agreement, but nodded as if it understood.

'I was worried that he might get angry if I rejected his favor, but fortunately, that doesn't seem to be the case.'

Even though it looked like an ordinary teddy bear, I knew that what was inside it was not ordinary. Isn't it the one Black Cloak called father? I felt too uncomfortable just receiving treatment from such a great elder.

'It's fortunate that we can interact to some extent with the beings that reside in such a place…'

Joohyun was silent for a moment, placing the sparkling fruit tea in front of me.

“…….”

I'm not sure if I can consider this a blessing.

'Can I drink it?'

I've been eating and drinking well up until now, but it's still not without its worries.

'No matter how much I think about it, this place is too far away from the human world.'

Among dimensions, there are dimensions where humans can live, and dimensions where great beings like gods can reside.

'It's quite surprising that the shape of the forest cabin is recognizable even to a non-hunter like me, but even so… .'

In Joo-Hyeon's opinion, this place was definitely closer to the latter. It was a dimension where mysteries, not humans, resided.

'And the act of consuming something has been treated as a ritual since ancient times.'

Legends of experiencing amazing mysteries by eating food from the divine realm were common, meaning that the act of eating something meant stepping into the dimension that the food belonged to.

"…I think I ate a bit too much…."

"Huh?"

"Can you walk out as a human?"

This is what Joo-Hyeon was worried about: God's favor corrupts humans.

'Even if we don't know the size and direction, it can't be safe for humans.'

Since most of the saints and saintesses on Earth are unable to die and live on, it was not known how Hyun would be swept away by the kindness shown by the black cloak.

'Of course it's better than incurring the enemy's enmity...'

Joo-hyun, who had hesitated for a while, eventually drank the fruit tea. It wasn't just a matter of etiquette, as you shouldn't carelessly refuse something that was offered to you.

Joohyun laughed in vain.

“…It’s still delicious.”

It was such an ecstatic taste that I could understand why so many legendary humans were so obsessed with food that they couldn't make proper judgments.

The sweet fruit tea, combined with the soft spring breeze that felt like soaked flowers, gently melted Joohyun's tongue.

'Yes, I am still human.'

There was an anti-cat named 'Dana' here. It especially hated humans, and whenever it saw Ju-hyeon, it would slowly avoid him and would yawn. That was an indicator that Ju-hyeon was still human.

‘For some reason, as time passes, that kind of rejection gradually subsides…’

I didn't want to think that it was a sign of something.

'I guess we've just gotten used to each other after seeing each other for so long. I didn't find anything strange when I checked it myself, so I want to believe there won't be any major problems.'

Joohyun blinked.

“…….”

Joo-Hyeon had thought about giving up, but now that the situation had come to this, he had no intention of giving up on being human.

“…I’ll go out as soon as I’m ready. That’s how it should be.”

"dream."

“Because I, an ordinary human being, can’t stay here forever.”

Humans should live among humans, like humans. That was Joo-Hyeon's thought.

“The funny thing is that even if I leave here, I won’t be able to live like a human being….”

Ju-hyeon, who knew before the great disaster, was a person who remembered what it meant to 'live like a human'.

I have the right to live with people who love and care for me, and I have the opportunity to grow naturally while experiencing the fortunes and misfortunes that come to me. When the strong cooperate to protect the weak, humans achieve the most ideal structure.

"…hmm."

Joohyun smiled awkwardly as if he thought it was funny.

“I am aware that the future I want is too idealistic.”

“Huh?”

“Mr. Geo asked me if I wanted to achieve world peace, and I think that’s probably right.”

“…….”

“If we could just bring back a part of it, I think the world would be a much better place than it is now….”

A dream is a dream. People call it a 'dream' because they know they can't achieve it perfectly, but they believe they can imitate it. The future that Joo-hyun wanted was no different.

What was needed to grasp even a small part of such a mirage was the appropriate mental power. Passion, belief, hope. The fuel that makes humans burn their short lives was needed.

“But I don’t have the motivation right now. That’s why I can’t leave this place and am just brooding. It’s pathetic.”

I lost too much and felt too many disappointments.

“I don’t know what I want to do.”

I already knew that not all efforts are rewarded.

If the world was one where good children were respected and lucky, Joo-hyun would not have had to give up his last name. If those who bore fruit were able to receive the reward they deserved, Joo-hyun would have been at least in a higher position than a deputy.

But everything was okay. The pace of progress was slow, and sometimes I would go back or stop, but I still thought I was moving forward little by little.

“…I feel empty inside….”

So I lost everything.

“…….”

“…….”

“…That was a not very interesting story.”

Joohyun shrugged.

“I think I need some time to think.”

In fact, Joo-hyun also knew very well. In order to do that 'thinking', he had to start from this emptiness. Since he had already been unhappy and overcome it several times, Joo-hyun knew the order in which he had to get up again.

‘But I still don’t have the strength to walk out of here on my own two feet…’

Joohyun asked the teddy bear with her signature smile.

“Can I do that?”

“Kyuu.”

The teddy bear climbed up onto the table, patted Joo-hyun's head, and then went back down.

“Kuk kuk, kuk.”

“…I don’t understand.”

“Kyuu.”

He patted Joo-hyun's thigh once more and left the cabin with Anti-Cat. Judging from the bag of treats in the cat's mouth, it seemed like he was going to spend some more time sitting on the cabin bench.

Because it seemed like it would definitely guarantee Hyun Joo's time.

“…….”

Suddenly, I felt doubtful again.

‘… Even non-human beings are considerate of me like this.’

Why did I dream?

For whom and for what.

* * *

Geo blinked twice as he arrived at the Temple of Death.

“…It’s more frugal than I thought.”

“Because it’s not a popular denomination.”

“Rather than that….”

Geo tilted his head slightly.

“It seems to have strong Korean characteristics.”

When you say temple, don't you think of the Renaissance style? Like the Seoul branch's Sun Bridge and Giovanni's Sun Bridge, I thought of buildings made of pure white marble, so it felt a bit novel.

“Isn’t it a Hanok?”

“I mentioned this on the way here, but this god of death is a native god of Earth. There is at least one temple of death in every country. Korea is one of them.”

“So, did you emphasize the regional characteristics? To show that it is the indigenous god of the Earth in the form of a Hanok?”

“Among the temples of death, Korea seems to be the one that puts the most emphasis on the exterior of the building. It may be because it is the only temple that has a manifestation of death. But that’s not what the god of death requested….”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking after locking the car door.

“This is the first place in the world where an evil spirit was officially recognized as a religious sect. That’s why there was so much resistance from people at first, and the protests from the local residents were huge. It was a facility that was avoided.”

“It’s a facility that is avoided.”

“It was none other than the god of death. The people of that time, who were so tormented by the gods, had no time to consider providence or anything like that.”

“That’s unexpected.”

Yoo Seong-un's words sounded as if there was a time when God directly tormented humans. Geo, who was once a priest, asked.

“Have you been tormented by the gods?”

“It hasn’t been that long since we started to distinguish between traditional gods and evil gods. In the past, gods interfered with the lives of humans so much that they caused many disasters, big and small.”

“Big and small disasters.”

“If you say something that a god doesn’t like, they’ll punish you with heavenly punishment, or they’ll forcibly build their own temple on Earth. Well, it’s only natural since they have no reason to care about humans and no will to do so.”

“Isn’t that the case now?”

“We succeeded in preventing excessive interference from God by focusing on the symbols of eternity. Over time, things will naturally settle down… How can we say that we have artificially brought them forward?”

Yoo Seong-un waved his hand.

“It would be too long to explain, so let me just say it like this. Now, even the gods have to invest a lot if they want to intervene in the human world.”

“Those who don’t like investing won’t try to intervene recklessly. I understand what you are saying, Mr. Yoo Seong-woon.”

Geo nodded.

“I remember my father not easily interfering with the lives of humans, and wondered why, but I had no idea that such a measure had been taken.”

“It must have been because the gods of the dead-end dimension were wandering around, so no proper measures were taken. The symbols of eternity did step in to solve the problem, though….”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“It’s not that the great mysteries disappeared because of the excessive intervention of God. Among them, the mysteries that were most interested in Earth continued to show interest even after that.”

“Is the God of Death one of them?”

“Because they were indigenous gods of Earth, they probably didn’t want to look into other dimensions. Anyway, among those gods, there were many mysteries that were helpful to humans.”

“I guess it wouldn’t be easy for humans to accept that.”

“I think you understand. However, that doesn’t mean the existing gods will disappear, and coexistence with mystery is a destined future. That’s why the government has taken some measures.”

A representative example is the Temple of Death. Yoo Seong-un said, pointing to a not-so-large Hanok.

“We reduced the size of the building and added Korean-style colors.”

“Did that work?”

“This is a clear indication that this god is a native god of our planet. However, that doesn’t mean that the god of death is a native god of Korea….”

“But I think it must have felt special to Koreans. It must have felt like meeting a friend from their hometown in a different region.”

“I guess you could say they’re similar.”

The hanok, of an unimaginable shape and moderate size, shocked the people who had been strongly opposed to it. In the meantime, the government turned the mood around by providing various benefits to the local residents.

“I guess it was a kind of successful marketing. At that time, there were so many people dying and the management was not very good, but the Temple of Death directly hosted the funerals.”

People who have lost family or friends. People who are on the verge of death or in a dangerous situation. Such people felt great merit in having their funerals held directly in the temple where the god of death resides, not anyone else.

“I’m in dire straits right now and my heart is torn apart, but the god of death, officially recognized by the government and the association, is officiating the funeral. Even if he’s an evil spirit, he can’t help but hope for mercy.”

“Even so, they might have hated it until the end, but I think the government and the association had a good perception. Since they had great faith in the facilities that the god of death declared safe, such a business would have been successful.”

“You’re right. The government and the association have a lot of trust from the people. I think it was hard not to believe in the god of death who was being promoted in such a way.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“The God of Death also helped a lot there. He’s a native god of Earth, so he basically cares a lot about Earthlings. He’s not the type to meddle in human affairs….”

“I heard you have a physical body?”

“After the great disaster, the environment was suitable for creating a new body, and since deaths occurred frequently at that time, I think it was the right time for the indigenous gods to make their appearance.”

“It’s the right timing.”

“I don’t know the exact facts either. And why are you staying in Korea? The stories of the gods are not my specialty, and the god of death is a very quiet person… He doesn’t react much other than observing the world in his physical body.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was smiling innocently, guided Geo.

“Then shall we go in?”

"great."

As we approached the temple entrance, the temple guardian holding a spear asked.

“Are you the meteor hunter?”

“Yes, I applied for a private prayer room today.”

“I will take you inside.”

Soon after, a priest wearing pure white robes emerged from inside the temple.

Her hair was tied back, her eyes were covered with a white cloth, and she was holding a white, round lantern in her left hand. The priestly attire, which had a Korean feel, made it difficult to tell the gender of the person wearing it.

The priest spoke in a neutral tone.

“I will guide you.”

“Then please do so.”

The inside of the temple was very dark, and the floor was covered with shallow water. It was not just covered, but it was flowing quietly here and there like a living creature.

The priest moved his feet as if communicating with the flow of water.

“Follow me.”

It was so dark that ordinary people could hardly see even an inch ahead, so few people knew the layout of the temple of death. Visitors could only move around with the guidance of the priest's lantern and white robe.

Perhaps it was because, unlike the previous 'Jewel's Vein', it was officially released through a portrait frame. Geo also couldn't secure his sight in the darkness because he was in the middle of synchronization.

“…….”

However, the procession of priests moving in the darkness, holding white lanterns, looked like lanterns floating on a lakeside in the dark of the night.

“This is the prayer room assigned to Brother Yoo Seong-un today.”

“Thank you for your guidance.”

“And would you excuse me for a moment?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un glanced at Geo and nodded.

“What’s going on?”

“I would like to see the bishop.”

The priest continued, bowing his head deeply.

“Father opened his eyes.”

“…Are you saying that a trust has been established?”

“I hope you will have a conversation with the guests who come to visit today.”

“I don’t think I’m the kind of guest who wants to have a conversation.”

“Yes.”

“You’re more proactive than I thought.”

Yoo Seong-un asked Geo.

“What do you want to do?”

"well."

Geo asked soon.

“Does he want to be my friend?”

“…….”

The priest, who had been silent for a moment, soon opened his mouth.

“…I’m sorry, nameless deity. I didn’t hear your story.”

“You are afraid of me.”

“If you were not satisfied with my hospitality, I deeply apologize.”

“I hope you’re not scared.”

A bright red smile appeared on Geo's lips.

“It’s hard to make friends, isn’t it?”

The priest did not dare answer.

* * *

“…….”

“…I will guide you.”

“Okay.”

Everyone is afraid of me.

'Isn't this also a type of nuisance?'

Geo became distraught.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (142)

142

Episode 142

Geo wasn't hurt by people being afraid of him.

'You might be scared.'

Even before the catastrophe, many people were afraid of Sergio.

His facial muscles, which seemed to be the only one that had degenerated, did not know how to smile, and because he did not enjoy social activities, his range of activities was limited. On top of that, Geo, who was particularly particular about manners, was a person who was difficult to make friends with in many ways.

That's why, when it seemed like there were few people who were afraid of him, he would come out.

‘You said the atmosphere was scary…’

He always has a blank expression, is tall like a pole, and always wears a black suit.

'Black is such a comfortable color to wear.'

It was a choice that took convenience into consideration along with personal taste, but there were more than a few people who were scared by Geo's appearance. He was also aware that he did not have a comfortable impression.

“…….”

But seeing someone this scared makes even Geo feel uneasy.

“Are you all coming?”

“I apologize for any inconvenience.”

“You have nothing to be sorry about.”

There was no need to react so terrified to the simple question, 'How far have we come?' The priest who guided us did not make any particular fuss, but his stiff steps and slightly shaky voices hinted at his fear.

Giovanni thought to himself.

'This really seems like a nuisance.'

I hated it so much.

‘The collectors could just laugh it off and say it out loud… .’

Even though it was the same fear, the result was different. The people in the collection were resilient and, above all, seemed to have adapted well to the existence of Geo. It seemed to be because only indifferent and calm people gathered together.

But what the priest guiding him now felt was real, proper fear.

'I didn't know you'd be this scared.'

However, seeing them doing their best to treat their guests, Geo's temper becomes twisted as he feels the need to return the kindness he received fivefold.

“…….”

“It’s in front.”

"okay."

Geo thanked the priest who had stopped in front of the huge gate.

"thank you."

“…I was truly honored.”

The priest bowed deeply.

“Please do not be angry with us for following our Father’s words.”

“I am a priest who wishes to pray and I have come as a visitor, so don’t worry.”

“When you say that, the heart of this lowly priest feels light.”

Geo asked him.

“If you don’t mind, would you accept my humble gift?”

“…What do you mean by a gift?”

“Do you enjoy sweets, Your Majesty?”

“Sweets… yes, I like them.”

“What I am giving you is a small gift and a token of my gratitude.”

Geo handed over a fruit wrapper neatly wrapped in Korean paper.

“It’s sun-dried fruit.”

"ah…."

“You can eat it, or you can choose not to eat it.”

Then he added:

“Just don’t be afraid of me.”

Because I'm so sorry.

“Would you please do that?”

“…I will never forget the warm grace that the Divine has bestowed upon me.”

“Don’t think too highly of it.”

Oh, don't do that.

'Why are you doing that?'

To be honest, I felt like crying a little. Every word was really burdensome. If it was just a ghost story or a monster, I would have laughed it off, but it was so embarrassing for Geo to be treated so harshly and scared.

What on earth was he giving and what was the favor? He didn't want to be treated like this for nothing more than a piece of paper. He hoped the priest would recognize the earnestness of his bribe.

“I hope you look more relaxed next time you come.”

Geo backed off at this point, thinking that it was not good manners to continue being sticky any longer.

It's true that he looks scary, and it's natural to be afraid of scary things, so it was rude to keep whining about not being scared when we were just meeting for the first time.

“…….”

Thinking about it this way, I started missing Joo-Hyeon, who was resting at home.

'Become friends with me quickly.'

My prospective pen pal who is kind, well-mannered, and not afraid of haunted portraits.

He wasn't the most sociable person to begin with, but after he became a ghost story, many people started to fear him, which made things a little difficult. It became very difficult to make friends.

“Can I open the door and come in?”

“If you stand in front, I will ring the bell for the gatekeeper.”

“I understand.”

Daughter .

The priest rang a white, glowing bell.

“…….”

The door opened smoothly, without a single noise.

‘…Horror movie intro?’

A door that opens silently in a dark and huge temple was quite new and seemed like a haunted mansion.

'But if it's a horror concept, even I, a possessed portrait artist, can't help it.'

Geo thought that if he ever builds a temple in the future, he should definitely get permission from the copyright holder and introduce this system. It seems that my public image is becoming closer to a ghost story, but I learned a lot from it.

'By the way, wouldn't it be too rude to compare an old person whose face I don't even know to a ghost?'

The God of Death also seemed to Geo to be on the same level as his teddy bear father, the Sun God. This was because he had already experienced the Sun God once and the idea that 'God = old man living alone' was ingrained in his brain.

He confidently entered the door that did not allow a single ray of light in. It seemed that the elders of the family were living a very lonely and desolate life here, and Geo was confident that he could show off his talents to such a person.

"…hmm."

A dark, transparent stream of water that flows gently and shallowly across the entire floor.

As expected, the huge door closed silently, and soon a pure white light came into view not far away.

“Are you the bishop of this place?”

“Please lower your voice, nameless divinity.”

The one who opened his mouth was a woman wearing a hanbok as lush as a peony.

“We appreciate your tolerating our rudeness. May we understand that your coming here in person is an invitation from our father?”

“Of course.”

“I am Eun-ryeong, the manager of this place, even though I am lacking. If you need anything, please call me anytime. I will stay in this room.”

The bishop put down the lantern he was holding on the floor and quietly stepped away, disappearing into the darkness. The bishop, wearing a pitch-black hanbok and covering his face with a pitch-black veil, quickly disappeared into the darkness.

Only then did Geo realize who he should be talking to.

"aha."

He raised his head and looked into the darkness.

“I never thought you’d be here already.”

Then a wet noise was heard in the darkness.

“I see the death of the Earth.”

"…you…."

Death showed its face between the small but bright lights.

“You did… well… for my children….”

It was a gigantic being that seemed to be one with the darkness.

The face resembled an old tree that had remained strong for many years, and a pure white light like a lantern leaked out through the large and small cracks in its surface.

He had countless very long and thin arms, and his lower body, visible in the lantern light, looked very long and stretched out like pitch-black river water.

The body spread out like a spider web and the black silk covering it. Geo realized that this entire room was created by the embodiment of death.

“It looks great.”

I was amazed.

“You are the river and the tree.”

“Did it look like that…?”

“What I am stepping on is your knee, and what I see is a mountain made of arms.”

“…You… are very… kind to me….”

“Why not?”

Geo liked old people.

“I came here today to ask about the evil spirit.”

“…Is that so….”

“Could you please tell me why you called me?”

“I want you….”

The voice of death was huge, like the echo of a cave.

“I saw it.”

It was quiet.

“In sin, yet not a sinner.”

“It’s similar to providence, but it’s not that either.”

“You can’t call someone a hero when they are evil….”

Death defined Argios with his mouth hanging in the air.

“You who gave your life, how can you be in hell?”

He said.

“You are condemned as a sinner, but you are not a sinner. You refuse to enjoy the comfort of Providence, and you were once a hero to the divinity that covets blood and wealth. I love you. I pity your soul.”

“…….”

“You wish to be condemned, but it will not be easy. You wish to remain in the midst of pleasures clouded by reason, but abundance and peace will remain with you. You wish to be remembered as a vain phantom, but you will remain as a master of history.”

Death asked.

“Who are you?”

It was a pure question, full of doubt.

“Have you already decided?”

“…….”

And Geo.

“……?”

It was ridiculous.

“I am human.”

“I see, so that’s what you’ve decided.”

“No, he was just human from the beginning.”

“I understand….”

“Sir, listen to me.”

Geo felt a little wronged.

“I admit I am a bit of an unusual case, but that doesn’t mean I am not human.”

There are people who fly with wings as big as a house on their backs, people whose eyes are slit open like those of reptiles and sparkle, and people who are so strong that they can control the world with a single breath of their nose.

Why can't I?

“This is discrimination.”

"discrimination…."

“Human diversity can easily accommodate even an unusual person like me.”

“I guess so… I’ll hold you well….”

“It’s not that they embraced it, it’s that it was there from the beginning.”

“I will listen to that….”

For some reason, it seemed like he was sighing. Geo felt even more aggrieved. With the diversity of humans being so vast, why can’t a possessed portrait be treated as a human?

The mouths in the air attached to the god of death, who seemed to have come to his own conclusion, either because he was not interested in Geo's grievances or because he had no will to discuss them, kept muttering.

“What a pity.”

“How lovely is that dedication and affection.”

“Your broad arms are higher than the mountains and wider than the rivers.”

“Breathe in my arms.”

“Fall asleep in my arms.”

“Life and death are in it.”

“And yet he says, ‘I am human.’”

“I will love you without ceasing.”

“I will give without ceasing.”

“Will there be an end to you?”

“There is only a beginning.”

“To you….”

Among the countless voices that resembled fog whispering in the secluded mountains, only one spoke.

“There is no death.”

“…….”

Geo thought.

‘…Oh, God of Heaven and Earth, this is how I walk the path of the biographies of geniuses.’

Suddenly, I received news of immortality.

'I'm really great.'

It was a fact that he had already vaguely accepted when he first realized that he had become a portrait, but it seemed that Geo had become a body that could no longer be called ordinary. Today, his self-esteem was even higher.

It seemed like it would be time to stop being so high, but Sergio's grandmother, the only human who could point that out, had already passed away. It was something that would make the meteors scream and humanity lament.

“…….”

Geo quickly came to a conclusion.

“…I have to make a lot of friends.”

Okay then.

“Then you will never be bored in your life.”

"…okay…."

“Can I come visit you often? I’ll prepare a meal for you.”

“Well… Ira….”

“If there is no death for me, can’t we be friends without parting?”

"…friend…."

The pitch-black room made of death resonated round and round.

“That sounds good.”

Geo knew it was a laugh.

“Come often, young friend.”

"thank you."

“I am waiting for your gift.”

In this way, Geo's number of friends increased.

Warm.

* * *

“Oh, really?”

Yoo Seong-un, who was waiting in the prayer room, asked.

“Anyway, if they’re not afraid of you, then they’re all friends?”

“If possible, I hope it is someone who is kind and polite.”

“Yes, all the good and polite beings who are not afraid of you.”

“Then I guess there is no reason not to be friends.”

"indeed…."

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“I thought you wouldn’t call me your friend since you called me your elder.”

“I don’t think you’re as old and lonely as I thought….”

“Is that old, lonely person talking about your father?”

“You were quite lonely before I came to see you.”

“I don’t know how one can define an intangible being like God as being ‘old’ or ‘lonely’ in the first place.”

“Just… Can’t you see it if you look at it? Death doesn’t seem particularly lonely. He has a lot of family.”

“…….”

That part was a little interesting. Yoo Seong-un's bad habit of sneaking his head out and expressing his curiosity. He asked.

“Then what did the God of Death look like to you?”

I was curious about the world that Geo sees.

“I said that at least he didn’t look lonely.”

“Um… if we were to compare him to a person, he would be around middle-aged….”

“Because you’re middle-aged. And?”

“Very inclusive….”

Geo, who had been thinking for a moment, continued speaking.

“Gwichanism?”

“…….”

“I felt like if I pushed, they would accept it, unless it was something ridiculous.”

"uh…."

“More than anything, he hated going out of the room.”

“…Uh, that….”

“I think we’ll be a good fit.”

"…I see."

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“If that’s what you’re saying, then so be it.”

Oh, yeah. I see.

I guess it's still an area that's difficult for humans to understand.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (143)

143

Episode 143

After all the visitors had left, the bishop called the priest who had guided Sergio today.

The priest, wearing white robes and a white lantern, entered the room where the incarnation of death was staying and paid his respects. He turned off the lantern and walked over to the bishop, who was seated in the darkness, waiting for the words to be spoken.

“You worked hard today.”

Then the bishop opened his mouth.

“It must have been hard.”

“It is my honor.”

“It must have been a very hectic day.”

“We still don’t have enough priests….”

“Who can stand upright in the presence of the divine?”

“Thank you for your kindness, which is like the sea.”

"okay…."

The bishop motioned for them to take a seat and asked.

“Tell me what you see and hear.”

“Yes, Bishop.”

The priest bowed his head deeply and continued speaking.

“He seemed very adept at dealing with people.”

“It seemed that way to me too.”

“He seemed like a very strong person, but he also seemed to change his personality in an instant.”

“Does that mean that personality, the ego, seems to have changed?”

“No, it seems that only the nature has changed, while the ego and memories remain intact.”

“It is ever-changing.”

“What I heard was a heavy voice like my father’s, a voice as warm as the sun, and a sharp voice with a cruel interest.”

“You are truly a person who has reached the realm of the heavenly realm.”

The bishop nodded.

“He gave you a reward.”

“Yes, this….”

The priest placed a small, black, mother-of-pearl-decorated tray with a paper-wrapped object on it. The object flowed through the water on the floor and soon reached the bishop. The bishop picked it up.

There was a very strong scent of sweetness.

“I won’t open this. No matter what he says.”

“You said it was dried fruit. You also said it was sweet.”

“Was there anything else you said?”

“I wish I wasn’t afraid of you….”

"also?"

“He said he hoped the next time he saw me he would look more comfortable.”

“I see.”

The bishop placed the gift back on the tray and gently pushed it back to the priest. The priest bowed his head respectfully and placed the rustling gift into his bosom.

The bishop, who had confirmed it, spoke beyond the black veil.

“You have received His grace, so do not harm your family, but show your gratitude.”

“Yes, Bishop.”

“If he comes to our house, let him come to us.”

“Yes, Bishop.”

“I should give you some advice about him, but it doesn’t seem to be working out….”

The bishop, whose words were trailing off, opened his mouth after a long while.

“If your father called him a friend, you too should act accordingly.”

“I will do my best to provide the best hospitality to my friend.”

“I don’t want to be treated with much fanfare. I want you to be treated as a visitor… but remember that I am your father’s friend.”

“I am a poor priest, but I will do so.”

“Do not fear the evil spirits, for before being an evil deity, he was providence and a hero.”

“…….”

“You consider yourself human.”

How can I walk that rugged path of compassion?

“I too am a foolish child of yours, so I do not have much advice to give you. Just follow the flow of the river and do not think of resisting it, just surrender to it, and you will not be in trouble.”

“Yes, I will keep that in mind.”

“His identity has been kept secret from other children, except you. I believe you have been the same. He expects to be treated as a human being, not as a god, so we must not allow the mystery to grow here.”

“I will keep that in mind.”

The bishop spoke in his characteristically soft voice to the sight of the priest bowing his head deeply.

“I consider you my successor, so you must act wisely.”

“Yes, Bishop.”

“Your role has become important since your father called you his friend.”

The bishop, who had been silent for a moment, soon nodded.

“You are a friend acknowledged by my father, so the gift he has given you cannot be harmful. Enjoy the gift, but if anything goes wrong, tell me and I will give you my advice.”

“Thank you for your grace.”

“Go back and rest. This is your father’s room, the room where death resides, and it will still be poisonous to you. When you can more easily accept the silence and darkness, I will call you back here.”

“Then I will step aside.”

The priest bowed his head once more and quietly left the death chamber.

“…….”

The only human left in the dead, the bishop, placed the bear in his hand on the water surface. The bear, made of pitch-black bamboo and gold, did not sink into the shallow water, but only cast a shadow.

The bishop called my father from within the black veil.

"father."

“…….”

“If you have any other intentions, please call my daughter at any time.”

“…My… daughter….”

“Yes, father. Your child is here.”

“Are you scared… or something?”

“I was not afraid because my father protected me.”

but.

“His divinity is guarded against wickedness.”

The bishop who serves the God of Death and his incarnation is not a saint. Since Death here lowers itself and uses the incarnation, it is possible to communicate with the God of Death without special qualifications and with just effort.

However, if you are close to a divinity, there are things you learn naturally. The bishop noticed that the evil divinity he visited today had some similarities to his father.

“I don’t need to be anxious.”

"he is…."

“Yes, father. This daughter is listening.”

“…flows….”

“Is it flowing like the river of your father?”

“There is no reason to go against it, and it cannot be done… You take good care of it.”

“…How could I dare to spare the divinity?”

“He is not lonely, but he deserves to be loved.”

“…….”

The bishop smiled faintly.

“You’re unusually talkative today.”

“Is it good?”

“The silence is nice, but days like this are nice too.”

“I’m fine too….”

Without a sound, the arms and hands of Death groped about my room. The dragon-like river that formed him continued to flow, and the pitch-black swell that covered Death wavered with the drops that adorned it.

Death expressed his feelings by smiling serenely with his whole body.

“He was in sin, yet not a sinner; he knew himself to be human, yet he was touched by providence; he was born under an evil star, yet he was once a hero.”

“I didn’t know there was such a mystery.”

“I also have not seen him until he appears to me in person. However, he exists as a human being and his story is also very valuable and rare, so I will covet that young friend.”

“Would you like to do so, Father?”

The bishop lifted the bear's pole again.

“Shall we find his temple?”

“He is a human being, so he has no temple.”

“I want to express my sincerity.”

“If he does, be his friend, that’s what he wants.”

“Because we’re friends….”

The bishop nodded, blowing fog instead of smoke from his muffler.

“We will be happy to welcome you back again.”

“Then… it will work.”

“Would you like to sleep?”

"…okay…."

“Please stay away from the noise and sleep deeply.”

“…….”

“I will stay by your side.”

As Death ceased making a sound, the bishop also only breathed out mist.

A familiar silence fell over the pitch-black room.

* * *

For reference.

“They said I was immortal.”

“…Is that so?”

“It seems really great.”

The mere news of immortality could not dampen Geo's spirits.

“I think this is making a mark on human history.”

“If you say that and then say I’m ordinary, I might really cry.”

“If you could just say that I’m ordinary, even if it’s just empty words, I would be grateful.”

“I don’t know what kind of stubbornness that is.”

“I meant to ask that you do not discriminate against someone so extraordinary as me.”

“Oh… I see….”

Yoo Seong-un nodded and asked while adjusting the direction of the car.

“But is that all?”

“What do you mean?”

“Usually people are more shocked when they find out they are immortal.”

“Is it surprising that he is immortal when he is already a portrait?”

“Well, I guess it’s a bit surprising.”

“My mental strength is not that weak.”

“No, I was just saying that’s what normal people would do.”

Yoo Seong-un muttered to himself.

'If you want to imitate a human, you better do it.'

Somehow, as each day passed, Geo's imitation of humans seemed to become more and more awkward. I think it was probably because Yoo Seong-un was a particularly easygoing person to deal with, but it was still difficult to watch from the sidelines.

'What rhythm should I follow so that Geo doesn't feel uncomfortable?'

Feeling a little bitter, Yoo Seong-un smiled his characteristically innocent smile.

“But, if you say immortality….”

"yes."

“The symbol of eternity is immortality, but you were worried that those people would be lonely.”

“Yes, it was.”

“Aren’t you worried?”

“…….”

Geo, who pretended to think for a moment, soon blinked.

“Not really.”

“Why is that?”

“Because I am confident that I can eat well and live well.”

“Well, it certainly seems that way.”

Yoo Seong-un was convinced. It seemed like there was no time to be bored in life.

“Then, is it because you weren’t the one who was worried about the symbol of eternity?”

“It may sound arrogant and presumptuous, but that’s the gist of it.”

Geo nodded.

“I am such a free spirit that I can live peacefully in my portrait, but don’t they have a grave responsibility that determines the fate of this country and the planet?”

“You are right.”

“Then it seems like it would be difficult to eat well and live well. The future of countless lives would depend on your every step, and everyone in the world would be focused on you and afraid.”

“Doesn’t that look good?”

“Isn’t it the case that you want to spend your whole life working while being looked down on or cursed at by others when you can’t even live a life where you only have fun? It doesn’t look very good.”

"okay…."

Yoo Seong-un thought quietly.

'I think I've lived a life that isn't all that different from others.'

He recalled the story of Giovanni, who had saved countless people in the hope that the conflict between mermaids and humans would be alleviated, and on the other hand, that more people would not get sick.

And then he died in the most horrible and miserable way.

'Even after he died, he was stuffed in the form of a portrait like this.'

In the first place, 'Portrait of Geo' is not a very worrisome thing because its basis is the origin, but it is also true that it feels sad from a human's perspective. As a human, living the life of the origin would be more burdensome than being a symbol of eternity.

After thinking for a moment, Yoo Seong-un asked.

“Is it okay?”

“I am very satisfied with my life.”

“If you say immortality, I don’t think it’s anything special….”

“I don’t think it’s a big problem.”

“You will have to see many people die, except for you.”

Geo was confident.

“Why is that a problem?”

“…….”

Oh, I see.

Yoo Seong-un was speechless.

“…So you don’t really have any intention of pretending to be ordinary?”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un is a trustworthy friend, so I want to have an honest conversation with him.”

“Oh, that is truly appreciated.”

“Of course it would be sad to see my friends dying.”

Geo continued.

“But the joy and happiness we felt while we were alive will be greater than the sadness after death.”

"…that…."

“I’m still busy looking for my friends, so I don’t think there’s any need to mourn their deaths any time soon.”

“…….”

“Death is a state, not something to be avoided or feared. I don’t think about it too deeply.”

He asked.

“That’s strange. When you make a friend, do you worry about him dying?”

“…That’s not true.”

“Then why should I fear the death of a friend who has not even come?”

Well, what if a normal human being were afraid of being left alone?

'... Well, if it's Geo, he'll make another friend in an instant. At least I forgot for a moment that he's a being that should never be left alone.'

Apart from that, I thought, 'He really doesn't have any intention of imitating an ordinary human being.' This might be a comfortable appearance that he only shows in front of Yoo Seong-un, so it might not be something to worry about too much.

Eventually, Yoo Seong-un, who was about to say something, gave up. He just laughed indifferently.

“Well, I’m sure you’ll be able to handle it.”

Even though he looks like this, he's actually pretty good at imitating humans when he blends in with the crowd.

'But if it's this guy's rule to be so honest in front of someone who Geo considers a friend... I need to find someone to be Geo's secretary as soon as possible.'

With that thought in mind, Yoo Seong-un asked.

“So, after talking to the God of Death, did your questions get answered?”

“Yes, I realized what I had to do.”

Argio declared confidently.

“I will become the Demon King.”

“…….”

Squeak-

Stopping at a red light, Yoo Seong-un laughed as if sighing.

“…Can you explain it to me more clearly?”

Conversations with the source always took up a lot of energy.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (144)

144

Episode 144

Argio was born with a cruel personality.

“Basically, they are greedy for blood and money.”

“Can you describe yourself like that?”

“What can we do if that is the truth?”

The two continued their conversation in the collector's lounge.

Perhaps because he was still outside, Geo's hair was platinum blonde, but his expression was as blunt and calm as in the portrait.

‘… It looks very different from the face of the priest I know, but is it because Giovanni has become a complete portrait?’

As Yoo Seong-un was thinking that, Geo continued speaking in his characteristically soft voice.

“Argio is talented in many ways, and he learns everything he wants to learn, and he is not afraid to try new things. However, his nature is similar to that of an animal, so he prefers things that are stimulating. It’s not that he lacks patience, though….”

“If it’s something provocative, the blood and money I mentioned earlier?”

“In addition to that, I also enjoy drinking and fighting. Among them, I like to compete with all my might against a worthy opponent. In fact, rather than competing, I think I like the thrill of killing and being killed.”

“So you enjoy the thrill? This is really….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“There are quite a few people like that among hunters.”

“Is that so?”

“People who find meaning in life through bloody fights to the death.”

“I didn’t know there were such tastes.”

“There are many different tastes in the world, so… I can understand Argio’s story.”

“Thank you for understanding my tastes, even if they don’t fit into social norms.”

Geo continued speaking after expressing a light thank you.

“That doesn’t mean I play recklessly and without any discernment. If I want alcohol, I want high-quality alcohol from an artisan. If I want wealth, I want treasures with stories. If I want to fight, I prefer an opponent who is worth fighting with all my might.”

It's said that you have very picky tastes.

“I’m the type of person who can invest and wait as long as it takes to satisfy that kind of taste.”

“Is the reason I’m introducing myself like this now related to what the Demon King said just now?”

“Of course, I’ve explained it up to here so I’m sure it’ll be easier for you to understand, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

The platinum-haired Geo insisted bluntly.

“I hope to fight the warrior.”

"…oh…?"

“There used to be many warriors who came to me.”

“…The warriors?”

“Because he is an evil spirit that threatens the peace of the world.”

There was a time when it was considered the root of all evil, big and small, in the world.

“At that time, even if I didn’t step forward, many good candidates would come to me. I poured everything I had into the cause of peace for humanity, to protect precious people, and to advance the world.”

“…….”

“I remember having a lot of fun fighting them. The other divinities, except for Argio, seemed to have a lot of betrayal and other miscellaneous thoughts, but at least I did.”

Giovanni looked very sorry. It was quite a natural grumble, considering it wasn't 'Sergio'.

“Thinking back, I think that was when I got the best value for money.”

“Good value for money….”

“Even though we didn’t advertise it separately, many talented people came to visit us because it was so famous.”

“Hong Bora, that’s how it feels.”

Yoo Seong-un let out a subtle laugh.

“The rumor that he would become the Demon King was because of that promotion.”

“It’s like a kind of recruitment notice.”

Giovanni's blue eyes sparkled with joy.

“As Argio, I am reflecting. After talking to the god of death, it became clearer. The many battles I enjoyed as the evil god Argio were very unfair advantages.”

“Unfair profits?”

“People sent me good people even though I didn’t put in any effort to fight a worthy battle. I thought it was my right, but it wasn’t.”

“Isn’t the flow strange?”

“The god of death tells me that my notoriety was never really mine. It was a brief moment of fame that I was lucky enough to have, and now it is time for me to work to reclaim it.”

“Oh, I see. That’s great.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“Don’t you hate those who branded you as an evil spirit and framed you?”

“It’s not that I’m not angry, but it’s okay because I gained something more valuable.”

“This can’t be more emotional.”

If you look at the objective circumstances, there is no other story more unfair than this.

'This is the story of a hero who was born with the instinct to kill and plunder, but who showed ample consideration, but ended up becoming an evil spirit through various false accusations and insults.'

If there was a dungeon with such a story, and the boss of that dungeon was Argio, what a huge bomb it would have been for humans. Just thinking about that vague idea made me laugh awkwardly.

Yoo Seong-un, who was sweeping his neck, asked.

“How was your end as Argio?”

“It was a seal.”

“A seal, that doesn’t sound very pleasant.”

“But I was glad that I could stop the meaningless killing.”

“If it was a meaningful killing, then even that would have been okay?”

“Um… no.”

Surprisingly, Geo denied it.

“At that time, because it was a divinity created by gathering together so many different victims, there were many times when I had to vent my anger that I didn’t want to. It was like I didn’t have the initiative.”

He says that it is worthless without my anger.

“Getting angry, assigning value to others, all of that was under my sole authority. But at the time, I couldn’t do that….”

“Was it unpleasant?”

“It was really unpleasant. Even though I’ve been called a beast all my life and lived like one, I know how to act smart, but it felt like all my precious reason was drowning in mud.”

Giovanni smiled faintly.

“So how wonderful and grateful are these people? Those noble souls have been polished and the warriors have given me rest. It is a meaningful gift that they have dedicated their whole lives to achieve.”

“For a Demon King, he likes warriors too much.”

“I respect brave warriors. They have upright and good souls, excellent insight and judgment, and know how to act cautiously and sometimes boldly in everything.”

“I still like kind and polite people back then.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-woon is right. I have always loved those who dream and work hard for their dreams. No matter what the outcome is, the effort they put in at the time is so valuable.”

Yoo Seong-un understood what Geo was saying.

'What a timeless taste.'

Sergio, Giovanni, and Arzio. Although the expressions may be slightly different, the images of the people that 'Gio' loved and cherished were all similar.

Whether short or long, strong or weak, whatever the degree and direction, ultimately, we love those who have walked the path of a hero.

'In that respect, I can definitely say that he is divine.'

Great mysteries usually favor heroes.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un laughed as if he was sighing.

“You want to become the Demon King so you can compete with those heroes again?”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“Why does it have to be the Demon King? You could have just suggested that we have a fight.”

“Because what I want is a fight, not a duel.”

“So what you’re saying is that I have to risk my life and everything.”

“The most interesting fights are those where you have lost everything or have given up everything.”

“You too?”

“I have fought every battle with death.”

Geo's hair suddenly turned red.

“It’s a delicacy that’s not easy to taste.”

“…….”

"…ah."

He turned back to platinum blonde again. Giovanni smiled awkwardly. It was a gentle, cheerful smile.

“I’m sorry, I often lose control because I’m not very good at drawing.”

“…as long as it doesn’t get out of control and start killing people, it’s fine.”

“No matter how out of control it is, something like that won’t happen.”

“In the first place, Argio doesn’t enjoy such senseless massacres?”

“What Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is correct.”

“Hmm….”

He thought about it for a moment.

“…But you know.”

“Yes, I am listening.”

“How do you plan on acting like that Demon King?”

“…….”

“What should I say?”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been hesitating, soon continued speaking.

“Because I don’t have the personality to commit evil deeds.”

“That, that….”

“You’re not even good at doing bad things.”

I never thought I would say such things to an evil spirit in my life, but it was an inevitable fact. Geo was not the type of being that could easily commit evil deeds.

“Even when I lived as Argio, I never committed senseless massacres.”

“I enjoyed the frequent bloody fights.”

“So you were the one who started the fight? You bullied the innocent person?”

“That’s not… true, though.”

“Have you ever done anything else bad?”

“…….”

After hesitating for a while, Geo opened his mouth with difficulty.

"…moderation?"

“Whose property did you take?”

“Those unlucky pigs….”

“Okay, first of all, I have never harassed innocent people.”

“But isn’t it too cowardly to harass people who have nothing to do with it?”

“From the point of saying that, isn’t it possible that the Demon King has been eliminated?”

“Isn’t there a Demon King somewhere in the world who likes fair competition?”

“A just demon lord wouldn’t have a punitive force in the first place, Geoya. He wouldn’t even gather warriors.”

“…That’s what Mr. Yoo Seong-un said….”

Geo looked quite disturbed. Analyzing Geo’s expressions, which had become quite colorful recently, was quite enjoyable as a curator, so Yoo Seong-woon admired his face while drinking the cheap mixed coffee on the table.

'It's a harmonious face that is truly enjoyable to look at.'

How long had it been since he had appreciated Yoo Seong-un's work? It was only after quite some time that Geo continued speaking.

“…When Argio’s notoriety was at its peak, I didn’t have to worry about this because my reputation grew on its own. It’s really unfortunate. They say you only realize the void when you lose someone, and that’s what happened to me.”

“I know it’s a story that I don’t really need to talk about.”

“Can’t we expect a similar situation this time? People will frame me for something even if I didn’t do anything particularly cowardly, or they will think of me as the embodiment of evil… things like that.”

“I’m really sorry, but it doesn’t look easy.”

Yoo Seong-un said with an awkward smile.

“Let’s think about that part a little bit. For now, there’s Joo-Hyeon, who is resting at your house, and your awareness as an evil spirit isn’t perfect either.”

“That is certainly true, Mr. Yoo Seong-un. Right now, it is not a good situation for me to be rumored to be the Demon King. Thank you for your appropriate advice.”

“Demon King… Well, well. I’ll think about it a bit too. If possible, I’d like to think about it in a way that causes less damage. Is that okay?”

“I am the one who would like to ask you a favor. I am very eager to compete with talented people, but I am also reluctant to have people fear me so much that I cannot make friends.”

“In that sense, it might be better to split your identities even further. Black Cloak, Sergio the Hunter, and the Evil God Argio… umm…”

Yoo Seong-un hesitated a little after speaking up to that point.

“…I also wish other people wouldn’t be afraid of you.”

“Thank you for your understanding, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“First of all, I think it will be a big problem from the perspective of considering the peace of mankind.”

The existence of the source can shrink and expand based on the 'story' surrounding it. I barely separated 'Portrait of Geo' with 'Sergio' and 'Black Cloak' to create a safe zone, but now it's the Demon King.

A cold sweat ran down Yoo Seong-un's back. There were additional problems that Yoo Seong-un could feel, not as a gardener but as a human being.

“If I may add, um….”

“Why are you doing that?”

“…A subtle feeling of guilt…?”

“I don’t think there was anything I felt guilty about.”

“No, what should I say… that is….”

Aren't you planning to turn one sane person into global trash?

'Even if you want to recreate the situation at the time of Argio… you're making Geo, who has committed no crime, the root of all evil and making him bear unjustified accusations and insults.'

Even if you are satisfied with it, is this right?

'Of course, the original point of view is far from the sense of guilt that humans think of, but even so… Geo has a human self… so it's a bit ambiguous to say that he's not completely human… .'

It felt really strange.

“…I’ll think hard about it, so let’s not do anything for the time being.”

“I was at a loss as to what to do, but I am truly grateful that you helped me think about it.”

“Is this something I should be thankful for…?”

A way to make Geo a harmless demon lord.

'I don't know if it makes sense, but this isn't something I have the authority to handle.'

Yoo Seong-un tried hard to hold back his sigh.

I thought I should go see the visa on the way back.

* * *

So Geo returns home.

“…….”

Joo-hyun also had similar concerns as Yoo Seong-un.

“…Ah, the Demon King.”

“In summary, yes. What do you think?”

“Please give me some time to think about it.”

What the hell is this?

"therefore…."

It's almost like he wants to make himself into a world-famous target of ridicule.

A decent young man, far removed from evil schemes, was thrown into confusion.

“…That’s…a little….”

"huh?"

“Is that too unscrupulous…?”

There's no point in becoming a Demon King in the first place, right?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (145)

145

Episode 145

If not for stimulation, what pleasure would there be in living this long life?

“There lies the king of demons!”

“The beasts of the black forest have come out!”

People who howl loudly like animals with their throats stabbed.

“Prepare for battle!”

“Argio is here, aim for him!”

“Kill the evil beast!”

The sound of ripping steel, shaking with anger, fear and excitement.

“Don’t let him enter!”

“Kill Argio, kekekekekeke …!!”

A final scream leaking out between the stabbing claws. A faint shaking of the vocal cords and warm blood. Torn leather.

The vibrations that shake my whole body. The wind that caresses my skin. The redness that covers my eyes. When I push my feet hard and kick the ground, the world shakes, and I dance, sing, make noise, cheer with those who show me their teeth… .

Who will hang out with me today? Who will take my life away? Let's see together, friends. What kind of blood will I use to draw what kind of picture?

“Monster, monster….”

“…….”

Oh, really.

“…Haha.”

Argio loved the battlefield.

* * *

Animal Kingdom_'Argio'

Fairness rate 61.9%

“…….”

Geo woke up from his sleep.

"…oh…."

He was amazed.

“It’s better than I thought.”

“Ugh.”

“If this is the kind of thrill you’re looking for…?”

To be honest, Geo was doubtful about Argio's taste.

As Sergio or as Giovanni, the original Geo was not a person who enjoyed fighting. He was the type of person who did not enjoy conflict much in the first place, and he did not have any particularly active hobbies.

But as the fairy tale rate increased, Geo began to feel more and more.

“I didn’t enjoy conflict.”

Just Argio.

“It was nice to have a cool bump.”

“Muang?”

“…Now that you mention it, I wonder what the difference is.”

Geo giggled as his hair turned red. He hugged Dana.

“But being able to be true to your instincts… seems like a lot more fun than you might think.”

Geo remembered the dream he had just had.

It is not about staying in conflict and strife. It is about giving your whole body and mind. It is not about enjoying slaughter, but about having fun with those on the battlefield. It is like a blank sheet of paper that can be stained with blood and cause discord.

In the dream, Argio drew a picture. Meeting the gaze and eyes looking at me, responding when the opponent roars, and enjoying the most delicious food last… .

“…….”

Playing like that is also quite something.

“…It’s attractive.”

Geo's eyes widened sharply.

I wanted to once again immerse myself in that full ecstasy of letting go of all human dignity and reason.

* * *

"good morning."

“Good morning, my faithful friend.”

The black cloak asked.

“Did you sleep well last night?”

"ah…."

I didn't sleep particularly well.

'How can I sleep well when I hear people calling me the Demon King or something?'

Joo-Hyeon couldn't come to her senses because of the bomb that Black Cloak detonated last night.

Although he himself seemed to have slept very well, being swayed by the sound of a great mystery was a characteristic of humans, so Ju-hyeon could not sleep at all. It was because he had heard a story that was too much to bear.

“…….”

But I wasn't so absent-minded as to grumble about it openly.

“…Yeah, well.”

"okay?"

“I slept well.”

Joohyun smiled awkwardly.

“You look red today.”

“Didn’t you say this color was the best?”

“I thought you were good at talking because you express your emotions clearly now.”

“Honesty to the point of being embarrassing is a long-standing virtue of mine. Thank you for recognizing that.”

"haha…."

Joo-hyun, who was looking at Argio, asked cautiously.

“You look happy.”

“Because I had a good dream.”

“What was your dream?”

“I had a dream that people called me a monster.”

“…That was a good dream, huh?”

“At least that’s what it looks like to me.”

The eyes of the black cloak narrowed like a fox's.

“It might not be like that for you, though?”

“It is true that it is difficult for me to understand with my limited knowledge.”

Joohyun couldn't deny it.

“Doesn’t that kind of insult… hurt you?”

“…….”

“…….”

Soon, Joo-Hyeon's face turned bright red.

"sorry."

“No, that’s a really fascinating perspective.”

"sorry…!"

Joo-Hyeon also knew very well that it was a stupid thing to say. The black cloak was none other than the evil spirit.

What evil spirit would be hurt by the notoriety heaped upon himself? Even if he were not an evil spirit but a traditional god of providence, what humans said would be of little significance.

'but.'

I couldn't just let it go like that.

“…….”

“…Hmm.”

Argio asked, tilting his head.

“You look like you have a lot to say.”

“…That’s true.”

“Then will you talk to me?”

“I wonder if this is rude.”

“Conversations with people like you are worthwhile.”

The black cloak made Joohyun sit at the table and took a seat across from him.

“I originally planned to try preparing a meal.”

“I apologize for delaying your meal.”

“There are many things to be sorry about, but it’s okay to skip breakfast sometimes.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

“That sounds much better.”

“…….”

Argio says 'thank you' is better than 'apology'.

“…….”

Strength entered Joohyun's hands.

“Now, let me tell you something. What does it contain?”

“…what I say may offend you.”

“Usually when you say something like that, it doesn’t sound particularly unpleasant.”

“Then I can speak a little more comfortably.”

“I will listen to you as much as you want.”

“You yourself….”

Joohyun continued speaking in a very cautious tone.

“…You say we’re human.”

There were too many strange things about Black Cloak to be considered a typical evil spirit.

“You say honesty is a virtue, so I will be honest with you.”

“I really like that kind of conversation.”

“I don’t know if you’re joking or being serious when you say you’re human….”

“I was always sincere, it’s a shame.”

“Even taking that into account, you are an evil god who is not like an evil god.”

Joo-hyun took a deep breath without letting on. His fingertips trembled faintly in fear. He clenched his hands.

“I know you have been considerate of me all this time.”

“It’s because I wanted to make you my friend.”

“If it weren’t for that, would you have given me such a hard time?”

“I don’t have such a silly hobby.”

“If there is someone who is sick and suffering… how will you treat them?”

“It’s not much different from now.”

Argio continued speaking calmly.

“If they are bad, I will pass them by, and if they are good, I will treat them to a meal. If they need company, I will ask them to talk, and if they are lost, I will show them where to go.”

“…Why do you do that to me?”

“Because to me, it’s not that much consideration or mercy. I really like it when someone enjoys my cooking, and I like it when a kind and polite person smiles.”

He said it as if it was all nothing.

“There is no grand cause or belief.”

“…I am rather grateful for that.”

Because consideration and compassion are most valuable when they are not extravagant.

“As expected, you are so affectionate.”

If this was the work of an evil spirit, Joo-hyun would already be possessed, but it would be okay if everything was a lie. Whatever the true intention, if it was the gentle consideration he felt now, more people would be comforted.

Joo-hyun did not believe in the black cloak. The great mystery was something that humans could not fully interpret, so their mercy was not mercy, and their love was not love. And yet, didn’t we live while receiving God’s affection?

“What god would cook for a mere mortal? He would spend precious time with his hands wet and standing before the fire. But you humbled yourself so easily.”

“Aren’t you thinking too highly of something just to treat me to a meal?”

“You have neither the arrogance of a god nor the cruelty of an evil spirit. You call yourself human and do not consider humans as inferior beings. You have neither malice nor murderous intent, only interest.”

So it was weird.

“Who called you evil and why?”

“…That’s what people called it.”

“If you have become a devil simply through false accusations and insults, is that your sin?”

“We all sin.”

“At least I know you won’t be isolated in fear and contempt.”

Joohyun continued speaking, hesitating.

“I think you are the Demon King….”

“…….”

“…I don’t think I should be treated like that.”

The end of his speech wavered.

'I guess he's going to be upset.'

Joo-Hyeon, who had finished saying what she wanted to say, was worried that the other person would get angry.

To a god who pursued his own notoriety by saying ridiculous things like being the Demon King or something like that, being told that he was 'not like an evil god' would be a great insult.

But surprisingly, Black Cloak didn't get angry.

"…okay?"

“…….”

“I see.”

He just looked a little sad.

“Do you also think that I am not worthy of being an evil spirit?”

"…no!"

Joohyun, who had been dazed for a moment, shook his head urgently.

“No, it’s just a difference of perspective, because from a human perspective, that's not right!"

He felt awe and joy at the same time.

Surprisingly, Argio was a conversant spirit. He was a demon with whom one could exchange opinions. There was no overflowing malice in him, only the purity of a pleasure-seeker.

Joo-hyun gained the will to talk about it. He gained something indefinable, hope.

"Of course, what I'm saying may sound absurd to you. You may not understand it. But the dream you told me about yesterday and that you said was good today is ultimately about using an innocent person named Argio as a scapegoat."

Although he knew that God had a different perspective, Ju-hyeon felt that Black Cloak had some awareness of himself as a human being while talking to him. He was a god with quite a human side.

Argios, despite being a being unfit for the gods, obtained the evil divinity.

"I don't think this is… at least not a desirable behavior."

"……."

"I fully understand what you want and what you are trying to do, but still."

He said he wanted a fierce battle with the hero. He must have been sincere. But if Argio, the 'person', had to be slandered by the people of the world and be accused of all sorts of things in order to do so, then that was not right.

"Please don't make people commit sins."

"Committing a sin?"

“Aren’t you trying to make the ignorant treat the innocent as criminals?”

“How is that a sin?”

Argio asked.

“Evil beasts deserve to be treated like criminals.”

“No one should be treated as a sinner if he does not commit sin.”

“I can enjoy a good fight, and people can find something to complain about.”

“It may sound reasonable, but it’s a fundamentally flawed deal.”

“Aren’t there many people in this world these days who are looking for someone to resent?”

“So many people have the right to be angry, and in the right way!”

Joohyun became a little desperate.

“I have been thinking about it since I heard you. I have thought of countless ways to make you the Demon King and save countless people’s lives. But what does that leave you with in the end?”

“Well, the breath of a lot of people?”

“That’s not really a breather. If you feel better by directing your resentment at the wrong person, that’s closer to resignation that you can only feel because you’re broken. You’ll feel better because you’ve given up.”

“What have you given up?”

“You have given up on living as a human being. You have given up on the chance to become better. There are so many people in this world who are not worthy of consideration, but if there is not even the slightest consideration, then for us….”

Joohyun, who had been hesitating, soon continued speaking.

“There is nothing left.”

Only beasts that could survive only by blaming others would remain.

“I may be exaggerating, but you have that much influence.”

“I think you overestimate me.”

“At least there is no Korean who doesn’t know the black cloak. That’s proof.”

Joohyun begged.

“Please don’t turn people who can become human into beasts….”

“…….”

Argio was silent for a while.

He said soon.

“You are a hero.”

Black Cloak felt sorry for Joohyun.

“How pitiful.”

"…yes?"

“…….”

“…….”

In the brief silence, the demon's hair turned black.

“Hmm, I see….”

"I…."

“I understand what you mean.”

“…Was it unpleasant?”

“No, it was a valid opinion.”

He had a blunt expression on his face, like someone who couldn't make any expressions. For a moment, I thought he was angry, but he didn't show any sign of it.

He just continued talking.

“So let’s find a compromise.”

“Is this a compromise?”

“People can remain human.”

"yes."

“A compromise that won’t hurt me.”

"…ah…."

A word he had said but never thought would come out of his mouth. Black Cloak said, 'wound.'

Only after a long time did Joohyun ask cautiously.

“…Does it hurt you when you are called an evil spirit?”

“It has been a great weapon and tool for me.”

The pitch-black evil spirit continued speaking.

“But I was angry.”

He told his story like an adult reading a fairy tale.

“So, you must have been hurt too.”

"…that."

“I’m not sure, but I think so.”

The black cloak said.

“Thank you for letting me know.”

“…I, just….”

“Then shall we eat?”

“…….”

Joo-hyun, who couldn't help but look at his face, which was slightly distorted in confusion, soon nodded.

“…Okay.”

I don't know if this is consideration or stubbornness.

What a strange god he was.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (146)

146

Episode 146

The conversation with Joohyun made Geo reflect.

“I guess I only thought about what was good for me.”

Even if it seemed like a win-win deal, people had the freedom to not go along with it. They couldn't ignore the opinions of those who didn't agree to making Geo the Demon King.

“I want to create my own battlefield, but that is my selfishness, and it leaves a bad taste in my mouth when I sacrifice others for that selfishness. That is not the kind of war I want.”

Above all, Joohyun said this.

“My precious Demon King Project….”

“…….”

“It’s something that hurts people and me at the same time.”

Every word was correct.

“…….”

“…….”

A quiet attic.

Geo held the honey in his hand and enjoyed its soft texture. The way it felt on his palm was a very satisfying feeling.

Geo, who had been enjoying the sticky, rustling sensation for a while, soon nodded.

“I admit it.”

He opened his mouth.

“I guess I’m a bit thoughtless.”

“Crunch?”

“Should I say that his brain is particularly clear?”

But not everyone in the world could be like Geo.

“Until I was about 21, I thought everyone lived like me, without thinking.”

Sergio, who had an extremely high level of life satisfaction and self-esteem, rarely cared about what others thought. That's why he only realized a year after becoming an adult that his mental structure was quite different from others.

“Somehow, characters in movies and dramas always seem to be suffering.”

Geo thought that was just an exaggerated expression typical of creative works. But it wasn't. Surprisingly, people in the world tend to live with so-called worries and concerns.

“I regret the past and am anxious about the future.”

“Kung?”

“Yeah, I don’t know why. I wonder why they abuse their own brain cells.”

He was different from Geo, who only lived in the present and sometimes only had beautiful memories when he thought about the past and future. He could not understand at all why people had such a hard time living.

They cling to what has already happened and are afraid of what has not yet happened. They cannot see the situation as a situation, but continue to give meaning to it and suffer through it.

“If you can’t let go of your emotions and mix them with reality, you’ll continue to create problems.”

“Kung….”

“Honestly, I wonder why you are torturing yourself. Isn’t that considered self-harm?”

“Gulp.”

“That doesn’t mean I don’t understand at all.”

Geo also knew that 'Ah, not all people are like me'. Although he didn't even realize that until he was in compulsory education, it's not that he doesn't have the ability to empathize because he enjoys life so thoughtlessly.

"therefore…."

Geo muttered, hesitating for a rare moment.

“I’m sure Mr. Argio had difficult times too.”

“…….”

“Was there a time like that?”

It was hard to be sure because there was the case of 'Giovanni' who lived his life to the fullest without any regrets and died. To be honest, from Sergio's perspective, it was a situation where he would think 'Wow, how did he live like that?' but he was fine.

However, Geo also admitted that objectively, 'Argio' was also in a difficult situation.

“It seemed like nothing was wrong, so I thought, ‘Oh, it’s okay,’ but it was. In fact, if you think about it, it wasn’t such a comfortable and peaceful life. It was a life steeped in hardship and adversity.”

He was a multi-talented person who was loved by his family, but at a young age, he was treated like an animal because he developed a talent. After being severely bullied, he was kicked out to a cave where no sunlight entered and where dangerous creatures gathered.

“…….”

“Kur?”

“…But honestly, it was more fun there….”

“Kung, kung, kung.”

“You’re right, honey. It’s not something I can decide when I’m not even in sync.”

“Kkuk.”

“But it was actually a lot more fun than that corner of the house.”

Anyway, it wasn't something to be certain about as a portrait with 61.9% Argio content. You can't be sure until it's 100% pure. Geo tried to objectively understand 'Argio's' unfortunate life.

“Anyway, it’s true that I was angry.”

Didn't I promise to cut off the throats of the piglets in the corner who dared not recognize my worth? Perhaps 'Argio' was also angry because he had been hurt in his own way.

“Even if you weren’t aware of it, it could have been a wound.”

“Gurrrr….”

“Just because I’m simple doesn’t mean Mr. Argio will be the same.”

So Geo decided to reflect.

“I have to take care of my own wounds.”

“Kung?”

“I pledge to cherish myself, not to treat others rudely, and to live honestly and politely.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“In that sense, I think we need to reconsider the Demon King Project.”

Just as Joo-hyun had advised, let's create a project where everyone is happy without anyone being unfairly sacrificed. Geo made that promise and thought back to his conversation with Joo-hyun.

To be exact, those brown eyes that held warmth.

“It seems like you were definitely worried.”

“Crunch.”

“I feel sorry for Ahn Joo-hyun.”

Although Geo was given all sorts of harsh titles like portrait, evil spirit, and immortal, he was just a human with a soft heart. He was deeply moved by Joo-hyun’s concern.

“He really is a good person.”

Thank goodness, there was an unusual warmth in the attic.

No matter how extraordinary Geo's appearance was, didn't Joo-hyun strongly insist that 'it's not right for an innocent person to be blamed'? He even paid great attention to the word 'wound' that Geo mentioned.

“I feel embarrassed because I feel like I acted childish for no reason.”

“Gulp?”

“Well, the one who comforted Joo-hyun was probably ‘Argio’.”

“Kung, gurgling.”

“…Okay, let’s go to sleep first.”

After a brief reflection, my whole body felt tired.

After dinner, as usual, he felt drowsy. The chair he was leaning against was comfortable. Geo enjoyed a short nap with Honey in the spring breeze blowing through the attic windows.

And then I woke up from my dream.

“…….”

Fairness rate 94.2%

“……?”

Geo, with his red hair, muttered.

“Was I really unhappy?”

The 'Argio' in the dream did not look soaked, so Geo's beast was a little absurd.

Geo's golden eyes twitched slightly.

“No, if it goes like this… I….”

“Crunch?”

“I feel embarrassed to look at Joohyun’s face.”

“Kung?”

“You’re so… like a prankster?”

I came here worried for nothing.

Suddenly, Geo turned into a 24-year-old idiot who made jokes.

* * *

While Geo was feeling regretful, Bisabal smiled.

It was a total blast.

“Ahh, ahahahahahahahahahaha!!”

“…….”

“Ouch, kekeke… hehehehe…!”

Visabal asked, panting.

“The Demon King?”

“Yes, Your Majesty.”

“Ha, you are the vitamin of my life, you never give me time to get bored.”

“It would be helpful for the peace of mankind if the guild leader were a little boring.”

“Haven’t I ever been the first to threaten the peace of mankind?”

“It is a problem that you openly enjoy other people’s misfortune.”

“Anyway, it wasn’t my fault.”

Sigh.

“I’m catching my breath,” said Bisabal.

“The Demon King and the Hero, it would be difficult to find a more appropriate metaphor.”

“It’s not exactly a joke.”

“But releasing a new Demon King now is dangerous to the lifeline of the Earth.”

Although Bisabal mostly lived a life focused on interest, that doesn't mean he didn't know what was right and what was wrong. Strictly speaking, he was closer to wishing for peace for humanity and longevity of the Earth.

In other words, it meant that the world was so dangerously precarious that even a hedonistic person like Bisabal would be worried. So Bisabal couldn't just pursue what he wanted to see.

“I really want to personally place the Demon King on Earth and admire him up close.”

“Please, please refrain from doing this. This is not an exaggeration, this is really going to ruin the Earth.”

“I know that too, and it really bothers me. Is there a time when I feel this regretful…?”

He was truly sorry.

“Since this work has come into my possession, I hope the event will be held in my hometown.”

The piece that he had spent a lot of money on, and that he really liked, was going to show off his talents. I wish he could show off his talents in front of me, but since there was no suitable stage, it seemed like it would be a difficult wish.

“I understand why you requested an interview, it is certainly a risky request.”

“When you call him the Demon King, of all people, that doesn’t sound very good.”

Yoo Seong-un sighed.

“All he wants is a bloody fight at stake.”

He was hoping for a heartfelt duel, where he would risk his own fate, his life, and everything from trivial things to the beliefs that make him who he is. Argio, who showed greed, smelled of blood.

“So I was thinking of checking out other battlefields, but it seems like you’re not interested unless it’s your own war.”

“I guess he wants all eyes and emotions to be focused on Argio himself.”

“It seems like he wants a stage where he is the main character.”

“So, is that why you wanted to become a Demon King who would have warriors crawl to him even if he just stayed still?”

“That would be the most familiar order to Argio.”

Yoo Seong-un heard the story of Argio. A great mystery who was branded as a beast, became an object of subjugation, and finally obtained the evil divinity of the evil god and was even sealed. He is the evil god of anger and greed.

“It seems like Geo wants to enjoy that fun again.”

“Are you saying that wasn’t painful for Argio?”

“I didn’t feel any such signs.”

It's amazing.

“It is truly rare and uncommon, considering that the demons of that path were all steeped in hatred and contempt. Geo even pitied and loved those who sealed him.”

Argio expressed that he felt sorry and proud for the warriors who sealed him.

“So even if Geo really becomes the Demon King, I think he’ll plan something that will cause less damage if possible. I’m not sure about Argio, though….”

“From the beginning, ‘Portrait of Geo’ likes good and polite things, so he himself tries to take that kind of attitude. In reality, no matter how that will is expressed, isn’t that how it ends up being?”

“The guild leader is right. Geo enjoys the battle itself and doesn’t really want the influence or wealth that comes from it. It seems like it’s just additional income.”

“You are saying that you welcome wealth and fame, but do not covet them. I understand. Perhaps you consider wealth and fame as a kind of spoils of war. It is difficult to see it as greed in and of itself.”

“Yes, apart from showing a considerable preference, there isn’t a great desire for them. As the guild master said, they are just a means to prove that one has won in battle.”

Yoo Seong-un had already reported Argio's behavior on the first day he encountered him.

Gold and silver jewels adorning his entire body, long braids of dark red hair, and animal skins. He certainly preferred flashy things, from his appearance to his attitude toward life.

However, if Argio had been obsessed with wealth and fame itself, the ‘Portrait of Geo’ would have been extravagant from the start. He would not have forgiven Yoo Seong-un for daring to be friendly to him.

“All Argio truly wants is to fight.”

“It’s like he wants me to act like an animal.”

He wanted a battle where he could throw away everything that made him who he was, or risk everything, without worrying about his reputation or position. It was clear that he wanted a battlefield where he could completely immerse himself in the fight.

“Then first….”

The visa was sorted out in order.

“I have to show the world ‘Mr. Sergio’.”

“…Suddenly?”

“Suddenly? Wasn’t this something we were preparing for?”

“That’s true, though.”

“There is an order to everything.”

The pupils of the long-slitted visage were slightly dilated. His gaze was not on the meteor cloud in front of him, but on the empty space, but he moved it from time to time as if he was looking at something.

Those lips were trembling.

“…Okay, first of all, when Sergio Hunter comes into the world….”

“…….”

“There will be a place for him. There will be a little opportunity… um, yeah.”

“…….”

“Mermaids… that’s right, there are still stories that haven’t been finished….”

Soon, Visabal nodded.

“…After revealing Sergio as a collector’s hunter, I’ll let him take charge of clearing a suitable dungeon. And I’ll also have to see what he does in a duel, not a battle of his choice.”

“Let’s find a nice dungeon.”

“I think we can create the battlefield that Sergio Hunter wants. But to do that, I have to see what’s in his hands, and I have to talk to him directly to set up a suitable location.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was staring at his superior, soon asked.

“Shall we ask Geo to speak to the guild leader?”

“You don’t have to do that.”

Visabal narrowed his eyes darkly.

“It is impolite to rush a guest who is about to arrive.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un said with a tired face.

“…How about gradually changing the skill name to ‘Foresight’?”

“I told you that my skill is only in emotions, not in seeing the future.”

“Sometimes you just don’t feel like talking.”

“I always hate talking to my boss at work.”

“That is a virtue of modern people.”

“This is why I like Yoo Seong-un.”

He smiled happily at the cheeky antics of my collection. Although Yoo Seong-un looked even more disgusted by it, Bisabal just went back to his original topic.

“Then I think we should first hire a secretary for ‘Mr. Sergio’.”

“Ah… I did make a list, but….”

“You said the name of the person recuperating in the portrait was Joo-Hyeon?”

“Arai.”

Yoo Seong-un put the documents he had taken out one by one back into his bag. The fragile papers were crumpled without a care.

“I knew this would happen to me.”

“If I knew, why did I buy it and suffer for it?”

“Because showing sincerity by working hard is a virtue of an office worker.”

“All of our employees are very sincere.”

“Somehow, Geo also talks a lot about that guy named Joo-Hyeon.”

“Are you happy to have a friend?”

“He says no, but….”

“It’s just a matter of time.”

Visabal gave a rare crooked smile.

“If you’re a hero, you can’t hate Geo.”

“…A hero?”

“Oh my, I flattered you too much.”

He was openly sarcastic.

“You are a fool who is full of excesses.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un wiped his face with both hands.

“…Please don’t say that in front of me.”

“I also care about saving face.”

“I realized that I have lived a very hard life, so why are you like this?”

“I know that you are an honest person.”

Just, just.

“I just hate it.”

The Visaval did not fit well with the hero clan.

“How nice it would be if everyone in the world were like Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“That would be a disaster in its own right.”

“Anyway, Geo and Joohyun will become friends in no time.”

“You are so sure of it.”

“Well, great mysteries love heroes.”

In other words, I liked the fool.

“And Geo is the most human of all mysteries, so it won’t be too difficult for that person, Joo-hyun, to accept it.”

“But wouldn’t Joo-Hyeon feel uncomfortable with such a huge presence?”

“There is a taste for that, as ‘Portrait of Geo’ has proven so far. He is a divinity that is very appealing to the hero’s heart.”

As always, Bisabal smiled lightly.

“We will be good friends with each other.”

For some reason, a meteor cloud was trapped in the eyes of that bastard.

"is it so."

“…….”

“That sounds fun.”

His eyes narrowed even further.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (147)

147

Episode 147

It's because he lived without thinking, Geo wasn't a stupid person.

“…….”

Rather, Geo's brain worked faster when he got what he wanted.

Sergio did not want his hometown to become more harsh, Giovanni did not want people to commit crimes without knowing it, and Arzio did not want to commit unwarrior-like and mean acts.

“…….”

How can I satisfy my greed while preserving this precarious peace? How can I improve without making things worse? Geo suddenly recalled his memories from when he was a priest.

I recalled the information I had encountered when I went to Earth and the faces of the warriors who had come to subdue me. It wasn't just 'Sergio', he had conceived and discarded numerous plans in an instant.

"…okay."

Soon he licked his lips.

“Good.”

I came up with a plan I like.

“It sounds good.”

A clean plan, without any burnt offerings.

A satisfied smile spread across Geo's face like an eclipse.

* * *

Meanwhile, Joohyun.

“…….”

Unlike the landlord, I had a lot of worries.

“…It’s confusing.”

It was much better than before, but unlike her body that was becoming more comfortable as the days went by, her mind was not. Joo-hyun's mind, which was noisy as the days went by, was sometimes relaxed and sometimes tangled.

Joo-hyun, who was sitting on the bed and blankly looking out the terrace, muttered softly.

“Didn’t you say you weren’t going to eat lunch?”

Because the story was long, their conversation took place between breakfast and lunch. Black Cloak suggested that they eat dinner afterward, as it seemed like he needed time to digest, and Juhyun accepted.

"…really…."

The mysterious black cloak wouldn't have any problems with digestion, so it must have been just for Juhyun's consideration, but thinking about it again, he was a god who didn't seem like a god.

When dealing with such mysteries, humans had to adapt to their rules. No matter how much I think about it, it is unprecedented in history that mysteries have handed down rules for humans.

“…….”

So I'm in trouble again.

“…slowly, one by one….”

Don't look at things narrowly, but look at the big picture.

“Let’s take our time and organize things.”

He already knew he could do it.

“You can do it.”

The first thing he did was to sort out his situation.

If requested, he could be transferred to another laboratory, but a laboratory is no different from a kingdom. It would take a long time to adapt and permeate.

'It's strange that I'm still in the current research lab.'

All of his allies who had made things difficult are gone. Now, the only ones left are those who are busy pushing out Joo-hyun, so it would be better to shake hands than to move to another research institute.

'Should I rather aim for an administrative position at headquarters rather than a research institute?'

Joo-Hyeon was accustomed to studying mysteries, but it was not difficult for him to become an administrative staff member at the association headquarters. Since the association president resided there, the headquarters had an open environment.

“I think I, as someone from another orphanage, would be accepted without difficulty there.”

As I muttered without realizing it, Joo-hyun was from an orphanage. And the staff who entered the orphanage through special admission were basically hated, and Joo-hyun was in a position where she was especially hated among them.

“…….”

But this method didn't really appeal to me either.

“…The association may not be the only way.”

He chose that path because he grew up in an orphanage sponsored by the association and also because he knew that the association worked with the government on equal footing. He felt that the association was the best option to create the world he wanted.

'But maybe the Association wasn't as good a choice as I thought.'

The association has already sorted out a lot of things.

'It could be said that there is little room for someone like me to interfere and exert influence.'

The association was stable, and it had to be. The association was more delicately structured than Joo-hyun had imagined, like a spider web, and each organization maintained a very close relationship.

“I was trying to make a difference in a place like that….”

It was only natural that it didn't look good.

“…….”

Joohyun, who had been thinking for a while, soon opened his mouth.

“…Then, would a private guild be better?”

Although it was said honestly, he knew that it was actually a recommendation for retirement. In reality, Joo-hyun had been kicked out of the research center, so he would have to find another way, but for now, there was no other option that he could be sure of.

“No, even if it’s a private guild, they still follow orders. The chances of the same thing happening are much higher….”

Joo-Hyeon suddenly thought of the family at the orphanage.

“…….”

No way.

I felt sick.

‘…I wish I had behaved better.’

He might have been in a hurry.

The ideal he was pursuing was great, but Joo-hyun was humble. He had to move his small legs quickly to at least reach the tip before he died, but each step was too slow.

So maybe he didn't pay attention to his surroundings. Or maybe he was possessed by an evil spirit. Maybe it was both. As a result, Joo-hyun pushed his family and friends into death and suffering because he was impatient.

“…That….”

Joohyun wiped her face.

“How can I atone for that sin?”

To those who are already dead.

If I couldn't deal with the past, I couldn't move forward into the future. But how could I pay the price for the people who were sacrificed because of my lack of wisdom?

“I wish I could at least find some peace, but I don’t know if I can do that….”

A bitter smile came out.

I knew very well that I could not turn back the past. Humans had to move forward from the moment they were born, no matter how big a mistake they had made.

Since a mere human body cannot pick up spilled water, it was necessary to clean up thoroughly.

"…hmm…."

The problem was that human death was not something that could be resolved as easily as spilled water. This was especially true for Juhyun, an unawakened being with no powers.

'It might have been of some help if he had been a priest from a religious order like the Solar Church.'

He could not grant rest to the dead, nor could he ask for mercy, for he had no god to serve.

'I wish I had been a little more diligent… but there's no point in regretting that now.'

Joohyun suddenly thought of the black cloak that must be somewhere in this cabin.

“…Well, no matter what, this is….”

Joohyun smiled awkwardly.

“That is such a shameless thing to do.”

I briefly considered asking Black Cloak to pray for the peace of my family and friends, but Juhyun quickly dismissed that idea.

It was also a concern that the opponent was an evil spirit, but more than anything, Joo-Hyeon was not shameless enough to ask for such a privilege. How could he ask for the mercy of peace when he was not even a believer?

'Such a privilege is something that even a long-serving priest can rarely receive, and it is not something that an unbeliever like me can carelessly request.'

It would probably be difficult for Juhyun to suddenly awaken as a priest at this late age, but he decided to do his best for the souls of those who died because of him.

“If I don’t forget my mistakes, reflect on my sins, and always live with gratitude and an apology to those people….”

I thought that maybe I could reach his family and friends who were already dead just a little bit, just a little bit.

"…okay."

That's where it started.

“Let’s make a tomb first.”

The bodies of the dead were collected, but they were 'cleaned', not 'funerals'. Because he was so out of his mind, Joo-hyun couldn't even provide a place to mourn them.

'Is it because I thought I would soon be going to the same place?'

It was such a big failure, such a big price to pay. I was so sorry for committing such a big sin that I couldn't even think about recovering. I didn't have the courage to make up for it and move forward.

“…….”

Joohyun laughed awkwardly.

“But that would be more cowardly… It’s no different from running away because you don’t want to take responsibility.”

Nothing was certain.

I thought it would be the right apology to be with those who died because of me. But that might have been just running away. I couldn't tell what the 'right path' was as Joo-hyun was now.

But one thing was certain.

“Okay, let’s make a tombstone.”

The body had already been 'cleaned' and could not be recovered. Attempts to retrieve it later were met with the only word that it had already been disposed of.

So I hadn't thought about a tombstone in a while, but now I felt like I had to make one. I came to my senses.

“You’ll need a space to grieve.”

That was the way humans, not gods, prayed for the peace of the dead souls.

Let's draw the faces of the people I remember, carve their names, and record the stories I have with them. At least I wouldn't say that such an act is 'bad' or 'wrong'.

“Then….”

What should I do next?

“…….”

Joohyun pressed hard on her lips.

'At least it wouldn't be right for me to die together.'

And I didn't want to do that.

Before he received help from the Black Cloak, he had been in a state of despair, but not now. He now had the luxury of thinking about and choosing a better path.

But I couldn't think of what that 'better way' might be.

'... Should I go to the Temple of Abundance, which values relief? No, the religious world does not accept change easily. It is as bad a choice as the Association. Then, should I start a business with the money I have saved up so far? I have a few items in mind, and if I use them as a base, I can change the social atmosphere little by little... .'

He thought about it for a very long time.

“…….”

“Kkurung.”

"…ah."

When I came to my senses, it was already getting dark.

“Is it meal time?”

The black cloak would be waiting.

* * *

After another delicious meal today.

“You seem to have a lot on your mind.”

Black Cloak showed interest in Joohyun's condition.

“…….”

“…….”

Of course I knew I'd get caught.

“…There are a lot….”

No, the expression 'being caught' was not appropriate in the first place. In front of such a great mystery, even if a mere human were to use his brain, it would only be like sitting on the palm of Buddha's hand.

Above all, it was the black cloak in front of him that brought Ju-hyeon, who was hesitating whether or not to summon Sankalut, to him. Even this situation could have been his intention, so Ju-hyeon did not bother to hide his condition.

“I’m wondering what to do now.”

“I heard from my father that you are considering a new career path.”

“A new path….”

It was a really clean and normal word.

“…That’s what I mean.”

Strictly speaking, it wasn't a wrong statement.

I decided that the path I had taken so far had failed, and that it would be better to find a completely different path than to turn back. If I were to package that 'different path' a little more neatly, I would say that I was contemplating my future path.

“I was trying to predict how my life would unfold in the future.”

“Do you have a talent for fortune telling?”

“…That, that… I definitely wouldn’t say that.”

Joo-Hyeon's face turned red as he dared to say 'fortune-telling' in front of a living and moving destiny.

How ridiculous it must have sounded. What on earth was he talking about when he wasn't even waving in front of the pupa?

'You seem to be unusually honest in front of the Black Cloak. Is this also one of the effects of your divinity?'

Joo-Hyeon, who had suppressed his embarrassment, glanced at the black cloak.

“…….”

“We make tea with grains.”

“Oh, thank you.”

I was injected with something else to eat before I could even think about it. At times like this, I really felt like I had no grandmother.

“…Is it corn tea?”

“Because you said you liked the stuff I sued you about last time.”

“Oh, that’s considerate of you.”

“It was a time when there was a lot of demand to eat the corn that was being grown.”

“I see, the corn is complaining….”

for a moment.

“…Complaint?”

Joo-Hyeon looked down at the corn tea with a suspicious gaze.

“…Ahem.”

It smelled too good not to drink.

'There is no sin in food.'

After taking a sip, I felt somehow at ease in body and mind.

'Was it a calming effect this time?'

Dozens of times, just eating something that would help your health immediately. Joo-hyun was no longer surprised. However, he looked at the black cloak once again with a clearer mind.

“…….”

The world teaches us not to look into the eyes of God.

“What's going on?”

"…just…."

Teach them not to expect anything from you. Joohyun knows that too.

“…Can you give me some advice?”

Yet, as humans have always done, they desperately needed the help of the great mystery.

It was Joo-Hyeon who initially tried to talk to Sankalut, of all people. Compared to typical evil spirits who harass and prey on the weak, Black Cloak was definitely someone worth seeking advice from.

“What does Mr. Geo see as my future?”

“I can’t see the future.”

Just when I thought he was rejecting me, he continued.

“I’ve only seen people like you, Joohyun, often.”

“…If you’re someone like me….”

“To put it simply, he is a natural born hero.”

“…….”

Joohyun's face crumpled in embarrassment.

“…You said that last time too, but why do you say I’m a hero?”

“A hero is someone who always chooses the cause over selfish desires.”

The black cloak smiled gently.

“They are people who value the outside of themselves more than themselves, intangible concepts more than tangible things, and eternal foundations more than moments. Joo Hyun is one of those people.”

“…….”

“I know the story you told and didn’t tell. Right now, Joo-hyun is saddened by the sacrifice he made because of his mistake, but more important than that is your belief.”

The devil's smile seemed interested, and somewhat playful.

“I’m not saying that we should belittle the deaths of our family and friends. The point of this explanation is that we grieve and struggle just as much as others, but we still think about moving forward.”

“…Am I, a person who sacrifices a cow for the sake of the generation?”

“No, that’s not true. Mr. Joo-hyun is a person who cares even about small tragedies that have nothing to do with him. Even if he saved 99 out of 100 people, he would be saddened by the death of one person. He knows very well that the only person you can sacrifice is himself.”

“Nothing like that….”

“Mr. Joo-hyun is a hero. He has a kind heart and treats everyone he meets with courtesy. I think he is a great person.”

In an instant, the hair of the black cloak turned red as if flames were flying.

“So I thought I’d try to tease you a bit.”

“Oh, yes? Me? Why?”

“If you get on his nerves, he might be able to become a decent warrior….”

“Please leave me out, please.”

Joo-hyun was horrified. He never thought that he would just give up on that damn Demon King project, but he also had no desire to join the ranks of deceivers called warriors.

The black cloak smiled broadly as if it had known this would happen. It looked like a cheerful fox.

“I wouldn’t do something so cowardly.”

“Oh, I see….”

“But I want to be your friend.”

“Why are you so obsessed with your friends?”

“Friends are a blessing to all.”

“That’s true, but.”

I didn't know that this story would apply even to God.

'I also don't quite understand how such a great mystery could want a mere human as a friend.'

However, since he had experience dealing with the black cloak, he was not easily flustered. Joo-hyun sighed a little awkwardly, but he was not frightened by any of his words.

“So… I, that….”

"hero."

“Oh.”

“Why do you hate it so much?”

“It’s creepy.”

Anyway, let's leave it at that.

“So what was the ending for people like me?”

“Either you become a god, or history, or you disappear cleanly without a trace.”

“It’s more intense than I imagined. Isn’t it too extreme?”

“Isn’t it too unscrupulous to take that path and hope that the results won’t be extreme?”

“No, is it really worth questioning your conscience over something like this…?”

"anyway."

Argio laughed lightly.

“What are your plans for the future? Do you have any work in mind?”

“I’m still thinking about taking care of the little things, but… I haven’t been able to find a job.”

“So you’re thinking of leaving the lab? Then you’ll be doing nothing for a while.”

“I know it sounds a bit like I’m a freeloader when you say it like that, but yeah, that’s what happened.”

“Well then, wouldn’t you like to play with me?”

“…Wait a minute, are you playing? Are you arguing?”

“The country is supposed to monitor and supervise natural disasters.”

“What is that….”

“Doesn’t it look fun?”

“…….”

Joohyun shut her mouth.

“…….”

“…….”

After a while he said.

“…Maybe so?”

So, Joo-Hyeon was taken to Bisabeol by Yoo Seong-Woon's hand at Geo's request.

It was a future that the person involved had not expected at all.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (148)

148

Episode 148

Yoo Seong-un knew very well what Bisabal's tastes were.

'I don't like dry and selfish people.'

People who are extremely individualistic, and fundamentally honest and capable. People who can think, "Oh, it's pitiful, but I'm glad I'm not that person," even when someone dies right in front of them. People who try to maintain a minimum level of goodness and conscience.

That was the standard by which the Visaval collected people.

'In that sense, Joo-Hyeon is far from Bisabal's taste.'

In fact, Yoo Seong-un only knew that 'the guild leader likes this kind of person', but he didn't really know what kind of people he disliked or how he reacted. It was natural because if they didn't match his taste, he wouldn't have gathered them in the first place.

And now.

“…….”

“…….”

In the silence that came from hell, Meteor Cloud put strength into his clasped hands.

'Anyone, please speak up.'

The meteor cloud was drying up, stuck between Bisabal and Juhyeon.

‘I thought it wouldn’t be my taste because it was so noisy…’

Visabal really seemed to genuinely dislike Joohyun.

He was smiling, but his lips were twisted, and unlike his usual appearance of a snake that never loses its smile, his eyes were cold, and his gaze towards the other person was arrogant and extremely uncooperative. It was the first time that Yoo Seong-woon had seen Bisabal like that.

'And this one too… .'

It wasn't like Joohyun was particularly okay.

This gentleman didn't even smile. He had a strong impression of being a very friendly and honest person, but for some reason, he didn't even pretend to be social in front of Bisabal. His narrowed eyes clearly showed contempt for Bisabal.

'Why on earth?'

You guys are meeting for the first time.

'And we didn't exchange a single word.'

I couldn't even imagine this kind of atmosphere until I received Juhyun's handover from Geo. Juhyun, who I had talked to while coming to the interview room, was a very gentle and easygoing person.

“…….”

“…….”

“…I’m sorry.”

And in the end, Yoo Seong-un couldn't hold back anymore.

“Anyone, please speak up.”

Don't make me feel uncomfortable.

Did they sense Yoo Seong-un's feelings, or did they also try to wrap things up here? The two of them changed their expressions in an instant and returned to their normal appearances.

“Oh, no. I’m sorry. I heard that Mr. Joo-hyun had a very good impression, so I couldn’t help but look at him. Could you please forgive my rudeness?”

“What do you mean by forgiveness, Master of the Bisabal Guild? I was so nervous to meet the famous collector that I feel I have offended you. I am truly sorry.”

Yoo Seong-un was secretly enjoying the conversation between these two rascals.

'I want to leave work.'

Of course, it was too early to leave work.

“Guild leader.”

“Yes, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“Should I take my leave now?”

“No, please take a seat.”

Visabal offered me a seat with his characteristically sly smile.

“We are going to talk about ‘Mr. Sergio’, so shouldn’t his curator, Seongwoon Yoo, be there too?”

“If that is what you mean, Guild Leader, then I understand. Thank you for your consideration.”

If there weren't any outsiders, he would have said, "Please stop bothering me," but for the sake of the guild's image, Yoo Seong-un had no choice but to bend. He obediently sat down in the position designated by Bisabal.

Finally, a proper conversation began.

“Let me formally introduce myself, Mr. Juhyun. My name is Bisabal, the head of the Collectors’ Guild.”

Visabal smiled faintly with a fairly normal face.

“I also heard about Mr. Joo Hyun’s situation. It was very rude of me, but I found out through Mr. Yoo Seong Woon. I heard that our curator explained the basic details….”

“Yes, thanks to you, I also heard about ‘Portrait of Geo’. I was really surprised to hear that the famous black cloak was actually part of the collection of the Bisabal Guildmaster.”

“I feel sorry that this old collector has frightened the innocent young man. So, does the fact that you came through the collector mean that you are willing to take care of Sergio?”

“In a natural, smooth tone,” Bisabal added.

“Oh, of course, if you find it burdensome, you can decline.”

“I think it’s a role that’s too much for me, but I have no intention of turning it down.”

The sentences that Joo-Hyeon spits out are also very smooth.

“I have received a lot of help from Mr. Sergio. It is a great honor for me to be given the opportunity to repay that favor.”

At that moment, Yoo Seong-un heard the voice of Bi Sa-bal, who was whispering, “I know, you know.” Since her lips didn’t move, it was ventriloquism, and it was a kind of indicator that let Yoo Seong-un know that she was upset.

It was at a level that even an ordinary person like Joo-hyun wouldn’t be able to hear. But… .

'So what do you want me to do?'

To be honest, Yoo Seong-woon wanted to take Joo Hyun’s side rather than Bisabal’s. Of course, he didn’t like the fact that Joo Hyun was glaring at his superior, but Bisabal was the one who started the fight with his expression first.

'Please give me some money for the night.'

The story continued regardless of Yoo Seong-un's thoughts.

“The Portrait of Geo, known to the world as ‘Black Cloak,’ is currently recorded as an A-class Hunter belonging to a collector. In fact, that is the identity he uses when traveling around the human world.”

“The role I will be taking on will be that of the manager of ‘Sergio Hunter.’”

“Mr. Sergio is an official collector, so you can think of him as a secretary. Please help ‘Portrait of Geo’ adapt to humans without feeling awkward and live as a hunter.”

Bisabal smiled a familiar smile to the world. It was a smile that gave off a sense of trust and stability, while also hinting at the arrogance typical of S-class hunters who were closer to monsters than humans.

“As far as I know, Sergio introduced himself to Joohyun as the evil spirit. Is that right?"

"Yes, the one named Argio…."

Joohyun said that and smiled gently.

"I was surprised at how kind and compassionate he was for such a person."

"That's the charm of 'Portrait of Geo.' He is very colorful and has tens of thousands of appearances, but he is fundamentally kind to humans and very gentlemanly."

The smile of the sage describing Geo instantly became genuine. He loved works of art, and he loved his collection even more. He truly wished for the convenience and happiness of 'Portrait of Geo'.

"I understand that you are wary of meeting him as an evil spirit at first. However, if Joo-Hyeon shows favor, 'Portrait of Geo' will show favor as well."

"…There was a rumor that Black Cloak gave gifts to good people."

"It's true. He really likes good and polite people. And he hates bad and rude people. To the point of isolating them from other people."

The eyes of the beast were sunken.

"Isn't that the kind of personality you like, Mr. Joo-Hyeon?"

"…haha…."

Joohyun returned that smile.

"I don't dare to judge whether I like it or not."

"Oh, those are very humble words. Unlike the distribution of the arms."

"A person who is weak and fearful without any self-respect."

“Such excessive modesty doesn’t suit you, Mr. Joo-Hyeon.”

The visage's smile twisted.

“What suits you is greedy greed, isn’t it?”

“…….”

Joohyun smiled even more deeply.

“…I never thought I would hear that collector call me greedy.”

“We are both quite greedy people, although we work in different fields.”

Soon after, Visabal returned to his usual public appearance.

“Mr. Joo-hyun may not admit it, but Mr. Yoo Seong-woon will tell you the exact details.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been quiet the whole time, nodded.

“I will explain it to you separately later.”

“Oh, thank you. I was worried about what to do….”

“It won’t be difficult, so don’t worry.”

At those words from Yoo Seong-un, Bisabal looked at Joo-hyeon again.

“Would you like to become a member of the Collector’s Association?”

Joohyun smiled brightly.

"no?"

“Haha! I knew it.”

“I don’t think I’m cut out for being a collector.”

“I’m sorry, but it’s true.”

The collection was such that only Bisabul's 'collections' could occupy that spot. In other words, it was a messy company where you couldn't even get hired if you didn't have a piece that Bisabul liked.

In that sense, anyone could see that Bisabal was avoiding Joohyun. Even Yoo Seong-woon, who was proud of being in Bisabal’s good graces, had never seen such a reaction from his superior, so he had said everything he wanted to say.

“Mr. Joo-hyun, you will be Sergio Hunter’s personal secretary, so you don’t have to worry about taking orders from me. Just think about taking orders from Sergio.”

“I will do that.”

“I understand that it hasn’t been sorted out with the association yet, so I’ll take a little bit of a hand in that area. I’ll help you get out cleanly without any problems. Do you have anything you left behind at work? Or any items you need to bring with you?”

“No, there isn't.”

“Then, all that’s left is to sort out the relationship. Fortunately, that’s not a problem for our collectors. We’ll help you sort things out without any friction.”

Soon, Visabal smiled and asked.

“Do you have any other questions?”

“I think the guild leader has something to say rather than me.”

“Oh, my. You got it exactly right.”

The smile disappeared from Bisabal's face.

“I don’t really like people like Joohyun.”

“I think you might feel the same way,” he added.

“People like Mr. Joo-Hyeon chase illusions too seriously.”

“It could be said that chasing such illusions is the right of foolish humans.”

“Is it really necessary to do something that you know is foolish?”

“People with poor eyesight like the guild leader have to feel their way forward.”

“…I really don’t like people like you….”

He touched the rings on my hands.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un realized that it was a habit that came out when Bisabal recognized the opponent as an enemy, and so he quietly stared at Joo-hyun.

It wasn't a flow that made sense, but it was worth paying attention to. In what ways would my beloved superior be wary of and loath toward this person?

'Considering the circumstances… did he seem like a person who would harm the work?'

Since Bisabal hadn’t given any signals, it didn’t seem like a situation where he should recognize Yoo Seong-un as an enemy, but he was secretly wary of this civilian researcher. He trusted Bisabal’s eyes.

'There are certainly civilians who don't lose their momentum even when faced with S-class and A-class hunters… .'

It was at that time that I thought there was something fishy.

"-hey."

A long arm stretched out from behind the visage.

“…….”

“The air is heavy.”

It made a rattling sound and showed off all sorts of ornaments, and soon, its fingers adorned with gorgeous jewels lightly grabbed Bisabal’s shoulder as if playfully. Yoo Seong-un looked at the owner of that arm.

Pale skin that looks like it has never seen sunlight, a bright smile, and dark red hair.

“You shouldn’t mess with heroes.”

“…….”

“I may not be able to treat you well, but….”

It was a portrait.

“Isn’t that right, Master of the Visabal Guild?”

A portrait that appeared in the air, not on a wall.

“…….”

“…….”

“Those eyes.”

The two monsters' eyes met.

“Is it the dragon’s?”

The pupil of the visage was slit long.

“Nice to meet you, Geo’s portrait.”

“I am pleased to accept your invitation.”

“That’s right….”

With joy and greed, Bisabal laughed.

“…It is an honor.”

It was the first encounter between a collector and a portrait artist.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (149)

149

Episode 149

It was the meeting with the portrait that Bisabal had been longing for, but unfortunately it did not last long.

“I think the important story is over, so I’ll take my friend with me.”

“It’s a shame you’re leaving already.”

“I’m waiting for the next invitation.”

Because soon after, 'Portrait of Geo' disappeared into the painting, taking Joo-hyun with it.

“…….”

At that part, Yoo Seong-un was a little surprised.

'The trust relationship has been built quite strongly.'

Joo-hyun obediently entered the portrait at Geo’s gesture. He smiled sadly, but he didn’t seem to be the type to let his guard down easily, so it was quite surprising in either case.

'The fact that a person who cares so much for Geo has appeared, and that a person named Joo-hyun has accepted Geo.'

It seemed that even Visabal felt that part.

“It seems that Sergio has the power to soften people.”

“I’ve often thought that, although he doesn’t seem to be very social, he’s strangely friendly.”

“It was his long-standing ability that he had been demonstrating since the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’ incident.”

In general, portraits tend to have a somewhat stiff and unwieldy feel to them without the help of 'Geo'.

It might be funny to say something like that to Geun-won, but Geo wasn't the most sociable person.

'He also feels uncomfortable being out of the frame for a long time or coming into contact with many people. It can't be helped since Geo lowers his own level and adjusts it, but from the humans' perspective... Geo doesn't seem like a friendly image.'

Even when he was the most gentle and soft-spoken 'Giovanni', people had a hard time with him no matter how kind he was. This was probably because he had such a strong aristocratic impression.

Apart from the fact that he showed great consideration, there was nothing he could do about the high rank. But given the difficult atmosphere… .

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“Should we consider this to be Geo’s ability?”

“There is no reason not to do so.”

“I don’t know whether to like it or be embarrassed.”

Oddly enough, Geo easily gained trust and favor.

It was the same when Cha Ara Hunter encountered him and recognized him as a monster, it was the same when it came to the dungeon refugees who were sensitive because their lives were in danger, and even Joo Hyun, who said that his first encounter was in the form of an evil spirit, was showing the same behavior.

“It’s probably not been a day or two since we met. Especially in the world inside the portrait, time would have flowed quickly depending on Geo’s mood. But even considering that, it’s still amazing.”

Yoo Seong-un recalled the information I had researched.

“Joohyun is not the type of person to trust someone easily.”

“It seemed quite clever. Time and trust have no relation to Mr. Joo Hyun.”

“I definitely didn’t think he was the type of person to trust someone just because he’d seen them for a long time.”

“Even Sergio is a demon and a being of origin.”

“Entrusting yourself to someone like that requires a minimum level of trust….”

“If you volunteered to enter the portrait, then you’ve said enough.”

“I don’t know if it’s a conscious action or an unconscious trust.”

“I think it’s both.”

The visa holder smiled faintly.

“First of all, the timing must have been perfect. He was so desperate that he was about to make a deal with Sankalut, so he probably just let it happen.”

“Is it because you were taking care of Geo in such a way while putting everything down that it was hard for you to be on guard? You repaid the favor, but it didn’t seem like you were touched.”

“Well… I think my basic liking for the Black Cloak may have had some influence.”

He rarely clicked his tongue.

“It seems like you dream of a utopia, but it wouldn’t have been easy to reject the great mystery of affirming good and denying evil.”

It seemed like he didn't like the guy named Juhyun.

“He will continue to question his true nature, but the Portrait of Geo is an ideal for him. Sergio has already proven his true nature several times in the form of the Black Cloak, and he must have felt a liking for it.”

“Wouldn’t Mr. Joo-Hyeon’s taste be detrimental to Geo?”

“That year is very subjective. I feel like it’s an arrogant pest to even think about arbitrarily cutting and using my work, but as you saw earlier, Geo would really like it. Our positions are different.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed awkwardly at Bisabal's words.

“So that’s why you hated it so much.”

“They are the type of people who just don’t fit with me.”

He looked quite disgusted.

“Heroes are greedy. They can’t tell the difference between courage and recklessness, they’re greedy, and they always make stupid choices. It’s hard to tell if they’re really stupid or if they’re just being stupid on purpose.”

"aha…."

“Whether or not he understands the subject, people like Mr. Joo Hyun often do things that go beyond my subject. If Mr. Joo Hyun completely believes in Sergio’s true nature, he will try to use him. I really don’t like it.”

“Oh, yes.”

Anyway, I love that guy's work.

'I guess he was given the name 'Collector' because he showed such a love that was close to obsession.'

Bisabal usually took care of his collection with love and care, so he tried to give his collection what it wanted as much as possible, but this time, he didn't like the part about Geo wanting a 'friend' named Juhyun.

'Anyway, it seems there was nothing for me to worry about.'

In the end, it was frustrating that he had to entrust the management of his beloved collection to someone he didn't like. It was a shame that Joo-Hyeon was the only one who suffered because of the guild leader's narrow-mindedness.

“…Still, he’s a hero. Isn’t that a kind of high praise?”

“It was probably closer to an objective evaluation than a compliment.”

Bisabeol smiled broadly. It was a smile that he only saw in front of his collection. It was his intention to be considerate of Yoo Seong-un, who was trying to lighten the mood.

“Even though I’m acting so immature, I don’t hate that guy named Joo-hyun. But there are people like that in the world, the type who don’t get along well even when neither of them has done anything wrong, so they end up hating each other.”

“Ah… that kind of….”

“There are no other complaints or grievances. When people see money bugs in their house, they feel disgusted and think, ‘Oh, that bug is going to eat the pests in my house.’ It’s something like that.”

“Are you comparing people to insects now?”

“It’s just a metaphor. Joo-hyun would be a pretty good guide and helper to Geo, and I appreciate that. It’s just that we don’t get along very well.”

Then Visabal asked.

“In that sense, don’t you need a roommate?”

“I think I misheard you?”

“It would be nice if Yoo Seong-un had a friend too.”

“Oh, well, I heard wrong?”

Yoo Seong-un asked back with a frown on his face.

“Who is that roommate?”

“Well, with Joohyun….”

“Please, what crime did he commit?”

“And Sergio?”

“…….”

You've finally gone crazy.

Yoo Seong-un wiped his face.

* * *

"sorry."

Joohyun first tried to apologize.

“I feel like I made the atmosphere unnecessarily heavy….”

“You don’t have to apologize to me for that.”

“The person who introduced me to help me was rude to me.”

“If you’re really sorry, could you tell me why you did that?”

As Geo said that, he instantly transformed into a blond-haired priest.

He smiled divinely, as if he was cradling a lost lamb.

“Okay, brother. I am ready to listen.”

It really looked like that.

Although the place where the two of them were was a wooden table filled with the scent of phytoncide, the long, flowing platinum hair and the pure white priest's robes reminded me of the prayer room of a temple. He was the ideal priest.

“…….”

Joohyun, as always, smiled, but looked a little tired.

“So you’re prepared to listen….”

“I think it would be easier for you to speak this way.”

“Well… I guess that’s true.”

I felt like I was going to confession.

"hmm…."

Joohyun, who had been thinking for a moment, soon opened his mouth.

“I thought you weren’t a good match for me.”

“Why did you think so?”

“It’s embarrassing to say, but I’ve never really been a fan of collectors.”

“Is there a reason why that happened?”

“That person… has absolutely no interest in the well-being of others.”

The leader of the Collectors' Guild, one of the three major guilds in South Korea. He was a wealthy man with great influence, but he made all decisions and acted solely based on his own interests.

“I don’t think that living a life solely based on interest is completely bad. However, from his actions, I felt that the leader of the Bisabae Guild had no concern for others. That was a bit… like that.”

To Bisabul, the world was his gallery, a playground where his work could run wild. He seemed to mostly keep the line, but that kind of individualistic nature was tiring for Joohyun.

“He is a man of great influence, but he has acted as if he has no sense of responsibility. Of course, unless you see him and talk to him, you don’t know what’s going on, but it’s a kind of prejudice.”

“I guess you thought it didn’t fit well in that regard.”

“I’m really ashamed. I’m not a particularly good person for saying this, but I’ve made assumptions about others and even been rude. But that doesn’t mean I hate the leader of the Bisabal guild.”

Joohyun added with an awkward smile.

“I am grateful to him. The collector is one of the strong pillars that sustains our fragile planet. Regardless of my personal feelings, he is definitely someone to be respected."

"Mr. Joo-hyun, you are already well aware of your actions and their consequences. However, I don't want to see you blaming yourself, so I hope you will show an attitude of no regrets next time."

"Thank you for your thoughtful advice. It seems that even the leader of the Visabal Guild doesn't hate me as a person. We were just being a bit… childish."

He wiped the corner of his mouth as if reflecting.

"He won't like me being around Mr. Geo."

"……."

For a moment, Geo's eyes sparkled golden and his head turned red.

"Is this the 'cat thief' remark I've only heard of…?"

"I don't know what it is that you're so excited about, but I don't think so."

Joohyun's expression became subtle.

"No, but do you know the term 'cat thief'?"

"It's all because I'm wise."

"Well, it's something that can be found out if you want to know…."

I felt a little strange.

"……."

It wasn't just that this situation was funny.

'… What should I say… .'

Would it be too rude to think that he really felt human?

It was because he was acting like a normal young man of that age, making a fuss and doing such trivial things. In fact, Argio's face was young enough to be called a 'young man'.

Of course, it would be difficult to call a being with such a huge personality, whose color changes depending on the purpose and will, an 'ordinary young man', but still... .

"……."

"Mr. Joohyun, what are you thinking?"

"…That's right."

I don't know what this idea is.

"…As far as I know, Black Cloak likes good people."

"How many people hate good people?"

Before I knew it, his hair was back to black.

It was the color of a shadow that had lost all its color and was exhausted, but the face of the black cloak was still warm, though it had just calmly settled down.

He added casually.

"I think it's just ordinary taste."

"Is it okay to give a gift to a kind and polite person?"

"I'm the type of person who can't leave people who have inspired me alone."

"Those are the people who inspire you."

If that were true, it would be truly amazing.

“That’s really….”

Joohyun felt it anew.

“…I think it’s a great thing.”

“What’s so great?”

“People like you are merciful.”

This existence is truly peaceful.

“It resembles the world in this portrait.”

That's why I admired it.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (150)

150

Episode 150

When I first woke up in this cabin and saw the dawn sky with the sun just rising.

“I felt a peace here that I had only imagined.”

It was a beautiful sky.

A vast field of vision, unlike the concrete forest where you can't see beyond even a little bit. The clear Milky Way that seems to sparkle endlessly even when enough light gathers. The sweet scent of nature lingering in the cool yet warm breeze.

My dry corneas began to sting from the unknown perfume, and my heart began to pound heavily. I was so overwhelmed that I couldn't even think.

“It’s different from reality.”

There was no noise whatsoever here.

“Mr. Sergio.”

“You finally call me that.”

“You are a strong being, aren’t you?”

“Yes, it just happened without me knowing.”

“And at the same time, it’s evil.”

“I don’t quite understand the role of the devil yet, but yes.”

“…Don’t you feel like I’m being rude?”

The black cloak asked him in a puzzled tone.

“Do you want me to think you’re rude?”

“That’s not true, but to be honest, it is true that it is difficult to understand.”

“What part do you not understand?”

“How can it exist in that form?”

It was ridiculous.

“You have all kinds of strengths.”

In every way, 'Portrait of Geo' was a powerhouse.

“In every way, you are overwhelmingly strong.”

“That is a great compliment.”

“It may sound like that, but at least from what I’ve seen… yes.”

It would be foolish to argue with force against the great mystery of the evil god, but when he was red, he looked capable of fighting. His overwhelming presence made me bow down despite his excellent disguise.

He was a god to Juhyun, a terrifying humanoid monster to the people of the world, and his dungeons were working diligently for their master. I felt the overwhelming strength from the mystery and divinity he contained.

“Well, I know this may be rude, but your appearance is like that too.”

“I often hear compliments that I’m handsome.”

“I think so too, it seems natural.”

He was an ideal handsome man, and although his body was not noticeable because of the cloak, he was neither thick nor thin. He was tall, close to 190, and his bearing resembled that of an old nobleman or a noble priest. His hands, which always carried a bundle behind his back, were large.

Joo-hyun was confident in his observation. The black cloak's appearance alone could be a powerful weapon. It was only natural, since there were humans everywhere who were weak in sight.

“Sergio can never be weak.”

In any situation or relationship, he has the upper hand.

“So there are times when I don’t understand even more.”

“I’m listening, so keep talking. What don’t you understand?”

“You are like….”

Joo-Hyeon, who had been hesitating, let out a sigh.

“Act as if you understand the weak.”

It's nonsense. Those who are naturally strong don't understand the many weak people.

As God sees humans, if you memorize their actions and ways, you cannot care for them even if you do not know them. Because you are strong, you cannot understand weakness. Just as a blind person cannot understand the color red.

“So, what I want to say is….”

I felt like my words were a bit tangled.

“Sergio, although he is very strong, understands the weak. He is considerate. He respects them. How can someone so strong that he can make you feel a sense of fear?”

“Because I’m just human. I’m not the ideal strong person that Mr. Joo-hyun thinks I am.”

“That’s true. Sergio really does feel like a human being. He sleeps, eats, cooks. He wants friends, he goes out sometimes, he jokes, he laughs, he cries….”

“I don’t think I’ve ever cried.”

“I saw you acting childish towards your father. I saw you whining to your children. They were all natural. That’s why you seem like a real person.”

A question suddenly arises.

“Is this flow of my thoughts also intentional?”

“I don’t intend anything.”

“You’re saying that it’s not a lie that you didn’t realize was a lie?”

“No way, I’m a more sloppy person than you can imagine, Mr. Joo-Hyeon.”

“Even if that is true, humans will be greatly affected.”

That's human.

They are swayed to their core by the glances and gestures of God. Even the conversations that come from great destiny and nature can become great disasters, and they can go crazy with just a drop of their small affection.

That's human, and that's God. Joo-hyun knows that too.

“I know, but….”

I closed my eyes tightly.

“…….”

“…….”

And again, I took in the black cloak.

Two eyes. One nose, one lip. Two ears. The skin is slightly pale, and the hair is shallow and curled.

He waits for me to speak. No matter how hard I try to see into its essence, only the human form comes into view.

“…I can’t stop seeing you as a human.”

It's the face of youth.

“How old are you?”

“I’m 29 years old.”

“Where is your hometown?”

“It’s Gangwon-do.”

“What did you do?”

“At school.”

A faint smile appears on his pale face.

“I taught students.”

“…You were a teacher.”

“Yes, I worked at a high school.”

"is it so."

I feel empty.

"I see."

Look at that loving smile.

If this isn't human, then what is it?

“…….”

“Do I look human now?”

"…maybe…."

I think that might be possible.

Joohyun laughed awkwardly.

“You keep asking the same question, why do you give gifts to good people?”

“Because when we see someone special, we want to praise them.”

“They say that when you see people, you talk to them.”

“It’s fun to talk to you. I feel sorry for those who are afraid of me.”

“Why do you keep arresting bad people?”

“My children are doing this for me, but it wasn’t my intention.”

“There really isn’t any grand reason for it.”

“Because I don’t have the ability to think deeply.”

“I understand.”

If all of this were true, and even if it wasn't sincere, if he continued on this path, Joo-hyun would not even dare to think of denying this existence.

If I were to be greedy, would it be too rude to think that way? I could never hate him, who was made up of such ideal peace.

“…….”

I tried to be wary of it because it was introduced as an evil spirit, and I wanted to stay away from it because it was too huge to feel at ease, but I also wanted to give it my heart.

“…You didn’t use that kind of ability, did you…?”

“I would appreciate it if you could be more specific about what abilities you are referring to.”

“People… are made to feel… helpless… and are made to feel safe… and are fooled….”

“…? I don’t quite understand. Is this a compliment?”

“It could be… or it might not be….”

“…….”

“…Ugh….”

Joo-hyun blamed his own stupidity.

'What on earth did I expect from asking such a question?'

It was wrong to want to have an equal exchange with the form before one's eyes when there was a high possibility that it was not the real entity. God had different standards for truth and falsehood from humans.

Whether he actually had such powers or not, whether he knew the powers existed or not, until Joo-hyun realized it himself, the words of the divinity before his eyes could be true or false.

“I’m sorry, that sounded weird.”

“I don’t quite understand, but….”

The man asked.

“Don’t you want to be my friend?”

"…yes?"

“So that’s why you praised me.”

“Huh? Oh, no….”

“In the end, I think you liked it.”

“That’s… uh….”

“Are you still unsure of what you want to do? Are you wary of trusting me?”

"…I am…."

“Mr. Joo-hyun, you consider it a sin to rely on anyone other than yourself. I affirm the value of your foolish beliefs.”

“…….”

“That must be your way of life.”

When I hesitated to answer, he continued.

“You don’t have to overthink it. I wanted to be friends with Joohyun, and now I see you as that. And you’re not the type of person to settle down in one place.”

“…Is that a compliment too?”

“You can see it that way. What I’m trying to say is that there’s nothing wrong with us being friends. Are you also someone who can’t see the present because you regret the past and worry about the future?”

“I don’t think so.”

“Then there is no problem. Mr. Joo-hyun is a person with a great ambition for world peace, and I would be a friend who would fit that very well. So I would like you to be the second friend in this portrait.”

His expression remained blunt and calm.

“Take your time. Mr. Joo-hyun is a sincere and polite person, so whether it’s fast or slow, he’ll find the right path that suits you.”

“You may make irreversible mistakes.”

“There is no such thing as an irreversible mistake. Why can such a sentence exist? After all, people have to live in the present and move forward, but instead, they think about the past that cannot be recovered.”

“Humans are such foolish creatures.”

“I admit that I have an unusually simple and light-hearted way of thinking. But it is the privilege of living beings to reflect and grow from the past. And that is the only option.”

“I know that too, but….”

“Mr. Joohyun.”

The man spoke as if he were Buddha.

“Are you afraid of trying something new because you might make mistakes that don’t come true?”

“I knew someone else would be sacrificed because of my mistake. I committed a sin.”

“Mr. Joo-hyun, the people of the world are not lambs that you need to save.”

“…….”

“It is a form of arrogance to try to take responsibility for them all.”

That might have been a bit of a shock.

“They are living their own lives, and it is their lives that should be respected for being caught up in Joo Hyun’s mistakes. Don’t be mistaken that the lives they have chosen and nurtured were solely Joo Hyun’s.”

"…but…."

“It’s good to reflect, but if you’re scared, the only way out is to run away and hide. And I know that you’re not that kind of person, Joo-hyun. You’ll eventually find your own way, and I’m just reducing that hesitation.”

“…….”

“An individual cannot be a very great being. Even if he has a huge influence, he is ultimately just one of the passing trends. Even if he looks like a giant, it is just one of his characteristics. No being can be a perfect indicator.”

He continued speaking with his face still expressionless.

“I see Mr. Joo Hyun as a good and polite person with a heroic side. That is your characteristic, not who you are. There is no need to be immersed in it.”

"…ah…."

“Don’t let the goal you want to achieve eat you up, Mr. Joo-hyun. You just want the world to be at peace, and that’s what you’re trying to do. Don’t let that ruin you.”

"that…."

“Mr. Joo-hyun, your caution and vigilance are great strengths and virtues. However, if you have to believe after considering everything, there won’t be much left for you. So for now….”

“…….”

“Will you be my friend?”

He smiled broadly.

“Because I have a romantic idea about pen pals.”

“…That’s a good romance.”

I wondered if that smile would make me dull. Would it make me feel comfortable? And yet, there was me who was captivated by that sense of stability.

I wondered what kind of smile that 'Geo' had, but soon came to the conclusion that it was meaningless. According to what he said, even distinguishing 'Geo' was actually worthless.

At this point, it became embarrassing to even hesitate.

“…Let’s do it, buddy.”

"oh."

“This is difficult.”

Joohyun smiled faintly.

“There might be problems though.”

“Let’s think about it little by little.”

“I was going to say that too.”

“Opportunities always present themselves.”

“You can also make it yourself.”

“You understand well.”

"…therefore…."

After hesitating several times, I finally blurted it out.

"i look forward to."

Sergio laughed at that.

It looked quite human.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (151)

151

Episode 151

Even though Geo made a new pen pal and Joohyun made a friend in Black Cloak, the daily life in this peaceful cabin did not change.

Still, the black cloak cooked rice.

“Please let me work too.”

“Guests do not do the work.”

“You said we were friends.”

“He is a guest and a friend.”

Although I felt a little uneasy, it was true that everything was peaceful.

“Then, could you please look after Dana? She looks bored.”

“If I get close, won’t it burn me? Really? I heard that the Anticat’s fire is that hot.”

“It seems like you don’t hate Joohyun as much as you used to, so why don’t you try to be brave?”

“Just this morning, he was passing by me, showing his teeth….”

“It has definitely become more harmful than before when we tried to turn it into ashes.”

Delicious meals were served three times a day, the room was comfortable and private, and the view from the veranda was as beautiful as a scene from a fairy tale. I was enjoying an abundance of benefits without doing anything.

But that didn't change the situation at all.

“…….”

Joo-hyun is troubled by her new friend's identity.

The attic was the place where I followed my interest in the process of making things like paints and brushes. Joo-Hyeon, who was invited there, spoke in a calm and composed tone.

“I’m very cautious, but I thought about it.”

“I am listening.”

“I think it’s okay to ask this much if you’re a friend.”

“Ask a question.”

He called Geo.

“Mr. Geo.”

"yes."

“…Mr. Sergio?”

"yes."

“Argio?”

"yes."

“How should I call you?”

"aha."

Geo admitted his mistake.

“I guess my introduction wasn’t enough.”

Yes, Joo-hyun knew almost nothing about Geo.

'I never explained it to you separately.'

Such a strange indifference was also typical of the great mystery's attitude toward humans.

“I hope I don’t do anything unpleasant.”

“I don’t think there’s much that I’d be offended by, but….”

“I don’t think I would do something like that, but still.”

“It’s definitely rude not to even introduce yourself properly.”

Glass tools that clank and fall. And the liquids with strange colors filled inside them, and the vivid colors that are scattered without any regularity. Danawa Honey, completely submerged in a box next to the workbench.

In the attic where all kinds of mysterious things gathered, Geo had an unexpected self-introduction time.

“I am Sergio.”

“Oh, yes, I heard that. The members of the Collectors’ Guild also knew that.”

“And this is Batlan Giovanni.”

“…Batlan Giovanni?”

“It is also expected to become Argio soon.”

“…….”

Joo-Hyeon thought that the practice of these mysterious people 'cutting out all the extra explanations and only stating the main point meaningfully' should be made illegal.

'… Even the oracles, which are said to be the most representative form of communication with the mysteries, are always too vague when it comes to information given by beings of enormous stature.'

It was just embarrassing for the listener. Joohyun laughed awkwardly.

Joo-hyun also knew that there was a reason for everything. In the case of oracles, the language of the gods was likely to harm the believers, so they minimized the scale as much as possible, which resulted in sentences that were difficult to interpret.

'I don't know much about it because it's not my area of expertise.'

Anyway, that’s why Joo-hyun was able to quickly hide his bewilderment at Geo’s abrupt sentences. He rubbed his chin for a moment, then thought about it, and soon he found a pattern without much difficulty.

“All of the names have ‘Geo’ in them. So it’s ‘Portrait of Geo’?”

“I think so.”

“It seems that Geo’s appearance, which changes from time to time, is due to his name.”

He asked in his characteristically soft tone.

“What does Mr. Sergio look like?”

“This is what it looks like when you have black hair.”

“Um… Argio had red hair.”

“Thank you for remembering.”

“This is what Batlan Giovanni looks like when he was blond.”

“Thank you for your understanding.”

Was it so extraordinary that a mere human could understand the words of such a great mystery? I do not know what part of this portrait struck his interest and emotion, but soon a golden light spread over him like paint.

Giovanni smiled his characteristically bright smile.

“This is the first time I’ve done a proper introduction like this since Yoo Seong-un.”

“…….”

It seems that he mostly changes into 'Giovanni' when he wants to effectively express joy or provide stability to humans.

If you look at it that way, 'Sergio' and 'Argio' each have their own uses. Joo-hyun, who had gathered his thoughts, soon smiled awkwardly.

“…Ah, is this your first time? I have a rough idea of what the situation is like.”

“Most people get nervous just by looking at me, so I never had a chance to have a casual conversation like this. I was worried about when I would ever make friends, but I’m so glad I met Joohyun.”

“It is a great honor for me.”

Joohyun thought to herself while smiling brightly.

'How could anyone not be scared unless they were as crazy as me?'

Just looking at it, it's at least a humanoid monster, but no matter how deeply you think about it, isn't it the form of an evil god? It's true that the ghost story about the 'black cloak' has become quite familiar, but there wouldn't be many people who would openly pretend to be friendly to him.

"……."

Joo-hyun, who became one of those 'few people', felt bitter inside. He had been proud of living a sane and normal life, but now he had become friends with an evil spirit.

'I have to be careful not to have vain thoughts. Even if what the other person wants from me is a friendship, and I respond to that, I have to be careful about the things I need to be careful about.'

Taking the favor of the evil spirit as one's own strength, relying too much on him, being intoxicated by power that is not one's own, being ungrateful, and being overly greedy...

The contract holders of the evil gods who ruined the world throughout history all failed to grasp their subject and did wrong. I did not want to be recorded in history that way, even if I would rather disappear as a cog in the wheel of society.

"…Then can I hear Mr. Geo's story?"

Since you gave me your name, I guess you're willing to explain.

"Of course, if it makes you uncomfortable, you don't have to tell me."

"No, they're not that special."

Geo, with his black hair, was seen with his arms crossed, thinking about something. He soon opened his mouth.

“Argio had the innate ability to transform into a beast. Because of that ability, he was banished from his family and lived like an animal in the forest, until he was driven to the root of all evil and became a demon.”

Joohyun said reflexively.

“It’s already special.”

“Is that so?”

“No, rather than special, it’s a bit more negative….”

“I lived happily and went.”

“That’s a real black joke.”

Joohyun nodded and continued speaking.

“What kind of person was Giovanni of the Batlan family?”

“As a priest and doctor of the sun, he was beaten to death while caring for mermaid students.”

“What should I… how should I react to this kind of story?”

“You can laugh. I had a good time and left happily.”

“If I laugh, I feel like I’ll become something less than human.”

What a laugh, it was a story desperately trying to hide shock.

“I feel like I’ve heard a similar story somewhere…?”

“Then, it seems you have read the report on the ‘Deep Sea Country’.”

“I’m really surprised that it wasn’t my mistake.”

Joo Hyun-do, a rare humanoid monster who officially appeared in the association, carefully read the report on the 'Deep Sea Country'. The report also included the overall story related to the dungeon.

“…….”

No matter how much I think about it, it doesn't seem like he lived happily and died.

“…Actually, I kind of expected it.”

“I wonder what you expected and how.”

“Ever since I found out that Black Cloak was a collector’s item.”

“What’s the problem there?”

“The report on ‘The Country of the Deep Sea’ that you sent me from the collection was written by Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“I think so.”

“And Mr. Yoo Seong-un, um….”

Joohyun chose her words.

“You are quite well known within the association’s research community.”

“Why is that?”

“Because you are the former research team leader who transferred to a collection center, of all places.”

“What’s so special about moving to a collector’s position?”

“The motto is special. The collector has a strong sense of cherishing the works.”

“I’ve definitely heard that there is such a rule.”

“And the researchers of the association are quite resistant to this kind of collecting motto.”

In a way, it was natural.

“Because I see a lot of things I don’t like at the lab.”

They know the cruelty of the dangerous objects that collectors call 'art'.

“There is a saying in the research institute of the association that ‘Anyone who has not lost something to them is not a real researcher.’ That is how strong their wariness is towards dangerous objects, and each person has a different story.”

“I am safe.”

“Of course, I didn’t mean that to you, Mr. Geo. You’re a far better person to be compared to those dangerous and inconvenient items. You’ve done me a lot of favors.”

Joohyun smiled her signature smile.

“But most hazardous materials are not like that. The collection gallery and the association’s research institute are in many ways polar opposites, so it is extremely rare for an employee who has experience in one to move to the other.”

In fact, Yoo Seong-un was the first person to move to the opposite side.

“It’s something that only someone with a strong affection for dangerous items can do. Isn’t this the report on the S-class dungeon that someone like that submitted? Many researchers were curious about what caught the interest of former Research Team Leader Yoo Seong-un.”

“That happened.”

“Among those who participated at that time, the name of Sergio Hunter remained. I also knew that he was the person who contributed greatly to the rescue of civilians on the day of the terrorist attack on the initiation ceremony of the Solar Cult. But I heard that you, who I knew as the Black Cloak, had the name Sergio….”

Joohyun laughed awkwardly.

“I thought you, Sergio and Black Cloak, might have some kind of deep connection to the ‘Deep Sea Kingdom.’ It is well known that a portrait of Black Cloak often appears in that dungeon.”

That's just a guess I made while staying at Blackcloak's cabin.

“First of all, there is a record of Batlan Giovanni in the ‘Deep Sea Country’. It is very rare to confirm, but you mentioned the name when you introduced him….”

“So you were saying that you guessed the connection to it.”

“I wouldn’t have known if you hadn’t told me the name Batlan Giovanni. There’s no exact record of Giovanni’s appearance in the dungeon, and even if there was, it’s common for him to have blond hair and blue eyes.”

“It’s interesting that in the past, that kind of appearance wasn’t common in Korea.”

“…I thought of it because you mentioned old Korea. As you said before, ‘Sergio’ was your name when you lived on Earth, right? What kind of life did you lead back then?”

“As expected, it’s nothing special.”

Geo answered with a blunt face.

“Because it was just a portrait that was destroyed by a fire at school.”

“Oh, I see!”

It was so unexpected that I had prepared myself mentally in advance.

“How did it come to that?”

“Are you asking about the fire or are you asking about the portrait?”

“I guess you could say it’s both.”

“To be honest, I don’t know the cause of the fire either.”

He blinked his eyes a couple of times.

“The alarm just suddenly went off, and even though I went to check as soon as I heard the sound, the first floor was on fire. Judging by how quickly the fire spread, it probably wasn’t a natural fire.”

“…Someone did this on purpose…?”

“It would have been difficult for it to spread so quickly without spreading oil. Of course, this is just my guess. I was busy sending students out of school at the time.”

“You didn’t go out together?”

“I had to check if there were any students or teachers left. Since it was recess, people were scattered all over the place, and sometimes students ended up in the wrong places….”

Black eyes stared blankly at Juhyun.

“Fortunately, I was the only one left in the school, and I couldn’t get out of the school in time. I wasn’t in a situation where I could have hoped the fire would be put out and I would have survived, so I went straight into my precious storage unit.”

“Is it a warehouse?”

“It was an art warehouse. I thought about jumping out the window, but I was on the fifth floor, the very top. My school had high ceilings. So I went to the best place to die.”

“…….”

“And it became a portrait. Isn’t it amazing?”

Joohyun smiled awkwardly at him.

“…That’s amazing.”

Black Cloak didn't seem to feel any negative emotions about Geo's death.

In fact, he never said at all that Sergio died like that, but because of the cases of 'Giovanni' and 'Argio' above, Joo-hyun thought so. That 'Sergio' also died like that.

“My age at that time….”

“I was 29 years old.”

“Is the age different for each ‘Geo’?”

“Giovanni died at the age of 32, Arzio at the age of 24.”

“…Not all of them lived long lives.”

Joohyun suddenly felt sorry.

“Younger than me.”

Could this portrait be a collection of such young and youthful deaths?

'So maybe that's why we can have a conversation without much difficulty even though we're alone like this.'

Perhaps, there was a great mystery called 'Portrait of Geo' behind all those 'Geos', but they were also once just ordinary people. Nevertheless, the deaths of 'Geos' were all bitter.

‘No matter how evil he is, Argio is also 24 years old… .’

Above all, even if he called himself evil, Argio did not seem like such a bad person. He seemed like a person who could be fully merciful.

'Those kinds of people.'

How could we have only encountered such tragedy?

“…….”

Joohyun smiled softly.

“I don’t know how that could happen, but, um. No matter how I think about it, it’s still surprising.”

“I think so too.”

“Come to think of it, I heard that the two mermaids living in the ‘Deep Sea Country’ have not been subdued yet.”

“They are very dangerous children who cannot be easily subdued.”

“You’re not against the punitive action itself, are you?”

It was an unusual thing.

“Are you not concerned about that part?”

“What part are you talking about?”

“…They were just my disciples that I once cherished.”

If Joo-hyun were in his shoes, he would have had many thoughts.

“If it were me, I would probably be sad for quite a while. I would blame myself for causing this. I would want to forgive him since he was once my beloved disciple, but I also wouldn't be able to forgive him as a human being… Hmm, was that too presumptuous?"

He smiled, his hair now platinum blonde.

"My friend, you are not the least bit rude to me."

"If that's the case, then that's good."

"But I'm not someone who thinks as deeply as Joo-hyun."

"Are you thinking deeply…?"

"I never once blamed myself."

Giovanni blinked his blue eyes as if to say, 'Why on earth should I do that?'

"I have done my best to cherish my disciples and to do good deeds befitting my mission. I have acted without shame as a son of the sun… and as a teacher, I have walked the path for my students. It was not a way to abuse me, but a way for me to respect myself."

It was a soft and soothing voice.

"My students may have resented me, but I did my best to protect them and gave them no shortage of affection."

"So you don't regret it? Because you did your best?"

"I have done my best to do what I wanted, and it has been a universal good deed and an honorable step before the sun and me. I do not want to blame myself for the absurd thought that my students have sinned because I did not act more cleverly."

"Because I didn't act more cleverly…?"

“If I had flattered the church and the village, I might have lived longer. But that would have been a betrayal to my students, a betrayal to my father, and an act that tormented me.”

His lips formed a smooth curve.

“I just didn’t want to.”

“Why?”

“There are many reasons, but the most representative one is because I made a promise.”

“Who did you make a promise with?”

“With my students.”

The eyes that hold the sea bend with affection.

“I promised that I wouldn’t change from who I am now.”

“…….”

Joohyun opened her mouth with difficulty at that stuffed smile.

“…Do you still love those disciples?”

"i love you."

“Then did you forgive them for their actions?”

“I didn’t forgive you.”

“Then… will you punish me?”

“It’s not my part.”

The priest laughed lightly. It was the innocent laugh of a young man.

“The only crime they committed against me was betraying my faith. The punishment for that has already been paid in the past, and I dare not impose any other punishment.”

“I understand.”

“You might think that Giovanni is in the easiest position to punish those sinful mermaids. But that would be ridiculous.”

“Because that’s not your part?”

“Also because they want me to punish them.”

Soon Giovanni was seen smiling brightly.

“My mermaid students spent a very long time venting their anger. They were always buried in memories of the past, scattering sins that could never be picked up, leaving me in a corner of their hearts.”

“…….”

“I thought it would never happen, but I hoped that one day, by some miracle, I, their only meaning, would return and put an end to them. It was an extremely irresponsible and indecisive attitude. It would actually be a reward for me to punish them….”

He shrugged.

“Do you think that’s right?”

“…Well, well….”

It was a point of view that gave me something to think about.

“…I hope that the same tragedy won’t happen again because of those mermaids.”

“So am I. And it is a reward for my affection and a proof of my favoritism.”

“You really love them, but you don’t forgive them.”

“Even if an eternity passes, will I ever be able to forgive them?”

The human being who contains the merciful sun speaks.

“No matter what my students do, their sins will only increase and their responsibilities will increase, but the time of those who have already suffered at their hands will not disappear. Even if the world of the humans they killed were returned to its most perfect state, the sins that existed cannot be forgiven.”

"…then…."

“I am a simple man, not very deep-thinking, so I don’t know if such a sin can be forgiven through a long period of time, pain, and sincerity. It may be impossible, or it may be possible. But I don’t know if it is a hole that can be filled even after a few thousand years.”

Giovanni continued, his face a priest, his youthful expression gone.

“But don’t worry, as long as I am here, they will continue to worry about their sins. I am still fulfilling my responsibility as a teacher….”

“The tragedy I am worried about will not happen again.”

“What is clear is that I did not forgive my mermaid students because I love them. As long as I am here, they will never be the same disaster they were before.”

“…I feel reassured when you say it like that.”

I was sincere.

“After all, humanoid monsters are, um, worrisome creatures….”

“I guess you’re anxious.”

Giovanni asked him.

“Shall I introduce you?”

"yes?"

What?

* * *

“Taran.”

Geo made a sound effect while looking at the two mermaids. Joohyun was shocked.

“No, it’s not Taran.”

“These are my students.”

“I know that, but.”

Aria smiled brightly at Joo-hyun, who seemed to know about the relationship between the mermaids and Giovanni, and turned to her teacher. Her smile was smooth and flawless.

“Now you’re raising humans, aren’t you?”

“You’re raising him, he’s my friend.”

“Teacher, you are very sociable in a strange way.”

“When you praise me like that, this teacher feels embarrassed.”

“It’s so hot, the eternal snow will soon fall.”

At Aria's words, Geo immediately smiled like a gentle priest.

“Is this okay?”

“I like that face.”

Aria nodded and looked back at her younger brother Isser and Geo's new friend Juhyun, who were engaging in a strange battle of wits.

Isser seemed to be contemplating how to deal with this human, while Juhyun seemed busy trying to accept the situation.

“Little ones.”

Aria smiled lightly and greeted him elegantly according to etiquette.

“Hello, gentleman beloved by the sun. I am Aria, a disciple of Father Giovanni of the Batlan family. May the blessings of the earth be with you.”

“…It’s my first time meeting you, too. I am Isser, the second disciple of Priest Giovanni of the Batlan family. May the warmth of the sun reach you.”

Isser, who had been glaring at my sister, came to greet me, albeit a beat late.

Although the fact that the two were humanoid monsters was well known to the researcher of the association, Ju-hyeon had to show the corresponding sincerity. Ju-hyeon reflexively smiled in a social manner.

“Hello, my name is Ju-hyeon, and I have the honor of becoming Sergio’s friend, albeit a humble one. I have been hired as a manager to assist Sergio when he is working as a hunter outside of the portrait.”

And the gazes of the two mermaids and one human turned towards Giovanni.

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

Geo asked in the strange silence.

“Shall we eat?”

So an untimely meal was decided.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (152)

152

Episode 152

Joo-hyun offered to help prepare the meal, but was turned down.

“It would be nice if you stayed here.”

“But I feel embarrassed because I only get what I deserve….”

“If you want to preserve the human race, stay still.”

"…ah."

“That's it.”

Isser nodded and went into the kitchen. Aria gently escorted Joohyun, who was standing there with a bewildered expression, to the sofa and gave him a brief explanation.

“It would be difficult for humans to consume it unless the teacher personally prepared and cooked it.”

“What happens if I eat food that Mr. Geo didn’t prepare and cook…?”

“You will become one with this portrait. I don’t think you would want that, sir.”

“Would it be a problem if I just trimmed it?”

“Unfortunately, you have a very weak body, so it might be difficult for you.”

Aria smiled brightly.

“It seems like you want to do something, so how about clearing the table?”

“…Well, I guess putting down my spoon wouldn’t be a problem for me, right?”

“You don’t have to worry, it won’t change to that extent.”

“Thank you for the advice that became my blood and flesh.”

“No problem.”

Joo-hyun nodded slightly and watched Aria enter the kitchen as well, and internally brushed away the thrill in her heart. Whether it was an incredible coincidence or Geo’s consideration, Joo-hyun had never eaten raw ingredients here before.

'Come to think of it, all the drinks were in the form of tea or juice.'

It must have been a pretty dangerous situation.

‘I let my guard down because the food ingredients found in dungeons are often safe for humans to eat… .’

Perhaps because it was the dungeon of the 'Black Cloak', which was treated as a humanoid monster, Joo-Hyeon judged it based on ordinary dungeons. For him, who did not know about the source and the garden, it was an issue that he could not help but let down his guard.

That's understandable. In modern times, food ingredients from dungeons have become useful food. Because they are cheaper than those from Earth, even the average middle class prefers to eat food ingredients from dungeons. Juhyun was no different.

“Hey there, gentleman.”

“Oh, yes.”

“Would you like to have tea with me while dinner is being prepared?”

Aria came out of the kitchen and said, holding up the tea set on the tray.

“Geo made a new car.”

“If it’s a new car….”

“It’s a tea with small flowers that resemble stars.”

“I have tried it.”

One day, Geo brought a flower, saying, 'I tried growing it in a water bird's nest.' Joo-hyun took the tray from Aria with a happy expression.

“It was a tea with a strong, fragrant aroma.”

“The kitchen staff looked so busy that I just brought it.”

“Is that… okay?”

“I’m not the type of person to get angry if someone steals my food.”

“You stole it.”

Joo-hyun's feelings became strange when he heard the words 'stolen' from the mouth of a humanoid monster. It was surprising that the monster, which was born from a race of mermaids that were sometimes considered a subspecies of humans, had the awareness that it had stolen something.

'It's not something to be concerned about, though.'

Joohyun placed a teacup on the table and made tea.

“I heard from Mr. Geo that it’s a tea made from dried basalt flowers.”

“The basalt flower is a flower that was cultivated in the world where I was born.”

“It was a flower tea so famous that it was cultivated.”

“A single flower is worth its weight in gold.”

“…Gold would have been expensive in that world too, right?”

Joohyun asked with an awkward smile.

“Why was it so expensive?”

“It was too difficult to grow.”

“How can I grow it?”

“These are the ones that choose the people who raise them.”

“The person who raised you…?”

"okay."

Aria smiled faintly.

“Only a few of the priests of the sun were able to raise them to health.”

“A flower that only priests can grow… It certainly sounds appealing.”

“Basram flowers are grown underwater in places where the sun’s energy is strongest.”

“Is it grown underwater? Well, I think it was grown in a water bird’s nest. How unusual.”

“Once upon a time, the basalt flower grew in a pond deep within the Temple of the Sun….”

Aria, who had been dragging out her words, continued speaking a little late.

“They grew up.”

“The innermost part of the Temple of the Sun?”

Joohyun guessed the situation.

“What was the position of the Solar Church at that time?”

“It was the religion that ruled the earth.”

“Then this basram flower must have been a truly precious flower.”

“It was so good that it was considered an elixir that had touched the sun.”

“…….”

Joo-Hyeon, who was pouring tea, stopped.

“…Is it an elixir?”

“Yes, it is the best elixir on earth.”

“Am I pouring tea with elixir right now?”

“Why are you asking such a new thing?”

Aria smiled neatly.

“Everything I’ve eaten so far has probably been of that kind.”

"…oh…."

Choke.

Joohyun also followed the tea.

“I suddenly felt uncomfortable drinking.”

“I don’t think the teacher meant anything by it, so it would be better to just drink it.”

“It’s scary from a mere human’s perspective.”

“Drinking this won’t bring about any major changes to your human identity.”

“If it’s not a big change, will small changes come?”

“You will feel very warm.”

“…Ginseng?”

“It might be similar.”

Aria took a sip of the tea that Juhyun had poured for her.

“It might be more effective than that, though?”

“…The scent is really rich and good….”

“Isn’t it just like the scent of ripe grain?”

The mermaid's lips formed a soft curve.

“Giovanni was the warmest of the priests of the sun.”

“…….”

“The basil flowers he grew had the sweetest and most gentle fragrance in the world.”

“…Could this be….”

“But now, no more basalt flowers can grow in my dungeon.”

Aria, who had been caressing the teacup, continued speaking.

“Before the flower buds are harvested, the slightest cold air will cause them to wilt. Those closest to the sun must constantly watch over them in order for them to grow properly.”

“What a delicate flower.”

“My human teacher was the priest who was the best at making the Basram flower bloom. The Temple of the Sun wanted to somehow bring him back and keep him there. They needed him to sell elixirs.”

“It’s more of a worldly story than I thought.”

“But Giovanni was busy spending his time out in the world healing and caring for people. The temple must have been very worried. Many hated him for not obeying the orders of the sect.”

"hmm…."

Joohyun asked, sipping tea.

“Weren’t there any priests who personally grew flowers?”

“Why wouldn’t it be? Most priests just couldn’t do it.”

“Was it that difficult to cultivate?”

“It wasn’t something that could be done simply by being filled with the energy of the sun.”

"then…?"

“I should have loved you.”

Aria looked at the small flower buds floating inside the transparent teapot, as if they were cute.

“You have to truly love and cherish yourself to grow up.”

“…That’s amazing.”

Joohyun nodded.

“And it takes up a lot of space.”

“That’s why it was difficult to cultivate.”

Soon Aria burst into laughter.

“And yet there were priests who personally cultivated the basram flower. They did not have enough sunlight and did not have enough love for the flower that was just soaking in water, but they eventually managed to cultivate it little by little.”

“How could that be possible?”

“It’s simple. You just need to bring objects that contain the energy of the sun into the cultivation room. The more such objects you have, the more the cultivation room will contain energy similar to the temple of the sun. Let’s see. For example, there would be sacred objects of the sun. Relics of saints, etc..”

“But does that mean that the condition of ‘love’ is met?”

Aria put down her teacup at Joohyun's question.

“It wasn’t met.”

“Then how…?”

“That’s why another method was needed.”

“What method was it?”

“The priest’s body is kept together.”

“…….”

“Because of that, the temple pond was also used as a tomb for saints.”

Joohyun blinked and asked again.

“Huh? The body like that…?”

“Then, I guess the result will be similar to ‘love’.”

“…Why are you like that…?”

“It seems that the devotion to give everything you have is also love.”

Aria laughed.

“That’s why the basalt flower is also called the ‘corpse-eating flower.’”

Wouldn't it be more cost-effective to utilize the corpses of several priests with moderately strong solar energy rather than having them raised by the highest level priests who are full of solar energy?

“It was actually a time when the corpses of Sun Cult priests were secretly sold.”

“…….”

“Of course, it is of lower quality than flowers grown with true love.”

"uh…."

“But even the basalt flowers grown that way were effective.”

Aria continued speaking in a nonchalant tone.

“It was an elixir that was in great demand. It was a sacred relic of the sun and a precious flower that even required the use of priests’ corpses. It also had great practical effects beyond its merely symbolic meaning.”

“…Can you tell me exactly what it does?”

“There are stories that it can even bring the dead back to life, and there have actually been similar cases where it warms the human body. The way to take it is to dry it in the sun, grind it into powder, and mix it in water to drink.”

“At that level, wouldn’t it be better to just get burned…?”

“If that were the case, it wouldn’t have been treated so preciously. There are no side effects. It just has the effect of always keeping your body warm to the ideal temperature, and thanks to that, you don’t get sick as easily.”

“…….”

Joohyun looked down at the teacup in her hand. Then she looked at Aria again.

“Can I drink this?”

“Don’t die.”

“No, I think that’s the problem.”

“Do you want to die?”

“Don’t be so hard on yourself. I want to die as a human.”

“There was a story that it extended lifespan.”

“This flower?”

“Well, there was no talk of making it into a flower tea….”

"ah…."

Joohyun thought, rolling his eyes.

“Will it be less effective if I drink it as tea?”

“Does the sun god himself wish for the dried flowers to have less efficacy?”

“…Just a moment.”

Joohyun asked.

“God of the sun?”

“Oh, I guess you didn’t know.”

“Mr. Giovanni…?”

“Do you see that teddy bear gentleman over there?”

“Huh.”

I saw a teddy bear waving from inside, probably helping with kitchen work.

“Yes, probably my father….”

“He is the sun god of all time.”

"yes?"

“Geo inherited that divinity.”

“…….”

Aria smiled brightly at the sight of him turning pale.

“Isn’t it great? Having a friend who is the sun god? What could be more glorious?”

“It’s certainly glorious, but, no, no matter what… even so, this is….”

Joohyun made a troubled face.

“It’s too much.”

“A friend? Or this car?”

“How can I repay this….”

“You are thinking of repaying God’s gift.”

“Well, you could look at it from that perspective.”

Joohyun blushed as if she was embarrassed by her own thoughts.

“I can’t just receive.”

“…….”

“Mr. Geo is not an ordinary god.”

“…just a little bit….”

Aria, who had erased her smile, let out something similar to a sigh.

“You take after my stupid little brother.”

“…Me?”

“Yeah, just a little bit.”

Aria soon smiled softly again.

“I wish my brother could have received God’s mercy at a good time like you.”

The emotions contained in those words were so complex that Joo-hyun could not possibly understand them.

“Then he would have become a priest of peace, not a monster.”

“…Do you regret it?”

“I know you probably know, but if you regret it, you’re not a monster.”

“I guess so.”

Those who had dreams, foolishness, and daily life left behind could not become monsters.

Joohyun knew that very well.

“…….”

That's why I could foresee the end of these mermaids.

* * *

The prepared dinner was lamb skewers.

“Lamb skewers….”

“Do you hate it?”

“That’s not true.”

Joohyun smiled awkwardly at the meat skewers that looked well seasoned.

“Was this the meat of the golden sheep?”

“You remember well.”

Geo smiled brightly.

“I guess you liked the taste of the lamb ribs I ate last time.”

“That… that’s true. That’s certainly true, but….”

“Is there any problem? I will help you fix it.”

“…….”

Soon Joo-hyun gave up.

“No, it looks delicious.”

“Of course, since I made it.”

"ha ha ha…."

I need to become independent quickly.

'I need to become independent and live a normal life.'

It was the last chance for Dana to be on guard against him. Joohyun was ready to find a home on Earth again.

It was a unique and unexpected way to overcome trauma.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (153)

153

Episode 153

The lamb skewers were really delicious.

“There is no smell at all.”

It was a miracle.

“The lamb ribs I ate last time were really tasty, but….”

“It was a steak.”

“Yes, I like lamb skewers because they have a bit more texture.”

Joo-hyun had no particular interest in gourmet food. Even if he was a second-class citizen of the city, how could he enjoy gourmet food when he was struggling to live from hand to mouth? He had no money to donate, so how could he afford to enjoy luxury?

But even that kind of Hyun had an ecstatic taste and texture that made him want to eat more. I’ve had lamb skewers made with monsters before, but this was my first time having such a full meal.

“I especially like the fact that there is a good mix of oily and lean parts….”

“The oily parts were too fatty and the lean parts were too clean, so I tried mixing them together.”

“Thanks to that, I don’t think I’ll get tired of eating it. It’s amazing.”

“If you keep praising me like that, I have no choice but to keep feeding it.”

“…I’ll try to eat well by adjusting the amount appropriately.”

Surprisingly, the mermaids also seemed to enjoy their meal quite a bit.

“Teacher, did you change the charcoal this time?”

“I looked for a new tree and changed it once.”

“It smells spicy and is more stimulating than last time.”

“Oh, was that too stimulating?”

“I meant it as good.”

The way they chatted about each other was no different from that of a family.

“…….”

Joohyun felt strange for a moment.

‘… much more ordinary and gentle than I had imagined.’

Suddenly, I thought of the orphanage that could be considered Joo-Hyeon's hometown. It was a difficult place because it had a particularly ostracized atmosphere among the orphanages affiliated with the association, but it was also a good environment for uniting hearts.

Even after Joo-hyun became independent from the orphanage, she would often visit and help prepare meals. It wasn’t a very elaborate menu, but the children helped diligently with the preparation, washing the ingredients and setting up the table. And the director… .

'It's vague, but it has a good vibe.'

The gentle breeze carried a moderate amount of warmth. It carried the scent of flowers in the warm sunlight, and the forest surrounding the cabin swayed with a cool sound. Birds were chirping and clouds were drifting by.

Rather than an ideal atmosphere like a painting, it was a situation that could be desired when thinking of the abstract concept of 'ordinary happiness'. I thought that the current scenery was just like a fairy tale.

"…hmm…."

But the reality is that there are humanoid monsters and evil spirits.

'There is a strangeness in which good and evil are not distinguished.'

Coming here made me think about a lot of different things.

“By the way.”

“…Oh, yes.”

“Are you the teacher’s friend?”

At Aria’s question, Isser’s younger brother’s gaze also immediately turned to Juhyun. He didn’t seem to have anything to say, but when their eyes met, his eyes widened. It seemed to be a sign of goodwill.

Aria soon continued speaking.

“How did it come to that?”

“Didn’t you know the basics?”

“I also got to hear a little bit about the story here.”

“Then why….”

“That doesn’t mean I know everything about you, teacher.”

“…….”

“But, I see. I kind of expected it.”

Aria looked back at Geo.

“Because the teacher likes kind and polite people.”

Geo didn't deny it and just smiled coolly.

“Don’t you really want to be friends with people like that?”

“I don’t know if being sociable is good or bad.”

Aria looked at Hyun again.

“Is that what you call a smart fool?”

“…So…you know that word too.”

“Study a little about Korean culture.”

“I don’t know why you had to learn the word ‘hogu’….”

Joo-hyun's face became awkward with embarrassment. Whenever I was pointed out for my excessive pursuit of idealism, I always felt embarrassed.

“Am I that fool?”

“No, that’s not true.”

Geo denied it.

“Isn’t that word referring to people who don’t even get their share and have their things taken away in an undesirable way? I think it’s different from Joo Hyun’s case.”

“You are flattering me.”

“To be honest, I definitely prefer someone like Joo Hyun. Someone with deep roots, but also strong and relaxed enough to share what they have.”

“Uh… that….”

Joohyun's smile became ambiguous.

"…thank you?"

“I just told you what I felt.”

After saying that, Geo quickly turned to Isser with a soft smile.

“The same goes for Chaisol, who was Isser’s partner last time.”

Isser nodded with a calm face.

“He was a good kid.”

“You look like Isser.”

“…….”

Isser soon showed his signature smile.

“That is truly flattery.”

Geo, who saw Joo-hyun blinking at their conversation, explained.

“A student named Chaisol is currently a student at the Seoul branch of the Taeyanggyo.”

“Ah… Are you the child who was kidnapped to the ‘Deep Sea Country’?”

“You know that too.”

“I try to check all the information available from the association as much as possible.”

Joohyun nodded.

“It’s not common for a kidnapped child to return alive and well.”

Aria smiled brightly at his gaze.

“I didn’t mean to harass you. I know that hostages are precious.”

“I heard reports that the treatment was completely different from that of ordinary kidnappers.”

“No matter how much you hate humans, you would never directly harass a human child.”

“Is it because Mr. Giovanni likes children?”

“Because they are young, they are inevitably innocent.”

Aria smiled neatly.

“But even so, they would have been caught up in our doings, right?”

“…I guess so….”

Joohyun showed a trembling reaction.

“So you’re not harassing that kid named Chaisol… Well, kidnapping him would already be a problem in itself… Anyway, you didn’t directly touch him in that context?”

Isser answered that part.

“I hope you were a little scared.”

“Oh, wasn’t that it?”

“We had such strong faith that we wouldn’t harm them.”

“I guess he was a smart kid.”

“He wasn’t even afraid of mermaids.”

“I guess I should say it’s amazing….”

"well."

Isser smiled, somewhat resembling Giovanni.

“I think Joohyun is in a similar situation.”

“…Me?”

“Aren’t you having a meal with monsters like it’s nothing?”

"ah."

No, it's not that I don't know.

“Ah, uh… um….”

Joohyun was embarrassed.

“It could be because it doesn’t feel real.”

“It doesn’t seem like that at all.”

“Isn’t it a little strange that you’re suddenly scared after coming all this way?”

“It was said that such an incomprehensible shamelessness was similar.”

“If you’re going to do it, please say it proudly.”

“If you wish, I will do so.”

Isser nodded calmly and looked at Geo.

“Do you plan to continue collecting from here?”

“I have never harvested anything.”

Joohyun expressed his doubts at those words.

“Wasn’t it Mr. Argio who picked me up?”

“I literally just invited them, I don’t think I ever picked them up.”

“Oh… I see.”

It seems that showing up all of a sudden, taking him into the house, feeding him, putting him to bed, and talking to him wasn't really 'taking it in'.

As was often the case, Joo-hyun wondered how Geo's mental encyclopedia was organized.

'I thought it was roughly about picking up a poor abandoned dog, but I guess that wasn't the case.'

Regardless of what Joo-hyun thought or not, Geo continued speaking.

“I’m okay with Joohyun continuing to live here.”

“Oh no?”

Joo-hyun quickly expressed her refusal with her characteristically social smile.

“I can’t be bothered by such trouble. All the food and lodging you’ve given me so far is more than enough for me. I was thinking of finding another home soon.”

“Do you need to buy a new house?”

“I originally lived in a dormitory near the research institute. I think research institute life doesn’t suit me, so I’m going to submit my resignation, but I guess I'll have to find a separate place to live."

Geo stared at Joohyun intently. He felt some childish pressure.

"She's my secretary…."

"……."

"Do you live far away?"

"…Usually everyone is like that…."

Even if it is a relationship between a hunter and a manager, it is extremely rare for them to live together.

"I also need time to be trained in my duties as a manager."

"Our door is always open."

"It seems too open, so please close it a little…."

"What did you say?"

"The weather is really nice today."

The series of works known to the world as the 'Black Cloak' were all like the entrance to a dungeon. It was obvious that many people would die because the owner was so easily accepting of external elements.

However, even though he was a strong man who resembled a pine tree, he couldn't ask the dungeon owner to close the entrance. The mermaids' gazes were too harsh in the first place. He didn't want to die like this.

"Okay, let's go out for now…."

So Joohyun changed the subject of conversation back to her future plans.

“Once I get a decent house, I plan to build a tomb.”

“If it’s a grave, it must belong to a family that was involved in a recent incident.”

“Yes, I was so out of it that I didn’t even think about holding a funeral.”

Since we were planning to die together, how could we possibly think about a funeral?

But the current Joo-Hyeon was drawing a picture of the future, and was thinking of a way to overcome and move forward. The first step toward that was to apologize to the family and friends who had been involved in her work.

“I’m going to start with that.”

Geo asked him.

“Don’t you need my help?”

“Because it is my responsibility that I must bear.”

“No, but you might need my help….”

“Please refrain from being overly generous.”

“I can do it.”

“Even if I did less well, it would have been burdensome.”

“I see.”

Isser, who was looking at the two, wiggled his fingers, then clenched them tightly.

“…….”

“Isser.”

“…Yes, Sister.”

“Stop thinking nonsense and just bring the tea.”

“I will do that.”

Juhyun opened his eyes wide and blinked at the sight of Isser naturally running errands for his sister.

“…Absurd thoughts? Did I perhaps incur that hatred? Did I almost die?”

“It’s not like I’m completely fearless when I see things like this.”

Aria continued, cupping my cheek.

“It’s a common jealousy, so don’t be afraid.”

Aria, who had said that, immediately looked back at Geo.

“Your teacher’s friend is building a grave. Will you help him?”

“If there is anything I can help you with, I should help you.”

Before Joohyun could say anything to reject him, Geo looked at him.

“How do people on Earth hold funerals these days?”

“Usually we cremate, but if there is no body… we burn the remains and preserve them.”

“It seems that Joo-Hyeon’s family and friends are also missing the body.”

“I guess I was late because of the circumstances.”

“Then I….”

Just as Geo was about to suggest something, Isser brought the tea.

“I brought it because there were basalt flowers.”

“It’s been a while, hasn’t it?”

“Yes, it’s been a really long time.”

“I recently made these flowers bloom myself.”

“Basram must be grown underwater. Where did you grow it?”

“In the nests of the water birds over there.”

Isser, who had been sharing tea with him, answered a beat late.

“…Ah, so it can be used that way too.”

“I was helped by the fact that there were children who loved flowers.”

“The basil flowers smell really good, so I’m sure you’ll be satisfied.”

“The lake I saw on my way here looked somehow golden.”

Joohyun asked Isser's words.

“Is there a special reason why it is golden?”

“When the teacher’s water birds are happy, their nests shine golden.”

"aha…."

Joo-Hyeon's gaze fell on Honey, the water bird sitting on Geo's shoulder.

“Then what about that guy?”

“Honey drank Lulupu’s juice and changed color.”

“Kungkur.”

Geo added an explanation.

“It’s a flower that grows in the spring of the forest.”

“Just hearing it makes me feel uneasy.”

“It smells seriously good.”

"…okay!"

I didn't mean to say it was 'ominous' in that sense, though.

“I wonder what kind of scent it is.”

“If you need perfume, I can make it for you.”

“Please refrain from being kind.”

Joohyun continued speaking.

“Anyway, I’ll prepare and try to find a house soon.”

“I think submitting your resignation letter through Mr. Yoo Seong-un would be a good idea.”

“I will keep that in mind. Thank you for your advice in so many ways.”

Since the head of the collector's guild said he would personally step forward, the resignation letter would be dealt with cleanly.

'But surely, to manage the identity of Sergio Hunter… the accommodations need to be close?'

Joo-Hyeon was thinking about asking that part directly to the meteor hunter.

* * *

And a few days later.

“…My accommodation has already been found?”

“…I’m sorry. I tried really hard to stop you….”

“Oh, no. There’s nothing to be sorry about.”

Joo-Hyeon waved her hand at Yoo Seong-Un's haggard smile.

“I appreciate you looking into it for me. I was already wondering what kind of accommodation I should look into to manage Sergio Hunter.”

“I would really appreciate it if you would look at it that way.”

“Besides, didn’t you say that the accommodation expenses would be paid by the collector? If you look at it that way, I actually received an excessive benefit. I was just taken aback by the sudden decision.”

“…….”

"…excuse me…."

Ju-hyeon, who sensed something of a crisis in Yoo Seong-un's silence, asked cautiously.

“So where is your accommodation?”

“It’s my next door neighbor.”

"yes?"

"yes."

"why?"

Really, why?

“…….”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un averted his eyes.

It was the crime of having a notorious collector as the guild leader.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (154)

154

Episode 154

Visabal wanted the three of them to be housemates.

“Three?”

“Yes, three.”

“Me, Hunter Yoo Seong-un, and really….”

“That is correct.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“Including Geo.”

“…….”

He saw Joo-hyun's lips tighten as he was packing his things. Yoo Seong-woon was certain that the words he swallowed were either 'Are you in your right mind?' or 'You're clearly crazy.'

However, there was no way that a powerless slave of capitalism could stand up to his superior. Rather than making a promise to get him out of this madness, Yoo Seong-woon offered an apology that suggested resignation.

“I am ashamed to have gotten caught up in the greed of our guild leader.”

“No, I’m sure there must be a greater meaning that I don’t know about.”

Joo-hyun asked with a bright smile, contrary to my feelings.

“Can you tell me why you made that choice?”

“To put it simply, I hope that ‘Portrait of Geo’ will be able to color people’s lives more quickly.”

“Do you want Mr. Geo to become immersed in the lives of humans?”

Rustle.

Joo-hyun's smile becomes subtle as she opens the cardboard box containing her moving belongings.

“…I don’t dare to doubt this, but is it possible?”

“First of all, since Geo’s will is strong, it is not completely impossible.”

“It’s true that he is a person who is truly excellent at imitating humans….”

“They also continue to claim themselves as human.”

“It turns out you weren’t just making claims to me.”

Joohyun laughed in vain.

“They say he’s a human with the characteristics of a portrait.”

“That’s one of the things Geo often says.”

Yoo Seong-un also understood Joo-hyun's absurdity.

“With such a wide diversity of human beings, how could a portrait not fit in there?”

I had no intention of refuting Geo's claim in the first place, but even if I did, he wouldn't listen.

“No matter how great the rank, how great the power, how much the body and personality change, Geo regards it as simply a characteristic.”

“It seemed like that.”

“I’m glad you understand. However, I judge that because of that, Geo will try to mix in with humans even more, and we at the collection will be unable to stop that.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled his characteristically innocent smile.

“Will this seem like negligence?”

“…Honestly, a little bit.”

Joohyun gently opened her eyes.

“It was much more thorough when I was at the association’s research institute.”

“Considering the peace of the Earth and mankind, such thorough defense is necessary.”

“But the motto of a collector is ‘love the art,’ right?”

“Yes, because of that, we don’t have the level of security system that Joo-Hyeon is expecting.”

“I understand that you won’t just give up on it. That’s just the way it is for collectors.”

“As you said, the collection agency is more focused on responding to accidents after they occur. It’s different from the association’s approach, which is to nip accidents in the bud.”

Joo-hyun nodded at Yoo Seong-woon's words.

“I will try to get used to it.”

Although he wasn't hired as a member of the collection department, since Geo was treated as a member of the collection department, Joo-hyun had to be considered to be half-in-the-middle there. He had to adapt as quickly as possible.

“So that’s why you thought of something like a housemate? Since there’s no way to stop ‘Geo’s Portrait’ from living in human society anyway?”

“It’s one of the guild leader’s intentions. As I told you before, Geo still doesn’t know much about human society, and he needs to adapt more to function as ‘Sergio’.”

“So, I guess they’re trying to make them live with other humans and learn how to deal with each other more naturally, and learn basic human common sense. Yes, I understand.”

Joo-Hyeon's smile, which had been softly speaking, suddenly became awkward.

“But as you just said… that was one of your intentions?”

“The biggest goal is to appreciate the ‘Portrait of Geo’ living with humans.”

“This is the leader of the Visabal Guild.”

“Surprisingly, this is reality, this is a collector.”

“I always knew you were an extraordinary person, but you are really bold.”

“Thank you for your kind words.”

Yoo Seong-woon nodded with sympathy and empathy. It was because he was touched by Joo-hyun’s efforts and sincerity to at least try to live in society even in this situation.

“That’s not to say that you want to try something like that right away, so you ended up being assigned to live next door to me. You probably also want to become closer to me, the curator in charge of ‘Portrait of Geo.’”

“Thank you for giving me such a comfortable place to stay, I am just grateful.”

“As I said before, the name on the accommodation is Joo-hyun, but all the expenses for the accommodation will be covered by the collection agency. So please don’t be too burdened and try to adjust to the current situation for now. Thank you.”

“I’m also worried about how to manage ‘Mr. Sergio’….”

“You can receive manager training at our collection office. However, you do not have to worry about becoming a collection office employee. Since this is your first time doing this job, we will teach you the basics step by step.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had already finished listing the necessary items, smiled lightly.

“Well, now that we’re neighbors, it’ll get easier as time goes by.”

“I’ll try to adapt to that part too….”

“I think we’ll naturally become close if we keep running into each other here and there over issues related to Geo.”

“Then I couldn’t ask for anything more.”

“Oh, and here’s a little advice.”

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“You said you became Geo’s pen pal?”

“That’s how it turned out for now….”

“Then, there will be rare times when you will receive a letter from Geo.”

“We were really pen pals.”

“Don’t be too surprised, he appears without a sound.”

He said, pointing to himself.

“I am pen pal number one, so I know this part well. A black letter that quietly appears in an empty house will send a shiver down your spine. Even when you check the letter, there is no readable text.”

“Then is there any point in sending a letter?”

“I see it as a kind of pager. I think the text was distorted in the process of the frame surrounding ‘Portrait of Geo’ going through some kind of filtering. It’s an inevitable part because it’s being delivered in a human-like manner.”

“Well, if that were to be transmitted live, most people would be greatly affected.”

“The traces of that kind of attitude remain, and just reading the letter itself makes my heart skip a beat. Geo continues to worry about the problem of not being able to read the contents. I think that problem will be solved someday if the guy’s human imitation gets better.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had said that, looked at Joo-hyun as if he felt sorry for her.

“I’m especially worried about Joohyun since she’s not awakened.”

“…Is the letter really that scary? So much so that your safety depends on whether you wake up or not?”

“Of course, since you have been working at the association’s research institute, you will adapt quickly.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently again.

“Unrealistic tragedies happen often there too.”

“So is Mr. Geo’s letter something that should be taken with such caution?”

“To put it simply, I think you can think of it as a ghost story.”

“Oh, it’s a ghost story….”

“That is also the identity of the ‘Black Cloak’.”

“I’ve heard similar stories often.”

You could call it a kind of urban legend. People say that the Black Cloak is a real-life ghost story that you can encounter if you're lucky or unlucky.

“Is there anything else I should know?”

“You can figure out the rest by hanging out with Geo.”

Yoo Seong-un asked next.

“By the way, do you know anything about gardens?”

“…Well, I don’t think you’re talking about a garden with flowers or trees.”

“There is knowledge that only a few people in the association know.”

“Can I know that?”

“Even if you don’t like it, you have to know it now.”

“It seems that that knowledge is closely related to ‘Portrait of Geo’.”

“I will inform you about that part later.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled brightly.

“I will send you the information in advance, so please read it slowly.”

“I am confident in my theoretical studies. I will do my best to achieve the results you expect.”

“I hate to say this, but we are now on the same boat, Geo.”

He spoke as if he was saying a good deed.

“I want to remain human.”

“…….”

Joohyun smiled with her eyes wide open.

"…yes."

That was a really creepy thing to say, he thought.

* * *

Under the care of the collector, Joo-Hyeon successfully completed the move.

“The house is too big.”

Joohyun muttered.

“Why is this a house?”

I only wanted to use a tenth of this.

Joo-hyun knew very well what kind of place this apartment was. It was one of the most prestigious apartments in Seoul, where most of the first-class citizens, including top-class hunters and famous celebrities, lived.

‘I don’t think there’s much to worry about in terms of security…’

As a second-class citizen with nothing special to offer, I couldn't help but feel very uncomfortable.

I've never wanted a place that didn't fit this theme. A comfortable room, a kitchen, and a bathroom would be enough.

'Is this something I need to adapt to?'

I was in a difficult situation.

"…hmm…."

Joohyun looked around.

Although the collector had taken great care to provide all sorts of decorative items, such as picture frames and ceramics, in addition to the essential items, they were hung in a sophisticated manner, but it still felt like I was in someone else's home.

'I'd rather stay at Mr. Geo's cabin.'

Joo-hyun, who thought like that, felt a chill for a moment.

“…….”

Am I crazy?

'I have to be careful not to have strange thoughts.'

There was an unwritten rule when dealing with friends and gods: if gods bestow mercy and grace, you should not take it for granted or expect to receive it again.

'Have I been spending too much energy worrying about my family's graves lately?'

Joohyun's thoughts turned to a realistic topic.

“…First, let’s look for some relics….”

Because of this, he planned to create a grave for his deceased family and friends.

'There are probably still some left at the orphanage.'

Even though it was in Seoul, his orphanage was located in a rather remote place. Because it was a damp place with no other use, the building itself was left intact, with only the corpses that were in danger of being turned into monsters being cleared away.

'I haven't been able to look around because I've been so out of it, but I don't think the government cleaned it up that thoroughly, so there should be plenty of things worth keeping as keepsakes. Let's start by collecting them.'

But it was bittersweet.

“…….”

There isn't even a corpse in the tomb I'm making.

“…Haaah….”

If you had come a little sooner, you could have gotten it before they disposed of the body.

'I'm too late.'

Although he didn't want to waste his emotions on unnecessary self-reproach, he couldn't help but feel guilty that it was his fault. The fact that there was no owner on the gravestone made Joo-hyun feel even more bitter.

It was while I was sitting on the bed with my head down that I had been like that for a long time.

"meow."

“…….”

"meow."

“……?”

The sound of a cat crying.

"meow."

But I won.

"meow."

“…….”

Do cats usually cry like that?

‘… such a typical crying sound… .’

My stomach was churning.

Joohyun got up from her seat, rubbing her slightly cool neck.

His residence is on the 46th floor. The ceiling height is one level higher than that of a typical apartment, and it is structured so that stray cats cannot enter. Security is also excellent, to the point that not even a single monster can enter.

“…….”

Nevertheless, Joo-Hyeon moved his body without hesitation.

"meow."

"…ah…."

"meow."

"also."

Joohyun said, looking out the veranda window.

“It was you.”

The jewel cat hiding in the darkness and holding a black letter in its mouth had changed to the same color as the night sky, unlike what was seen in the cabin.

Was it some kind of protective coloration, or was there another reason? Before such a silly thought could even pass, I saw the letter in his mouth.

“Did you bring the letter?”

"meow."

“We just happened to be talking about that today.”

Geo's anti-cat, Dana, occasionally came closer to the window, her body shining softly like a cluster of stars.

“…Do you want to come in?”

As Joo-hyun opened the window, Dana came into the room with a brisk pace. Dana, who was as big as a Maine Coon, sat down in front of Joo-hyun and held out the letter to him as if telling him to take it from her mouth.

Dana blinked as he received the letter. This child resembled the night sky containing the Milky Way.

“…….”

“…….”

In the dark shadows that seemed to have absorbed even the surrounding light, the jewel cat circled around Joo-hyun for some reason and then went out to the veranda again. Then it quickly disappeared into the darkness.

Joo-hyun, who had been looking out the wide open veranda window, soon opened the letter.

“…I still don’t know what it’s about.”

But the seemingly light weight, the rustling sound of dry grass, the scent of the forest... seemed to tell me who the owner of this letter was.

Joo-hyun, who had been staring blankly at the distorted text, let out a weak exclamation.

"ah."

Come to think of it.

“How could you cry with a letter in your mouth?”

It was a fact that I had not thought of when I saw Dana in front of me.

Joo-hyun suddenly thought that it was like a piece of a ghost story.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (155)

155

Episode 155

“How is it?”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders at Bisabal's question.

“As expected.”

“I know what you expected.”

“I trust the guild leader’s eyes.”

Bisabyeol let out his signature smile at Yoo Seong-un's trust.

“I guess the country doesn’t trust people?”

“I knew full well that you had no conscience.”

“How can you be this cruel?”

“Please, I’m tired.”

“Then I should finish it quickly.”

Visabal lightly tapped the desk with his ringed hand.

“I knew you weren’t the type of person to be easily seduced.”

It was a story about Joohyun.

“Even if there is an easy way out, if I think it is an unfair advantage, I don’t take it.”

“He seems to have a slightly foolish personality. But he seems to have his own beliefs.”

“In that respect, should I say that he has a side similar to that of a scholar from the ancient Joseon Dynasty?”

“…Can I take that as a compliment to Mr. Joo-Hyeon?”

“That’s your own opinion. I was talking about the old-fashioned personality.”

“Well, I guess Geo would like it if he had that kind of personality.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“He didn’t think of using Geo to get his share.”

“I am not the kind of person who would allow myself to be numb to such petty greed.”

“I don’t think that something called greed is particularly trivial.”

That's what human greed is.

This sense of shame was something that was created consciously, not something that was born as an instinct. If a great mystery, of all things, declared that it would be one's 'friend', it was normal to expect something.

Unlike shame, greed is an instinct.

“Geo is in a strong position in many ways. Even ‘Mr. Sergio’ has more power and is in a higher position than Joohyun. Geo uses rare elixirs that would make humans turn red in the eyes just to prepare meals… Well, it’s extravagant.”

Then you could think like this.

“Mr. Joo-hyun could have expected it. What is so precious to me is as common as the grass on the roadside to Shin-bi, so I want to have it without any effort. It is not burdensome to either of us to take a small rock that is scattered in someone else’s yard.”

Even Joo-hyun wasn't that wealthy. Even if you're born without any financial greed, when your body is tired and life is tough, you'll eventually develop a minimal amount of greed out of necessity.

“I worked as a researcher for the association for a long time, but maybe because of the label of being from an orphanage or because of other things, I only stayed at the position of deputy. My promotion was delayed for quite some time.”

“What little I had, I used to support orphanages or donate it.”

“But judging by the reactions, it seems like there is almost no financial greed to begin with. They think it is a useful tool, but they are not the target of greed. They are rare honest people.”

Yoo Seong-un crossed his arms.

“Geodo, the guild leader also described Joo-hyun as a hero. Considering that, it is understandable that he has little instinctive greed for money.”

A hero's nature is something that is born with instinct.

“But still.”

What Joo-Hyeon wanted, what he desperately wanted, was clear.

“He may not be greedy for material wealth, but he has desires as a human being. I heard that he has a very firm goal of making the world peaceful.”

“That in itself could be considered extremely greedy. It’s just that the direction is not toward his own comfort, but from an objective standpoint, Joo-Hyeon’s greed is flowing in an altruistic direction.”

“Yes, it is correct to call it altruistic desire. If you call it selfishness to want to change something other than yourself as you wish, then it could be selfish desire.”

“That’s why I don’t like Joo Hyun very much. Right now, we’re just awkward friends who just started dating, so I’m just trying to save face, but if we get closer, how much will Joo Hyun try to manipulate Sergio for my greed?”

“I don’t think Geo would be easily defeated. It would be more correct to say that Geo would show mercy and favor to a mere human. That would also be something that Geo would like… To be honest, I’m not worried about that part.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“In the first place, Geo is not a being that humans should worry about.”

“Ah, my work….”

“Before it is a work of art, it is the source, Guild Leader. Please let it go.”

Anyway, that's the collector's obsession.

“Mr. Joo Hyun would never exploit Geo for his own gain. Not only would that be impossible, but there’s almost nothing Mr. Joo Hyun could expect from Geo.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled his characteristic smile.

“Of course, that doesn’t mean there aren’t any at all.”

“I will secretly hope that you will show mercy to the souls of the dead.”

“Rather than that, I think it’s just that we recognized the possibility.”

“The power over life and death is an area that any god can intervene in.”

“For Joo-Hyeon, who recently lost his family and friends, this is something he cannot help but think about.”

Although he is introduced as an evil god, Geo seems like a sufficiently merciful being, and if he is a god, he naturally has the power to deal with dead souls.

While he was enjoying the portrait in its frame, Ju-hyeon must have thought, “How wonderful it would be if such a merciful divinity could comfort my poor family and friends.”

“Even if he thinks that such a tragedy was caused by himself, the debt that Joo Hyun feels towards the victims must be great.”

“I think you must have felt the need to atone and repay your debt somehow, but it seems like Joo-hyun didn’t choose Geo, which would have been the easiest way to do it.”

“It seemed like he thought he had to take full responsibility for what he had done. Even though Geo was a great strong man with great power….”

“I bet you thought you shouldn’t accept help from Sergio, who is also your new friend.”

The visa was empty.

“How can a mere human repay the debt to the dead? All the living can do for their dead friends is to constantly remember and reflect on their deaths and their own sins.”

“Isn’t that the mindset to at least try that?”

“Perhaps you vaguely believe that you can repay your debt with just that kind of atonement and agony. Of course, you might be able to repay your debt to your dead family that way, but why go through such a thorny path?”

His lips twisted as if he had seen something utterly stupid and unpleasant.

“It’s all because Joohyun’s field of vision is so narrow.”

“For someone with such narrow vision, his cause is quite grand.”

“He has no humanity.”

“You could say that, but….”

“You’re just an idiot who doesn’t know how to rely on others.”

“No, a little.”

Yoo Seong-un appeased my guild leader.

“But he’s Geo’s new friend. Please be kind to him.”

“As I get older, the only thing that increases is my stubbornness.”

The smiling Visabal continued speaking.

“It’s not that I don’t have a good head on my shoulders. It’s not that I don’t know the usefulness of connections. Well, I guess it’s more accurate to say I’m rather clever. I know how to do all the calculations, but I castrate my worldly desires as if I were a monk and only pursue the cause.”

“Isn’t this a good direction for humanity?”

“I always say that I am not interested in the nature of humanity and its interests. What matters is the effect it will have on me and my collection. As long as Juhyun has a firm belief, he is a bastard who will ruin my work without any problem."

The visa holder grumbled.

"It's true that the world would be a more peaceful place if there were more people like that… but that would be too boring."

"How can you say such words of human evil so casually?"

"Mr. Joo-hyun is not someone who does not know greed. When he practices the cause he has cherished, he is more greedy than anyone else. He is greedy. He does not care at all about what others criticize him or what they think of him, and he is busy moving forward."

The visage twisted his lips.

"When people like this cause accidents, they get in big trouble."

"I'm certainly worried about that part, but didn't Geo stop it?"

"Anyway, I admit that he is not a person who would be of much harm to our Sergio."

Visabal let out a rare sigh of annoyance.

"It will only harm my feelings."

"You really hate it."

"I like my guild members."

"Yeah, well…."

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly. It wasn't a fake smile, as it was true that he truly respected his superior.

“We like it too, Guild Leader.”

“I love the affection you show me every now and then, like soybeans sprouting in a drought.”

“Oh really.”

Yoo Seong-un was disgusted, as even the awkward smile he had had disappeared.

“That’s why we can’t say nice things to you.”

“I like that kind of arrogance… Try being more shameless. Ah, it’s thrilling.”

"eww."

“Anyway, I’m glad that it’s not much different from what I expected.”

The visa holder smiled neatly.

“And the great mystery loves such poor heroes.”

“Poor hero….”

“They just keep churning out stories that are close to providence.”

His bright yellow eyes narrowed.

“Maybe Geo will also take care of Joohyun in that way.”

“If things go according to plan, I’ll be giving you a gift sooner or later, but wouldn’t it be better for me to prepare in advance?”

“Since it’s a gift from Sergio, I know it might be a little noisy. I’m not the type of person who doesn’t know how the world sees me.”

“Since there is nothing to be afraid of, it is time for Geo to start exploring the human world in earnest. I will let the press know in advance.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, please prepare to go out and do it yourself. Mr. Sergio will probably not cause a disaster because they are both concerned about their reputations.”

“Mysterious favors sometimes seem like disasters…. What kind of affection do you expect Geo to show exactly?”

“That’s obvious.”

Visabal laughed as if he was watching his grandson's antics.

“It will make humans more human.”

“…Is this the end or the beginning?”

“I think it’s both.”

“Geo always liked humans.”

His favor was fair to all mankind.

“Well, there were some people I didn’t like, but they were classified as ‘not human’….”

A meteor shower swept across my neck.

“For Geo, death is just one of the states that humans can be in. Right?”

“Curator Yoo Seong-un is right.”

“Then Geo, who shows favor to all humans equally, will always maintain the same attitude.”

“I’m thinking about it carefully.”

“In the end, Geo is for both living and dead humans….”

The hand that had been sweeping his neck came down. The tip of his finger trembled with an unknown emotion.

“I will treat you kindly.”

It is a rule for Geo to give gifts to humans.

“I understood what I had to do.”

“I look forward to Curator Yoo Seong-un’s response.”

“I hope you enjoy it.”

Such great favors have often struck men with fear.

And it was the gardener's job to bring the fear from its source down to the everyday.

* * *

“I want to give you a gift.”

"yes?"

“Is that rude?”

"uh…."

Joo-Hyeon blinked at the portrait that suddenly appeared at the orphanage.

“…….”

Let's calm down.

'I can do it.'

Joohyun smiled brightly.

“…I see! What gift exactly are you talking about?”

“I’m sorry, I guess I was a little too hasty.”

“Oh, no. I was a little surprised, but I wasn’t offended.”

I just felt a fear that bordered on life-threatening.

'I guess you don't realize how scary you look.'

Late at night, close to midnight. A fire scene in a damp, uninhabited area. A smoky, abandoned building with soot and traces of dead people. Joo-hyun was searching for the relics left behind at the orphanage.

A portrait appeared while I was looking around the dark orphanage, leaning on a flashlight. It appeared among the cute drawings of children and spoke to me with a face covered in black paint.

'I want to give you a gift.'

Joo-hyun was proud of herself for not screaming. This was an achievement worth praising herself for.

“I’m asking again… what does it mean to be a gift?”

He didn't ask the stupid question of how he knew where he was. How could it be difficult for a giant mystery the size of a black cloak to figure out the location of a mere human? Instead, Joo-hyun asked for an interpretation of the current situation.

“As far as I know, the Black Cloak is supposed to be returned only if something is received.”

“It is only natural to give back what you have received.”

“I also know that he occasionally appears and gives gifts to passersby.”

“It was simply a thank you for interacting with me.”

Joo-Hyeon nodded without realizing it at the words in the portrait.

'It must be a big deal that requires a reward.'

Usually, the Black Cloak was known to appear in places where there were few people and give gifts to those who did good deeds. How shocking would it have been if someone who did good deeds encountered a humanoid monster?

If it was a reward to appease those people, then such a gift would be understandable. After all, it also meant that it was a 1:1 rule that showed the ‘Portrait of Geo’.

“……?”

Joohyun tilted his head.

“But I didn’t give anything to Mr. Geo.”

“Thank you for being my friend.”

“I see.”

It might be some kind of collecting desire.

Was that why he wanted to have a 'human friend'? Just when he was thinking that Shinbi's way of thinking was difficult to understand, the portrait, whose eyes were hidden by paint and could not be seen, continued speaking.

“More than anything, I wanted to give a gift to a good person like Joohyun.”

“Well, well… Have you ever done a good deed in front of Mr. Geo?”

“But it seems like there are many people who have been helped by Joohyun's actions during that time."

"Is that a reason for you to give me a gift?"

"It is my selfishness to want to repay the joy you have given me."

"……."

"So I wanted to ask for permission."

Only after some time had passed did Joohyun ask back.

"…delight?"

"Yes, that's right."

"It's joy."

Joohyun smiled awkwardly.

"I'm glad that what I've done has brought you joy."

It was a really strange feeling.

"It's funny, I feel like I've felt similar feelings for you before."

It may sound like nonsense, but the words of the black cloak brought Joo-hyun a warm sense of comfort. He also felt gratitude that such a huge being had acknowledged his efforts.

It almost sounds like you're saying I wasn't wrong, and that you're grateful… .

"under…."

I want to be rewarded.

'What kind of ungrateful thought is this? Not knowing my place, expecting compensation for things I did out of my own free will… .'

For some reason, I felt so tired that I just wanted to sleep, so I let out a sigh that was disguised as a smile.

I felt a sense of helplessness that was hard to explain, so I pressed my forehead hard to avoid making Joohyun look stupid.

“Then what gift would you like to give me? I think this is already the third time you’ve asked me this question.”

“Oh, I apologize for my long story.”

The portrait continued in its characteristically emotionless tone.

“I can give you good medicine, Mr. Ju-hyeon. I can treat you to a delicious meal, draw you the jewel you want, and just chat with you.”

At that moment, a cat sneaked into the portrait.

“It seems like Dana is interested in Joohyun.”

“…It is an honor.”

“The things I just told you are gifts I can give you simply because we are friends.”

“That is also an honor.”

“So, can you tell me what gift you would like?”

The portrait said.

“So that my gift may be worth it.”

“…….”

Joohyun, who had been silent for a long time, soon opened his mouth.

"…well."

Unfortunately, he had nothing to wish for. Perhaps he should have. And he had to.

If I want to remain myself, if I want to remain a mere human being who knows my subject.

“Just calling me your friend… is quite an honor.”

“I know that Mr. Joo-Hyeon is a person who was born without worldly desires.”

“What I want most right now is atonement to my family and friends….”

“I think that’s something you feel you have to do entirely on your own.”

“Shouldn’t that be so?”

“There is no right thing.”

The portrait whispered in a low voice.

“There is only what you think is right.”

It was quite similar to the temptation of the devil.

“…Do you want me to ask for your help?”

“I want to see things from a new perspective.”

“I want to apologize to my family and friends.”

I had to do it.

“But I don’t want to escape from this guilt.”

“Because I think I can atone only if I am tied down by those feelings.”

“Once I overcome this, I will forget my mistakes.”

“You don’t forget, you’re not the kind of person who can.”

“If you don’t reflect, how are you any different from an animal?”

“Even beasts are beasts.”

The portrait's voice cracked lazily.

“You are not an animal.”

“…….”

“What do you truly wish for?”

"…I am…."

“Throw away empty words like atonement.”

“Just, I.”

Joo-Hyeon spoke from the ashes left behind by his family.

“I hope they are comfortable even after death.”

That was his honest desire.

“I don’t mind living my whole life with their deaths, I just hope they don’t get sick.”

“Do you want to lie down in the happiest and warmest place?”

“I want that. I’m not perfect, and I’m not an adult, but I’m just an ordinary person….”

“Still, I hope they are safe because they are Joo-Hyeon’s family and friends.”

“I know it’s forced. I also know it’s selfish thinking.”

Joohyun, who had been hesitating, continued speaking.

“But you are an evil spirit.”

“Yeah, that’s right.”

“Will you respond to my selfishness?”

“Well done.”

The portrait's lips were split with joy.

“Do I need to prepare myself mentally?”

“A little bit.”

“Okay, I’ll send you a gift soon.”

“What should I do?”

“I guess you don’t know the meaning of a gift?”

A sound like the laughter of a beast was heard.

“Just enjoy it, my friend.”

I don't know if it's because of my mood.

“…….”

Was it like that originally?

The eyes of the jewel cat in the portrait were particularly bright like the moon.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (156)

156

Episode 156

The incident started with a teddy bear.

“Kyuu.”

“Why are you doing that?”

“Kuuu, kuu….”

“You’re looking for Lulupu’s juice?”

At that time, Geo was thinking hard about what to do with his friend's money.

His new friend, Joo-hyun, was a rare, mature and capable person, and Geo was thinking of taming him with delicious food, a comfortable bed, and refreshing events.

As a result, there were many situations where I had packed up a lot of things… .

“I have just what you’re looking for.”

There was also some Lulupu juice.

“Huh?”

“Yes, because it’s good to use as perfume.”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

“Surely that’s a good idea?”

It didn't have much of a taste, but it smelled really good, and when bottled, it was beautiful and had ornamental value in itself. If you're looking for a good perfume, make it in advance with the intention of giving it as a gift.

“But how can Father find the juice of Lulupu?”

“Kuuu….”

“Aha, you’re giving that tasteless thing to Dana?”

Are you okay?

“…….”

Giovanni asked with a serious face.

“…You won’t get a stomachache, right?”

“Kukuku.”

“Forcing someone to eat something that doesn’t taste good…?”

"dream."

“Aha, then that’s fine.”

“Kyuu.”

The teddy bear clapped its hands on the cotton floor. It was fluffy just to look at. Geo, who saw his family's joy as his own, looked at him with pleasure and asked.

“It is not a problem to give juice, but why did you intend to give it to Dana? Was it Dana’s request?”

"dream!"

“I don’t know why that topic suddenly came up, but yes, I was just thinking about what gift to give to Joohyun.”

The previous god of the sun pointed out the current situation where Geo was thinking about what gift to give to his new friend, Juhyun. When Geo agreed, the teddy bear that smelled of warm sunshine continued to speak.

“Let’s help with Joohyun’s funeral.”

“Kyuu.”

“Surely you’re not trying to kill Joo-Hyeon yourself.”

"dream…!?"

“Then it must be the funeral of friends and family….”

Geo nodded.

“I’ve thought about that too. Joo-hyun has recently lost his family and friends and has been feeling a lot of guilt, and he’s just become independent so he’s thinking about making graves for them.”

This was a very important task for Joo-hyun. Not only could it relieve some of the guilt and sense of duty that Joo-hyun was feeling, but it was also a responsibility that would become the starting point for whatever he did in the future.

“I have inherited the divinity of my father who sowed and harvested life, so it will not be a problem for me to help my friend in that regard.”

“Kukukuu?”

“Yes, I would like to help with Joohyun’s funeral, as you said. I know for sure that it would be a pretty nice gift, but….”

Geo, who prides himself on having both good looks and common sense, became serious.

“I’m worried that it might be too rude.”

"dream…?"

“Isn’t it rude to interfere in other people’s troubles?”

It was a reasonable statement. There is always a line between humans, and this tragedy related to Joo-hyun’s guilt was too personal for a complete stranger like Geo to handle.

But God doesn't know that.

“…Kkuu??”

The teddy bear looked up at Geo with eyes that said, 'Why? Why is it rude to get involved in a human's death? It's strange, when I used to do that, humans really liked it...'

"hmm."

That could be the case.

'Because my father has never lived among humans.'

Geo found the right answer.

“That is a privilege that my father was able to enjoy thanks to the new person.”

“Huh??”

“Aha, now that I think about it, I’m a god too.”

Even a pig like me who only knows how to eat and sleep well can become a god. Geo wondered if there were such insignificant gods in the world, but soon he smiled proudly and continued speaking.

“I am an ordinary human being with the qualifications of a god.”

“Muaaaang ….”

Dana hurried past, crying, "I love you, dad, but you're talking nonsense right now." Honey, who was right above her head, disappeared with her younger brother, looking at her with eyes that said, "I love you, dad, but Dana's right."

“…….”

Geo felt a little wronged.

“Does it make sense that I can’t be treated as a human being just because I have some qualifications as a god?”

“Kukukuu.”

“No way, Father. Where in the world is there a god who roasts sweet potatoes and eats them with his own hands?”

The teddy bear looked up at Geo with eyes that said, 'Yes, how can you do that?' Geo was speechless at that look of pure question. I never thought that I would be treated as an outcast just because I eat sweet potatoes.

“Anyway, Father, listen. I don’t know what has changed since the world was turned upside down, but in this country where Confucianism has such deep roots, it is rude to interfere in someone else’s family funeral without any justification.”

"dream."

“First of all, isn’t Joo-hyun a friend you just captured… no, a friend you just made? You're just getting to know him, so you need to slowly tame him with small, non-burdensome considerations and gifts, and tie him up to a relationship where he won't run away even if you send him three boxes of sweet potatoes. If you rush too much, things will go wrong."

"dream."

"Besides, Joo-hyun is 36 years old, so she's older than me. It would be extremely rude to help with the funeral of someone who is older and more socially adept than me. It's also rude to interfere without permission when someone is trying to take care of things on their own."

"dream?"

Again, God doesn't know such things.

"Huh?"

"Excuse me."

"Kuung…."

Around that time, Isser, who had come to visit for the first time in a while, discovered the two.

"Teacher? What's the problem?"

"I was talking to my father about the funeral of a new friend I had made."

"It's a really confusing situation just hearing it."

Isser nodded after hearing the details of the incident.

"I don't think it will be a big nuisance."

“If that’s what you both want, I’d like to hear your opinions. Why on earth wouldn’t it be?”

“Aren’t you the sun god, sir?”

“And he’s also Joohyun’s new friend.”

“That man named Ju-Hyeon also thought of the teacher as a god.”

“That’s true, but….”

“What is the problem, sir?”

Isser tilted his head.

“It is not a nuisance but a great mercy that God directly cares for human life and death.”

“Jabirani, you are talking about such an embarrassing story.”

“Well, I don’t know what part you’re embarrassed about, but the sun god was like that too.”

“After all, the Father was the sun that created and took away life….”

“I think it is not strange for you to do similar things since you have inherited that divinity.”

Isser was once a priest of the deep sea and a believer of the sun. Having studied theology under Giovanni, the most intelligent child of the sun, Isser found Geo's question, which was not a question, quite strange.

“Don’t you know this well, teacher? It is God’s right and duty to govern life. I don’t know what part of it you feel uncomfortable with, but it is quite natural.”

“So even though I’m an ordinary person.”

“I truly respect and love you, sir, but I know that is not true. But if you think about it from a human perspective, what if you thought of it as a kind of inheritance from your family?”

Isser pointed politely at the teddy bear with both hands.

“You have inherited the family business of divinity from the sun.”

“This is my first time becoming a god, so I don’t know much about it, so I have a question. If I inherit divinity, do I also have to inherit the duties of the previous god?”

“I know that. It’s a kind of hereditary thing.”

The mermaid who once dreamed of becoming a righteous priest looked down at the teddy bear.

“It seems that the previous Sun God… wanted to bestow the gift of mercy on his beloved human while also allowing him to learn the power and position of the Sun.”

Geo had guessed that part too.

“Otherwise, there is no way my father would have advised me to preside over the funeral ceremony right away. I think it was because I was being so negligent as a god that my father stepped in.”

“Oh, is it possible to think like that?”

“I thought I had only inherited the qualifications, not the position. But now that you mention the family business, I think about it. I guess I have been neglecting my father’s business up until now.”

Isser smiled reassuringly as if telling him not to worry.

“Please don’t be anxious, sir. All the previous affairs that this sun had been managing have sunk along with the sea water of me and my sister, so you don’t have to worry.”

“What a strange and heartbreaking thing to say.”

“What I just want to say is that you, as a divine being, do not need to feel too burdened by the issue of interfering with human life and death and their consciousness.”

Isser smiled bitterly as he said that.

“If you were any other being, you would have abandoned all of your humanity as you inherited divinity, but for some reason, you still retain your humanity, and that is why you are bound by human etiquette. It is surprising.”

“Does such a grand concept as humanity have to come into play in this obvious principle that you should not arbitrarily interfere with someone else’s funeral? Unless you are a sworn brother with someone who shares a family register, you should not arbitrarily interfere with someone else’s intimate affairs.”

“Teacher and humans are not equal beings. Your small favor can be a great mercy or a disaster to humans. It was a very natural order of things since you inherited the divinity of the sun.”

A look of concern appeared on Giovanni's face.

“How dare you say such racist things.”

“…….”

“Yes, the teacher is very guilty.”

Isser, who was once a victim of racism and grew up to be the perpetrator of the century, was momentarily speechless.

“…Ahem, well, in the end it’s up to the teacher to decide.”

“No matter how much I think about it, I feel like it would be a huge disrespect to Joohyun….”

“Rather than being rude, I guess it would be a very meaningful gift from a divine being.”

Humans have walked the path of asceticism, dedicating their lives to receive a single word of God’s voice, a single touch of God’s hand. It was a great grace and mercy to receive the blessing of life and death from a mystery worthy of awe.

“Besides, from what I know… um.”

Isser, who had been focusing on the events of human society centered around Geo, pretended not to know, gathered his thoughts. He continued speaking, recalling the brown-skinned human he had met before.

“It seems that another evil spirit was involved in the tragedy that occurred to the human named Ju-hyeon. It may be right for the merciful sun to take these souls, who have fallen victim to the schemes of such an evil spirit, away.”

“I’m sorry to delve into such deep details, but shouldn’t gifts be a burden? I’m sure Joo-hyun would also find financial help very burdensome.”

“Perhaps the Sun of the Past is not talking about human rituals such as funeral rites, but about the gift of the human soul itself. It is talking about its essence, not what is visible to the eye.”

The teddy bear nodded to him.

“Kkuu!”

“Please don’t act friendly.”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

“I don’t know why you’re laughing.”

Isser still hates the old sun. He looked at Geo.

“I have learned from you that the greatest love of the sun is to sow life on the earth, and when the time comes, to harvest it and place it beside the sunlight. This is the process by which the soul is born and harvested.”

“I definitely did.”

“Then you too, sir, can do the same. As far as I know, the current Earth is under the attention of the gods, and the souls there have each entered the hands of different gods.”

He smiled at my teacher.

“They would be happier to be accepted by the Earth’s divinity than by another dimension’s gods. That must be what the previous Sun was referring to when he spoke of the funeral gift.”

“I shouldn’t be the one to take care of someone.”

“From your perspective, it would be more like making more friends rather than gathering. Each god has a different way of dealing with life and death, so it could be seen as a kind of social activity.”

“Hmm, socializing.”

“I understand what you are reluctant about. I guess you are just following human etiquette and common sense. However, if you truly wish to act as an evil spirit, you will also need to have an attitude that does not reject the role of divinity.”

Isser heard that Argio wanted to become the Demon King because he wanted to enjoy blood feuds as an evil god. If so, he would need to adapt to his role and position as a god.

The mermaid siblings also wanted Giovanni to become more whole. If he were to become completely separated from humans, wouldn't there come a day when he would reject humans?

“And above all.”

Isser hesitated for a moment and then continued.

“Since when have you cared about human standards…?”

“What does that mean?”

“No, that’s right, you’ve been like that since long ago, teacher.”

Isser thought of Giovanni, who was once human.

“Even back then, I don’t think I ever acted in a humane way.”

“Is that how you describe my courageous life?”

“You said you were brave, but it seems like you just did it without any courage.”

“I have never failed to observe basic manners.”

“When I think about the achievements that came out naturally, as if I was breathing….”

“Achievements that were blown up?”

“I can’t help but wonder why you’re acting all showy now.”

“What the hell do you think I am? A chain-sleeve thief of the century?”

Giovanni felt wronged again.

“Even though it’s me, I wouldn’t dig up other people’s family history.”

“Well, I don’t know why you’re so worried, sir.”

“What are you going to do if Joohyun runs away because it’s burdensome?”

“That was the problem, after all.”

It wasn't that he was worried about the future that would become burdensome by interfering with someone else's gloomy past, but that he was worried that the other person would get tired of his excessive kindness and run away. Isser nodded with the sacred face of a priest as if he had expected that.

“It’s okay, teacher.”

“What’s okay?”

“I already wrote it.”

“What part did you write?”

“As I said just now….”

Isser smiled bitterly.

“Mr. Joohyun no longer sees you as an equal.”

“Damn, that’s what I thought.”

Giovanni's face became serious.

“I thought it would be like that since you were so difficult for me….”

“Apart from considering them as true friends, they are objects of awe.”

“Even so, there may still be hope.”

“I’m asking because I don’t quite understand, but what hope is that?”

“I hope that we can become such comfortable friends that we can even push each other with our feet.”

“Oh, pushing a shoe with your foot? That’s an irreverent remark that makes me want to wash my ears out, even though I’m a mermaid.”

“Please refrain from giving it too much meaning. What’s the point of being disrespectful between friends?”

“If there is still such hope, it would be a miracle.”

But Geo was steadfast. He never gave up.

“I am Batlan Giovanni, son of the sun and symbol of miracles. There is nothing I cannot accomplish.”

“I want to say that it’s not like that, but since he’s the kind of person who would really do it if he did, I won’t say anything for sure….”

The mermaid students learned from their human teacher that 'humans really have no limits'. He was a craftsman who made the impossible possible, and Isser learned the wisdom of 'always keeping possibilities open'.

He always kept in mind the possibility that one day his teacher might come back alive and scold us, and that actually happened. Isser thought that Geo could do anything he put his mind to.

“Anyway, if you don’t find it burdensome for the teacher to interfere with Joo-hyun’s unfortunate circumstances, I don’t think it’s anything to worry about. The person himself won’t be able to interpret the teacher’s mercy as rudeness or a nuisance.”

Who would see the mercy of God as a nuisance rather than a disaster? Even for the most daring of men, it was a task close to impossible.

“You may suspect that it is a test from the devil, but you cannot think of it as rude.”

“But my Confucian beliefs make me uncomfortable.”

Giovanni looked troubled and cast his sorrowful eyes down.

“It is not right to meddle in other people’s affairs….”

“But what if that person is secretly longing for salvation?”

“Then I have no choice but to step forward.”

It was a quick change of stance, as if they had been waiting for it.

“I really wanted to be a priest of the sun and a mature adult who would protect each other’s goodness, but if Joo-hyun wants my help, then there’s really nothing I can do.”

“I know you were just waiting for me to push you.”

“Oh, I got caught. But the new friend I made as a portrait artist is rarer than a 100-year-old ginseng. Since they are my opponents, I couldn’t act rashly.”

Geo's strength and weakness was that he didn't think deeply.

“If Joohyun had asked me for help from the beginning, I would have helped her without a second thought.”

In fact, to this extent, Geochigo really put a lot of thought into it.

And Geo found courage. He was worried that his hot new friend would run away in fear of the scale of the unusual gift, but if not, then there was nothing to be afraid of.

“If there is someone who needs help, and that person is my friend, and I can help them, then there is no reason not to step forward. In fact, I know that deep down, Joo-hyun is also hoping for help from this multi-talented friend.”

“Yes, I knew you would say that. As expected, the smiling tyrant of the sea village who, when he sees someone needing help, tries to show mercy even if they reject him… No, it’s as befitting of the chosen son of the sun.”

“I think I heard an inappropriate title for a student to call a teacher, but I’ll let it slide this time. Anyway, I think I have a rough idea of what kind of gift I should give to Joohyun. I’ll ask Joohyun for permission first.”

Geo saw my father.

“I’m talking assuming that’s what Dana wants, Father.”

“Kuk kuk kuk!”

“As you wished, I will give that child some of Lulupu’s juice.”

Just because I didn't think deeply, it didn't mean I didn't know anything.

“And let’s go make new friends.”

That was the story of how Yoo Seong-un ended up working overtime.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (157)

157

Episode 157

Geo always knew everything.

He knew that he had long ago surpassed human standards, that Anticat Dana was filled with dead spirits, and that he was seen by others.

“I just don’t put much meaning into it.”

Aria continued, shaking the glass flask.

“That’s why you seem to know nothing even though you know everything.”

“The teacher’s strange indifference has always surprised those around him.”

“Looking at it that way, it doesn’t seem like it’s a trait that appeared after the portrait was created.”

Didn't Geo, when he was a fully human, also have that kind of attitude?

“Isn’t that really strange?”

“You were always special, teacher.”

“Should I say it’s special or unusual…?”

“You have a unique way of thinking.”

“It is a nature that is not easily found in humans.”

Now Geo was no longer a human, but a portrait, a divinity, and a mystery of unparalleled proportions. He was loved by the construct and became one with it.

“If I wanted to, my teacher could do anything.”

But those various powers were of no value to Geo.

“The amazing part is that you can accept it as just one personality.”

“Didn’t you even recognize the divinity of the previous sun god as an individual?”

“Even though he is the divine being of the god I serve. I am so speechless….”

If it were someone who didn't know its value, Aria would have been easily convinced. However, Giovanni was once the most beloved priest and a promising talent of the sun.

It would be an absurd level of generosity, or perhaps indifference, for such a person would not be ignorant of the value and position of the divine. Aria continued, organizing the flasks containing various liquids.

“What would it take to make him think of himself as not human?”

So that it can disappoint humans.

Despite his immense power and immense size, Geo firmly believed that it could not make him anything other than human. That belief was as natural and firm as his belief in his own existence.

“No matter what you throw at him, he’ll think there’s no reason for him not to be human.”

“I know how you will react even without trying it.”

“Besides, the reason I was even a little reluctant to use the power of the divine was simply a matter of courtesy.”

Aria herself found it funny that she had suspected that perhaps she was unable to accept her activities as a divinity because she considered herself human. Regardless of whether she was human or not, powers and such had no meaning to Geo.

“Even when they brought up salvation, you accepted it right away?”

“I don’t think you would use such a grand word as salvation.”

Isser smiled his characteristic smile.

“Hasn’t that been the case before, teacher?”

“Aren’t you someone who values salvation more than respect?”

“But the part where you say you prefer kind and polite beings is really….”

“The type of person one prefers and one’s own disposition are not separate things.”

Just because you like a good and polite person, it doesn't mean you yourself will be good and polite. Geo kept the line and respected others, but if salvation was at stake, it was a different story.

If there was a wish that he couldn't express due to various circumstances, if he asked for help inwardly even if he didn't say it out loud, if those around him wanted it even if he sincerely refused to be saved... Geo did so.

“As expected, he is the smiling tyrant of the sea village.”

“It seemed like you still hated that nickname.”

“It’s not like it was tyranny because the results were always good.”

When I watched him from the side, there were times when I thought, 'Isn't that violence rather than salvation?' However, those who Geo reached out to always ended up finding happiness. That was the power that Geo possessed.

“When you see something like that, you’re definitely not stupid.”

Geo always knew everything, but he only accepted it as information, not emotion. He was so far removed from worldly interests that he just seemed to know nothing.

It also makes him look like a mystical sage with great image management.

“So, I guess he probably has his own plans.”

“When you say plan, it sounds like you’re referring to a great designer who is hidden behind a dark curtain.”

“Even if it seems like the teacher has no plans, he is always preparing something.”

“The plan is only visible from a distance.”

“If we’re going to be that picky, then this time… um….”

Aria, who had finished tidying up, adjusted her large white gown.

“…….”

She said soon.

“I’m sure you know the identity of your beautiful daughter, too.”

“Are you talking about that monster filled with dead souls?”

“Yes, that monster that took the form of a cat.”

It was created by gathering the spirits of dead humans.

“I guess he was able to grow to that extent because his teacher truly thought of him as his child.”

“It makes sense, since I grew up in a world where all kinds of death are gathered together.”

“There may be other reasons for that kid’s growth, but… Will Geo use that kid?”

“I guess so, since you were thinking about the gift of a human named Juhyun.”

Geo always knew what he had to do.

“There are probably many reasons for giving such a gift.”

It was a wish that Ju-hyeon, a human being, could not shamelessly express, and he must have needed to adapt to his position according to the wishes of the previous god, and he must have wanted a chance for his daughter to become a complete child.

Above all, wouldn't Geo live in the human world?

“You might also want to solidify the image of ‘Mr. Sergio’.”

“Sometimes, whenever I see such cunning intentions, I feel cognitive dissonance.”

Behind that innocent and gentle smile, all thoughts were already put aside a long time ago. There was no way for those around him to know when he had been thinking like that or what he knew.

“The teacher doesn’t accept results he doesn’t like.”

We don't let a future we don't like come to us in the first place.

“So that’s why he died like that.”

“…he is alive now.”

“Can you call that living?”

"well."

“I often get scared.”

Aria continued speaking with her signature smile.

“I don’t know when you’ll do something ridiculous again.”

Geo was an uncontrollable variable.

“If that’s the case, then why don’t you be lovely?”

“…….”

“I feel like I signed a very unfair contract.”

“…Sister….”

“Yes, Isser.”

The mermaid asked her brother.

“What should we do now?”

They cannot be forgiven by their teacher.

“I once expected that he might come to hate humans, that he might turn away from them and become hostile towards them… But it seems that you, Master, have decided to love humans again.”

For nearly an eternity, it was to be so.

“I think we also need to make our attitude clear.”

“What my sister said is right.”

“…at least his roots….”

“…….”

"…well."

Aria muttered.

“It’s responsibility.”

The end of the worries was approaching.

* * *

“Ugh….”

Early February in Korea was still cold.

“Why is it so cold today?”

The woman sniffed.

“Is it because it’s dawn…?”

The current time is just past 1:00 AM.

Actually, 1AM wasn't that late. The 8PM closing time is also an 'average' statement, and there were quite a few workers who left work after that.

'If it were like before, there would have been a few more people on this street.'

The woman looked around the empty street.

The electronic billboards jutting out from between the alleys occasionally crackle, and most of them are already off. Somewhere on the asphalt, which is slick with snow that has just melted and fallen, you can almost hear the squeak of a mouse.

“…….”

Between the old and rusty buildings, the city center is visible. It is much cleaner and more sophisticated than the woman's hometown, which is located near the outskirts. Unlike the commercial district here that has already closed, it still flashes with neon signs.

For no reason, a corner of my heart feels empty.

‘… I think there are fewer people here, maybe because of the terrorist incident in the past.’

There was an incident where the dungeon door opened inside the Solar Church, and all the people inside were dragged away. The woman who was involved in that incident still vividly remembers the situation at the time.

Since that day, I have tried to avoid crowded places as much as possible. Perhaps other citizens who heard about the terrorist incident felt the same way. That is why there are so few people on the streets.

'Because it's a mixed residential and commercial area, it's a street that's rarely visited at this time of day.'

The woman sniffled at the cold and huddled further into her padding.

“Oh my, why the hell is it because of the company dinner….”

It was still frustrating, even though it was finished early, around 1 AM. And then I had to go to work at 6 AM. I don't know how these drunkards have such good stamina.

It was when the woman was walking while looking at the floor.

"meow."

“……?”

Cat meowing.

‘… No, it’s a little strange.’

Isn't that a very accurate "meow", as if a person had recorded it? Any woman who likes cats knows that most cats meow "aeae-ae" or "meow-aak."

Even though the city was protected by the association and the government, this was a suburban area, quite close to the city's slums. The woman looked around the dark streets with a slightly nervous heart.

"…uh."

And I found it.

“It’s a cat.”

It was a large cat with a dark blue light shining like the Milky Way in the night sky.

“Huh? What is that? Is it a monster…?”

"meow."

“It doesn’t look dangerous.”

It was very beautiful.

Of course, there is no such thing as a truly harmless monster just because it looks harmless. However, the possibility that it was a native monster she didn’t know about was not that low, so the woman slowly stepped back and put some distance between herself and the cat.

And then, boom!

“Oh my god, Mommy, oh my god!!!!”

"this."

“Heh he ...

It was when a woman was struck by something hard hitting her back.

“I surprised you.”

“Huh, huh…!”

She hesitated and looked back, and saw a man looking down at her.

“Please calm down.”

“…….”

“Excellent. Well done.”

"…uh…."

My pounding heart gradually became calm as I listened to the soft voice that flowed out as if teaching a young student.

Her chest still heaved in surprise and she let out ragged breaths, but she soon realized that she was not in that much of a danger.

"…uh…!!"

And then the woman realized.

“Sergio Hunter?!”

“Oh, you remembered me.”

“Well, well… it left an impression.”

“I’m glad you liked it.”

“No, that, yes…!”

The woman, who thought the distance was too close, took a step back. Then, she could clearly see the tall hunter's face.

Platinum blonde hair that resembles the sun and the moon, blue eyes that seem to shatter with light, and the sacred smile that is characteristic of believers… .

“Oh.”

“Why are you doing that?”

“I was a little surprised.”

Even looking at it again, it was a face that was no different from the work of the century.

'Won't that be recognized as a cultural asset?'

A face worth preserving.

“What are you doing here? I remember you were working as an unofficial hunter, but did you come out today because of some work? It’s really nice to see you again. Since you don’t appear on TV, I had no way of knowing what you were up to.”

“I know you are very happy to see me.”

“Did I get too excited? I’m sorry. I really wanted to meet you again and say hello, but I had no way to contact you… Well, it would be rude to contact the Hunter personally, but the collectors haven’t said anything either.”

I was so happy to meet you by chance like this.

“But really, why is that…?”

“I came to help my friend.”

"friend?"

"yes."

Sergio Hunter said as he looked around the alley.

“Dana.”

The cat answered the call.

“Muang.”

“Oh, so cute.”

“Ugh.”

A cat, making a very cat-like sound, walked out of the darkness and went to Sergio Hunter's feet. The cat, as big as a Maine Coon, ran its body over Sergio Hunter's calf.

The cat, after a brief flirtation, soon sat down at Sergio Hunter's feet.

“Yeah.”

“What a wonderful thing.”

Sergio Hunter stroked its head, and the cat enjoyed his touch with its eyes closed.

“…Oh, right. That’s right.”

The woman, barely able to understand the situation, nodded.

“I think you said you were a trainer, and it really was.”

“I guess I don’t look like a trainer.”

“I guess it’s because you have a strong image of a priest….”

“That could be possible.”

Sergio continued with a smile.

“The honey you saw last time is here too.”

A small, round, honey-colored bird, the size of a child's fist, peeked out from under the hood of the cloak. The little bird tilted its head at the woman, then disappeared back into the hood.

“I guess you’re hiding your face.”

“I understand. Monsters don’t like humans in the first place.”

A woman who had experience being a hunter fan knew a little about their ‘job’. Being a trainer was an extremely rare job, but even if you succeeded in training, it wasn’t necessarily the case that the contracted beast and its owner would become close.

“I thought most contract holders didn’t like their owners, but you two seem to get along really well. As expected from a collector’s hunter….”

“I think it’s because I take care of them like my own children.”

“It must not have been easy to take care of a monster like that, but I think it’s amazing. Oh, but, am I taking up too much of your time?”

“That’s not true.”

Sergio Hunter tilted his head and asked.

“Do you happen to know where there are other orphanages around here?”

“Other orphanages?”

The man's voice was so calm and steady for someone seeking directions that it made me think he already knew everything when he asked.

‘… If you came on a mission, the collector would have told you the location separately, but you said you came because of a friend… Did you come in a hurry? Or maybe you came as a surprise and kept it a secret from your friend?’

The woman was lost in thought for a moment, but soon the awkward smile of someone asking for help from a passerby appeared on Sergio Hunter's perfectly sculpted face. Only then did the woman come to her senses.

'You shouldn't be thinking of something else in front of people. Are you tired and out of your mind? Are you thinking of something strange?'

The woman who had pushed away my foolish sentiments returned to reality and thought.

“Oh, if it’s another orphanage….”

A woman who often hangs around here answered with an embarrassed look on her face.

“It burned down a while ago.”

“Oh, that’s right.”

Sergio Hunter said with a delighted look on his face, as if that was exactly it.

“I’m looking for that building.”

“That building?”

It's an abandoned building in a secluded location, so there might be monsters living there, but they might have come here after receiving a tip for a friend.

'It seems like you didn't hear detailed information from your friend. You might be trying to solve it without telling your friend because you don't want him to feel burdened.'

The Sergio Hunter that the woman remembers is certainly someone who fits the proverb, “Don’t let your left hand know what your right hand is doing.” In fact, isn’t he the Hunter who helped people in the “Temple of the Deep Sea” but never sent out a single knight?

'There was a story about you being shy. I thought it was just a joke, but seeing you act like this, I think you're the type of person who feels burdened by being thanked for helping others.'

The woman nodded, thinking so.

“Yes, I know. Should I tell you?”

“I’m sorry, I thought you were leaving work. I would like to shamelessly ask for your help.”

“This neighborhood is so complicated. If it weren’t for Hunter, I would have already died. But it’s like this….”

“Thanks to your kind cooperation, we were all able to escape together.”

“Wow, how can someone speak so pleasantly?”

The woman felt a little sorry.

'If I were a certified hunter, I would have made an account a long time ago.'

The woman guided us while chewing on her regret. No matter how deserted and dark it was, this place was still a part of the city where people lived. There were a few lights and electronic billboards that lit up here and there, so it wasn't that dark.

Soon the woman led Sergio Hunter to the Guitar Orphanage.

“This place looks like the orphanage you were talking about.”

Seeing the burned down building made me feel a little strange.

'I heard someone died, but it's kind of creepy.'

I don't doubt Sergio Hunter who saved my life, but it was dangerous to come to such a deserted place. The woman who was looking at the abandoned building smiled awkwardly and asked Sergio Hunter.

“Hey, could you wait until I’m done with my work? I’m scared to go back alone….”

“Of course. I was thinking of doing that too. It’s dangerous to go home alone at this hour.”

Sergio Hunter nodded coolly and continued speaking with soft eyes.

“It won’t take that long.”

“Oh, really? So you came here to catch monsters….”

"no."

He said.

“I came to make friends.”

“…….”

Maybe it's because of my mood.

His voice sounded like it was drowning in the sea.

“…? Oh, that….”

Perhaps he came to train a new monster? As the woman was thinking within the bounds of common sense she could think of, Sergio Hunter spoke, gently stroking the cat's head.

“Dana.”

The cat answered.

"meow."

The answer continues.

"meow."

"meow…."

"…meow…."

The cat's eyes, which resemble the moon, are curved.

"meow."

Less mature and youthful voices.

‘…it sounds like a bell.’

Something catches the eye of the woman who was recalling a strange sentiment.

A group of strange children walked out of an abandoned building, imitating the meowing of cats.

"meow…."

“The cat called.”

“It meowed.”

“Me too, me too, kitty.”

"meow!"

A series of incoherent sentences continue.

A girl with her hair tied up in a ponytail. A boy with a mischievous look. A boy who walks cautiously, perhaps because he is scared. A boy who walks with a thumping sound, shedding tears for some reason. A boy who hugs a large cat as if he is happy to see it… .

"…uh."

The woman saw the person who appeared at the end.

“…….”

“…….”

An older woman who smiled awkwardly and sent all the children away.

When her eyes met Sergio Hunter's, she bowed deeply in greeting, wearing an apron.

"…i look forward to."

“Would you like to go together?”

“There is a god who is worshipped separately.”

“I want to hear that name.”

“My god illuminates the world with moonlight.”

“I will visit you with the children soon.”

“…Yes, if you do that….”

“You won’t be lonely.”

The old man who had been silent burst into tears.

"…thank you."

And when the woman blinked once.

“…….”

“…….”

There was no one there.

“…Uh, uh… uh?”

“I’ve finished my business, so I’ll take you home.”

“Huh huh?”

“Oh, are you okay?”

“Huh??”

The woman realized belatedly that she had seen a ghost.

* * *

The window of an abandoned building.

“…….”

Joo-Hyeon, who had been watching everything, soon collapsed.

The voice, soaked in water, trembled miserably.

"…sorry…."

"no."

“I’m sorry. I wish I had done a little better….”

“It’s okay, Joohyun.”

“I am truly sorry.”

“It's not your fault.”

“I, I was wrong….”

A reunion in the twisted logic and providence of the evil spirit.

“…I’m sorry for hurting you….”

Joohyun received a gift from her friend.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (158)

158

Episode 158

The class of citizens who could live in the city was either class 1 or class 2, but the gap between them was enormous.

Apart from the third-class citizens who lived in separate localities and were treated like people from another world, the second-class citizens were constantly compared to the first-class citizens. They self-deprecatingly called themselves 'beggars' or 'country bumpkins'.

To afford the insane rents, people had to move out of the city center, which meant they had to live as far out as possible, and second-class citizens had to settle even closer to the poor.

“…Ah, what is it?”

The man woke up and turned on his phone screen. It was past 1:00 in the morning.

“Oh my god, fucking laundry….”

It must be all crumpled already.

“I think the alarm went off, but why can’t I wake up?”

The man grumbled as he picked up his laundry from the communal laundry room. He thought to himself that if a first-class citizen saw him, they would sneer at him and ask if he cared about cleanliness.

'But we don't have money, so don't we have pride? We're already being called dirty, so how can we really become dirty?'

Tall, dilapidated villas intertwined with the entertainment district. The walls were thin as a dog, so it was almost like living with noise, and all the facilities visible were rusty and creaky. It was dirty enough for the first-class citizens who only lived in the clean center to point fingers at it.

But I couldn't go to work looking like a beggar, so I had to make this much effort. The laundry, soaked with water because the old washing machine couldn't spin dry properly, was incredibly heavy.

“Oh my.”

The stairs creak with every step.

The man who returned home with the laundry basket headed straight to the veranda. The weather was still quite chilly as the sun had not fully risen yet, so the man took out his cell phone, wondering, 'What the hell is this?'

“…….”

1:24.

“…Oh.”

A couple caught the eye of a man looking at his cell phone. His gaze fell beyond the veranda, below.

“What, at this hour?”

The voice gets smaller on its own.

Perhaps because it was a residential area built jointly with an entertainment district, there were often young beasts who would rush into the deep alleys late at night to take care of business.

But fortunately, it didn't seem to be that kind of atmosphere. The man who was looking at the two men and women who looked more sane than he thought thought.

'The man seems to be a hunter. Isn't that the guitar orphanage over there? He seems to have some business there... but why in an empty, abandoned house with no monsters?'

And then the man saw.

“…….”

A cat-shaped jewel that makes a creepily beautiful howl.

"…uh…."

Young souls walking out of the abandoned buildings one by one to the sound of tears like those bells.

“Uh, uh.”

Rules it all.

“ ….”

Priest.

'... No, trainer?'

Before he could even gather his thoughts, the man realized that his eyes had met the blonde hunter's.

For a moment, my breath was taken away.

“…….”

After a while, the man realized that everything had disappeared as if it had never happened and that he was sitting on the veranda.

“…Uh, uh, what is it?”

I couldn't quite remember what I saw. I'm sure our eyes met, but my memories of what happened in the meantime were hazy.

‘Fuck, they said Hunters were scary… I almost got scared just by making eye contact.’

It seemed that he had a brief panic as his eyes met with the hunter's, who was too strong. Knowing that this happened often, the man accepted the situation without any doubts, and soon picked up his cell phone with his hands soaked in cold sweat.

The poor quality phone was heavy and dull, but even taking that into account, the man's hands holding the phone were shaking excessively.

“…What, what kind of world are there ghosts in this world?”

As I turned on my phone, notifications filled the screen without a sound.

It was a local community he had joined, and the man instinctively realized that the quiet commotion was caused by the incident that had just occurred.

'I wasn't the only one who saw it.'

It wasn't in vain.

With trembling hands, he typed a title for the post he was about to post on a community where people from his neighborhood hung out.

I saw it clearly with my own two eyes (photo attached)

It was a huge ball that 'Mr. Sergio' shot up.

* * *

A traditional Korean characteristic that has persisted since before the great disaster.

-??? What did I see??

Internet powerhouse.

- A ghost appeared in Gwanak-gu at dawn

- Anyone seen a ghost in Daehak-dong??

- What's wrong with the cat crying?

- Oh my god, spring

Even though the world was ruined and came back to life, Koreans' social media and communities were still going strong.

- There was already a lot of talk there

- Is this the story about the Adra Ki○ Orphanage?

↳ It was just called Guitar Orphanage, so there was no point in blurring it

- Why is everyone talking about ghosts?

- What's the fuss this morning?

Perhaps because the world had been turned upside down, the residents of a region had a strong sense that they were essentially one family. When an incident or accident occurred, it was a kind of manner for the residents of that region to share the incident.

Because of that, the Gwanak-gu community where 'Sergio Hunter' visited was in an uproar.

“Hey, I heard there’s a ghost in Gwanak-gu.”

“Are you crazy?”

The rumor spread quickly throughout the area.

I saw it clearly with my own two eyes (photo attached)

I am the one who saw the ghost, you Gwanak-gu villagers.

Since so many people ask me questions via email, I'm organizing them here.

Time of sighting: “1:24 AM”

The reason I remember it so well is because I was hanging laundry like a dog.

Shit, I set the alarm for 1am and woke up clearly, but I ended up sleeping longer than that

When I woke up and looked at my phone, it was 22 minutes

I went out to the veranda to hang laundry, but it was so cold that I turned on my phone to check the temperature, and it was 24 minutes.

I said this, so I hope no one suspects it's a fabrication.

I don't want to reveal the address of the scary world, but it seems like everyone knows it.

Yeah, fuck, my house is in Daehak-dong.

Anyone who lives in or has visited Daehak-dong knows that the corners of the houses are packed together like crazy.

And I know the four roads between those corners of the house

Those who don't know can just think of the alleys in Dal-dong, Gwanak-gu where beggars gather.

There is an orphanage there called 'Guitar Orphanage'

It seems like it's affiliated with the government or an association, but it doesn't seem like it receives much support?

Why? If they had received enough support, they wouldn't have built an orphanage in a place like this.

It's my beloved corner of the house, but I have to admit it's a bit damp

This is no place for a child to live, but there were a lot of children, right? No money? Ugly ducklings, right?

But there was a fire here a while ago and everyone died

Fk, because of that, our villa also suffered some damage

The atmosphere in our gloomy neighborhood has improved a bit thanks to the kids.

Since it became a haunted house, it has become three hundred and sixty times more gloomy.

Okay, country bumpkins, this is where the main topic starts.

You said you went out to the veranda to hang the laundry.

I know there's no one there at that time, but there are two people.

I was scared because I thought that even a man or a woman would do something crazy here.

When I was in a hurry, there were a lot of beasts and rascals who would come to the alley and make a fuss, so I was really nervous.

The atmosphere doesn't seem to be that kind of atmosphere at all

Looking at what you're doing, it looks like one of you is a hunter.

What cat??? It's a cat or something, it's so shiny and pretty

I can hear a cat crying

Oh shit, what should I say about this?

There was something really ticklish like a dog that made my soul tremble… something

That kind of crying sound that makes you get goosebumps all over your body? Wow, this was a crying sound that made you think, what the hell is going to happen?

The ear-splitting noise that took our spines away last summer wasn't that scary.

Yeah fuck I was freaking scared

The cat keeps crying

The kids are crying so hard too

Kids? What kind of kids are they?

This is the majesty of the 'ghost', you country bumpkins from Gwanak-gu.

As I listened, I thought, "Oh, something is strong? Something is strange?" Then, the "meow" sound became more and more diverse.

Instinctively, I was so fragile that I hid my body and peeked down.

I saw children who looked perfectly fine crawling out of an abandoned orphanage.

Look at these two clearly, you little bastards

Shit, I thought this is what a ghost is like

I thought that the first-class guys were talking about souls and all that crap, but they were just being sarcastic.

Wow, those real hunters can see the soul. I thought, there really is such a thing in the world.

When I looked at them with my eyes, they really… really just looked like normal, living kids.

But when you look at it, you get a feeling

Those kids are the ones who died in this fire.

But it was that cat that called those kids.

And the owner is that blond hunter

All sorts of thoughts are coming to mind

I couldn't even breathe

My whole body is shivering, but I know for sure that it's not because I'm cold.

It's so creepy that it sends shivers down your spine, but it's not like it's damp or slimy.

That thrill you get when you see something so huge and beautiful.

I feel so overwhelmed

Holly felt that way

I couldn't take a picture of the kids

It disappeared right away

But that doesn't mean that existence itself disappears.

I was given permission to see the dead souls for a moment.

I had a feeling that maybe that allowed time was running out soon.

I think that cat did something or other, but I'm a second-class villager and I don't know anything about that.

The woman next to the cat-raising hunter sat down in shock, wondering if he was a country bumpkin like me.

But damn I was also sitting there ㅋㅋㅋㅋ… … .

When I came to my senses, I was sitting on the veranda floor, my hands and feet shaking.

Damn, I feel like I made eye contact with that hunter

Anyway, it was really scary

I understand a woman's feelings a hundred times over

If it's like this even though I saw it from far away, how scary would it be if it was intuition?

That cat monster looks like a hunter's trainer?

It's far away so I don't know exactly what it looks like

I took a picture, so take a look.

Don't talk about portrait rights because my face wasn't shown

Yeah, you guys are fakes

A post on that community had a picture attached to it. It was a very blurry picture, perhaps because my hands and feet were shaking as the post said, or because my phone camera was not very good.

But that alone confirmed the blonde hunter and the woman sitting down that the writer had mentioned. The community was once again in an uproar over the photo that appeared to have been taken from a high position.

Comments (149)

- Why isn't this a fabrication??

- So you were a hunter with skills related to the soul?

↳ Why is a hunter with such advanced skills in Gwanak-gu… .? Oh… .?

↳ Yeah, to that extent, you're definitely not a hunter

- The cat is so cute

↳ Look at that size, is that cute? We're going to have a big bite

- Did you turn into an anti-cat?

- It's so funny how the girl is acting so stupidㅋㅋㅋㅋ

↳ Seriously, what a tough girl… .

↳ Ah, damn it girl, I'm crying ㅠㅠㅠㅠ

↳ Is that crazy woman?ㅋㅋㅋㅋ

- Isn't that anti-cat?????

↳ Excuse me, but what is Anticat? Is that cat's name?

↳↳ It's a cat-shaped monster that lives in a dungeon called the Jewel Vein.

↳ ? Was the Anti-Cat a tameable mob??

↳ No, anti-cats are just kittens, stop crawling out, you cornered-room experts

↳ People I don't even know are talking nonsense

↳ You're acting like you know everything

- If it's a soul-related skill, is it a priest? It feels like a solar cult...

- Why is such a precious hunter in such a shabby neighborhood…???

- The blond priest is crazy, gasp gasp

↳ Block perverts

↳ Even though you're a hunter, is it right to openly say this nonsense?;; Seriously, humanity is falling apart

↳ Even if you are a public figure, let's keep the line

↳↳ Dssalpano

↳ He looks so handsome. I can't see his face, but I can feel his handsomeness.

↳ Hey, what's with the streetlights? Come back

- Isn't it illegal for a priest to bring a monster with him?

- It looks like the monster is so quiet, but it must be a trainer.

↳ If it wasn't for training, Gwanak-gu would have already burned down

- What is an anti-cat?

- I know the priest's name, Saramuㅠㅠ… . Pleaseㅜ… … .

- Don't you give authentication to the iron-clad woman?ㅋㅋㅋㅋ

- The 25-year-old fool is telling me that the hunter is a handsome man. Just give me your personal information.

- Why aren't the fucking reporters doing their jobs?

↳ Couldn't he be an unofficial hunter?? He's such a new face out of nowhere

↳ You rascals only keep your mouth shut when absolutely necessary

↳ Are there any blondes among the trainers? There aren't many domestic trainers, but this is the first time I've seen a blonde.

↳ Isn't that silver hair???

- Seriously though, if this is a new trainer, isn't this patriotic?

- Why did the trainer create a ghost… .?? Really, why… .??

- I wish any hunter would come out and explain.

- Hahahahahahahahaha so you're saying it's fake or not?

↳ Do you want to?

↳ I'm mad because of guys like you that I have to write... ..

↳ The mastermind OUT

By the time the incident spread to the entire Seoul community, not just Gwanak-gu.

"It's starting to get better."

"Uh… Uh…."

"Can you upload it for me?"

“Can I really upload this?”

“This is a matter that has been approved by the collector.”

"and."

The woman who was involved in the ghost incident that day posted a photo on the community.

I am the woman who caused the ghost commotion in Gwanak-gu. Let me explain… .

It was a two-shot with Sergio Hunter.

Unlike the previous authenticator, the photo taken with permission was very clear, and while the woman's face was covered with a sticker, Sergio Hunter's face was still visible. The content of the post was brief.

Beautiful and beautiful scenery

That was the end of it.

Comments (1,623)

- Are you crazy about the beauty of the country?

– Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome? Why are you handsome?

↳ Calm down

- F*ck, the future of South Korea is so bright

↳ It really got brighter… .

– The text is very short, so no further explanation is needed.

- It's unfair that I lived for 28 years without knowing this face.

- That's a confession

- What kind of parasitic brother do you look like?

↳ Seriously lol your face is so cute

↳ (This comment has been deleted due to review restrictions)

- Wow, he's really handsome.

– The beauty of the country, oh my…

- So this is the face that will ruin the country

↳ At this level, I can admit that I'm being rude

↳ Oh, are you going to roll it up with those lips?

↳↳ Please come to your senses, you idiots… ..

- Hunters are people too, so let's not cross the line.

- The comment section is getting really dirty

- Admin, please organize the comment section!!!

- How can someone be so kind and handsome?

↳ There is only one word for it, Gyeonggukjisae, so how do you know if it is good or not?

↳↳ Your face is kind

The comments section exploded.

“…….”

“The response is really good….”

“It looks like that.”

And Yoo Seong-un thought.

'There's nothing better than visual violence to muddy the waters.'

As a proud curator, even Yoo Seong-un fully acknowledged the beauty of ‘Portrait of Geo’.

Looking at it, it seemed like the atmosphere wasn't going too badly, so Yoo Seong-un smiled his characteristically indifferent smile.

“Thank you for your cooperation.”

“Oh, no. I’m glad it helped.”

“As I said before, all personal information about Choi Ra-on will be kept confidential.”

“But there are still people who find them….”

“We will take measures to ensure that no personal problems arise as a result of this cooperation.”

“I would appreciate it if you could do that.”

“You just signed the contract. Do you have any other questions?”

"excuse me."

Choi Ra-on, the person involved in the incident who came to be known as the 'iron-faced woman', asked with a serious expression.

“Can I make a fan cafe?”

“…I think that is the extent of the freedom of citizens.”

“Oh, well, if Sergio Hunter doesn’t like it, I won’t do it.”

“I will inquire about this matter separately and then contact you.”

“If I get permission, can I make this an official fan cafe?”

“I’ll ask about that part too.”

"thank you…!"

“No, not at all.”

Yoo Seong-un thought to himself.

'I need to get some extracurricular activities done quickly.'

You just have to ride the good flow when the attention is focused.

'I don't know how much intensity to set to make Geo's position suitable.'

However, I had no intention of putting Geo on TV. He doesn't seem to want too much attention and seems to have an aversion to working as a celebrity, so I planned to keep him in the underground category if possible.

'It'll be difficult to remain as an unofficial hunter after all.'

But well, that was what I wanted.

“…….”

If your first activity is to clear a dungeon, it should be fine.

‘… It seems like there was a decent dungeon planned for conquest by another sect or guild… .’

Anyway, that part was no longer Yoo Seong-un's job.

'I have to go and hand over the responsibility right away.'

Yoo Seong-woon felt warm at the thought of passing the work on to Joo-hyun.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (159)

159

Episode 159

There were a few people here who recognized 'Sergio Hunter'.

- This is Sergio Hunter.

- Sergio Hunter ㅠㅠㅠ Are you finally showing your face?

- Our hunter is now a public figure. Anyway, then

They were civilians who received help during the S-class dungeon 'Deep Sea Temple'.

- Is that hunter's name Sergio?

↳ Yes yes yes yes yes, you called me a trainer back then too

- Come here and check if it's correct.

- Is it right to put up just one Gyeonggukjisaek?

↳ If you're going to tell me, tell me everything

- Hey, why doesn't it come up when I search?

- Unofficial hunters, if their faces become known, they think they will die… .

- Sergio Hunter is a collector, but is there no response from him?

↳ Ah, a collector??? A collector????

↳ ?? That handsome guy with the sun on his face is a collector??

↳ Has the guild leader's taste changed?

↳ ㄴㄴ It could be just the face that is in the sunlight

↳ How can that smile not be sunlight coming from the soul?

- Why are you all making a fuss about someone else's face?

- The level of Korean people who suck up to anyone with a pretty face.

↳ Okay

And soon.

A new item has appeared in the Sunlight Spirit Hunter Collection

My sister-in-law

The official new information for 'Sergio Hunter' has been posted on the collector's website.

-What is a Sunshine Hunter?

↳ ㄱㅆ I heard he's a handsome man with a sunny disposition, but I had nothing to say about him being a hunter who caused a commotion.

↳ ㅋㅋㅋㅋIt's not that I have nothing to say, it's just that I had too much

↳ It's not even a descent, it's a descent. It's so funny

↳ Sunshine Hunterㅋㅋㅋ

↳ Ah, don't give our hunter a weird name.

↳↳ ?What the hell is this?

↳↳ When did you see our hunter?

People who read the post immediately rushed to the collector's homepage and could see that what the writer said was true. This was because a photo as clear as that of the previous authenticator, Choi Ra-on, was uploaded.

And some people were dumbfounded.

- Hey, but why are you only telling me this?

- This is my first time being a Hunter fan, but is this how it is supposed to be? ㅠㅠㅠㅠ

↳ It's not like this;;

↳ Ignore the comment above. The information about the original hunters is a bit limited.

↳ That's right. It's common for hunters' personal information to not be disclosed.

This was because the information provided was only name, height, and age, and since it is a tradition for Korean hunters to not reveal personal information, most people understood and moved on.

However, there were some people who got excited.

So does that mean I can now proudly fangirl?

Did the country recognize my virtue??

It was polite to not mess with unofficial hunters or underground hunters as much as possible, but if official activities became frequent, that line would quickly break down. Those who had been keeping an eye on Sergio since the previous 'Temple of the Deep Sea' were delighted.

Among them was Choi Ra-on, who was teased all day at work as a 'stupid woman'.

'I've never seen a face like this in my life.'

When she returned home from work, her stiff hands twitched.

“Fan cafe… If you make a fan cafe… you can share things like photos and schedules….”

What was floating on Choi Ra-on's worn-out computer screen was a two-shot with Sergio Hunter. It was a rather gloomy scene in the late evening, but she was desperate in her own way.

‘… A face like this is uncommon, but a face like this with this kind of personality is even more uncommon.’

The reason why Korea was able to maintain public order was not because Koreans were good, but because all kinds of strict laws and novel punishments made them good. It was a time when the average morality was so low that the instrumentalization of humans was taken for granted.

The personalities of public figures who could be the object of someone's fandom were not the same as before the great disaster. Especially for hunters, if they were popular, they could kill people in broad daylight and just say, "That's possible."

Of course, there were many hunters who endured their dirty personalities and continued to act kind and affectionate for the sake of popularity, but Choi Ra-on was confident.

'I know a little about physiognomy, and this well is real... It's real, clean water that was barely pulled out from deep underground.'

Her intuition, having been a fan of numerous celebrities and hunters, was telling her that this was a scoop that she couldn't miss. It was a natural monument. There was even a sense of mission that came from that.

'I wonder if it wasn't fate that I met Hunter that day.'

It was a 100% pure handmade destiny that Geo had personally created, but Choi Ra-on didn't realize it.

The platinum blonde hair on the screen looked like silver hair, perhaps because it was taken under the yellow streetlight. The curly hair looked as soft as silk, and the smile that gave off a warm feeling just by looking at it was truly like sunlight.

“You’re really crazy, Waku….”

Choi Ra-on, who had seen him up close, recalled that time. The cool atmosphere that seemed to smell like the forest and the cheerful smile he had shown when he saw him off for the last time.

'Yeah, that's the point.'

Hidden inside Sergio Hunter, who was thought to be a gentle priest, was none other than the refreshing citrus scent of a sports team captain.

"under."

Life was already tough, and we needed light and salt to make it bearable.

'The light and salt of last time went to hell due to a huge controversy over humanity.'

Since they were hunters who had to live such a rough life, it was difficult for many of them to avoid controversy over their character. Most of them were exaggerated, but it was inevitable that they would become emotionally exhausted by the gossip.

'I know I'm different from other people, but... what can I do when my heart grows cold the moment I'm disappointed in my child's personality?'

Choi Ra-on was the type of person who would quickly lose interest in the person he trusted, if he saw a flaw in the character of his child. For example, if he saw someone bullying someone or killing someone for a trivial reason.

Before the Great Disaster, it would have been absurd for even ordinary people, let alone public figures, to commit such acts, but now was the post-Great Disaster era. The moral standards that Choi Ra-on expected were quite strict.

“…No, I didn’t commit a crime, did I? People can be a bit picky, you know.”

As a result, Choi Ra-on naturally had a lot of fans at one time. This was because her heart would drift away the moment she saw a flaw in their character.

Even the last time was a black cloak, but the fans were still waiting for the placenta.

“…….”

Choi Ra-on, who was focused on the computer screen, muttered quietly.

“…But with a face like this….”

Even if his personality was a bit flawed, I thought it would still be thrilling.

“…Yeah, how hard must it be to live as a hunter. That can happen as you live.”

Most of the nerds who are mainly hunter nerds did not lose heart even after a few controversies. In fact, Choi Ra-on was a special case. This was because, due to the nature of the hunter profession, people cannot always say and do nice things.

However, the limit of Choi Ra-on's tolerance for 'my child's' flaws was in the subject's face and speech. To be exact, it was mainly in the face.

'In that sense….'

Perhaps this time, Light and Salt would not be able to let go of the controversy over humanity even if it was the 66th time in a row. With this face and this kind of humanity, even God must be fair.

'But what if even the personality is great?'

It was a natural monument that would never come again.

“I hope we get some bait soon.”

Choi Ra-on smiled happily in front of the monitor.

* * *

Meanwhile, Joo-Hyeon, who had received the handover, was a little flustered.

“Why are you handing over the work to me at this particular time?”

“I’m too busy to even take care of ‘Black Cloak’. And as you know, ‘Sergio’ is in charge of Joo-hyun.”

“You did all the work at the collection center, so why are you doing this to me?”

“It’s a shame, because if you were a collector, you would be busier than this.”

“No, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“There is nothing I can do.”

Yoo Seong-woon expressed regret while handing over a document containing various community responses.

“I’m here because this project requires a lot of work, but in the future, when ‘Sergio Hunter’ does external activities, Joo-hyun will have to be by his side.”

“The hunter and the manager have to be linked together as a set. I know that, but….”

“It seems like you’ve learned a lot in the secretariat. And as you know, this is the time when things are the most noisy and the most focused. And I’m an unofficial underground hunter.”

An unofficial hunter is a hunter who does not reveal his identity publicly, and an underground hunter is a hunter who does not operate publicly.

“There’s no way I can be labeled as the official manager of ‘Sergio Hunter’.”

I don't know how much work there is to do.

“If that really happens, I won’t be able to help but become a completely sleepless human.”

“…How much work do you actually do?”

“Always remember that the more capable a hunter is, the more likely he is to be divided.”

“I am a non-awakened person.”

“It can’t be Sergio Hunter.”

"ah."

“It seems like there is a lot of interest from the religious community as well…. I think we’ll soon be getting a lot of requests for collaboration.”

Hunters with high name recognition will get work even if they just sit still.

“I’m sure you know, Joohyun.”

“Yes, I learned that.”

As the mask becomes more popular, broadcasters may contact you, and as a new trainer with few capabilities has appeared in Korea, requests for collaboration in strategy may come in to confirm his abilities.

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“The secretary’s office will take care of cutting off small contacts. They will do that for things that aren’t even worth passing on to Sergio Hunter, but for everything else, Joo-hyun must personally deliver them.”

Joohyun asked him.

“I’ve always wondered, how do I find ‘Sergio Hunter’…?”

“I’ve already discussed that with Geo.”

“Can I hear what story you just finished?”

“Geo stops by the hallway of our apartment every 12 o’clock….”

“…….”

Joohyun smiled with resignation.

“It seems that the leader of the Visabal Guild has finally decided to deal with me.”

“No, that’s not it. Calm down. There’s a reason why everything turned out that way.”

“I really want to hear that story.”

“In the first place, humans had no way to contact Geo.”

It would be ridiculous for a mere human to contact God whenever he wants.

“To put it a little more simply, we can’t install a phone in Geo’s house.”

“That’s true. It would be a completely different dimension.”

“That’s why I also set aside a specific time to meet Geo.”

Around 4 o'clock in the morning.

“Other than that, if Geo wanted to call me, I would just take a letter and go.”

“I also receive letters, but I can’t interpret them, and above all, it seems like it would be difficult to go to the collector’s gallery….”

“It would be difficult for Mr. Joo-Hyeon, who is not awakened, to handle the energy of the gallery on the 5th basement floor.”

“So, did you take steps to allow Mr. Geo to come here?”

Joohyun asked with her signature bright smile.

“It’s not like the guild leader didn’t give up on his roommate dream?”

“I really have no excuse for that.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled bitterly.

“I’m in room 1, Joo-hyun is in room 2, and Geo is in the hallway between us… Perfect.”

“Is it okay to occupy the 46th floor like this?”

“All the houses on the 46th floor have already been purchased through sales, so there is no legal problem.”

“Something evil or a monster has moved into that apartment complex.”

“Geo was always going wherever he wanted to go. There’s no way to do that with the law.”

“Oh, that’s not wrong, but oh.”

Joohyun felt a little frustrated.

“I feel like I’ve become part of a world-ending transformation….”

“It could be a subversion in a good way.”

“You don’t deny the fact that it has been overturned.”

“It’s only a possibility, it might not come true, so don’t worry too much.”

“I’m getting more and more upset.”

“It'll be okay.”

Yoo Seong-un showed a innocent smile.

“It’s unlikely that anyone will be stopping by the 46th floor hallway at exactly 12 o’clock.”

It's an apartment with only two generations per floor. Anyone who visits a place that isn't their own at 12 o'clock, and not at any other time, may be thought to have an impure purpose.

“So even if an accident happens, you can just say it was self-defense.”

“What on earth are you trying to say?”

“This is the power of big corporations.”

Yoo Seong-un burst into laughter.

“And in the first place, even if it is through the stairs, you cannot visit that floor unless you are a resident of that generation.”

“Oh, that’s just like an elevator. I didn’t know stairs worked like that.”

“Most people who have never used stairs don’t know this, but you can only enter the stairs if you have a card key for your household.”

“Then there won’t be any casualties who accidentally encounter the black cloak and faint.”

“You should consider it a trick called a mistake. It is impossible for an innocent person to enter this floor without a plan.”

Of course, the apartment manager or the regular maintenance technician can come in at any time, but they never come at exactly 12 o'clock. Since this is a very well-managed apartment, they will not allow any room to disturb the residents' rest even a little.

“So I meant, don’t worry too much.”

“Uhm, I understand.”

“Thanks to you, my interview time with Geo was brought forward.”

“Oh, Mr. Yoo Seong-un, at 12 o’clock too…?”

“The guild leader said it would be easier if we dealt with them all at once.”

"…that…."

“It’s a true story.”

Although Bisabal was a superior that Yoo Seong-un respected, he had to say what he had to say.

“I think the three of us want to become closer.”

“Can I resist with all my might?”

“Still, I think you’ll be okay. Let’s work hard together.”

In this way, Sergio's life as a hunter began without him even being present.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (160)

160

Episode 160

And Geo had no thoughts.

“The goji berries are overdried again.”

“Kung.”

“It’s all because there’s so much sun.”

How can there be only three suns under the sky?

“This is not it.”

He was screaming in front of the gourd fruit that had turned into a golden shape.

“We are so warm.”

Giovanni, who contains the sun god. A teddy bear with the sun god of the previous generation. Honey, a light-attribute evolved water bird who received plenty of love from the two.

It only took a moment for the fruits in the hut where only three suns, big and small, lived to dry up.

“We must overthrow this divinity immediately.”

“Kung kung kung…!!”

“Kkuu…!!”

Dana peacefully lay down to wash the cat, leaving behind the water bird and the teddy bear that were trying to stop the pig from getting angry if they couldn't eat delicious food. The warm, sun-filled house was no different from a heavenly paradise to her.

Geo collapsed in the yard.

“I’m sorry, Grandma. This potato has become a fool who can’t even dry a single fruit properly.”

“Kyuu.”

“I’m a talking potato. All I know how to do is talk. I guess that’s my identity.”

"dream…?"

The previous sun god was confused as to why this son of the sun referred to himself as a potato. His identity was closer to the sun than to the potato, and closer to the source.

Geo, who was overcome with sadness, said as he swept up the hardened goji berries like an old man.

“I know full well that I don’t look like a potato.”

I admit it whenever I think about it, but it doesn't seem that harmless. A real potato can't turn a person into paint.

“It looks more like a black chicken in the yard than a potato. It’s all black….”

“Gurrrr.”

“I guess you like it because it’s the same type of bird, Honey. I’ll have to draw a feather cloak next time.”

If I had to compare him to someone who had enjoyed wearing all black since the Sergio days, I would have to find something that was definitely all black.

“Thanks to Mr. Argio, I’ve been lusting after shiny things lately, so it’s even more so.”

Or maybe it was the soot from the stove or the crows as big as a house. Even to Geo, it seemed difficult to find a connection between him and potatoes. Nevertheless, the reason he couldn't let go of potatoes was in his childhood.

“It’s all the elders’ fault.”

To the residents of a mountain village in Gangwon Province, Geo was just a well-spoken, high-functioning potato.

It wasn't that Sergio couldn't be objective. He couldn't help but be a high school student who was so full of energy that he exploded. He didn't even look that harmless.

“It’s a little funny.”

People treated Sergio as a very special person even though he did not do much but just breathe.

He seemed to think he had done something even though he had done nothing, and no one, including Sergio, knew exactly what that 'something' was. I don't know why he did that, but I remember watching him and finding it funny, so I just left him alone.

“I feel like everyone is making it too hard for me.”

“Kuuu….”

“That’s why I sing about potatoes, even if only in my heart.”

To remind myself that I am just an ordinary human being, nothing special.

“The rebellious nature of human beings.”

If you hadn't made things so interesting for me, I wouldn't be talking about potatoes.

Sergio knew very well how unremarkable he was.

I was good at a lot of things, my grades were decent, and I had a decent amount of friends, but that doesn't mean I was as perfect in every field as people around me imagined.

“I’m such an ordinary person, but everyone treats me like I’m so special.”

Even though he had an exceptionally handsome face, people around him considered him to be a difficult person. Geo knew that was a ridiculous misconception, but others did not.

“Only the elders of our mountain village saw through my fleeting nature.”

So, the nickname 'potato' was even more appealing.

“I feel stable.”

This is what is called the hometown of the heart.

“It’s kind of funny that everyone is flustered just looking at my expression….”

"dream??"

“I’m scared that I might actually end up thinking I’m something.”

“Kku, kkuu.”

“No, it’s nothing special.”

Sergio knew my subject.

“I am ordinary.”

He was just an ordinary person with a monstrous social nature.

“…….”

“…….”

Geo nodded after checking the teddy bear's wavering gaze. He thought he knew what she was imagining and fearing. However, it was a misunderstanding.

“…Even I don’t go outside and shout out loud, ‘I am a potato.’”

"dream."

“It’s not that I don’t shout, I just don’t say anything. I know it sounds crazy.”

What the hell are you doing?

Geo loved his other identity as a potato, which was given to him by the elders of the peaceful mountain village, but that was that and this was this. Even Geo, the most lovable introvert in the world, had to live in society.

“He is always well-mannered and polite outside the home, and he is always misbehaving like this at home. You don’t have to worry about your son being rude in society either.”

There are many grandchildren in Korea who are treated like shit dogs, but those grandchildren do not claim that they are shit dogs in society.

Even elementary school students do not do that, so I did not think that I would do that when I became a dark-skinned 29-year-old man.

“Kung-kung?”

“Why am I called an old man?”

“Gurr.”

“That’s what it means to be in your 30s tomorrow or the day after.”

There was something ambiguous about calling him a young man.

“It feels a bit ambiguous to call him an old man because the front seat is 2….”

First of all, since it was a portrait, I wasn't adding more age because the year had changed, but even so, due to the many special circumstances surrounding him, Geo seemed to be an old man.

“I’m currently 32 years old, so I think it’s appropriate to call me an old man.”

“Kung…?”

“Isn’t it, 24 plus 32 plus 29, just elderly…?”

Anyway, it's a situation where my conscience hurts just because I'm young.

“By the way, what should I do with all these goji berries?”

What should I do? What should I do?

“I guess I should make some blood sausages.”

Method of preparation: Make a paste by mixing the dried fruit into powder and the juice of the lulupu, and then make a dumpling. Dry it in a dark place for more than a week. It is a good medicine for bleeding and recovery.

“I need to pull out some more Lulupu.”

At the sound of Rurupura, Dana, who had been lying down, got up. Perhaps it was because of the clear weather, but unlike the Milky Way of the previous night, it had a clear blue color.

Dana flashed a blue light and banged her head on Geo's calf.

“I’m so confused….”

“This is for my dad to use when making medicine.”

“Oh my.”

“Oh, I just want to go together.”

“Wow.”

“Then let’s do that.”

The giant cat Dana served as a sturdy escort.

* * *

Meanwhile, there was another place that was bustling with the presence of 'Sergio Hunter'.

“I didn’t know Anticat had that kind of ability.”

“Haha, that’s really amazing. You let me see the soul….”

“It’s not a certainty, so I think it needs to be reviewed.”

They were the Sun Church and the Moon Church.

Basically, the traditional religions that worshipped God followed providence, and naturally had a lot of interest in the birth and death of life. And these two were the religions closest to funerals before the religion of death.

“By the way, I heard that the monster called Anticat is not easily tamed.”

A younger priest chimed in to the elder priest's words.

“Yes, I found out that it is a tricky monster that even its trainer cannot handle.”

“Is this correct, not only for domestic trainers but also for all cases abroad?”

“Yes. I heard that this is the first case in the world where the training of an anti-cat has been successful.”

“This is something that will catch the eye overseas as well….”

“It seems there has already been an uproar among the trainers.”

A trainer's authority and prestige depended on how many, how varied, and how difficult the types of monsters he could train. If it was true that he had trained an Anticat, then Sergio, the Hunter, would gain quite a good reputation.

“They say that Anticats don’t allow humans to approach them in the first place.”

“I don’t know much about that field, so I’m asking, but can’t you catch it by force?”

“They say that if you go against the will of the Lord, everything around you will burn.”

“If you are a hunter with fire resistance….”

“It is said that even the most resistant hunters have a hard time with the flames that burn the soul.”

“This is truly a soul-burning flame.”

The priests, who could not help but be sensitive to the subject of the soul, were in an uproar.

“I would like to get a glimpse of that power, would that be possible?”

“It won’t be easy, since he’s a talent that’s been kept hidden from the collectors.”

“It seems like he’s a hunter who has been loved by collectors all his life… but if you approach him clumsily, you’ll get in big trouble.”

“But wouldn’t it be necessary to confirm whether that ability is true or not?”

“How can we have the authority to determine whether it is true or not?”

“Ahem, sorry. I got carried away.”

The Hunter's command authority always rested with the guild he belonged to, and interfering with it meant trying to start a war of wits with that guild. The Solar Cult did not want to engage in such a war of wits with the three major guilds in South Korea.

“I understand how you feel. If Anticat really has the power to interfere with souls….”

“It could also be a great help when priests of the Church are mobilized for funeral masses.”

“It will also be a great help to the image of the Sun Church. The recent dungeon opening incident has caused the church’s prestige to decline significantly.”

“The prospective priests are still anxious.”

“At times like these, wouldn’t it be better to show the merits and honor of the church so that the prospective priests and believers can feel at ease?”

Another elder priest expressed his discomfort.

“But wouldn’t it be a trainer, not a priest, who can handle an Anticat? Even if the Anticat’s abilities are true, the church wouldn’t be able to train the child….”

“Can’t we get some help from the hunter Sergio in that regard? I heard that he showed healing powers similar to the sun even during the ‘Deep Sea Kingdom’. If that’s the case, then I don’t think you have bad feelings toward our church. Even if you got caught up in such an incident, your faith is….”

“No, listen, guys. The problem isn’t that feelings aren’t bad, but shouldn’t we be worried that good feelings can become bad? I heard that you’ve been acting as an unofficial hunter up until now because you’re so reluctant to pay attention.”

“Now that he’s openly revealed himself, I guess he’s thinking of living as a public hunter. I also agree that there’s no need to incur Sergio Hunter’s dislike for him. If his ability is real, we should approach him as politely as possible.”

“More than anything, I….”

A middle-aged priest continued speaking.

“I think his abilities are real.”

“How did you come to think that way?”

“Isn’t he a collector’s hunter, nothing else?”

“Aha, indeed….”

“I am not the type of person to show favoritism without reason.”

The tastes of the collector Bisabal are widely known, and the most basic requirement is that he must be 'competent and honest'. There is no way that he, with his keen eye, would cherish a hunter with so much bubbles.

“Well, if the leader of the Visabal Guild had acknowledged it….”

“I can’t help but believe that.”

“What can you believe in if not the collector’s eye?”

Aren't you a human being whose purpose in life is your collection?

“But I’m still not sure about the exact ability.”

“It would be the symbol of a fool to try to steal someone else’s hunter skills without putting in any effort.”

“Well, that is true, but….”

It was extremely rude of him to rip off the personal information of a poor hunter who was not even the guild leader. Information about his exact abilities, what skills he used, and his rank.

“Now that things have come to this, what needs to be known will gradually become known.”

The elder priests knew how to read the flow.

“The fact that he showed his face and that it wasn’t controlled by a guild that collected it… means that he’s ready to show the world the Hunter Sergio.”

“Isn’t the dungeon the best stage to debut a hunter? It’s not like there aren’t dungeons to conquer in this world, and it’s not like there aren’t guilds that are curious about his abilities….”

“If there is no suitable place, we can give it to you. How about requesting cooperation on conquering the dungeon in Gangwon-do that we discovered earlier?”

“Anyway, we’ll soon be able to find out whether the abilities of the West Hunter are true or not. Hehe, if possible, I’m really curious about the abilities of that child called Anti-Cat.”

The priests who said so soon looked at one young priest.

“…….”

Priest Kang Seo-dam, who had previously gone on a dungeon raid with the 'Sergio Hunter', gritted his teeth in secret.

'Oh, sun.'

Please give this priest the courage to endure the ordeal that has been given to him.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (161)

161

Episode 161

At exactly 12 o'clock, when most of the citizens have collapsed from exhaustion, in the hallway of an apartment building in Seoul.

“Is it really right to do this like this?”

Joo-Hyeon questioned the form of meeting that was truly rare to find in modern society.

“Putting two folding chairs in the hallway of the apartment, facing the portrait hanging on the wall opposite?”

“Why, there’s a table, too. This is a table that our guild made ourselves.”

“It’s definitely a semicircular table, so it’s nice because it makes it feel like Geo-ssi is here with us.”

“It doesn’t feel like it’s actually here, does it?”

“Because you didn’t come out of the frame yourself.”

Joohyun smiled bitterly.

“It feels strange because it’s in a framed form, and it feels like we’re having a conversation over a memorial photo.”

The portrait itself answered him.

“In a sense, I am a spirit portrait.”

Yoo Seong-un refuted that.

“No, Geo is a portrait, not a photograph.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un is right about that part.”

“Of course, ‘Portrait of Geo’ could be not a regular portrait, but a different portrait (first funeral). I mean, the portrait that was used when holding a funeral.”

“That seems like a clever guess.”

“We’re discussing your identity, do you have anything else to add?”

“I want to say that I respect all diversity.”

And Joohyun thought.

'What kind of conversation is this?'

It was a quality conversation that brought a smile to my face.

“Are you really sure there is no risk that our conversation will be leaked to the outside?”

“I told you in advance, Mr. Joo-Hyeon.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled a trustworthy and reliable smile.

“This is an expensive apartment.”

“Yes.”

“It’s an apartment that’s easy to lose your back if you’re not a very strong hunter.”

“That’s probably true.”

“If that was the place where information was leaked while receiving that money, it would have already burned down.”

“I guess so.”

Joo-hyun, who obediently agreed, pointed to the CCTV located in the apartment hallway.

“I assume that has been taken care of as well?”

“I still have many doubts, even though I readily agreed.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“That part has been taken care of cleanly for a long time, so you don’t have to worry.”

“I’m more worried about which parts have been handled neatly.”

“There are many ominous rumors about the collectors, but as you know, most of them are just ghost stories created by our works, right?”

“Yes, I continue to be worried about that part as well.”

“The collector does not see innocent blood. It was not the kind of treatment that would harm the administrators, so you can really rest assured.”

He added.

“We just reached an agreement with money as usual.”

“Of all the stories that come to mind, which one should I start with so that our conversation can proceed smoothly?”

“You don’t have to bring up the story in your head.”

Yoo Seong-un blocked Joo-hyun's worries in advance.

“Wouldn’t it be far better to take a lot of money and keep your mouth shut, rather than to not take money and be silenced? I can confidently testify that there was absolutely no coercion.”

“I feel a bit bitter about the world where everything is solved with money.”

“I can’t help but agree with that. But there’s no one in the world who hates money, and in the end, isn’t it important not to cross the line? We resolved it within a mutually acceptable line.”

“I didn’t mean to meddle in the collection process….”

“And above all, you may wonder if money will really be enough to silence you, but I used the soul contract for that part. Unless you want to extort various prices, your silence will be certain.”

“So, can you please stop saying that we’re just keeping our mouths shut like an illegal guild?”

It makes ordinary people who hear it feel really strange.

“I was a little taken aback by this strange meeting I had never seen before, but I can still trust it if it’s a soul contract.”

“What exactly is a soul contract?”

“Ah, that’s….”

Joo-hyun gathered his thoughts in response to the portrait's question. It was such obvious common sense that he couldn't think of an explanation for it at the time.

“…It is literally a contract for the soul. Recently, there have been quite a few different methods being used, but the one thing they have in common is that they utilize the Awakened One’s system.”

“The system of the awakened.”

“Because it is a higher-dimensional existence that is different from that of humans, who easily become dull and lose their meaning. It is impossible to change the contents of the contract midway unless you add related provisions.”

“Are the managers here Awakened?”

“There are those who are Awakened and those who are not. However, in the case of a soul contract, it is possible to conclude it with only one Awakened person involved in the ritual. It is also possible as the subject who is not a party to the contract.”

Yoo Seong-woon added to Joo Hyun's explanation.

“The manager who signed a contract with me was an Awakened One.”

“That is a sufficient explanation.”

The portrait nodded.

“Would you like to start the meeting now?”

“Okay.”

As Yoo Seong-un nodded, Joo-hyun opened her mouth.

“Fortunately, in this uproar over the new system, the hunter industry’s main focus has been on Dana Yang. I think it was because she had previously mentioned Sergio Hunter as a trainer. The public seems to be most convinced by the claim that it was not her own abilities but the help she received from the monsters.”

If Geo had done something like that alone without Dana, it wouldn't have been covered up as something like a 'surprising commotion'. Isn't it beyond the realm of humans for an individual to summon a healthy soul with a single gesture? Even if it's not that they don't have any skills related to souls.

However, the number of trainers was very small, and none of them succeeded in training the Anticat. Ju-Hyeon thought that since the Anticat, an unknown monster, had such amazing abilities related to the soul, people would somehow accept it.

“I think Geo’s help was actually great, but the public probably doesn’t know that much.”

If 'Geo's Portrait' had not allowed it in the first place, Anti-Cat, who was the size of a kitten, would not have been able to grow to that level, and would not have been able to acquire the ability to summon spirits.

It's not like training a typical anti-cat will lead to antics like 'Sergio Hunter', but for now, it's better to let it go like this so that Geo can blend in with humans without feeling awkward.

“That’s why….”

Joohyun continued her explanation with her signature smile.

“It seems that the religious community is particularly interested in this incident. The Sun Church and the Moon Church in particular have responded.”

“I have visited the Sun Bridge before.”

“You may have seen it briefly at the previous initiation ceremony. However, it is a prayer space that has been opened up so that anyone other than the staff can enter, so the feeling will be different if you go further inside.”

Joohyun took out a piece of paper.

“I’m saying this in that context.”

He continued speaking to the portrait.

“We have received a request for collaboration from the Solar Church.”

“Do they want to test my abilities?”

“It may sound unpleasant, but that is the situation.”

Yoo Seong-woon, who was watching the conversation between the two, was secretly impressed by Joo-hyun's calm response.

'You have great courage to be able to answer so nonchalantly.'

It’s not that Joo-Hyeon doesn’t know anything about the ‘Portrait of Geo’. He had learned about it with the help of the Collectors Guild members, including Yoo Seong-Un, and because he was a researcher at the association, he was also well aware of its danger and magnitude.

'And yet, that's the reaction?'

If they were ordinary people, it would be difficult to answer, "It might be unpleasant, but it's true," to the great mystery that makes people question their abilities.

‘You’re being generous in some really strange ways… .’

The conversation between the two continued while Yoo Seong-un had a strange feeling.

“Because right now people don’t know anything about ‘Sergio Hunter’.”

“I know I have provided as many clues as possible about my information.”

“Thanks to Mr. Geo performing small miracles for other orphanages, their awareness has increased.”

“It wasn’t anything like a miracle.”

“Yes, it was a kind of performance, not a miracle. Thanks to that performance and the collaboration with curator Yoo Seong-un, I am gaining recognition at an unusually fast rate.”

but.

“That doesn’t mean that people have all their questions about ‘Sergio Hunter’ answered.”

“Rather, it means that their doubts have grown bigger.”

“Yes, exactly what is this Hunter’s specialty? What position does he occupy? What has he been doing all this time… There are so many things that people are curious about.”

Joo-Hyeon said while showing the documents sent from the Solar Church.

“When you think about it that way, this solar bridge tangent could be of great help.”

It was a request for a visit from the Solar Church.

“This is the most common method used when you want to see a famous hunter in a group. If it were a guild, which is the most popular group that manages hunters, you would have sent an email or a business card.”

“Yes, it’s a kind of request for friendship. Hunters who think it wouldn’t hurt to become friends often get requests like this. It’s just a matter of trying it out.”

Approaches vary from guild to guild.

“The method will differ depending on whether you are a guild member or a freelance hunter. Even if you are a freelance hunter, if you have a manager, they will contact you first.”

Joohyun nodded at him.

“I was in the same situation. It is rude to contact a hunter you just met. So, if you want to be formal, you usually make various requests and express your opinions to the hunter’s manager or the guild they belong to.”

Joohyun added.

“Ah, the term ‘newbie hunter’ is a slang term for hunters who haven’t been active for very long.”

“Was that slang?”

“Usually it refers to a hunter with little experience, but in rare cases it is used to belittle the skills of an opponent. Naturally, this is also extremely rude behavior.”

“That is a sufficient explanation.”

“In the future, if there are any words or actions that you do not understand, please ask me.”

Joo-hyun continued speaking, handing the documents over to Geo.

“This request is simply a casual greeting, like, ‘Shall we become friends?’ However, it is unusual for a religious group of the size of the Sun Church to reach out so directly.”

Everyone who should know will already know.

“I will prepare it as you wish.”

“It’s the Sun Church.”

Geo asked Yoo Seong-un.

“Isn’t this where Father Kang Seo-dam and student Chae Sol are?”

“That’s right, this request also came from Priest Kang Seo-dam.”

“It seems like I haven’t been contacted personally.”

“You’re not the type of person to ask for personal favors, Father Kang Seo-dam.”

“I felt the same way when I saw it before.”

The portrait made a decision.

“I will see you soon.”

“The church?”

“Father Kang Seo-dam.”

Joohyun nodded at him.

“I will prepare accordingly.”

And I thought to myself.

'Isn't the church itself still not up to the mark?'

To begin with, Giovanni was a strange case if he had any positive feelings toward the Solar Church. However, because Giovanni himself was a strange personality, there seemed to be no ill feelings, but he didn't seem to be all that good either.

'Just a little curious.'

He said he had stopped by once before, so it seemed like he wasn't completely uninterested. From Joo-hyun's perspective, it was the easiest reaction to handle.

“I have received a few other requests and contacts. They are not very important, and most of them are from the mass media, so I have summarized them briefly. Should I explain them to you?”

“I don’t want to run two events together.”

“Oh, I understand. It would certainly be difficult for Sergio Hunter to do two things at the same time. I will prepare so that you can focus on just one task.”

Joohyun and Yoo Seongwoon thought.

'Is this Mr. Geo's rule?'

'It looks like there are restrictions on activities.'

One was a gardener and the other was a former researcher at the association. Neither of them could simply think, 'Geo is an introvert who doesn't have the energy to handle many things at once.'

This wasn't just a matter of their careers. Sergio never struck me as an introvert who would become withered when out of the house, whether to a complete stranger or someone who had known him for a long time.

'It would be difficult to stay outside the frame for a long time while lowering your status.'

Yoo Seong-un thought so and smiled innocently.

“Then what date would be best?”

“I will follow whatever you recommend.”

“Okay, Joohyun, check that out.”

The first hallway meeting concluded in a warm atmosphere.

* * *

And here, there was someone who was neither warm nor finished.

“Haaah….”

Kang Seo-dam, the priest of the sun who had been treated as a jerk, thought.

'The religious world is like a worm.'

It was a world where the younger you were and the lower your rank, the more naturally you became a slave.

He braced himself, thinking that he would have left long ago if it weren't for the merciful sun.

It was time to meet the divine.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (162)

162

Episode 162

A few days later, 'Sergio Hunter' visits the Sun Church.

“Thank you for visiting.”

Kang Seo-dam came out in person to greet him.

“Wasn’t it difficult to get here?”

“I was filled with excitement at the thought of seeing the sun again that I had seen that day.”

“It is fate that the sun’s light reaches you.”

He guided Geo with his characteristically blunt face.

“Please follow me.”

“Please.”

Geo followed Kang Seo-dam and admired the true appearance of the Sun Church temple.

'It's definitely different from the church I belonged to.'

Compared to the solar bridge of Geo, which was extremely splendid despite being severely corroded by the mermaids' plot, the solar bridge of Earth was much more modest, yet full of a gentle atmosphere. It seemed as if it was filled with sunlight.

'I think you mainly used a clean white color rather than gold.'

Since he was someone who drew pictures often, Geo couldn't help but value aesthetic value over historical value. The atmosphere here was much warmer and more cheerful than he had imagined.

“It’s noisy.”

“Are you feeling offended?”

“No, I asked because it sounded good to me.”

“Then this priest has a good heart.”

Kang Seo-dam continued speaking in his characteristically calm tone.

“One of the greatest things about the Solar Church is that it is full of energy.”

“I’ve been to the Church of Death before, but it’s completely different.”

“Because the Church of Death is a sect that values silence as a virtue and values the group over the individual.”

They walked down a hallway filled with sunlight through the large windows.

“In other words, the Priests of Death are also called the Family of Silence. Compared to other sects, they have a particularly firm family structure, but apart from that, they value obedience and flow… so they must have been very quiet.”

It was different from the Solar Church.

“Warmth belongs to the living. Our little sun light, given by the sun, burns while we are alive, and after burning everything, it returns to the sun."

"That's why the atmosphere is so bright."

"Yes, compared to other religions, we tend to pursue the freedom of individual priests. So, even within the religious order, we have comfortable conversations with a minimum of formality. So…."

Kang Seo-dam glanced at the priests passing by with a light smile.

"The Taeyang Church generally has this kind of noisy atmosphere."

"It looks good."

"I'm glad you saw it that way."

They soon headed to the reception room of the Sun Church.

"Please sit comfortably."

As the two sat down, those waiting nearby brought out some snacks and tea. Unlike the priests and Kang Seodam he had seen earlier, the sun's energy was not felt strongly, so Geo looked at them.

Kang Seo-dam explained that Geo was not human and that he lacked common sense.

"…These are brothers and sisters who help the priests of our Solar Church in both material and spiritual ways. Although they are not priests, they stay within the church and provide help in both big and small ways."

"I see, thank you for the introduction."

"It is a priest's joy to entertain guests of the church. Thank you, brothers, for the tea. I will now speak to my guest, so please step aside."

The servants quietly withdrew, leaving only Geo and Kang Seo-dam in the reception room.

"…first…."

Kang Seo-dam bowed his head deeply.

“I would like to thank you again on behalf of all the people of the former ‘Deep Sea Country’ for the great mercy you bestowed upon them.”

Kang Seodam's attitude was much more polite and respectful than outside the reception room. Geo realized that he was not treated as a human being in the phrase 'representing all humans', but he left it alone.

'It's a little absurd, but….'

It would be better than being caught as an ordinary human and being dragged off to be used as a test subject. Geo thought so, but he still maintained the attitude he should have as a priest of the sun.

“I’m glad I could help.”

“I hope you received the reward from the church safely.”

“Yes, I received the reward money through the collector.”

“…I didn’t think it was right to compensate you with something like money….”

“What humble words.”

Giovanni smiled his priestly, holy smile.

“I like money.”

“…….”

“Most happiness can be bought with money.”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been silent for a while, nodded.

“I see, that’s good.”

Geo instinctively knew that it was meant to be, 'I don't quite understand, but since you say so, I guess I'll just let it go.' He was familiar with this reaction, as it was often shown by Yoo Seong-un and Joo Hyun.

Kang Seo-dam still maintained an attitude that was burdensomely polite.

“Thanks to your help that day, the number of victims was greatly reduced. It was my job as the person in charge of the initiation ceremony, but by extending a helping hand, the young catechumens were spared their pointless deaths.”

“I think we all did it together.”

“Thank you again for your kind consideration. The reason I called Sergio Hunter today is because the church has requested a meeting. My opinion was not fully reflected, and I will do my best to avoid any unpleasantness.”

“It wasn’t unpleasant at all?”

Did he really think that Geo would say, 'How dare you tell me to come and go?' For some reason, Geo expressed slight doubts at Kang Seo-dam's extremely apologetic and cautious behavior, but Kang Seo-dam's reaction was the same.

“Yes, thank you for believing in me.”

Geo's interpretation was correct. It felt rude to him that a mere human had to call God. No, it wasn't just that it felt rude. It was actually rude.

'I'm afraid that if we continue like this, we'll forget our place as humans.'

The divinity before his eyes was unusually kind to humans, but there was a degree to it. However, Kang Seodam could not shout, “Sergio Hunter actually possessed divinity,” so it was an inevitable situation.

‘The elder priests are still talking about whether to include or not…’

They did not know that they were daring to talk like that about a deity. It was a sin born of ignorance. Kang Seodam, who had to take on this task, felt truly terrible.

“This is not the first time that humans have sinned because they are stupid. I will reflect on this.”

“I don’t know what you mean, but I think it’s a great thing to reflect on yourself.”

Geo, like a cool adult, pretended not to notice Kang Seo-dam's confusion and anger.

“Is there anything I should do?”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam barely managed to hold back her tears.

“…Big, no. How could I expect anything from you?”

“Please don’t be so hard on me. Are you afraid of me?”

“To be honest, I feel more uncomfortable than that. It’s burdensome.”

“I really like that kind of honesty.”

Giovanni's face brightened under Argio's influence.

“You seem to have a lot of anger built up. Do you need to spar?”

“Even if I die right now, I won’t ask you to spar with me.”

“What a sincere soul. You are wonderful, Brother Kang Seo-dam.”

“I can only thank you for affirming my soul.”

Kang Seo-dam felt like he wanted to hide somewhere.

“As I said before, I called Sergio Hunter today simply for the sake of fellowship, so I have not prepared any controls. You can just have a comfortable conversation with me and then go home.”

“Father Kang Seo-dam looks too tired to have a comfortable conversation.”

“I know it sounds a bit blasphemous, but in the end, priests are no different from office workers. There are more things to worry about in terms of relationships than in a regular office. My fatigue is with the existence of the soul, so you don’t have to worry about it.”

“Then, shall we have a comfortable conversation like you suggested?”

Giovanni thought of the young priests here.

“How is Brother Chaisol doing?”

“Ah, that kid….”

Kang Seo-dam's face softened slightly as he thought of his student.

“I wonder if you want to hold it.”

When asked if he would accept him as a believer, Geo simply laughed.

“I don’t think that’s something I should decide.”

“I thought that on the day of the initiation ceremony, you came to find new believers.”

“I intend to make many friends and family, but I have no intention of forcing them.”

“I see.”

Kang Seo-dam nodded.

“I asked because it seemed like Brother Chaisol wanted to be your priest recently.”

“That is not my opinion.”

“I thought so. If you wanted it, it would have been decided on the day of the initiation ceremony….”

Contrary to what Kang Seodam had misunderstood that day, the great mystery called 'Portrait of Geo' was not a deity that was greedy in order to create its own followers. He simply existed without any greed.

'That's even scarier.'

It was truly a rare case of something so huge on its own, without any believers to support it.

“Other than that, there were no major incidents for Brother Chaisol. He was a very friendly and optimistic child, so he had the destiny of having friends around him who wanted to help him.”

Chaisol was a fairly popular child among the prospective priests.

“He is leading a fairly easy life. He is not a student with a strong desire to learn, but he is not the type of person to avoid assigned tasks.”

“I am so happy to hear that. Brother Chaisol’s family will be happy too. I am sure that student will become a great priest and help many people.”

Is this a prophecy?

“…….”

I guess it's a prophecy.

'Let's remember that.'

The divine has a way of foretelling the future without any care. This is especially true of the evil spirits who enjoy play, and who, pursuing their interests free from providence, carelessly spread miracles and disasters.

Kang Seo-dam had no idea that Geo’s words were simply a compliment born of admiration. He continued speaking, predicting the future of Chae Sol.

“As you may or may not know, Brother Chaisol’s partner is a sister named Iruda. In this priest’s eyes, both of them have the qualities of great priests… and there are high expectations for them.”

but.

“If there is one thing that concerns me, it is that Sister Iruda is envied and jealous by other students. I don’t care about that at all.”

“Oh my… As a teacher leading the prospective priests, how much of a burden must you feel?”

“…I thank you for comforting a lowly priest. I don’t think things will get any worse while I’m here, but I brought it up just in case you were concerned.”

After a brief conversation about the prospective priests, Kang Seo-dam got down to the main topic.

“There will soon be a strategy event hosted by the Solar Cult. It will be an A-class dungeon with the emotional name ‘Underground Four-legged Rainforest’, and we have already decided to collaborate with several guilds.”

“Do you want me to join you there?”

“If I may make an excuse, this is not entirely my opinion. However, the Solar Cult is curious about the exact abilities of ‘Sergio Hunter’ and, furthermore, the person himself.”

“It’s exciting to me that I’m getting so much attention.”

“Please feel free to express your opinion. The Sun Church will not dare to deal with you with authority, and even if they did, the place you are staying is the collection center. There is no problem.”

The Collectors' Guild was the third most influential and first wealthiest guild in South Korea. No one wanted to disturb the hive of collectors who were more obsessed with their collection than anyone else.

“It’s a simple offer that you can refuse at will.”

“What kind of dungeon is the ‘Underground Four-legged Forest’?”

“This is a villa dungeon created underground in a limestone cave, and it is a dungeon full of poisonous and sharp plants. That is why we are prioritizing the recruitment of healers and trainers.”

“Healer and trainer.”

Geo's eyes widened sharply.

“That’s me.”

“…I’m just sorry.”

Kang Seo-dam continued speaking as politely as possible.

“This is an event to test you, and at the same time, it is an assignment for our church that should have been carried out originally. This dungeon was originally discovered by the Solar Church, and it has shown various uses, so the church tried to conquer it, but failed.”

“So, you are collaborating with other guilds.”

“Contrary to popular belief, the Sun Church surprisingly doesn’t have many healers. The hot fire of the sun is more focused on destroying life than on carefully saving it. That’s why.”

“I understand that it is not a power that everyone can handle delicately.”

“The deadline is approaching. The campaign is scheduled to begin in 15 days, and despite the short time available, I believe no one is better suited to this event than Sergio Hunter….”

He swallowed the sigh that was about to escape, then said.

“I am sorry to make such an outrageous suggestion.”

“I don’t think it’s going too far off topic, do you?”

“I’m sorry, but where I’m looking, I’ll treat you as a single hunter.”

“Father Kang Seo-dam is also a very stubborn person.”

Geo looked down at the proposal that Kang Seo-dam had handed over with his characteristically sparkling blue eyes.

“…Urim….”

A golden light appeared in his squinting eyes.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (163)

163

Episode 163

Originally, the term 'rainforest' referred to a forest where it rains a lot.

The same was true of the 'Black Forest' that Argio had made his hometown. Rain fell unpredictably every day, a poisonous black fog often appeared, and the ground was muddy, hiding its friend, the swamp.

“I love rainforests.”

In that forest, so dense that not even the sunlight could reach, all kinds of gold and silver treasures were overflowing. Poison is medicine, and a good poison can also become a good elixir. The splendor that bloomed on top of all the piles of corpses… .

“So, I’ll see you in 15 days.”

“Yes, your majesty.”

“There is always a treasure in the forest.”

An ecstatic treasure that turns everything into a beast.

* * *

"uh!"

A young voice echoed through the garden of the headquarters of the school.

“Brother Geo!”

“Student Chaisol.”

It was the first time in a long time that Chaisol saw a familiar face.

“I stopped by because the garden was beautiful, but I never expected to see this precious face.”

The platinum-haired Geo approached Chaisol with his signature refined smile. Chaisol also ran to Geo while holding his partner’s hand and greeted him with his bright face.

“It’s been a long time!”

“Yes, it’s been a while.”

“I've been doing well!”

“Oh no… I lost the question.”

“How have you been, brother?”

“I too am having a peaceful day.”

"thank god."

Chaisol asked with the innocent curiosity and goodwill that is characteristic of children.

“Does it not hurt anymore?”

“…….”

Giovanni had a soft smile painted on his face.

“I wasn’t sick then either.”

“There was a lot of blood.”

“It was blood that needed to be shed.”

“Did you do something wrong?”

“I am responsible for the relationship.”

“What is that?”

“This kind of story….”

He continued speaking while looking at Chaisol's partner.

“I think we should introduce Chaisol’s partner first.”

“Oh, that’s right!”

When Chaisol looked at his partner in surprise, the prospective priest Iruda looked at Chaisol with a slightly wrinkled face. This was because the topic of their conversation was so strange.

“You’re not just thinking about me now, are you?”

“I was always thinking of Ruda because we were holding hands!”

“If you hadn’t spoken a little more nicely, you would have been in big trouble.”

“I was so happy to see you that I forgot to introduce you to Ruda….”

“…….”

I had a lot to say, but I held back and let out a small sigh.

“…Nice to meet you, I am the prospective priest Iruda.”

“Nice to meet you, Sister. My name is Sergio, who has received the light of the sun, albeit in a small way.”

“The light of the sun….”

Iru looked up at Geo.

“Are you a priest…?”

The pure white uniform worn under the pitch-black cloak was like that, and more than anything, it was an atmosphere that made it impossible not to think that way.

The man who introduced himself as 'Sergio' had platinum-blond hair as clean as sun-drenched marble and sparkling blue eyes. He was the most ideal appearance when one thinks of a 'priest of the sun'.

'The energy isn't that of an ordinary person.'

He was so warm that it could be said that he was 'received the light of the sun'. Iruda could feel the greatness unique to a god from him, which was difficult for anyone who was not a priest greatly loved by a god to experience.

And something, a little more… .

“Oh, no. I’m not a priest.”

“…You’re not a priest?”

“I am just a believer who worships the sun.”

"that…."

I wanted to say something in return, but since he was a stranger and Chae Sol liked him, it was hard to raise my voice. There weren't many adults who liked a child who would try to point out every little thing to someone they just met.

'I think I'll have to talk to Chaisol a bit more later.'

A man named Sergio smiled brightly, perhaps noticing Iruda's feelings.

“I think I have some questions, but do you mind if I ask you more?”

“…I thought it was rude to see an adult for the first time.”

“Sister Iruda, you are very careful and polite.”

Iruda felt a stable, eternal favor in that voice.

“Do you like sweets?”

"…yes?"

When Iru asked a question out of the blue, Chaisol quickly raised his hand.

“Me! Nana! I like sweets! Snacks! Snacks from hyung!”

“This priest’s heart is so good, his desire for snacks is so strong.”

Sergio's face looked very pleased as he said that.

'Ah, they look alike.'

The man who had been smiling like an ideal priest until just a moment ago was caressing Chae Sol’s cheek with a cheerful laugh that was beyond imagination. Iru could feel the depth of his affection in that effortless action.

“It seems like you’ve lost a little weight?”

“Huh? I gained weight!”

“I wish I could gain exactly 15 kg more than this.”

Iru had no choice but to intervene.

“If you keep doing that, you’ll be a pig. You’ll roll around.”

“Become a pig, yap….”

“No.”

Iru was horrified when I thought of the pig Chaisol, who couldn't walk and rolled around. I don't know why, but this Sergio really seemed like he could turn a normal kid into a pig. I could feel his determination.

After hesitating for a while, Iru continued speaking.

“…I don’t really like sweets.”

“So does that mean you don’t enjoy snacks themselves?”

“No, that’s not it….”

“Do you have a favorite snack, Sister Iruda?”

“…dried medicinal herbs.”

"aha."

Even though it must have sounded strange, Sergio nodded his head coolly.

“I guess you like bitter things.”

“It’s just… better to chew on something good for your body. Then your mouth won’t get bored.”

“What a clever attitude to already know how to think about your own health.”

“…….”

“There are few children who know the value of medicinal herbs.”

The hand holding Chae Sol gained strength as the heartfelt kindness poured out as if breathing.

“Luda, your face is red.”

“Be quiet, Chaisol.”

This was the first time I had received such blatant praise from an adult.

'Why are you begging me to come here like this?'

In an era where the perception is widespread that children will grow up on their own if left alone.

In a world where children are viewed not as 'fragile beings who need to be protected and guarded' but as 'beings who need to be managed because they die easily', it was extremely rare to find an adult who was as affectionate to a child as Geo.

‘Somehow, it seemed like Chae Sol and I were on good terms… .’

It was clear that sunlight was gathering together. My face felt hot.

Although Chae Sol was a friend and partner who had to go together, Sergio was an adult who could be relied on by anyone. Iruda stuttered, not remembering being loved so much for no reason by such a person.

“Well, I just eat it because it helps.”

“To be this humble.”

“That’s not it….”

“I was relieved that a child like Sister Iruda was a friend of student Chaisol.”

Sergio smiled with a sense of wonder.

“Surely Sister Iruda would be a great partner.”

“…….”

“Since the weather is so nice, I’ll give you a small gift.”

Sergio, who said so, gave Chaisol and Iruda each a small paper bag.

“I hope this is the gift you wanted. Feel free to use it however you want.”

He rolled his eyes gently, then straightened his back and said goodbye.

“I stopped by today at the call of the Solar Church. After a brief greeting, I think I can meet you on my way back and make my day even better.”

“I liked it too! Hyung, are you coming again?”

“If possible, I will show my face again soon. I will pass on the news of student Chaisol’s well-being to her guardians, Sister Iruda.”

Sergio looked at Iruda and asked in detail.

“Could you please convey my regards to me as well?”

“…Oh, me? To whom?”

“To the guardians of student Chaisol.”

“Why that?”

“I bet you’ll be so happy to know that you have such a great friend.”

"…uh…."

Iru, who had been gaping, lowered his head with a bright red face.

“…Just do whatever you want.”

“Thank you for your permission, sister.”

Sergio, who had bowed slightly, smiled once more and left the garden. He was a high-ranking hunter, so his gait was very neat and there was almost no noise, and for some reason, there was a pleasant scent.

“…….”

“Brother Geo is a good person.”

“…Huh? Oh, I see.”

It's my first time seeing an adult like that.

“Are you always that affectionate?”

“Well, the younger you are, the more you love me.”

“There are natural monuments like that in this day and age….”

“I’ve always wondered, what is a natural monument?”

“All creatures would soon die without the help of the entire universe.”

“…I, I also said it was a natural monument.”

“I will protect you.”

It was a very exaggerated explanation, but Iruda thought that his words were not far off. It was not easy to preserve natural monuments unless the whole world joined forces and cooperated.

'They say birds of a feather flock together, and it really is.'

I never knew there was another person like Chae Sol in the world.

‘That too, from such a big adult… .’

An adult who is kind to everyone, but especially affectionate to children. I thought that kind of thing only happened in fancy novels, but today I realized, 'Wow, that's actually possible.'

Iruda touched the paper bag in my hand.

"……."

A favor given without any proof of worth.

'… It smells good here too.'

I wondered why she had given him such a gift, and why she always carried such a gift with her, but for some reason, a corner of her heart began to tingle, and she hesitated to open the envelope.

At that moment, a mysterious voice was heard from Chaisol.

"Huh? What is this, Ruda?"

"Why, what is it?"

"Is this rubber?"

"…Ah, it's jelly. It's not rubber."

"Then can I eat it?"

"Of course you can eat it."

Jelly must be quite an expensive food, but why do they give it away as a gift so casually?

'It looks like you made it yourself?'

It was an envelope with a ribbon tied around the opening, without a separate brand name written on it. The gift had a strong feeling of being handmade, so Iru hesitated a few more times before opening her own envelope.

The ribbon was of good quality and unraveled smoothly, revealing its interior.

“…….”

Iru tilted his head.

“…What is this?”

“Is there anything you don’t know?”

“I wouldn’t know unless I learned.”

“Uhm….”

Chaisol also tilted his head.

“Is it a flower?”

“It’s just a dried flower.”

“Is it edible?”

“…Did you really give me the medicine?”

“Ugh, is this medicine?”

“I, I don’t know either.”

They were small, golden flowers, gathered in clusters like sheep's wool.

“…….”

I just felt like it was achieved.

‘…the sun…’

The sun goddess is watching.

'No, why?'

What is this?

What on earth would you give a goddess to desire?

* * *

“Hunter.”

Joo-Hyeon, who was waiting at the entrance to the church, asked with her signature smile.

“Did you enjoy your visit?”

“Yes, the garden of the Sun Church was beautiful.”

“They say that the entire place where the Sun Church resides is a greenhouse.”

“The warmth of the sun filled the entire temple complex.”

“It must have been a wonderful sight.”

"and…."

Geo continued speaking, following Joohyun's instructions.

“I saw a lot of happy faces.”

“You said you met with Father Kang Seo-dam.”

“I also saw Brother Chaisol.”

Giovanni said with a warm smile.

“I made a good friend.”

“You are a good friend….”

As Joo-hyun muttered his words and tried to open the backseat door, Geo asked.

“Can I sit in the passenger seat?”

“You may do so as much as you wish.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

Geo and Juhyun sat side by side in the front seat of the car.

“There was a sister named Iruda, and she was very mature.”

“I think you found it very pretty.”

“It was both admirable and sad. He was so smart.”

“I think he will grow up to be a great child.”

If it was none other than 'Geo', the Eye of the Origin, who said such things.

“Is everything okay?”

“15 days later.”

Geo said.

“I will go to the forest.”

“I see you’ve received an offer to attack.”

“I like it.”

“Well then, I’m very happy.”

Joohyun asked.

“Do you like rainforests?”

“…….”

Geo's hair, which was looking out the window, had turned red.

“…I like it very much.”

That is Argio's home, his hometown.

It was a huge, rotten tomb.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (164)

164

Episode 164

At exactly 12 o'clock.

“What kind of place was Urim, your hometown?”

Even though Yoo Seong-un was too busy to attend, the hallway meeting started as usual.

“You seem happy when you talk about that place.”

“It definitely feels good.”

Today's Geo, adorned in gorgeous leather and jewelry and hanging out of the frame, was, of course, Argio.

“Isn’t that what hometown is like?”

“It’s definitely a word that can evoke a variety of emotions.”

Joohyun laughed awkwardly.

“Rather than that, since you are like that….”

"why?"

“It’s scarier than usual.”

“…….”

Geo, who had been lying on the table with half of his body covered in the portrait, sat up slidly.

“…Are you scared?”

“Because it’s like a typical ghost.”

“What ghost is as handsome as me?”

“That’s true.”

However, the power that 'Portrait of Geo' radiates overpowers his external beauty. The fact that most of the members of the Collector's Guild feel fear before realizing that 'Mr. Sergio' is handsome is proof of this.

However, Joo-Hyeon felt a little sorry to say this part, so he mumbled.

“Just… that’s it.”

“Are the collectors still afraid of me?”

“I tried to endure it for a while, but it was such an unscrupulous question that I was speechless.”

“Okay, let’s be honest about it.”

“Isn’t it the symbol of a thief, Argio, to expect people not to be afraid when you can’t even properly imitate a human being?”

'Geo', who can be called the human ego, wanted others to not be afraid of them as much as possible. It was sad to worry about that part, so I tried to refrain from speaking, but it turned out to be absurd.

“If you care that people are scared, try being a little more friendly.”

“Where in the world is there a possessed portrait as kind as mine? Why are you saying such outrageous things?”

“I admit that, but apart from that, I think you are expecting too much return on your investment.”

“If you invest more than this, you’re just a sucker.”

“…That certainly cannot be refuted either.”

Joo Hyun also hoped that Geo wouldn't get caught somewhere.

“Actually, even now, he is being a bit too generous.”

“But if I don’t do this, won’t I just end up being a scary portrait?”

“From the beginning, Mr. Geo’s identity was just a scary portrait, but aren’t you dreaming too big?”

“If this continues, we might end up going on strike.”

“Please bear with me. What if I go on strike after receiving the work?”

“Of course I’m not that irresponsible. Don’t worry, my friend.”

Geo, waving his hand, fell back down onto the table.

'A giant tiger.'

That's exactly what the felines were like. When they were full, they liked to lie down and sleep under the warm sun...

“So, are you willing to answer?”

“What about my hometown?”

“Yes, I think I drank while talking.”

“Isn’t it all because Joohyun scolded me?”

“Rather than scolding you, I just informed you of the reality.”

“That’s what you mean….”

His long braided hair was tossed around as Geo moved about. The various gold and silver ornaments on his head clanked and hit the wooden table. He grumbled, rubbing his forehead against the table.

“…….”

After seeing that, Joo-hyun obtained more information about ‘Geo’s Portrait’.

‘… I guess Argio is the kind of clothes you wear when you’re angry or annoyed.’

This portrait took the form of Giovanni when he was showing mercy and patience, and of Arzio when he was expressing excitement and anger. In everyday life, when there was no need for much interaction, it took the form of Sergio.

'They are sometimes mixed together, but it seems that each has its own use.'

So, will the use of 'geo' to express other emotions also increase?

“…Mr. Argio, you said you were 24 years old?”

“Yeah, I guess.”

"maybe?"

“There’s no one to count my age.”

“Is it time for me to apologize?”

“I was just telling the truth, so what’s the big deal?”

Argio rested his chin on the table.

“I lived a life closer to that of an animal than a human, and the only people around me were family members who were born as animals. There were only those who didn’t think about counting age and those who didn’t know how to count, so how could I really understand?”

“Have you ever thought of taking it apart?”

“I later wondered how old I was. I’m not the type to hold back on what I want, so I went out and checked out the situation. So before I died, I thought, oh, I’m going to die at 24.”

Before Joohyun could say anything else, Geo struck the player.

“First of all, the Black Forest is not a place suitable for counting days. It is dark all the time, morning, evening, and night, so you need to be able to measure time. A child who has abandoned all human dignity and lived like an animal has no spirit to count the days.”

Joohyun asked him.

“Was it always a dark forest?”

“Yes, it was a place where you couldn’t feel the passage of time.”

“Anyone with average taste would go crazy the moment they enter.”

“You’ll die from vicious beasts and vicious poison before that?”

A characteristically cheeky smile appeared on Geo's face, as if he was interested.

“You said you were curious about your hometown?”

“And that hometown, um. I think it was called the Black Forest.”

“That’s it. You understand, I grew up in the Black Forest.”

It was a place that suited Argio's temperament quite well.

“First of all, I said that it is a place without sun or moon.”

“What exactly is that story? On what principle can you not distinguish between day and night?”

“The trees in the Black Forest are very thick and tall. Their leaves are so dense that you can’t see the sky.”

“Have there been any other climate changes?”

“Well, the most common case was that it rained.”

“Well, you said it was Urim.”

Joo-Hyeon tilted his head as if he was curious about something after saying that.

“…Can it rain in a forest where not only is the sky invisible, but the passage of time is not even felt? If that’s the case, wouldn’t the sky and the forest be completely separated?”

Argio smiled as if he was satisfied.

“Well thought out, my friend. In such a dense forest, even if there were a torrential downpour, there would only be a few drops. However, the Black Forest collects the rainwater that falls.”

“Collect rainwater…?”

“And then, from time to time, the rainwater flows out little by little. The reasons are various. A huge animal rolls its foot, a tree tilts after being hit, or an animal sits on the leaves….”

“It all seems to be related to beasts.”

“That rain was ultimately created by the beasts of the Black Forest. While the rainwater was standing, it was unable to withstand the attacks of various plants and animals, and became highly toxic. If you don’t have immunity, your flesh will rot and your bones will crumble.”

“It looks no different from a dungeon.”

Geo nodded as if confirming Joohyun's words.

“Also, when the temperature in the forest rose too high, fog would form. The fog, which came from the various toxic substances secreted by the flora and fauna of the Black Forest and the terrible swamp, was as black as a shadow, and if you were trapped there, it was difficult to even breathe.”

“…….”

“Also, because my vision was dark, I couldn’t tell if I encountered a dangerous animal on the road or if there were traps set up on either side. I couldn’t tell if the ground beneath my feet was a swamp or something.”

The Black Forest was such a place.

“A place where even small animals, tiny bugs, and unspeakable plants cannot survive without being vicious. In such a place, the only ones left to form the ecosystem are those vicious monsters.”

Geo chuckled.

“There was a reason why it was the source of all kinds of ghost stories.”

“…It’s a ghost story….”

“How afraid must people have been of the two-legged beast that was alive and well there?”

“…Is that why you became notorious?”

“I think it must have had some influence.”

“How on earth did Mr. Argio survive?”

Joohyun asked with a face that showed no particular emotion.

“Didn’t you say that you were left there when you were very young?”

“Yes, I was abandoned in the Black Forest.”

For Argio, it was a turning point in his life, but it wasn't a big deal.

“It was quite enjoyable.”

“Why? Weren’t you scared when you headed into the Black Forest?”

“It could be that I instinctively felt that this was where I should be.”

also.

“It looks more fun than being among those pigs.”

“Usually you say things like you’re going to turn us into pigs….”

“Can’t the pigs I talk about always be complimentary?”

“So what you’re saying now is clearly an insult?”

“It just seemed that way.”

Those fools who thought I was a human and not a beast if I dressed up extravagantly.

“It was quite enjoyable to see such a stupid and cute sight.”

“…Stupid as that may be, was it cute? Where was it?”

“Even if I tell you, you probably won’t sympathize with me.”

“I’m just trying to understand.”

“I really like that attitude of yours.”

Argio said nonchalantly.

“Do you still frequently raise dogs or cats as pets?”

“Other than that, reptiles and insects are popular as pets. There are also fish.”

“Yes, let’s say you were walking down the street and saw a bird picking flowers by the roadside to decorate itself.”

“Oh, yes. A bird that decorates itself with flowers.”

“Or a cat that babbles on and on about things you don’t understand.”

“A cat that talks about unknown things….”

“Like a puppy that comes up to me and shows off its toys.”

“…….”

"how is it."

He asked.

“Is it cute?”

“…I think it would be cute.”

Unfortunately, Joo-Hyeon understood what Argio was saying.

“Is that how you saw the world? Even when you were human?”

“I am still human. It would be very difficult to discriminate against a portrait.”

“Oh, that’s right. Anyway, was that your perspective even when you were an ordinary human being?”

“What’s wrong with my point of view?”

“Well… well….”

Just in case, Joohyun checked again to see if what he understood was correct.

“So Mr. Geo, you think people who dress themselves up and brag or brag about things look like birds, cats, or dogs. Right?”

“I am glad that you understand, my honorable friend.”

“When I think back to the fact that you described him so negatively, I don’t think he had a very good heart or good behavior. Then I think it was something similar to bullying, that’s….”

Joohyun asked.

“Was it cute?”

“Isn’t being stupid cute?”

“I know you were different from others since you were young.”

“Because I am such a special person.”

Argio smiled broadly.

“A dog that thinks it’s human is really cute.”

“If we compare it to that, there would probably be a lot of people who would get angry….”

“Of course, I’m not saying that the two are completely the same, I just wanted to make you understand.”

“It’s a little uncomfortable to put those two on the same line as an example to help understanding.”

“…I see? I admit that it’s too much of an example for those pigs….”

Geo, who had gotten up, naturally entered the portrait. Joo-hyun felt a sense of emptiness as the long, bright red hair that had been hanging on the table disappeared. The portrait continued.

“The Black Forest has always been full of rare treasures.”

“…Treasures? Suddenly?”

“You didn’t ask where I was from.”

“That's what happened.”

“It was overflowing with gold and silver treasures.”

“…….”

“Poison is medicine, and it can also become a treasure….”

The smile was heavy.

“It bloomed over the corpse.”

A calm, heavy smile that you can't tell if it's good or bad.

“I can’t wait to visit the rainforest I’m planning to visit this time.”

“…It certainly seems similar to the dungeon you described.”

“I feel like it’s not my hometown, so don’t worry. It’s a whole other dimension.”

“I feel reassured when you say that, but on the other hand….”

Joohyun trailed off.

“…….”

He asked immediately.

“…Do you want to go back?”

“I want to go out and play.”

“You don’t want to go back to that time?”

“Don’t dwell on the past.”

"okay."

“I love my family and friends.”

also.

“He died because of it.”

Joohyun couldn't interpret the meaning of that smile.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (165)

165

Episode 165

Joo-Hyeon often sympathized with that great mystery.

“…….”

Portrait of Geo.

"…ha…."

Joo-hyun himself knew very well that it was a ridiculous idea.

Joo-hyun, who was lying on a large, soft bed that didn't fit her size, eventually woke up unable to fall asleep. Although her mind was clear, she went to the kitchen to drink water without turning on the light in case she fell asleep.

“…….”

Dalgrak.

I put down my glass.

“…This isn’t something I should be doing.”

Even after drinking cool water, the stuffy feeling in my stomach doesn't go away.

'How dare you sympathize with mystery.'

A divinity is a being that can either imprison a beloved priest for eternity as a result of showing pure affection to him, or make him an idiot and lose all knowledge because of asking for wisdom.

If the object of Joo-Hyeon's sympathy had not been Geo, and if he had not considered himself human and shown mercy, it would not have been strange for him to have been punished by heaven for being arrogant.

'But if it weren't for Mr. Geo in the first place, I wouldn't have thought this.'

The reason why humans do not sympathize with great mysteries is not only because they do not want to offend them or because they do not want to be noticed and suffer disaster, but also because they are incapable of feeling sympathy in the first place.

Who would pity the typhoon and tidal wave that devoured countless people? Who would feel sorry for the Milky Way shining far away and say it is lonely? However, this person named Geo is… .

"……."

He is not even a human, yet he is considered to be the same as me.

"…Please don't do anything out of line."

The reason Joo-hyun did not care about the fact that he came from a despised guitar orphanage was because he was sure that it would make more people happy. But what about Geo? Can he make him happy?

'He is already happy.'

I know it when I hear the story. I know it when I see the face. I know it when I see the voice and the gestures. The countless 'Geos' contained in the portrait lived satisfying lives and died accordingly.

I shouldn't have dared to pity that.

“…….”

Still.

“I am crazy.”

How can you not feel sorry for him?

'I was only 24 years old.'

The more he tried not to think about it, the more persistently the troubles took hold of him.

'I was only 29, and he was 32.'

Human lifespan varies depending on the dimension. Joo-hyun, who was a researcher at the association, knows this. In some places, the average lifespan was 50 years, and in others, it was 500 years. But that wasn’t the point.

In their 20s and early 30s. I don't know if all 'Geos' are like this, but so far, they are. They met death just as they were getting used to human life and were about to bloom and bear fruit.

'How can this not be pitiful?'

How is that possible?

'Those who died most miserably in the most familiar embrace, none other than… .'

Joohyun exhaled consciously.

“…….”

4 o'clock in the morning.

“…Mr. Yoo Seong-woon said he was having a meeting around this time.”

I try to divert my thoughts elsewhere for no reason.

'Yes, let's think of Mr. Yoo Seong-un. We should follow his example.'

Mystery is mystery. No matter how much it takes human form, its essence is not the same. Even if it imitates human life, it is only a game, a fleeting moment of pleasure.

Yoo Seong-un was a person who knew this very well. That is why he respects and loves 'Portrait of Geo', no matter what kind of past it had or what problems it had. As a 'work of art'.

“…….”

But if it feels that way, then maybe I'm crazy.

"…really…."

Yoo Seong-un said that the portrait was part of a large system called the Origin. It would be like the eyes of a human, and since the Origin loves all living things equally, 'Geo' continues to experience life.

Could that be why Geo always experiences the highest skies and the lowest mud?

'That way, the source can obtain information about humans more efficiently?'

A blank sheet of paper that can become anything.

“…Really, it’s not easy.”

It was really hard to become a mysterious friend.

“I can’t help but worry about one thing.”

Joohyun is grateful to Geo.

He is not ignorant of the mystery. He knows well about the divine. Nevertheless, Geo asked to be his friend as a person and at the same time showed his favor as a friend. Joo-hyun was grateful for that.

Sometimes Geo acts childishly and laughs like a young man his age.

'If this is how it is after only knowing each other for a short time, how much more frustrating will it be later on?'

If I could feel this blocked up after seeing them act like 'people' just a few times.

“…….”

Joohyun let out a deep sigh and muttered as she returned to the bedroom.

“…is this the time when you need professional help?”

I felt like I needed to seek advice from Mr. Yoo Seong-un.

* * *

“This is information about the Class A dungeon, ‘Underground Four-legged Rainforest.’”

Yoo Seong-un handed the documents to Bisabal.

“The type is a villa dungeon, the location is the basement of the Hwanseongul Cave in Samcheok, Gangwon-do, and the participating guilds are a total of three, excluding the Taeyanggyo and the Collector. They have been identified as Eunwol, Haeryeong, and Daecheong.”

“Maybe it’s because it’s an event hosted by the Solar Church, but it all seems plausible.”

“It’s famous for its good attitude. In particular, Eunwol is a guild that has already collaborated with the Sun Church several times, so it seems like it would be even more trustworthy. It’s also a guild that makes up 12% of the church’s internal personnel.”

The headquarters of the religious order was not just filled with priests. There were also servants and maids who helped with their daily lives, kitchen staff who took care of meals, and managers of various facilities.

The guild 'Eunwol' has consistently played a role in providing such manpower to the Sun Church and the Moon Church. It was a famous guild with a large number of believers related to the religion, and basically a large number of healers.

“Since Eunwol came forward, I wondered if there was any problem related to the Dalnim Church, so I looked into it, but they haven’t shown any particular interest. It doesn’t seem like they have any intention of taking part in this suppression.”

“I know a little about the recent situation at Dalnim Church.”

Visabal smiled brightly and continued speaking.

“There’s something wrong with the saint over there.”

“I don’t think it’s something I should know about.”

“Madness is coming….”

“Please don’t tell me, I won’t forget.”

“I don’t remember having a guild member with such a bad memory.”

“That’s what I mean.”

Yoo Seong-un was shocked.

“Even though I’ve been studying a bit these days, I’m not an expert on religion, you know that.”

“I’m not asking you to solve anything in particular.”

“I know you wouldn’t have told me in the first place if you didn’t expect anything from me.”

“Well, let’s skip that part for a moment.”

“Are you going to pass?”

“Isn’t the Saintess of Dalnim Church the most important thing right now?”

The visa officer asked.

“What is the atmosphere like in the other two guilds?”

“As you all know, Hae-ryeong was excited to hear that there was an interesting fight coming up….”

“The famous moths.”

Hae-ryung was famous for its guild members who were all full of vitality. It was a guild that was brimming with vitality, but to put it bluntly, it was a guild where fierce fighters gathered. It was a gathering place for fierce warriors who did not die easily, as they had high pain tolerance and immunity to poison.

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking.

“The main office is silent. It seems they are satisfied with the steady job they have asked for.”

“The Daecheong is a typically competent guild.”

Daecheong was not a particularly notable guild. Although it was a fairly high-ranking guild, it was far behind the other guilds participating this time, but its strength lay in its ‘stability.’

“No matter where you go, you do the basics.”

They didn't have as many evil power users as the three major guilds, they didn't have as much mental armament as Eunwol, and they weren't a guild that was crazy about battles like Haeryung, but they did the basics wherever they went. That was Daecheong's strength.

The visa holder laughed.

“I guess you put a lot of effort into it at school.”

“I guess that means you want a stable strategy.”

“This is a dungeon that we failed to conquer even though we brought a decent amount of manpower.”

“There also seems to be some internal concerns that we are trying to invest too much manpower.”

“There was a similar terrorist incident just last year, so you have to be excessive.”

The Sun Church and the Moon Church were the two pillars representing the religious world, and they had a relationship of mutual growth and competition.

However, since the 'Deep Sea Kingdom' incident last year caused the Solar Cult to falter and its power to decline significantly, the Solar Cult would also want to avoid two failed attempts as much as possible.

Yoo Seong-un nodded at him.

“Yes, I found out… It’s a pretty tricky dungeon, regardless of rank.”

The fake moon and sun rise and disappear at will, making it difficult to tell the time of day, and most of the dense vegetation attacks or spits out poison to attack attackers. Furthermore, its sharp shape is said to cut flesh just by brushing against it.

“The plants are plants, but the four-legged monsters that appear here are said to be very aggressive. They are said to be hostile to anything that walks on two legs and try to destroy it.”

“Would people even look down on humans if they walked on all fours?”

“Instead of looking after them, they turn them into the same four-legged beast. It was interesting to hear that the form of the beast changed depending on what the target did and what thoughts they had in life.”

“The claim is quite strong, but it could be a dungeon close to the source.”

“So this time, a gardener said he would come with us. I found out about this through my personal connections, and he is a gardener from Eunwol.”

Gardeners appear to belong to the government and the association, but strictly speaking, they are not under their control. They inherited their gardens from their respective masters and lived their lives in their own way, each with his own responsibility, as if it were a kind of family business.

The gardener belonging to Eunwol was one of them. Just as Yoo Seong-un was a curator belonging to the collection shop, she was also a guild member belonging to Eunwol Guild. Gardeners were rare, but they existed everywhere.

“If it’s a dungeon close to the source, you might be able to find valuable materials.”

“I think the gardener belonging to Eunwol said that the guild leader didn’t know his true identity.”

“It’s a bit much to call it a job… It’s not that great, it’s just a side job.”

Most guild members legally worked two or three jobs. Some, like Yoo Seong-un, revealed that they were gardeners and everyone around them knew that, but most, like the gardeners in Eunwol, did not bother to reveal that they were gardeners.

In the first place, there are not many people who know about the origin, so why bother explaining everything? If it weren't for Yoo Seong-un's obsession with Bi Sa-bal, he wouldn't have told anyone.

“Well, I think it’s a good opportunity.”

Yoo Seong-un spoke as a gardener.

“Isn’t it a stable environment in many ways, as Geo’s first attack?”

“I completely agree with what Curator Yoo Seong-un said.”

The visage was one of boredom.

“I guess I put a lot of thought into it.”

“The eyes of the source are sent among humans, but in reality, even this is not enough.”

“But Sergio isn’t the type of person to go around causing trouble, is he?”

He clicked his tongue.

“With so many capable workers, I wonder if our Sergio Hunter will be able to run wild.”

“That’s why I’m saying that we’re not sending them out to relieve the stress of beasts.”

“How frustrated must Mr. Argio be? He hasn’t even been given a proper battlefield….”

“Even if it’s not that situation?”

However, the purpose of this attack was clear. Argio was to establish himself in the human world as the 'Sergio Hunter', and the collector was to observe such 'Portrait of Geo' and analyze his condition.

How violent is his nature, how will his kindness be revealed, how will he cooperate with humans, and to what extent is this battle what Argio ultimately wants? Is he satisfied with sparring, is he okay with prepared battles, or is there really no other answer than pure blood combat, etc…

“Don’t you think that Curator Yoo Seong-un would like to go to such an interesting event?”

“Of course I want to go too, I want to go. It’s Geo’s first attack, not anyone else’s….”

But things weren't so easy. As a skilled hunter and gardener, Yoo Seong-un was always in need of help, and it had already been five days since he had stayed up all night.

“Even if you try to participate in the conquest in this poor condition, the religious order won’t accept you.”

“I think things will work out somehow if I recover with Geo’s gift, but I think this opportunity is not bad for me either.”

The visa holder smiled broadly.

“Mr. Sergio, isn’t it time for you to become independent from the embrace of the Yoo Seong-un Curator?”

“Artworks should not be independent from their curators. Why would they destroy an already precarious planet?”

“Anyway, since it has come to this, we can’t just send Sergio Hunter from the collection.”

“Why are you saying such obvious things as if you were doing something kind…?”

Yoo Seong-un was dumbfounded.

“Did you really plan on sending the source out alone?”

“I know it’s dangerous, so I’m trying to attach it now. Escort personnel.”

“Shouldn’t we call them surveillance personnel rather than escorts?”

“Rather than that, I would say it’s closer to the human resources of the subalterns….”

“If you show too much favoritism, Geo will feel burdened.”

“So, we are going to try to put in just one curator.”

"ah."

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“Are you thinking of sending the 5th floor manager?”

“Of all the floor leaders, she’s the most beautiful and crazy.”

“He is a person with an outstanding love for his work.”

“We will look into the rest with the training team and the field staff.”

“It’s just right.”

“Isn’t that so?”

The visa holder smiled brightly.

I'm already excited to see what the portrait will look like.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (166)

166 Episode 166 “Do you think Geo looks human?” Yoo Seong-woon corrected himself. “Oh, no. I’m sorry. Do you think he looks like that?” “You can speak comfortably. Just like you would to Mr. Geo.” “…I guess I didn’t learn much when I was young, so I’m used to speaking informally. It doesn’t mean anything bad, so don’t take it personally.” “I already know that Yoo Seong-woon is a good person, so don’t worry.” “Oh, really? I wouldn’t go so far as to say he’s a good person… but I appreciate it if you see him that way.” It was nice that someone three years younger was openly speaking informally to him. ‘He’s such an upright person that it makes me wonder why the guild leader hates people like this so much…’ Yoo Seong-woon smiled lightly, letting go of his discomfort toward his superior. “Anyway, this is a really unique consultation.” After finishing the meeting with Bisabul, Yoo Seong-woon woke up from a long sleep at home and visited his neighbor Joo-hyun’s house to ask about his well-being. In fact, he had not planned to come in, but Joo-hyun led him to do this. “In some ways, it’s great.” Yoo Seong-woon, who was drinking the tea Joo-hyun had given him, blinked his eyes, still half-asleep. “…Uh, wait a minute. Is this the tea that Geo gave you?” “Oh, yes. I said it was made from basalt flowers, so is there a problem?” “…No, I won’t die if I eat it.” It wouldn’t contain any fatal elements. ‘Let’s just drink it.’ If there was anything Yoo Seong-woon had felt, it was that ‘Gio’s Portrait’ hardly affected human identity. Joo-hyun, who had been in the portrait longer than Yoo Seong-woon, was still human. ‘Well, even if the test results say so, there are still some suspicious parts…’ At least from the perspective of humans, Joo-hyun was still ‘human.’ ‘So drinking some tea won’t cause any problems to my identity.' He was out of his mind because he had just woken up from a five-day sleep. If he had been a little more alert, he would have thought about it more deeply, but for Yoo Seong-un, who was receiving the influence of the garden he was serving, he couldn't help but be happy about a medicine that warmed his body. 'Geo's gifts are truly amazing.' Yoo Seong-un was especially cold when he woke up. "…This is delicious." "Right? It had a nice, nutty aroma like grains." "It's not something you can buy just anywhere. Should I ask him to invite me over soon?" "If I drink too much, I get a little hot…" "I'm already cold." Judging from the strong warming effect, it was probably a better medicine for Yoo Seong-un, a hunter and gardener, than for Joo-hyun, an ordinary person. "Let's take a look." [Star of the Sun] [Rank: –] Tea made from the 'Basram Flower' that grew in the beginning of the 'Breathing Sea.' It was in the state of extinction, but was restored from the vein of destiny. Geo, the master of the forest, raised it with love in the nest of living water with his children. He is fair and can accept human bodies. It is excellent in breathing life and warmth into the soul. "……." "Oh, did you just appraise it?" "…Is this the first time you've seen a hunter appraise it?" "Appraisers weren't common in the lab I was at." "It's been a while since I've heard the title of appraiser. Well, I did get a qualification as an appraiser." Yoo Seong-woon smiled faintly as they chatted lightly. "It's not bad for your body after all." "……." "Don't be nervous." "It's a body that's already been discarded, but…." "Why are you giving up so soon?" It wasn't just him who was worried about Joo-hyun's condition, who had received so much care from the Eye of Origin. That's why the collectors, including Yoo Seong-woon, conducted an examination themselves, but thankfully, Joo-hyun was still a normal human. "……." The examination results were as follows. "… There was a common phrase in the gifts Geo gave. 'Geo, the master of the forest, is fair and can even accept human bodies.' It must be one of Geo's ways of caring for humans." There was no need to worry about transforming into a being of origin if you ate ingredients that had passed through his hands. At least that was what Yoo Seong-un thought. “If there was another concern, it would be that I would become a bit too healthy...” “I felt like my lifespan had increased. Would that be a problem?” “Even if my lifespan had increased, it would be hard to live long in this day and age.” It was a world where the average lifespan was 60 years. “High-ranking hunters like me and our guild master would probably live a bit longer, but aside from their strong bodies, hunters are a profession that is perfect for short lives. The same goes for the people next to them. So I guess I don’t have to worry about becoming half-immortal.” “… So no matter how much my lifespan increases, I’ll die artificially anyway, so don’t worry?” “More than anything, Geo doesn’t change innocent humans into the Origin beings out of his greed. So you don’t have to worry.” If you just understand the rules, the Origin beings become more trustworthy than humans. From what I’ve learned about Geo so far, he wouldn’t hurt humans unless it was really bad. “More than that, I’m really surprised by Joohyun’s thoughts.” Yoo Seong-un put down his warm mug and brushed away his hair that was blocking his eyes. He usually keeps his hair neatly pinned up, but since he was just trying to visit, his appearance was really atrocious. “What exactly do you mean when you say Geo looks like a human?” “As the saying goes, ‘Portrait of Geo’ can’t stop itself from looking like a human.” “They say that human thoughts can’t be controlled, but it’s definitely unique.” “…I kept thinking that he was arrogant. And that he was ridiculous.” Joohyun continued, touching his own glass. “But you kept saying that Geo just….” “You looked like an ordinary young man?” “I know it sounds strange.” “Hmm.” Horok . Yoo Seong-woon asked after drinking the flower tea. “Are you possessed?” “I thought about that too.” “Oh, no. I’m not possessed.” “…Is that so?” “Because I’m a certified appraiser.” Yoo Seong-woon could check the condition of most people with his own skills. “At least to my eyes, they look fine.” In this case, there was only one answer. “Does Joo-hyun just see him as a human?” “I didn’t know I was that brave…?” “If Geo were a traditional divinity, he would have been chosen as a saint.” “…Huh? A saint?” “He would have been at least a cult leader.” “It seems like a cult.” “It’s too typical to be called a cult.” Most saints and saintesses in the dimension were created this way. “Do you know roughly what kind of people a saint and saintess are?” “I know as much as others know. So, isn’t it like they’re kind of… adopted children of gods?” “Yes. And even if they’re not necessarily children, they can take the form of friends.” “… This is the first time I’ve heard of that.” “Saints and saintesses aren’t common, so there aren’t many examples on Earth.” Religion wasn’t Yu Seong-un’s specialty, but he had been studying steadily since he learned that Geo had the sun’s divinity. That’s why he was able to answer this question to some extent. “These saints are usually people who have formed a bond with a god while in a human body.” “Is it possible to form a bond with a god? That sounds… blasphemous.” “It’s blasphemous when it’s a one-sided attack by humans against the divine.” The saint was completely different from those blasphemous people. “It’s a bond that is given and received from both sides. The god pours trust and love on the human, and the human accepts it as a given and returns the appropriate amount of trust and love. Just like normal family or friends.” “… So that’s possible….” “It’s really, really rare. That’s why there are so few saints and saintesses. Ordinary people feel a great burden just receiving the voice and favor of God, but this one returns it. God doesn’t feel any lack of it either.” The number of saints is particularly high in Korea, and the number of saints in the entire world is less than 20. If we look at the number of contemporary religions, which are as numerous as the stars in the sky, we can see how rare the existence of saints is. “That’s why saints are a miracle in and of themselves. It’s not for nothing that religious groups suck up to their saints and saintesses. They prove God’s love just by living and breathing, and at the same time, they are the only human windows that can communicate with God.” That’s why most saints are confined to religious groups and play the role of interpreting oracles or revealing God’s intentions. Juhyun tilted his head after hearing that explanation. “Then how can a religious group without saints read

God's will?" "Most people can't." "Oh." "As far as I know, it's one of the two." Yoo Seong-un spread his fingers. "One is to interpret the will of the god you worship through the old records and the Bible. Since communication is not possible, the process and results are uncertain, and the loyalty of the believers decreases." "What about the other cases?" "The other is to gather together priests who are relatively full of spiritual power and try to receive oracles. They perform rituals, lead religious ceremonies, or pray until they receive an answer..." "Not some kind of prayer service..." "That's how difficult it is to communicate with the gods. It's not for nothing that the elders within the sect are treated well. They are so close to their gods that they are respected and treated internally." And. "The one who skips all these cumbersome processes is the saint." So, economically speaking, priests had no choice but to love the saints of the sect. Aren't they the ones who perform rituals, lead ceremonies, pray for a long time, and allow them to skip all these investments? "But that doesn't mean that all religions have saints. In the first place, it's extremely rare to find a vessel that can treat God like family or friends, and that's why religious groups with saints are treated with respect and envy in the religious community." "Treated with respect and envy?" "The more direct and frequent communication with God is possible, the more clearly the humans who serve him can receive his god's grace. To put it more simply, the divine can tell its followers where to find gold mines…" "Uh… does that really work that way?" "This is just an example. Even the most ignorant of gods are superior to the smartest humans on Earth, so their religious group can flourish just by borrowing a portion of their wisdom. And they can enter the embrace of that divine." That's why saints are treated with great respect in the religious community. "It's truly beyond human limitations to be able to accept the voice and touch of God without much consideration. That very existence alone is enough to be worthy of the love of the religious group." Ju-hyeon had doubts about this. "It sounds almost like they're not human, so can adults live a normal life?" "Some adults can, and some can't." After studying, it seems that adults are divided into several types. “There are adults who are so big that they can accept anything from the beginning, whether it’s divinity or non-divinity, while there are adults who can only handle one or a few divinities. Or there are those who were raised as adults from the beginning and were recognized as adults after numerous trials and hardships.” “…That’s…” “As far as I know, the saintess of the Dalnim Church is the last case. The Dalnim Church steadily adopts and raises children who are qualified until a generation of saints emerges. Well, I heard that there are many cases where people die in the process of becoming adults because they can’t handle the gods.” “…….” Juhyun was shocked. “…Does the Dalnim Church do that?” “It’s not that big of a deal these days.” The world was overflowing with people who would rather risk their lives to become a family of gods than remain as poor people on the street or as mere children of humans. That’s why the followers of Dalnim Church and the priests there never stop this kind of education. “Most children who don’t die but don’t become adults become Dalnim Church priests and work. So it’s not a big loss for Dalnim Church either. They’ve been doing this since the Great Calamity, so I guess it’s a kind of… custom.” It wouldn’t be easy for other religions to introduce this kind of education. Dalnim Church has had this kind of custom since long ago, so the church has been stable, but other religions lack the will and ability to do so. “If you think about it in terms of employment, it’s not such a bad thing, right?” “… Of course, hunters also risk their lives to work. It’s already a dangerous world to criticize it as a dangerous custom.” “Dalnim Church doesn’t force people to become adults, they just encourage them.” “But… isn’t that the case? If the guardian encourages them, the adopted children will feel burdened. They won’t be able to refuse.” “At least in today’s world, the concept of a shelter that isn’t so bad is important. Above all….” Yoo Seong-woon rolled his eyes as if he was weighing something. “Where can you get the chance to become a son or daughter of God?” The only religion that gave every child with the potential the chance to become a member of

God's family, regardless of whether they had parents or not, or whether their family was rich or poor, was Dalnim Church. In the end, the parties involved were greedy for that glory. "It's all done by agreement. That's why there's a saying that all priests of Dalnim Church are candidates for saints. That's because only people with a certain level of potential to become saints gather here." Joo-hyun looked a little uncomfortable. Yoo Seong-woon smiled blandly. "You don't like it, do you?" "…It's just a little, it makes me feel bad." "Is it just that it makes me feel bad?" "Sometimes I get sick of the blindness of the religious world." "I agree with that part." Yoo Seong-woon sipped the tea that was still warm. "This tea is really delicious." "Isn't it?" "It's still warm." "It might be because it's a mug, so it lasts a long time, but it's also a characteristic of tea." "It's funny how such a special medicine can cool down in an instant." Yoo Seong-woon, who lightly complimented the warmth of the tea, continued to speak. "Anyway, adults who are created in that way, of course, are also extremely rare… Unlike those who are naturally adults, they seem to have a greater burden on their bodies." "Ah…" "I guess you could say that they're half-not-human. In fact, even if they're innate adults, they can't be free of burden unless they have a constitution that can accept anything." "That's right." "In that sense, Geo won't harm Joo-hyun. However, as I said before, this is, what is it, the typical shortcut for an ordinary human to become a member of a god's family." "…Huh?" Yoo Seong-woon's mint-colored eyes scanned Joo-hyun as if analyzing him. "The divine treats humans equally, and humans treat the divine equally…" "…Huh." "So, your current situation isn't that different?" "I'm not religious…?" "That would be the same for Geo too." Yoo Seong-woon, who laughed heartily, gave a thumbs up. "Fighting." "Yes?" "It'll be fine." "What?" My human disqualification? Joo-hyun felt a little sad. (To be continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (167)

167

Episode 167

“Is it possible to create a saint in that way?”

Yoo Seong-un, who was leaning against the gallery wall, chuckled at the man's blunt words.

“I’m not sure.”

“But just like Mr. Yoo Seong-un said, I’m going through the process of becoming an adult.”

“In the first place, isn’t this the object of divinity that cares for humans? It’s similar to the case of the god of death.”

Adults were people who could treat the deities they worshipped as friends or family without any consideration. Joo-Hyeon, who was maintaining a normal human life thanks to Geo's consideration, could not be said to be like them.

“I was just saying that there was a possibility.”

There are plenty of examples of ordinary people eventually becoming adults with just their own broad mind.

“To begin with, seeing that great mystery as a single young man is absurd to ordinary people. The fact that it is possible is like Joo-Hyeon proving his qualifications."

"If you continue to prove your qualifications one by one, you may eventually become an adult. That is the reason why the Dalnim Church has been able to artificially create adults up until now."

"Even so, we don't know what kind of adult Joo-hyun will become. More than anything, there is a high probability that he will not become an adult because Geo does not want him to and Joo-hyun lacks the qualities to do so."

So let's say.

"Mr. Joo-hyun just climbed one step."

If there were steps from a criminal to an adult, Joo-hyun would have only climbed one step. And before reaching that destination, no matter how many steps he climbed, he would have remained an ordinary human being.

"So I don't think you need to worry that much, senior. It's still in the realm of imagination."

"It's not something I should worry about. But did you explain that part well to the person involved?"

"I came here to tell you everything because I felt like I would get caught if I didn't explain properly. He has a gentle face, but he actually has a bad temper. He's a surprisingly scary person, and he's also strong-willed."

"Ordinary people do not sympathize with great mysteries. What if they are just 'people who appear ordinary'?"

The man clicked his tongue.

"It's good to tell them to be careful."

“I did say so, but….”

“Well, if things could be resolved just by talking, then there wouldn’t be any tragedies in this world.”

“I’m trying to control myself, but I’m not sure.”

Many saints throughout history have become friends with the family of God because they can treat the precious divinity as an equal without any hesitation. It is not something that can be controlled by oneself.

“He certainly has the potential.”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“But the current situation doesn’t seem that bad.”

“Isn’t that bad habit of yours, Yoo Seong-un, back?”

“Oh, of course there is a little bit of that too.”

As a curator of the Bisabul and a gardener of the snowfield, how could he resist this interest? Although the source is a being that can be anything and can contain anything, it was questionable whether he could contain the child of God.

However, it was not a decision based solely on Yoo Seong-un's own interests.

“From the beginning, Geo was reluctant to manipulate the people he cared about as he pleased.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“So, unless Mr. Joo-Hyeon wishes it otherwise, he will continue to remain an ordinary human being.”

“Are you sure about that?”

“Because we have the results of observing and analyzing Geo so far.”

“When it comes to rules, the Source is more trustworthy than humans.”

“So, for now, I told him to do whatever he wants.”

“If there is no other way, then that would be better.”

The man nodded.

“The reason ‘Portrait of Geo’ embraced that man, Joo-hyeon, may have been because he had such a foolish personality, so it may be presumptuous for people like us to twist his direction by talking about it.”

“…….”

“If ‘Portrait of Geo’ is satisfied with that aspect of Joo-hyun, then it would be better to leave it as is. You too, please refrain from doing anything foolish just because it looks fun.”

“…Is there any possibility of that?”

Yoo Seong-un made a face as if he was really tired.

“I think you, senior, love the existence of the source too much… um, love it.”

“If you don’t love art, are you qualified to be a curator of a collection?”

“There is a limit to that. If you give your heart to a dangerous mystery too much, an accident will happen someday.”

“I have that much judgment.”

A man crouched in the hallway, chewing on a lollipop, a meteor shower drifted by.

“What would happen if a group called gardeners had such feelings? They would arrogantly pity a whole race?”

“I’m sorry if it sounded bad. But I guess that’s how it is. Just think of it as a minor occupational disease.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed innocently.

“Didn’t the floor leader devote his life to his work, like the guild master?”

The man's name was Garasani. He was the head of the 5th floor of the collection gallery, and was also known as the 'butler' in the world. As the head of the most dangerous floor of the gallery that Bisabal treasured more than his life, he had an incredible love for art.

He was also one of the few members of the collector's guild who knew that Yoo Seong-un was a gardener. Garasani looked down at Yoo Seong-un as if he was pitiful.

“I don’t know what kind of life you’re talking about when you’ve even signed a body waiver.”

“No, it wasn’t a body waiver, it was just a contract. Why are you saying such ominous things?”

“I don’t know what the difference is, but it’s natural for a curator to love a piece of work.”

“Of course, what you said is all correct, sir. Of course you would say that, considering you are the head of the 5th floor.”

“It’s not that I don’t know that Mr. Yoo Seong-woon is saying that because he’s worried about me.”

Garasani raised his eyebrows.

“But it’s just funny that Mr. Yoo Seong-un, who devoted his whole body to the garden, is worried about my attitude toward life, which is only concerned about my artwork. Isn't that right?"

"Well, if you say so, then I have nothing else to say."

"I know that the guild leader and I are particularly biased towards the convenience of the works. But we are doing it because we deserve it."

"I'm telling you, you guys are really biased. It's not my place to say that…."

When the safety of both people and artwork is at stake, they unconditionally prioritize the artwork. That was the case for the art-obsessed collector Bisabal and his loyal aide, the 5th floor manager.

"Anyway, Joohyun's work will end well."

"Rather, wasn't it the case that they threw a bomb at me?"

"If that was a bomb, it was a bomb that Joo-hyun received from the beginning."

"That doesn't make any sense."

"I know it's a bit tricky, but I'll just do whatever I feel like doing."

Such small details were not something Yoo Seong-un had to worry about. No matter which direction it jumped out in, it wouldn't be a problem as long as Geo was holding on.

Yoo Seong-un looked at the immediate reality. What he had to worry about now was Geo's first attack.

"I heard that you are also joining the collection team this time."

"It is something I should not indulge in, to let such a mystery out."

"Oh, what great confidence."

“So, did you come today to ask for ‘Geo’s Portrait’?”

“I came to see you in person to ask for your favor.”

Visabal chose Garasani, the head of the 5th floor, as the curator who would take charge of this 'Sergio Hunter'. He is an excellent curator who knows how to treat a work of art like its owner, and is also a top-class hunter with excellent escort skills.

In addition, two trainee team members and two field staff will be included in the dispatched team, but as a fellow curator, Yoo Seong-un was able to show this much sincerity.

“Please take good care of my work.”

“There’s no way the work will be damaged while I’m here.”

Garasani nodded as if he understood.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un can be a bit excessive at times.”

“Huh? Suddenly?”

"okay."

He said, looking down at the meteor cloud.

“So, let’s do something about those eyes.”

“What’s wrong with my eyes?”

“I’ll bring you your work neatly, so close your eyes, Yoo Seong-un.”

“No, this can’t be happening….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled brightly.

“I got caught.”

I can't help but care that my work is being handled by other curators.

“There is so much to do that I don’t have time, and the guild leader wondered if Geo could be satisfied with a curator other than the one in charge.”

“Is that what you’re unhappy about?”

“I’m not complaining. I just asked you to take good care of my child. It’s the first time I’ve left him with strangers, so I feel uneasy because he’s like a child left out on the water.”

There was also the problem that no matter how hard he thought about it, he couldn't find enough time to participate in the strategy, but Bisabal wanted to see how Geo interacted with strangers.

“I’m getting along well with Mr. Joo-Hyeon, whom I met through an evil deity, so I wonder if I need to worry that much….”

“There is a difference between a divinity interacting with a single human chosen by the divine and a divinity pretending to be a human and mixing with strangers.”

Garasani continued speaking.

“The fact that the target was that person, Joo-Hyeon, also contributed to the guild leader’s distrust.”

“…Well, that’s it.”

Yoo Seong-un asked with a face that said he really didn't want to know.

“I’ve always wondered, why do you hate Joohyun so much?”

There was something a bit excessive about Bisabal's behavior. It was not like Bisabal, who always maintained a gentlemanly attitude unless it was related to his collecting habit.

Above all, even though Joo-hyun may have wanted to use Geo, Bisabul himself acknowledged that he was not the type of person who could ultimately harm Geo. He himself admitted that all of his ill will was just his own fuss.

Then why on earth?

“There have been many people that the guild leader disliked, but I don’t think there has ever been a case where they showed their malice so openly. They would just smile in front of you and talk behind your back….”

“Do you really want to know the guild leader’s personal circumstances? How dare you ask with that kind of expression on your face.”

“It’s a personal matter and I would avoid it if I could, but the guild leader is trying to tie me, Juhyun, and Geo together in one place. We’re almost on the verge of being treated as a set, so I can’t ignore that.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been controlling his expression, looked up at Garasani and asked.

“I think the floor manager would know.”

He was one of the early executives of the collection, and the first collection acquired by Bisabal. Perhaps the curator Garasani would know the details.

“If my question was rude, you can just ignore it. But I don’t think the guild leader didn’t expect me to have such a question.”

“…….”

Then Garasani opened his mouth.

“Have you ever been treated badly by heroes like Mr. Joo-Hyeon?”

“It was somewhat expected, and that alone is surprising, but… how badly must you have suffered to have such ill will towards a complete stranger?”

“Well, now that kind of person is going to be a total idiot. He’ll be horrified.”

He added.

“The guild leader tried to be patient many times, but the results were not good.”

Garasani clicked his tongue slightly.

“It’s a shame that you got caught up in it. However, no matter how malicious the guild leader may be, he won’t harm you. Rather, he’ll try to protect you, despite his own feelings, so you don’t have to worry about that.”

“I don’t think the guild leader would treat an innocent person like that, but it’s surprising. I thought it wouldn’t be strange if he harmed me since he hated me so much, but it’s the opposite. Isn’t the collector’s effort quite grand…?”

“If I had to put it into perspective, I think it’s a love-hate relationship. I know you hate it with all your heart and soul, but you wouldn’t just sit by and watch Joo-hyun get hurt or something. I’ll tell you again, what you’re worried about won’t happen.”

The malice shown by the sly was a kind of conditioned reflex. It meant that it was not much different from the natural anger and shame felt by someone who was suddenly subjected to an insulting personal attack, or the creepy feeling of a cockroach sitting on the bridge of the nose.

“Especially his eyes and….”

“…….”

“…Um, yeah.”

Garasani, who was about to say something, trailed off when he saw Yoo Seong-un staring at him.

“Should we stop here?”

It was not a good idea to talk carelessly about my superior's personal circumstances. Garasani thought that even this was excessive.

“I told you because I thought you’d soon get caught up in that situation, and I don’t plan on telling you any more. The rest is too personal for me to talk about.”

“…I think it would be a great help if you could just tell me that much. I just don’t understand why the guild master would harbor ill will toward someone much younger than him, and one who is not yet awakened.”

“I don’t think that the guild leader’s behavior is right either. I just accept it. My arms are always bent inward, and from my perspective, it’s completely understandable….”

Garasani comforted his junior.

“When the guild leader hears the badmouthing of someone named Ju-hyeon, he will listen with one ear and ignore it with the other. He will know that it is childish and sly swearing. He would not want you to seriously think about and worry about such worthless nonsense.”

“I know you complain a lot about that, but I understand. I just asked if it would be okay if Geo went on a business trip this time and Joohyun had to go with him.”

“Isn’t it possible that the guild master would send an assassination squad? Of course, if he truly felt only disgust and contempt, he would have done so, but as I said before, this time is different. Instead, he will send personnel to make sure that Joohyun is not hurt.”

Garasani spoke.

“I’m more worried about Geo-ssi than that. And the identity of that anti-cat named Danara.”

“Ah… I don’t know the details either. I don’t even know what exactly Geo did through Dana that day.”

“I understand that it is an ability related to the soul, but as you said, the gift that the ‘Portrait of Geo’ was supposed to give you is….”

Yoo Seong-un continued speaking as if he knew what he was talking about.

“It wasn’t just a funeral, it was a ‘grave.’ But Geo has never made such a grave before.”

“I also wonder where the spirits of the orphanage led by Anticat Danara went. Their whereabouts are unknown.”

“You’ll know more clearly if you see how Dana performs in this attack. Well, if that doesn’t work out, you can ask her directly.”

Yoo Seong-un said as he stood up from his seat.

“I hope everything goes well.”

Only when this incident ends successfully or without a hitch will there be grounds to let Geo go free.

“If this strategy goes well, I plan to take Geo and Hyun-ssi on a vacation together.”

“I envy you for being able to enjoy your work and vacation.”

“Right? Do you know how kind our child is? He gives her presents and I told you it’s not a joke.”

“Stop it, it’s like you’re losing your arms.”

“There is no work like Geo in the world. Feel free to be jealous.”

“This is really….”

Garasani, who was about to show his annoyance, soon let out a sigh.

“…Okay, see you later.”

I knew that asking about the guild leader's secret, which was unusual, and that this annoying reaction right now was due to unfounded anxiety.

As a senior, he overlooked the incompetent behavior of his young junior.

* * *

Meanwhile, the Solar Church.

“Are you saying that the collector’s curator is coming too? The curator from that gallery?”

An elder priest muttered as if he was embarrassed.

“Huh, how did we get such precious manpower…?”

“I knew that the Visabal Guild Leader was quite favoring Sergio Hunter, but this is unexpected.”

“Isn’t that really a work of art? Well, really, a proper human being.”

“Isn’t it common knowledge that the collector’s box is the jewel box of the guild leader of the Bisabal?”

“But there is a limit… This is a bit excessive.”

In the collection, five more hunters were added, centering around Sergio Hunter. Considering that Sergio, who was the first to be attacked, could not be sent alone, this felt like a bit too much.

“They say that it’s not just the curator, but the ‘head of the gallery’ himself. The head of the 5th floor of the gallery.”

The head of the gallery, which can be called the heart of the collection, is in charge of the entire gallery. Just by joining, you can see how much and in what way the Bisabales cherish Sergio Hunter.

“No matter how many people were drafted from that side, I thought that Curator Yoo Seong-un, who had previously attacked the ‘Deep Sea Country’ with me, would show up….”

“Meteor Hunters are known for being busy.”

“I don’t know the exact circumstances, but even so, since this is the first time I’ve heard of this combination, I’m guessing that the butler wasn’t dispatched based on simple friendships?”

“If a curator was going to be dispatched due to a matter of friendship, Curator Yoo Seong-un would have been on the list. No matter how busy he is, since it’s his first attack, wouldn’t he have been able to make time to do it? However, if there’s just one curator assigned to it….”

“Apart from the friendship, doesn’t this mean that Sergio Hunter needs to have a ‘curator’ on his team?”

“That's what I'm saying."

The curator of the collection was a very special force. It was a completely different feeling from the guild members who usually worked in the field of the collection outside the guild.

“Has a collector ever tried to manage his guild members to this extent?”

“I don’t remember specifically….”

“I thought humans were treated like humans.”

“But isn’t sending a curator, and especially a floor leader, really treating it like a work of art?”

“Even if all the members of the Collectors’ Guild are from the Bisabal Collection, this is a bit….”

The curator of the collection had a reputation, or notoriety. When a collector's gallery puts in a request for collaboration to utilize an object, the curator in charge of that 'work' comes along.

“I know full well how extreme those curators are.”

They truly loved those bizarre and creepy 'creations' as if they were family or friends.

There was even a curator who shed tears of blood and filed a formal complaint through the VISABUL, claiming that the work he was in charge of was damaged during use. That anecdote was a huge topic of conversation even at the Taeyanggyo.

“As far as I know, isn’t the 5th floor leader a close associate of the Bisabal Guild Leader?”

“Yes, I also understand that the butler was one of the early executives of the collection.”

“Curator Garasani, a loyal follower of the collector, is personally stepping forward….”

A middle-aged priest tilted his head as if he didn't quite understand.

“Could he be a hidden son?”

“Oh, please refrain from being rude.”

“I’m sorry. No matter how much I think about it, I just can’t understand it….”

“It is certainly an unusual case.”

With a few exceptions, curators of collections rarely even leave their galleries, where they work, and are only formally dispatched when the work they are responsible for is related to the project in question.

“There’s no way the leader of the Visabal Guild wouldn’t know about this perception.”

Even so, it was obvious that they had to put in a 5-story building.

“…I guess you’re trying to show how Sergio Hunter is treated by the collectors?”

“…But what kind of treatment should I consider this? He’s not just a simple guild member, what is this….”

It wasn't just the Visa-Bal layer that was inserted.

“I know some of your people, and the two people on this list are members of the gallery’s training team.”

“I don’t know much about how collectors work, but what exactly is a trainee team member?”

“It literally refers to the people who deal with incidents that occur in the gallery. You can think of them as the people between the curator and the regular guild members.”

“Then it seems like this is really being treated as a work of art rather than a human being….”

“Visabal is famous for not touching his own guild members, so this is unusual.”

The purpose of the secret mission revealed in this list was clear.

“These are the personnel to escort the hunter named Sergio.”

And in fact, at this point, it's become a bit ambiguous to even call it 'escort'.

“Isn’t it closer to surveillance? No matter what, to the curator, to the training team….”

“I don’t think Sergio Hunter has any major personal problems.”

“If there were any personal issues in the first place, it wouldn’t have become a collection item of the Bisabal Guildmaster.”

“That’s true. Huh, then why on earth do you do this?”

There was not a single person in the collection of the Victims who had any personality flaws. They were all honest and capable people, and they all had the minimum qualifications to take responsibility for the work they were given.

Of course, the hunter Sergio seemed to have a personality that was far removed from the impression that Bisabal usually preferred, but Bisabal often collected these exceptional collectibles. So it was probably not a problem with Sergio's personality.

“When I saw the recent Anticat incident, I thought it was really something out of the ordinary… I didn’t know that the leader of the Bisabal Guild would come out like this. Why on earth? What’s the problem?”

“There must be something peculiar about him that he is so concerned about, but is it really possible that he is his bloodline? In this day and age, there is no reason for someone to look exactly like their parents.”

“That’s why I’m asking you to refrain from making such rude assumptions about other guild members. Do you have any friction with the collector before even starting the quest? Everyone, just do it in moderation, moderation.”

At that moment, one of the elder priests said with a chuckle.

“I don’t know why he does this, but I know a man named Bisabal. He may be greedy, but he’s not the type of person to ruin other people’s business out of greed.”

If Visabal had intended to ruin and destroy something, he would have shown signs of it from the beginning.

“By officially submitting the documents, taking the time to send in personal information, and supporting this campaign… At the very least, it means that the Collector has a clear purpose for helping with this campaign.”

“That is true, but….”

“There is no reason for us to know everything about the young hunter. We have no right or qualification to do so. If the collectors are willing to help us with our homework, we should be grateful.”

“We’re sorry, it was our fault.”

“Pride is a sin that even the sun abhors. And the young Sergio is also a believer who has received the light of the sun. It was our greed that brought him into this attack, so even if there are variables….”

He looked around and said.

“We must endure, shall we not, brothers?”

“I will reflect on this. Thank you for your enlightenment.”

“Remember, our job is to finish this homework.”

“Yes, indeed it is.”

“It would be nice to become friends with Sergio Hunter, but that would be an added bonus.”

“I think we were too hasty.”

The priests bowed their heads in shame.

“Well, we’re not going to do any background checks, so we shouldn’t be talking like this.”

“What kind of harsh words is this guy calling a background check… We are not the Dalnim Church.”

“Ahem, isn’t it because this is such an exceptional incident that everyone is flustered? Of course, I will reflect on it, but….”

“Still, since so many valuable talents have gathered, I think we can look forward to this strategy. It may be a bit too much, but I’m excited about this.”

“It is said to be a dungeon rich in vegetation and heat. It is a dimension where even a fake sun rises, so if we are successful in conquering it, it will be of great help to our Solar Cult.”

When the mood seemed to have calmed down, one of the silent elder priests turned to look at Kang Seo-dam.

“Brother Kang Seo-dam.”

“Yes, I am listening.”

“Please take good care of me.”

“I'll do my best.”

At that point, Kang Seo-dam thought.

'… The team dispatched for this collection is focused on training and investigation rather than favoritism.'

Of course, he wouldn't let the great mystery called 'Portrait of Geo' go by himself. Kang Seo-dam decided to be thankful that the collector was not thoughtless, which was truly, truly, a blessing in disguise.

That was when.

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam felt the gaze of the goddess.

‘… Are you interested?’

It seems like you really want to become friends with Mr. Sergio.

Not knowing why he was stuck among the gods, Kang Seo-dam began to want to stay in his office.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (168)

168

Episode 168

Meanwhile, there was another person who was having a headache because of 'Mr. Sergio', just like Kang Seo-dam.

“…….”

“What’s wrong, Ruda?”

"…uh…."

It was none other than Iru Da, a student of Kang Seo Dam and a prospective priest.

“Because of the gift I received last time.”

“Oh, the one that Geo hyung gave you? That flower?”

“Yeah, I mean those dried flowers.”

“Didn’t you say it’s a medicine? You said you like taking medicine. Can’t you just take it?”

“…That would be the simplest method, but no matter how much I think about it, it’s not an ordinary medicine….”

It was a medicinal herb that was personally gazed upon by none other than the Goddess of the Sun.

‘Plus, the subtle greed of the divine that I felt at that time… .’

It is extremely rare for a divinity to be greedy for human goods, but this time it was the sun goddess who loved the natural order of fate and pure innocence who showed her greed.

'Basically, you are not the type of person to be greedy about anything.'

It was truly absurd that such a divine being would poke the side of Iruda, a lowly novice priest.

“How did it end up like this?”

“What's the problem?"

“I feel like I have received such a precious gift.”

I had not told Chae Sol about my confusion because I thought things might get worse than I imagined, but today, that had reached its limit. I needed a witness for Iru Da.

“Chaisol.”

“Yeah, how can I help you?”

“Your close brother….”

“Are you talking about Geo hyung?”

“Yeah, is that person originally like that?”

“Uh… what?”

“Do you usually just go around throwing out gifts like this?”

"huh!"

“…….”

I was speechless at the moment when I heard such a cool and resolute affirmation.

"…why?"

“When I see people, I feel so special that I want to give them gifts.”

“Why on earth?”

“There is no reason not to give it, so why can’t I give it to you…?”

“What the hell is the problem?”

“Is that the problem?”

“A gift isn’t just a gift.”

In fact, it felt a bit excessive to give Chaisol a fruit jelly as a gift. Chaisol said that he was a brother who had become close with her by chance, but it was an expensive gift given to a child who knew nothing about her by an acquaintance she had only met a few times.

What's more, the gift he received was even greater.

“The reason I said I liked herbs wasn’t because I really wanted to receive them…!”

Usually, when you say you like medicinal herbs, adults are shocked as if they are seeing something they cannot understand, and then they quickly ignore it. No, in the first place, I didn't even know that there were people who actually carried medicinal herbs around.

“Chaisol, what do you feel from these dried flowers?”

“The smell of sunshine?”

"also."

“Fluffy like a blanket that has been dried in the sun?”

“Anyway, it’s the sun, right? Right? It’s the sun, right?”

“Aren’t the sun and sunlight a little different? One is extremely hot and the other is warm.”

“It’s the difference between squeezing and stroking, but it’s the same hand anyway.”

Contrary to the commonly known image of the solar cult, the actual light of the sun is very violent. The better you can control and manage it, the better priest of the sun you can become.

And making a medicine filled with the sunlight of the sun was an extremely difficult task. If you didn't have talent, you wouldn't even be able to try it, and if you made even the slightest mistake, the fragile medicine would burn up in the sun's fire.

“…….”

As expected, this was a gift too precious to be able to bear.

“…Did you give me this gift just to screw me over….”

“Why are you eating candy?”

“…I was wondering if that Sergio guy was giving me this gift to cause trouble.”

“Huh? No, I don’t think so. Why do you think so?”

“Unmerited mercy condemns the poor beggar by the roadside to death.”

“Isn’t Ruda a beggar?”

“Of course, I am a first-class citizen and one of the wealthiest among humans, but even taking that into account, I am still a beggar in this situation.”

“You always make things so difficult.”

“It’s too much of a gift for me, so I’m at risk. There are many people who covet such a precious treasure.”

Looking at the current situation, it wasn't just a problem for people.

“And if you don’t have the power to protect yourself from those who covet it, gifts can actually turn into poison. To give an extreme example, someone who covets the gift I received could kill me and take it away.”

Perhaps because the word 'kill' sounded quite provocative, Chae Sol was startled and asked.

“Should I call Geo hyung?”

“No, if you’re a hunter of that caliber, you’ll be busy, so there’s no need for that….”

The quick-witted Iru knew that there was no malice in the gift given by Sergio.

'But you didn't seem like the kind of person who wouldn't know that it would be a gift I couldn't afford.'

And now I have decided to come to a conclusion.

“…Does this mean to buy favor?”

“I don’t know what you’re talking about, but I think Ruda is overthinking things.”

“If you present the gift that the goddess desires, you will surely receive great protection.”

“I don’t know exactly what it was, but I don’t think Geo-hyung would have thought that far….”

Chae Sol trailed off, not knowing exactly what his partner was thinking, but sensing the depth of his thoughts. He knew that the man in black cloak was just thoughtlessly throwing out presents.

Chae Sol thought as he watched his partner, who seemed to be plotting something similar.

'Smart people seem to live such tiring lives. I'm glad I'm not smart.'

Of course, Geo also knew that his gift could be poisonous to the little priest named Iruda. However, he also gave the gift of the black cloak with peace of mind, knowing that it would not harm anyone.

The baslam flower is a precious medicine with no side effects, so anyone can use it without any problems, and both Geo, who gave it as a gift, and the goddess of the sun approved of the gift. The gift, which was granted under the protection of various divinities, was guaranteed to be safe through providence and fate.

Above all, Geo didn't know how to think deeply, but he knew the depth and breadth of what other people could think. Geo would be happy no matter how Iruda used his gift.

“…I must offer it to the goddess.”

So this was also what Geo had hoped for.

“I’m going to see Father Kang Seo-dam. What do you want to do?”

“I'll go too.”

“If you’re bored being alone, go play with other kids.”

“I just want to be with Ruda, because she’s my partner.”

“…….”

After a while, he slowly nodded his head.

“You’re going to have to live with me by your side for the rest of your life.”

“Huh? Isn’t that how it was originally?”

“It’s nothing, I was just expressing my opinion.”

And Kang Seo-dam, who had just returned from a meeting, said that she was very impressed by the fragrant, warm bomb that her fluffy young student had carefully brought with him.

* * *

A meeting room for the collection.

“Ah, manager.”

“Ms. Yujina?”

The newly formed dispatch team began to gather there one by one.

The fifth floor manager of the collection gallery, Garasani, glanced at the hunter who had just entered the meeting room. The woman he had called Yujina was wearing a suit and cape, the uniform of the gallery’s training team. As the floor manager, she was a familiar face.

“It’s been a while.”

“That’s true.”

The trainee team member sat across from Garasani, smiling brightly.

“Because there’s nothing to clean on the 5th floor.”

“Because it’s not a place where new employees are assigned.”

“I guess it’s because only veterans frequent this place, but I haven’t heard any news.”

“If news from the 5th floor reaches the rescue team, wouldn’t that be a huge problem?”

“Isn’t this all thanks to the care of the floor leader?”

As he rubbed his palms together, Garasani raised his eyebrows.

“Your flattery skills are still the same.”

“Please make it clear whether you like it or not.”

“It’s good, so try it one more time.”

“Oh my, our floor leader has turned on the light on the 5th floor, so peace has come to the gallery and wealth has come in….”

About that time, another person came into the meeting room.

“Wow… what is this?”

“You’re going too far, doing this to someone.”

“Yes, so what are you doing?”

“Don’t you know it when you see it? It’s like flattery.”

“Nothing will come out of flattering the 5th floor manager…?”

A woman in the same department laughed awkwardly at the words of a man working in the field.

“It’s been a while, Manager.”

“Is this the first time you’ve seen me since I was working on the third floor and then got transferred to the field?”

“Yes, I was able to adapt well thanks to all the support you gave me.”

“Yeah, wherever you are, as long as you do your job well, that’s fine. You’re doing well.”

Curator Garasani turned to his trainee team member, Yujina.

“Didn’t you say that one more person from the training team was coming?”

“I received a request for training on the first floor. Since it’s my area, I’ll just check and come back quickly.”

“It’s always nice to see someone taking responsibility for their own actions. I don’t think today’s protagonist will be offended by such behavior.”

“I was going to call you to hurry up and come up, even if it was just a little bit, but this is unexpected. Mr. Geo is also very generous for a piece of work.”

Yujina and the other trainee team members who were looking around smiled as if they found it interesting.

“I thought Curator Yoo Seong-un would be joining us, but he wasn’t on the list?”

“I can’t help it, he’s such a busy person.”

“No matter how busy you are, it’s your own work that counts….”

“Of course, if you adjust your schedule a lot, you won’t have too much free time. But it won’t be easy.”

And that wasn't the only reason.

“The guild leader wants to see how ‘Mr. Sergio’ reacts among strangers. He wants to see if it is worth continuing to use the name ‘Mr. Sergio’, and if there are any dangers.”

Another field worker asked him.

“But isn’t it dangerous? Why is it that the first raid is an A-class dungeon? The difficulty level is definitely not low. Wouldn’t it be better to take your time adjusting in a safer place?”

“Before we take such measures, Mr. Sergio has already set a schedule for us, so we just have to follow it. And even if there hadn’t been such an urgent schedule, the guild leader wouldn’t have done such a tedious task.”

Don't we all know the nature of the Visa?

“He’s not the kind of person who has the patience to take advantage of a stable opportunity that’s clearly right in front of him. If he were the kind of person who would let such a fun event pass him by, he wouldn’t have become a guild leader in the first place.”

“It’s really hard to refute….”

“It’s ridiculous to ask someone who created the collection from the beginning to exercise self-restraint now. There are also many other aspects that you must have judged worth trying this strategy for.”

Perhaps through this opportunity, the Visaval would decide what position to assign 'Mr. Sergio' to. It was a bold and risky task that could result in someone's death, but it was a process that had to be completed at least once since they had decided to introduce 'Sergio Hunter' to the world.

And there was another reason.

“First of all, I’m not sure if Mr. Sergio can endure such a stable and boring job.”

Surely the collectors could have taken a safer chance. They could have placed familiar faces in low-level dungeons, allowing this mystery to gradually adapt to humans.

However, as I had already heard during this expedition, 'Portrait of Geo' had a thirst for bloodshed. He was said to harbor evil divinity, so he might have found such comfortable enclosures disgusting.

“You shouldn’t do anything that would harm the work.”

“I agree with that part.”

The trainee team members and the on-site staff nodded their heads. More than anything, they were the ones who knew very well what kind of disaster could occur when the spirit of the 'work' was twisted.

It wasn't for nothing that all sorts of horror stories arose at the collection. A former curator and on-site staff member spoke out.

“Still, I feel sorry for the curator, Yoo Seong-un.”

“The work I am in charge of is out of my hands and is active outside the world….”

“That’s your first activity too. You must be nervous.”

For the curator of the collection, the work in question was a very sensitive subject, for managing the strange mysteries that twist fate and delve into the mind was truly nerve-racking.

A curator must love his work, study it, and be aware of its dangers. It is inevitable that he will develop an obsession with it, as he lovingly manages a mystery that could kill dozens of people in an instant if it gets out of his hands.

“Especially the work on the 5th floor.”

If a curator doesn't love and obsess over a piece of art, you never know what kind of disaster could happen.

“You must be very upset….”

“That’s why I’m included in this dispatch team.”

“Can you trust someone like the floor manager?”

“I think it would be better to choose the lesser of two evils.”

And it was around that time.

Knock knock.

“…….”

“…….”

"excuse me."

A knock is heard outside the meeting room.

“Can I come in?”

A soft, gloomy voice was asking for permission.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (169)

169

Episode 169

It is a common tradition that evil seeks invitations.

Even the seemingly omnipotent gods had to ask permission to do certain things. You couldn't enter someone's house without permission, you couldn't leave without help, things like that.

“…….”

“…….”

The guild members exchanged glances.

“…Mr. Sergio?”

A voice outside the door answered the trainee team member's question.

“Yes, my name is Sergio.”

The contradictory emptiness of that voice makes me momentarily doubtful.

The collection of all sorts of strange works was basically a place full of ghost stories. They were clearly waiting for 'Mr. Sergio', but they were worried that their current wrong choice might bring about trouble.

At that moment, the 5th floor curator, Garasani, stood up from his seat.

“Floor manager.”

“What are you worried about?”

“Ah, that’s….”

“…….”

"…sorry."

“Tsk.”

Garasani, who had glanced at his juniors, soon opened the door to the meeting room.

“…….”

“Welcome, Sergio.”

A man with platinum hair stood in front of him.

Hair flowing softly and eyes filled with the summer sea. Garasani did not meet the gaze directly, but bowed down to show courtesy toward the work. He was the subject of numerous works.

“I've been waiting.”

“Am I too late?”

“No, you’re right on the mark.”

The current time was 4:00 PM, the exact time of the appointment.

The trainee team member who had entered the meeting room first saw a large man standing beyond Curator Garasani. Contrary to the warm sunlight, his expression was eerily blank.

'They said it resembled a funeral.'

The air was spotlessly clean, but heavier and gloomy than that… .

“…….”

ah.

‘… our eyes met.’

It gently rolled its eyes.

"Nice to meet you."

Death, resembling a corpse, becomes sunlight in an instant.

It was easy to tell that it was a monster imitating a human.

* * *

The position of the black cloak within the collection was that of a 'free-range work'.

The so-called 'Sergio' could easily be encountered in the collection building. Sometimes he was human, sometimes he was a portrait. And the staff avoided talking about him as much as possible.

There are reasons such as not wanting to be cursed, but the most common reason is… .

'If you get caught, you're screwed.'

‘Absolutely no overtime work…’

'As long as it's not me, it's fine.'

Yes, I didn't want to know the complicated circumstances.

“Oh, why are you so kind to humans?”

“How nice it would be if you had no sociability….”

Even though Bisabal treated his guild members like his collection, that did not mean that he treated them as less than human. He strictly distinguished between human collections and non-human works.

Would such a crazy person let dangerous ghost stories run wild inside the building? In that context, the ghost story of this time, 'Mr. Sergio', was particularly kind to humans, which meant that the more they became friends with him, the more likely they were to work extra hours.

“Look at Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

There was also a very appropriate example.

“Poor guy, he probably can’t even go home.”

“But wasn’t Curator Yoo Seong-un busy to begin with?”

“It doesn’t change the fact that I have been given additional duties related to Mr. Sergio.”

“Oh, that’s true. I must never get involved with that.”

That's what happened.

Because of that, the members of the Collector's Guild tried their best not to recognize 'Mr. Sergio' even when they saw him. They followed the order and tried their best to be polite, but they really gritted their teeth and avoided his presence. They didn't want to get close to the eye of the typhoon and get caught up in a disaster.

There were also many people who were afraid of 'Mr. Sergio' and tried to be cautious.

“It’s friendly, but you never know how it’ll change later.”

“As a member of the Collector’s Guild, I respect the existence and words of ‘Sergio,’ but… he’s scary.”

“Rather than that, do I really have to tell ghost stories and pretend to know everything…?”

They did not consider 'Mr. Sergio' as a human being who needed to be interacted with. It was a kind of natural phenomenon, a ghost story that quietly and eerily infiltrated their daily lives.

There were few people who would want to pretend to know about the ghost stories that still exist in Korea, such as the red mask. Who would want to be personally acquainted with a nurse ghost that roams around hospitals late at night or a woman in a white dress on a deserted street?

“No, well, if necessary, I will do it.”

“I will do it if you tell me to.”

“If you ask, I will do it.”

The competent and responsible staff of the collector never did anything they were not told to do, and this was no exception. Even if they were given orders, they would take it as something like, 'Say something nice to the flower pots once in a while!'

“But isn’t this workplace bullying?”

“…Did that apply to your work as well?”

“Oh, that’s true.”

To them, 'Sergio' was a creepy creation of the Vicaribe. He was nothing more than something in human form, not a real human being, and so they felt no need for any special interaction.

If they were really my coworkers, I would have said something nice to them at least once. The members of the collectors' guild are not so much individualistic as they are socially incompetent. But isn't 'Sergio' a work of art?

“I ran into Sergio yesterday.”

“You managed to get to work today.”

“You were more gentle than I expected, so… it was okay.”

“I guess you’ve always lived a good life.”

“I was able to get my name and receive a gift without any problems.”

“It’s neat.”

The 'Sergio Response Policy' that Visabal had previously spread also played a part in this atmosphere.

Now, to them, 'Mr. Sergio' is something like 'a creepy piece of work that you can receive a gift from if you successfully talk to him when you encounter him with rare probability.'

So, although he is not a coworker, he is treated as a creepy natural phenomenon that coexists in the workplace. The members of the collectors' guild have adapted to 'Mr. Sergio' in their own way.

“…….”

“…….”

And back to the meeting room where the dispatch team gathered.

‘… Is this the Sergio I’ve only heard about? The black cloak that gives gifts to good people… .’

'It's definitely more intimidating, it looks like a perfect human, but it's more alien because of that.'

'I've heard that you're good at communicating with intelligent life forms, but how far can you go in imitating humans?'

There was a subtle tension in the air. It was a team-up with none other than the famous ghost story within the building.

Since it was a work of art that Bisabal cherished, it was unlikely that they would be in danger, but it was impossible not to feel nervous after directly confirming its existence.

'No matter how I look at it, I get the strong impression that it's perfect.'

‘I feel like I’m seeing something ideal that cannot exist… .’

Its appearance was very beautiful, and its physique was neither too thin nor too thick. Its appearance, which seemed to fit the average ideal, rather strengthened its inhuman impression.

'Is it because they want to make a favorable impression on other humans that they have that kind of appearance?'

It was a perfect strategy, especially in Korea, where people are very attracted to the appearance of their opponents. In fact, there were many guild members who fell in love with her beauty. It was like looking at a very valuable jewel or relic.

“…….”

A silver-haired woman with copper-colored skin surveyed the situation. The fifth-floor manager who had opened the door for 'Mr. Sergio' had stepped back, which was an unspoken pressure to the other employees.

'Is this supposed to suit me properly?'

It's a special situation, so I don't know if I'll be able to receive a gift, but according to the code of conduct, the first thing I had to do was to exchange names with Black Cloak.

The woman, having finished organizing her thoughts, stood up from her seat and greeted 'Mr. Sergio.'

“Mr. Sergio?”

“Yes, my name is Sergio.”

“I was surprised to find out that you were more handsome than I had heard.”

“Do you like this face?”

“Isn’t it hard not to like it?”

She greeted me with her characteristically coquettish manner.

“Nice to meet you, my name is Yujina.”

“Your name is Yujina. How should I address you?”

“You can call me just now, or you can call me Gina.”

She, a trainee team member, rolled her eyes.

“Please help me with this strategy.”

Indeed, it really seemed human.

'... Don't you know that a slightly imperfect appearance makes you look more human? However, if you look overly idealistic and perfect, the rest of it looks exactly like a human. With this level of mimicry, those who don't know what it is will be fooled helplessly. It's so good that it's dangerous.'

In him, there was almost no sense of incongruity that other strange mysteries reveal in their appearance. That sense of incongruity, too, was nothing more than 'too idealistic', and could not be clearly defined.

'At first I thought it wasn't that good at imitating humans, but maybe it's growing... .'

The growth of an unknown mystery tends to stimulate human fear. Yujina tried hard to shake off the fear she felt and continued the introduction with goodwill.

“This is Kang Neuru and Danmi!”

The field staff looked at Yujina as if they were grateful and opened their mouths.

“Hello, I am Kang Neuru, a field worker at the collection center.”

“I’m also from the same group as Mr. Neuru. My name is Danmi. Please take good care of me.”

Yujina shrugged her shoulders at the smooth introduction.

“One more person from our training team is scheduled to arrive, but it looks like he’ll be a little late because he’s taking care of work on the first floor.”

At that point, the 5th floor manager came out.

“I’m sorry, Sergio. If you permit me, I will go and get him.”

If someone else saw it, they might think, 'Maybe it's a little late, isn't it too humble?', but the other person was a gallery piece. The number of works that were massacred for being late for an appointment was not that small.

The reason they didn't catch the rest of the people earlier was because 'Mr. Sergio' had generous standards. He showed only a little displeasure towards rude people, and showed leniency on the premise that they wouldn't repeat the same mistake.

'But I don't know how far they will tolerate it.'

That is why the 5th floor manager came forward first to examine the work's intentions.

“If you are very offended….”

“I think you might be busy.”

Fortunately, Mr. Sergio did not show any displeasure.

“You said something came up suddenly, so it can’t be helped.”

“Thank you for your understanding.”

“I am truly grateful for the warm hospitality, but on the other hand, I feel sorry.”

He folded his gentle eyes and smiled, mimicking 'embarrassment'.

“Are you scared of me?”

"no."

The fifth floor manager smiled brightly like an old man looking at his grown grandson.

“It’s just an honor.”

That was the smile that curator Garasani showed only to the works.

“We are already familiar with each other, but we are still unfamiliar to Sergio. This is a place for us to get used to each other before the attack, so I hope Sergio will feel comfortable joining us.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

“No problem… Sergio, you usually work in the early mornings and you only show your face so you probably don’t recognize these people’s faces. Let’s talk slowly and get to know each other.”

Even though Curator Garasani had safely placed Mr. Sergio in his seat, he was not at ease. The staff were stiff due to the pressure and near-death aura that this source of existence basically had.

Although I tried to hide it in my own way, Garasani saw it.

'And if it's visible to my eyes, it's bound to look even better to Sergio.'

That was the worrying part.

'I'll have to adapt to the role play that Sergio wants.'

Curator Garasani was able to handle this skillfully due to his extensive experience, but it would be a bit difficult for the training team or the field team. Putting on a play based on the claims of a strange mystery.

Thinking like that, Garasani put down the teacups in front of his team members.

“This is the newly prepared Ajankacha.”

“Oh, the manager’s tea-making skills are trustworthy.”

“Please give me some light reviews.”

I hope they can adapt to each other safely, Garasani smiled.

* * *

Drumroll !

A woman opened the door to the meeting room and came in.

“I’m sorry, the training took so long…!”

And then it hardened.

“Oh my gosh, Mr. Geo, you’re really so funny!”

“You really did that? You’re not joking?”

“Crazy… The smiling tyrant of the sea village… It suits him so well….”

“How can a person do that, and should I call this amazing?”

A friendly atmosphere that I could never have imagined.

“…….”

“Oh, welcome.”

And the blond priest in the center of it all looked at the poor frozen team members who had failed to understand the situation. He spoke in a soft, beautiful voice that seemed to melt everyone.

“My name is Sergio.”

“Huh? Oh, yes.”

“What is your name?”

“This is Kim Nana.”

"okay."

The black cloak asked calmly.

“Would you like to talk to me?”

“…….”

Isn't this a typical brainwashing scene?

‘… What on earth did you do to my coworkers?’

A chill ran down the spine of trainee team member Kim Na-na.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (170)

170

Episode 170

“…Do you know what the first thing I thought when I heard that story?”

Yoo Seong-un said, raising both thumbs up.

“Wow, that’s amazing, how did you do that?”

“You are too kind.”

“I’m not saying that as a compliment, I really thought that.”

The hallway meeting, which was scheduled for 12 o'clock sharp, was held again just before Yoo Seong-un died from overwork. Today, they held a meeting that wasn't a meeting as usual, with Geo's special tea and various snacks.

Joo-Hyeon, who was looking at the worn-out Yoo Seong-Un with pity, coughed in vain and said.

“Ahem, Mr. Geo is more sociable than I thought.”

“Why was such a sociable guy so anxious about not being able to scare people in normal times?”

The black cloak in the portrait answered the pure question like the white snow of a meteor cloud.

“I didn’t scare you. You scared me on your own.”

“Your vocabulary has grown so much since I last saw you. What country does the expression “to scare away” come from?”

“It means I am innocent.”

“No matter how much I think about it, I still can’t understand it.”

Yoo Seong-un asked, rubbing his sore neck.

“How did you create such a friendly atmosphere?”

It was something that was logically impossible.

Geo had a basic sense of class. No matter how well-groomed he was, humans instinctively sense the difference in class and feel a sense of intimidation. Geo, in particular, was a being who had accumulated a creepy kind of class.

“People must have been really scared of you.”

“I put in a lot of effort because I was very scared.”

“I find it so amazing that something can be achieved if you work hard for it.”

“I think it’s fortunate that I have that level of sociality.”

“No, it’s not so much that you have a problem with sociality as… uh….”

In fact, when you consider 'Portrait of Geo' as a human, you can't say that he has bad social skills. He has a side that is so indifferent that it feels terrible, but Geo is very kind and friendly to humans.

'There are some problems that humans are afraid of when interacting with excessive courtesy.'

Anyway, it's a bit awkward to say this as it is.

“…You do look a little scary.”

“I agree.”

Geo nodded obediently.

“There have always been quite a few people who said I was scary.”

Joohyun tilted his head at him.

“Always? Then, when you were Giovanni, were people afraid of you, Mr. Geo?”

“Yes, even back then there were a lot of people who were afraid of me.”

“Mr. Giovanni doesn’t seem like a particularly scary person….”

“To be exact, I should say that I was scared and uncomfortable.”

Although Giovanni was clearly a gentle and kind-hearted priest, many people were unable to treat him as an equal, perhaps because of the authority and noble bearing typical of priests of the Church of the Sun.

“It’s also because I was blond when I was Giovanni.”

“Why blonde again?”

“Because it was a world where there was a superstition that children born with the color of the sun were children of God.”

“Are you a child of God…?”

“In my case, I think the burden was even greater because I was actually a priest of the sun.”

In particular, he was a famous priest with a reputation. It may have been inevitable for the people of that era, when the Sun Church ruled the world, not to treat him as an equal, even though he was called a saint.

“I don’t remember doing anything particularly scary, but I did it anyway.”

“I heard that Mr. Isser had the nickname ‘The Smiling Tyrant of the Sea Village’.”

“…….”

The portrait changed to platinum blonde hair.

“…Did Isser say that? When?”

“That’s how it turned out, because we were having a random conversation while eating lamb skewers last time.”

“I feel so wronged. Why on earth did I have to become a tyrant?”

“If you don’t accept mercy, they force it on you….”

“I think it’s a good thing because the result was good.”

“Aha, indeed. So that’s why you were afraid even when you were Giovanni.”

“It’s unfair.”

Yoo Seong-un let out his characteristically innocent laugh at Geo's sincere appeal.

“I think it was closer to awe than fear.”

“Oh, I guess so. If I had a neighbor like Mr. Giovanni, I don’t think I would have been able to deal with him easily.”

Joohyun also nodded in agreement with Yoo Seongwoon's words.

“You seem like a person who is difficult to approach in a friendly manner.”

The portrait was once again aggrieved.

“I hope we can be friends.”

“We can live like that, but it can’t be helped for people we’re meeting for the first time.”

When it came to Giovanni, who had a mild and cheerful personality, I could only feel awe, but when it came to Sergio, whose facial expressions seemed to have degenerated, or Arzio, who was a battle-mad maniac, I could only feel fear.

Yoo Seong-woon, who had heard the story of 'Sergio' through Joo-hyun, asked.

“But were people afraid of you when you were Sergio? You probably didn’t perform any special miracles like Giovanni, and you probably didn’t get anxious about seeing blood like Argio….”

“Yes, he was an ordinary teacher.”

“No, well, it wasn’t exactly ordinary. No matter how much I think about it, it’s impossible to get that far. Are you trying to say that it was a normal life like a snake jumping over a wall?”

“It’s unfair.”

The portrait had now returned to black hair.

“I was just scared of the impression.”

“It must have been hard to instill fear with such a handsome face, but I guess I should call this amazing….”

“I have always been a kind and helpful teacher.”

“That’s why I said it’s not a problem of words and actions, but a problem of impressions, Geo. Of course, that could be a problem too….”

That wasn't something that could be resolved by saying it was unfair.

“Yeah, that’s weird. Even when I was just a ‘normal teacher,’ like you said, people were scared.”

Before returning home, Yoo Seong-un recalled the story he had heard from the 5th floor manager in the meeting room.

“How did that guy create such a harmonious atmosphere?”

“I keep saying it, but I just tried hard.”

Geo had that much sociability and sociality.

“There were many people who had a hard time with me because I seemed like a person who was hard to get along with, but in the end, we all had good relationships. If people are afraid of me, then all I have to do is let them go.”

Yoo Seong-un was impressed by Geo's words.

“Then why don’t you usually do that?”

“I'm tired.”

"ah?"

“The return on investment is unclear.”

“Is this a losing business?”

“I understand you well.”

If there were people he had to work with or see for a long time, Geo would show off his talents, but most of them were people he just passed by. There was no need to waste energy on them.

“It’s true that my basic impression is scary.”

The more Geo treats them comfortably without any effort, the harder it is for the other person to shake off their fear. But conversely, if Geo treats them sincerely, they won't be afraid at all.

“…….”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un and Joo-hyun thought about it.

'... It's impossible to make someone of that level feel comfortable with such a small investment. It's not a mercy that can be extended to just anyone.'

'Isn't the fact that I can't stand on equal footing with an unspecified number of people without making an effort prove that I'm not human?'

As a gardener and curator, Yoo Seong-un understood the fatigue of the work, and Joo-hyun, standing in the position of a friend, pointed out the contradictions in Geo's usual claims. At least, he did not see him as a human being.

Geo noticed the expressions of Yoo Seong-un and Joo-hyun.

'Doesn't anyone know that I'm just an ordinary introvert?'

People are scared by their impressions, which is the default, and Geo had to expend a lot of energy to explain it and ease the tension. That was the life of a scary introvert.

But since this situation was absurd and funny, Geo decided to just accept the current situation. He had no intention of being flattered by the offer to treat him to a precious portrait. Geo wanted to live his whole life as a portrait.

“…Isn’t it my fault?”

“Oh, that’s not wrong. It actually helps a lot.”

“I felt sorry for the people who would be working with me.”

I heard from Joohyun that the strategy was like a training camp. Or a workshop or a long-term business trip. I didn't want to become awkward with people I would have to spend a long time with.

'It's rare to see such a hell.'

So, it was a hundred times, a thousand times easier to do everything in his power to make a good first impression and spend the rest of the work period in a friendly atmosphere. Geo was really trying desperately to become close with his temporary colleagues.

“However, team member Kim Na-na, who came in later, looked a little surprised.”

“Oh, I heard that story too.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“I thought it was brainwashing.”

“You were very scared of me.”

“I heard that it was eventually resolved after some discussion.”

“It took a lot of effort.”

“I can understand, Ms. Kim Na-na.”

Yoo Seong-woon continued speaking, smiling awkwardly.

“The sight of his colleagues laughing and treating Black Cloak like an old friend while he was away… Honestly, it would be creepy if they met the moment they met. It's nonsense."

"But in the end, I think he felt comfortable with me."

"That's true too. It's not that you're wrong, from what I've heard, Kim Na-na still doesn't seem to be afraid of you. That part is surprising, too."

Yoo Seong-un asked him slyly.

"You didn't really use brainwashing skills?"

"It's really unfair."

"Oh, yeah, sorry, but honestly, I'm a little suspicious."

"Have you ever seen a portrait cry?"

"I'm curious, but I'll leave that impression for next time."

Joo-hyun looked at Yoo Seong-un as if he was looking at a real crazy person, but he ignored him cleanly. Originally, all the curators of Bisabae were like this. The crying appearance of the artwork? It was an extremely rare sight.

But fortunately or unfortunately, Yoo Seong-un was extremely tired, so he passed on this opportunity.

"If he created that kind of atmosphere purely with his wit, wouldn't that be truly amazing?"

"I am glad to hear your compliments."

Geo felt a little happy when he heard his close friend say, "Hey, you're good at socializing." Geo, who is timid and fearful, felt proud because he thought he did something good.

“I think it’s because I’ve had this happen often in the past and I know how to deal with it.”

“Isn’t it your portrait-like appearance that’s causing the trouble?”

“I’m not sure what portraiture means.”

“You have that thing, you know? The thing about it, you get what you want….”

“Are you talking about something like a stone tower built while hiking?”

“…Similar?”

Geo had the ability to do things the way he wanted without having to take any special action. Yoo Seong-un thought that it was possible because he controlled destiny as part of the source.

“Well, either way, it’s great.”

"thank you."

“If you look closely, you’ll see that he secretly likes being praised….”

Joohyun smiled and added to that.

“I guess you’re still young.”

“…….”

Joo-hyun avoided Yoo Seong-un's tired gaze.

“…personality, yes, personality.”

“What are you embarrassed about?”

“I feel like I said something embarrassing….”

“I don’t know if you’re bold or timid.”

“I would appreciate it if you would stop teasing me.”

Joohyun, her face red, said with a hint of resentment.

“But Mr. Geo, aren’t you definitely on the young side? At 29, at 32, at 24….”

“If it was short-lived, then it was short-lived.”

“Don’t focus on death, but look at your age while you’re alive. You’re still young.”

“Yeah, I died quickly. I know that.”

“Are you saying such a sad story in front of Mr. Geo right now?”

“No, it’s just true….”

For some reason, Yoo Seong-un looked back at Geo, feeling like he was being scolded.

“I don’t think you have any regrets?”

“Ah, how I wish I could have lived longer with our mermaid students….”

“Is this what’s going to happen? Are you going to make me the only bad guy, right now?”

“I'm joking.”

Giovanni wasn't particularly dissatisfied with his lifespan either.

“Isn’t there a saying that a beauty fades?”

“That confidence is really nice to see.”

“It is an undeniable fact that I am handsome.”

“It’s shameless in a weird way.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“Anyway, I’m glad we became friends without any major problems.”

“Still, it seemed like you were having a hard time with me.”

“Oh, really? Didn’t you say the atmosphere was good?”

"hmm."

After thinking for a moment, Geo continued speaking.

“There have been many similar cases in the past.”

“In what cases?”

“I accept my full-hearted antics as a kind of mercy and awe….”

“Ah, that was a show of brilliance. I see.”

In fact, I tend to interpret Yoo Seong-un as a great mysterious mercy rather than a joke. I'll just ignore it since he seems to want to pretend to be something he's not, but this is just my personal opinion.

“…….”

“Huh? Why?”

“Are you hungry?”

“…I’m a bit annoyed, but what’s the problem?”

“I thought it was because my stomach was empty, because you seemed to be thinking nonsense.”

“Putting aside what a ridiculous thought it is, why are you linking it to stomach….”

Yoo Seong-un was surprised at how even being grumpy could be unified with feeding.

* * *

So the time of the decisive battle approaches, and it is a day of rest before the attack.

“I’m so happy to see the young master of the collectors’ shop whom I’ve only heard about.”

“…….”

“My lord, you wouldn’t cry in the dungeon because the food wasn’t tasty, would you?”

Geo was being provoked unilaterally by a seemingly normal punk.

'You're challenging me to a meal?'

Amazingly enough, the world seemed to have no intention of understanding his vulnerability.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (171)

171

Episode 171

An event room in a luxurious hotel in Samcheok, Gangwon-do.

“…….”

“…….”

An odd silence flowed between the noisy crowd, and Geo was the first of the two to speak.

He spoke plainly, as if he were telling something very obvious.

“I’ll be preparing the meals, so don’t worry about the food being tasteless.”

“…Ah, the young master is going to do it?”

“I have excellent cooking and digestion skills. So I am confident that I can make delicious meals even in a dungeon.”

“This is another novel answer.”

“Thank you for your concern, but I think it’s a little close. Could you step back a little?”

“Oh, sorry.”

The Hunter, with his impressive black eyes that curved like crescent moons, raised both hands with a grin. It was a typical surrender pose, and also a typical mocking gesture. He backed away from Sergio a little.

“I guess I thought I was the only one who became close to Sergio Hunter after hearing his story.”

“Aha, that was the communion doctor just now. I understand what you mean.”

“Our master is very generous, isn’t he? He has a great sense of humor too. I’m really glad to see you like this.”

There were many hunters who pretended not to notice but secretly listened to the conversation between the two with interest. However, Hunter Sergio didn't seem to care much, and the same goes for the blond hunter who had first requested a 'conversation'.

“I have a habit of blurting out what I say without thinking. You understand, right?”

Sergio smiled and responded to the bold provocation of the man walking towards him with long, straight blond hair and a well-proportioned body, resembling an honest knight from a fairy tale.

“You are so humble.”

“Oh, am I being humble? I’m a little surprised because it’s the first time I’ve heard that.”

“It was a pleasant conversation.”

“Don’t you plan on having any more conversations with such a pleasant conversation partner?”

“I was planning to just show my face and then go back. Please understand.”

“Hmm….”

Hunter, with a face that made it impossible to tell what was going on, stretched out his nasal passages, and Sanarae smiled and retreated. It was a truly pointless retreat, just like when he first spoke to Sergio.

“Let’s have a nice conversation again later.”

“That’s good to hear.”

Curator Garasani, who had been watching the situation, approached him.

“Sergio Hunter.”

As if this unexpected controversy had arisen, there were quite a few people who saw Sergio as a hothouse plant, perhaps because of this collection of collectors.

The collectors who had been aware of this in advance stayed away a little so as not to give the impression that they were 'watching Sergio' or 'playing pranks on him', but this case was an exception.

“Is there anything I can help you with?”

“Well, explain the situation?”

“Yes, you were surprised by the sudden turn of events.”

Garasani continued speaking with an expression on his face as if he had had a hard time.

“This happened as soon as I got to the meeting place.”

Yes, Geo got into trouble as soon as he entered this room.

To explain the current situation, I had to go back in time a little.

* * *

“A hotel?”

Joohyun nodded in response to Geo's question.

“Yes, since it is an event hosted by the Solar Church, I think they put a lot of effort into it.”

“Could you tell me in what sense you took great care of it?”

“I thought Geo-ssi might not know much about these hunter customs, so I compiled them for you.”

Joo-hyun, who stopped by the collection store for the first time in a long time, had a conversation with Geo in a small meeting room.

“It would be nice if the target dungeon to which personnel are dispatched is near the guild involved, but in most cases, it is usually in a completely different area.”

“I think so.”

“This time, it’s a dungeon in Samcheok, Gangwon-do. So, if conditions allow, especially large groups that value their reputation, don’t send their hunters straight to dungeons.”

"then…."

“If possible, find a place where hunters can rest near the dungeon entrance. Think of it as a kind of rest area, which is a custom among hunters.”

Sergio, who did not know much about the current physiology of the Earth, asked.

“Aren’t you going to attack right away?”

“The idea is to get the hunters in top condition before entering the dungeon.”

“Because you’ll lose stamina as you move through the area?”

“That is the biggest reason.”

Joohyun nodded.

“It is possible to teleport individually using the Hunter’s skills or equipment, but in these cases, usually only one person can move. Even that consumes stamina, magic power, or durability.”

Even if a professional teleportation hunter who could move other people and did not participate in the raid helped, it was the same. Above all, it was not the case that the person being moved did not lose stamina.

“To begin with, the number of professional hunters who can help with movement in this way is very small. They are highly skilled workers, and they are difficult to reserve because they are searched for in many places.”

“It may not be a commonly used method.”

“Of course, I know that large guilds like the Collector’s Guild already have several Hunters with such skills… Even if the Collector’s Guild can move in such an easy way, most other guilds wouldn’t be able to do it this way.”

“Then, aren’t there any teleportation locations provided by public institutions? Thinking back to the person named Eunhyuk Cha who used to sell bungeoppang, I think I heard that there was something like that.”

“There are only places where it is installed. It is very limited, but I think Eunhyeok Cha lives in a region where the infrastructure is well-established. In particular, in Gangwon-do, there are no installed terminals.”

“…What do you mean there is no terminal in Gangwon-do?”

When Sergio asked in shock, Joohyun continued to explain.

“It means that there are no transportation facilities installed by the city or government. There are no terminals dedicated to teleportation, which are considered advanced transportation by human standards, and there are no non-magical transportation methods such as railways, and there are not even proper roads for buses or cars.”

However, most hunters have to use this 'road that is not properly paved' when moving to Gangwon-do. As such, Gangwon-do dungeons are known to be places where marching is quite difficult.

“In terms of various infrastructures, there is a big difference between cities and provinces. Gangwon-do is a region that is still suffering from the aftermath of the great disaster, and the only place that is habitable is Samcheok… It is a very barren area.”

“I understand.”

“So, in this raid, we need to provide even more accommodations for the hunters to rest. Even if it’s not a remote area like Gangwon-do, most raids require rest before they start.”

Joohyun smiled her signature smile.

“So that the hunters can attack in the best condition possible.”

“Seeing you say that, I guess there must be another reason.”

“Mr. Geo, you’re right. So, as I said before, it’s probably a matter of face.”

Geo looked up at Joohyun at the unexpected answer.

"face?"

“Especially because they are guilds in Seoul.”

“Do the guilds of Seoul care about saving face?”

“Well, this is a characteristic of the country called Korea….”

Joohyun explained with an embarrassed face.

“Korea, famous for having the largest number of qualified human resources, is small compared to other countries. And among that small land area, only Seoul and Busan are highly developed and have a large concentration of human resources.”

Geo thought about those words.

‘… What’s different from before the catastrophe? The level of difficulty in survival…?’

Joohyun's explanation continued, separate from the questions of the old Koreans.

“And in this city called Seoul, popularity among the citizens is especially important. SNS is particularly developed, the citizens are tightly bound together, and there are so many guilds that are growing thanks to the support of such citizens.”

“Do you mean image trading?”

“You understand. The image of the guild or religious order is very important to the citizens of Seoul. The stronger and more perfect they appear, the more they can believe that they will be safe. That is also a source of pride for the citizens of Seoul.”

“I don’t understand what kind of pride you have.”

“It’s not hard to find one of the most representative human instincts to think that something is yours even though you know it’s not. It’s like citizens with nothing teaming up with famous guilds. People don’t care about themselves and treat others indifferently like Geo-ssi.”

"oh…."

Sergio, the human who was listening, almost felt a little disappointed for a moment. No matter how indifferent I am, was it right for me to continue to be treated like this? It seemed right. The precious portrait treatment was welcome.

Geo nodded, having finished rationalizing himself naturally, like flowing water.

“I understand.”

“I see. Mr. Geo is smart.”

Joohyun smiled as if he was teaching his younger sibling.

“In that sense, large groups in Seoul must save face. And this kind of large-scale attack is the perfect event to save face. It includes the customs I mentioned earlier.”

“Are you talking about the custom of finding lodging near the dungeon?”

“Yes, even if a guild doesn’t have much money, it’s essential to keep to this custom. Guilds that don’t even keep to this custom… well, they’re perceived as ‘guilds that don’t care what happens to their members.’”

Actually, it wasn't that wrong.

“It’s true that a hunter’s survival rate greatly depends on their condition that day. Unless they plan on openly advertising that they’ll kill their guild members, they tend to find lodging near dungeons.”

Of course, there were exceptions.

“There are exceptions, such as illegal guilds. These illegal guilds don’t need to worry about what the citizens think, and they drive their hunters into danger without any care. Illegal guilds don’t really follow customs.”

“Are all illegal guilds like this?”

“There may be other cases, but that’s how it is in all the places I know. Customs are only observed in groups that need to at least maintain a minimal level of respect, and in those places… I guess that’s how it is.”

“They say there are quite a few illegal guilds.”

“Since the population is exploding, illegal guilds are also thriving. There is an overabundance of manpower in the slums, and it is possible to use third-class citizens or fifth-class criminals from the countryside.”

“The population is exploding.”

It was a surprising change when you think back to the Republic of Korea, which was once on the verge of collapse due to population decline. And the change was so terrible that Sergio was speechless. He was scared.

Joo-hyun, who didn't know Geo's true intentions, continued the explanation.

“The Sun Church and all the guilds participating in this raid, including Geo’s collection, have a reputation of a higher level. They will likely receive a lot of attention, so it seems like they are planning to hold a small party to wish for the success of this raid.”

What does this mean? asked Geo.

“What is the party that wishes for the success of the conquest?”

“Um… This isn’t a custom, but it’s an event that’s often included in the strategy. Depending on the circumstances, it may or may not be done.”

Joo-Hyeon continued speaking as if explaining the human world to a cat that knew nothing.

“It’s literally an event to wish for the success of the strategy. It’s a small, short, and exciting festival that raises the mood without wasting the hunters’ precious energy. People who have had enough rest and festivals in such a nice space are mentally and physically fulfilled.”

“I don’t really enjoy festivals.”

“I know that Mr. Geo doesn’t like noisy atmospheres. There will be a lot of reporters and media people gathered, so there won’t be a small number of people. I don’t recommend blatantly not attending because it could cause controversy… but in this case, it’s okay to show your face for a while and then go back to your room.”

“Is that okay?”

“Not all hunters like these events. Some are shy, and some find the event itself disappointing. Since there are quite a lot of people gathered in one place, there may be some who don’t fit in with you.”

Still, these events are usually well-received.

“The most representative meaning of such parties is fellowship. In particular, they are often held when more than one group gathers together, like in this attack. Since the faces are unfamiliar and they do not know each other’s fighting style, the meaning is that they are expected to adapt on their own while the event is in progress.”

“I understand that your intentions are good.”

“Of course, there may be friction with people who don’t fit in during the process, but that’s also part of the meaning of this event. Before entering the full-scale dungeon, we’re trying to find out which hunters are compatible and which aren’t. The combination of hunters is important when conquering.”

“…I have a question.”

Sergio, an introvert, asked.

“You just said ‘combination during attack’, but doesn’t that mean you only group together members of the same guild?”

“Ah… I’m sure Mr. Geo might feel uncomfortable about that part.”

It was such obvious common sense that I couldn't explain it. Joo-hyun nodded as if she felt sorry.

“The trend is to try to stick with guild members as much as possible, but the most important factor when planning a strategy is the position of the hunter. For example, if a guild sends a lot of healers, those healers will have to disperse to different places.”

That was a very valid point.

“…….”

Geo was really shocked.

'I think I'll be shy the whole time I'm on the offensive.'

Does this mean that I have shown all my sociability to the collection staff?

Joo-Hyeon spoke to him as if comforting him.

“Reporters will probably come to the venue, but that’s okay. There will be at least one member of the Collector's Guild with Geo… If the event is too much of a burden for you, you can just get your face painted like I said before and come."

"Wouldn't that be rude to other people?"

"I know there are many hunters who don't enjoy such events. If that happens, the organizers will probably remember Geo as a 'hunter who doesn't like commotion' and organize the group accordingly. It's not rude to worry about that."

"If that's the case, then that's good."

Geo felt relieved by Joohyun's kind encouragement.

"I think there won't be a problem if you just show your face and come."

So Geo headed to the only hotel in Samcheok, Gangwon-do with his collection of family members.

As soon as we came down from the designated room and entered the event room, which was the meeting place, we were immediately involved in a fight.

* * *

Back to the hotel's event room.

"If you wish, I will file a formal complaint with the Hae-ryung."

Geo asked Curator Garasani's words.

"Is the person who just spoke to me a member of the Haeryeong Guild?"

"Yes, I bet you were very offended."

"No, it wasn't as unpleasant as you thought, curator."

“If that’s the case, then that’s good.”

“…Haeryeong….”

It was the guild that heard the story from Joohyun.

“…….”

Geo's eyes stared at the man he had just been talking to.

As their eyes met, Argio pulled down his hood as he watched the hand waving slightly in his direction.

“…It’s a shame.”

There was no malicious intent.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (172)

172

Episode 172

In this narrow world, there are two things that only humans can have.

"One is belief, the other is malice."

If you want my wrath, become human.

Even if a beast howls a hundred times, how can I get angry?

* * *

Sergio Hunter, whose face was actually visible, leaves the event room.

"promotion."

A member of Hae-ryung's guild approached the blonde hunter with a friendly face.

“Why did you do that? Just now, to the hunter at the collector’s shop.”

“Yeah, why would that be?”

“Hmm, you didn’t want to be grouped together?”

“Did it look like that?”

“If the leader doesn’t want to work together, he will do so.”

The man called Jojang had his eyes round like crescent moons.

“I don’t always do that, do I?”

“Are you living up to your reputation, you liar?”

“Ah… I hate that.”

“It’s a name given by the association, so I appreciate it.”

“So even if you say you don’t like it.”

“Just now, it was obvious to everyone that they were picking a fight.”

A guild member patted my leader on the side.

“And did you see?”

“What are you looking at? Something changing colors?”

“I saw it all. What are you talking about?”

“When you suddenly put the hood over your head, I can’t help but look at you….”

The blond hunter, with his mouth hanging open, scanned his surroundings. His dark eyes, which seemed to block out even a single ray of light, contained the world.

“It seems like there are a few other guys who noticed besides us.”

When he returned from poking Sergio Hunter, for some reason he smiled and made eye contact, so I gave him a light wave. Immediately after that, Sergio Hunter's eyes, with his hood pulled down, changed color.

“What color do you think it was?”

“Well, it’s strangely dark under the hood….”

“Hmm, is this really an item?”

“When I saw it, it was yellow?”

“I'll bet on gold.”

“Then it must be gold.”

Jo Won asked with a smile.

“Aren’t the collector’s eyes golden?”

“Oh, no. It feels a little brighter over there.”

“What’s that bright feeling? Fluorescent?”

“Isn’t it similar?”

“Anyway… isn’t there a possibility?”

“What are the possibilities?”

“Hey, you know it and you do it again.”

“It certainly is an interesting idea.”

The blond hunter laughed out loud. Perhaps his beloved companion wanted to say, 'Sergio Hunter, whom the collector Bisabele favors so much, may be related by blood.'

“I wonder who I resemble to have such an empty head.”

“Should I shut up…?”

“Hmm, there are probably still members of the Collectors’ Guild left in the hall who have ears, so wouldn’t it be better to be careful?”

“Then I’ll shut up, Captain.”

“I don’t know who I resemble to be so cute. It must be me, right?”

The man who was being sarcastic without meaning to smile and put his arm around my shoulder.

“Let’s be careful, okay? I don’t want to fight with the collector….”

“Because you got scolded by the class president?”

“That too.”

“But hasn’t there already been a huge fuss over something like that?”

“Aha, is that so?”

His eyes rolled again.

“It’s difficult.”

It was the face of a liar.

* * *

“Haeryeong is….”

Curator Garasani continued.

“It’s a guild of typical fighting cocks.”

“Geo, take your hand,” said Hunter Garasani, as he walked out of the room he had been assigned to.

“People who prefer to live without their brains.”

“Without the brain?”

“It doesn’t mean that you’ve literally lost your brain, but that you’ve lost all thought.”

“I see.”

I didn't ask because I didn't know, but Geo decided to just shut up. Whenever he shut up, he always got halfway there.

The 5th floor manager, who was looking at the portrait of the listening man with a happy expression without even smiling, asked Joo-hyun, who was helping Geo organize his luggage.

“Mr. Joo-Hyeon, do you have any information about the Hae-Ryung Guild?”

“Here is information about the guild members participating in this raid.”

“Thank you for your hard work.”

Curator Garasani, who received a transparent tablet from Joohyun, asked Geo.

“Is it okay if I explain further?”

“It would be a great help if you could do that.”

“It is an honor, thank you.”

Garasani, with a tired smile befitting his nickname of 'Butler', continued speaking.

“The name of the person who approached Sergio Hunter in the event room is Sanarae, and his nickname is ‘Pinocchio.’ His position within the guild is the leader. The guild is comprised of regular employees, team leaders, squad leaders, workplaces, and the guild leader.”

“Is it from the production class?”

“You know a lot about the classes in human society, that’s great. The members of Hae-ryung’s guild consider themselves to be a kind of beautician. And beautician jobs are also a type of production job.”

“Do the members of Hae-ryung’s guild consider themselves sanitation workers?”

“It contains various meanings of beautification. Hae-ryung deals with not only monsters but also 5th-grade citizens who are part of the Red Hunter family. They clean up the dungeon and society, so to speak.”

Garasani displayed the information of the Haeryeong Guild members on the guest room screen.

“But that doesn’t mean we can expect them to be educated to the highest standards.”

“Yes, I think you just said that they are people who live without their brains out.”

“Thank you for remembering. The guild members of Hae-ryung are a difficult workforce to control unless they are their superiors.”

Then, Joo-Hyeon nodded to Garasani for permission and continued speaking.

“If I may add a little more, the members of Hae-ryung’s guild hand over all control to their superiors. They even entrust their own lives to them.”

“Mr. Joo-hyun has mentioned a very important point. Yes, Hae-ryung is usually a gathering place for people who are desperate to die. So, Hae-ryung’s guild members can be divided into three cases.”

Garasani continued explaining one by one.

“The first are those who purely enjoy fighting, the second are those who are terminally insensitive to safety and risk their lives, and the third are those who are addicted to the sense of death.”

He said, pointing to the information about 'Hae-ryeong: Sanarae' displayed on the screen.

“The Sanarae Hunter here falls into that last category.”

“I don’t quite understand the expression ‘addicted to the sense of death’.”

“Literally, I can’t get over the feeling of death… well, I’m an addict.”

Garasani, feeling that his explanation was inadequate, thought for a moment and then continued.

“Sergio Hunter, do you know what kind of behavior a person who is addicted to drugs behaves like? A person who is heavily intoxicated by something that is not necessarily drugs, but something that contains addictions such as cigarettes or alcohol.”

“Yes, I know.”

“I think it would be good to refer to the cases of such people. Sometimes, people cannot control themselves and are ready to die, and sometimes they cannot escape from helplessness. Hunter Sanarae is a much more hedonistic person than that….”

“A hedonistic person?”

“You could categorize him as a kind of hedonist. He often acts like an addict who is addicted to various kinds of stimulation. He may seem to think and act normally, but he is basically not in his right mind. In many ways, he is a person who is burdensome to build personal relationships with.”

Garasani returned to the screen listing Haeryeong's guild members again.

“If I were to come back and explain further, the members of Hae-ryung’s guild obey their superiors.”

“It seems like the hierarchy isn’t clear, but isn’t there anyone who rebels?”

“The chances of that happening are extremely slim. It doesn’t really make sense for them to be in a position of power.”

At those words, Joo-hyun added with a smile.

“Because it’s a guild made up of people who don’t want to think about headaches.”

“Aha, I get it now.”

In short, they only want irresponsible pleasure.

“Then you definitely don’t want to rise to a high position.”

They probably wouldn't have wanted to do that. They seem to be people who hate using their brains to the point where they say, "Live without a brain," but it was clear that they understood that the higher the position, the more responsibility they had to take on.

“They are special people in a way, because their depth of thought is not shallow.”

“I see, they are wonderful. Sergio the Hunter is truly merciful.”

Garasani smiled gently as if he was watching his grandson's talents of getting into a prestigious university and continued speaking.

“Back to the topic we had earlier, there must be a purpose behind the rude behavior that Hunter Sanarae showed you. At least, he’s not a person who doesn’t have a good head on his shoulders as a leader.”

Garasani stroked my chin.

“Hae-ryung doesn’t like the so-called ‘lords’ and ‘ladies’ very much. This is because the guild is full of people of unclear origins, and there is a lot of negative sentiment toward ranks. It’s a typical example of rank conflict.”

“Is your origin unclear?”

“Yes, even Hunter Sanarae is from the slums. Hunter Sanarae in particular… I know it might be unpleasant to say this, but he is known for hating Hunters, who are like hothouse plants.”

Despite his appearance as an innocent knight or a prince from a fairy tale, Sanarae's words and actions were closer to that of a gangster. He was good at getting on people's nerves by laughing out loud.

If the strong do not suppress them with authority, they will not listen, and although they kneel down as easily as breathing, they think of something else behind their backs, and they lie as easily as eating rice with an expression that does not seem like it at all, causing headaches for people.

At times he seems mean, but at other times he acts worse than an animal. He calmly utters false oaths and laughs skillfully, so no one can expect obedience or submission from him.

“He has eyes that are clearly not in his right mind, but he maintains a demeanor that makes him seem sane. He is a Hunter who is rumored to have become a 5th-grade citizen if he had not been taken in by the Hae-ryeong Guild.”

Joo-Hyeon nodded in agreement with Garasani's words.

“I think I get a lot of comments saying that I don’t know what I’m thinking. I also get comments saying that I betray people or do strange things without any reason.”

“There is camaraderie, and the members of Hae-ryung’s guild get along well with each other. Conversely, they don’t try to interact properly with other people.”

Garasani nodded.

“I think the class conflict I just mentioned is in a similar vein.”

“Are you talking about the part where he shows a bad attitude towards the ‘Master’ and the ‘Miss’?”

“Yes, not for everyone, but on average they have this weird attitude towards ‘greenhouse plants’.”

“Unfortunately, I am a greenhouse plant.”

Geo spoke confidently, but Garasani just smiled faintly as if he was watching a cat roll over. Seeing that he seemed to find the nonsense cute, Geo kept his mouth shut once again.

He continued speaking.

“Sergio Hunter is very likely to look like that ‘young master’ from the outside. He is greatly favored by our guild leader, and it would be obvious that these personnel are there to assist him.”

“It must have been very clear.”

“Sadly, yes. Sergio Hunter’s sudden fame is also likely to be met with disapproval, saying it is the work of a collector. In fact, it is not much different, but that is why Sanarae Hunter had many psychological reasons to pick a fight with you, the ‘young master.’”

Joohyun said with an awkward smile.

“It was certainly an excessive amount of manpower for a collector.”

“What does that mean?”

“As far as I know, collectors usually….”

To Joo-Hyeon, who couldn't speak clearly, Garasani agreed as if his thoughts were correct.

“Yes, a collector would not normally invest this much manpower for a single hunter.”

“I’ve heard that new recruits at the collector’s office are usually experienced hunters. They are already quite experienced hunters, so no matter where they are sent, the probability of danger is low.”

“Of course, if it is judged to be dangerous, we do provide generous support, but usually it stops at material support. If not, we send regular field hunters as assistants.”

Geo asked him.

“I’m sure the people who came with me aren’t just field workers?”

“That’s right, I’m a curator myself, and I also have two gallery interns.”

Garasani continued speaking as if he had made a good point.

“The uniforms worn by collectors differ slightly depending on their position. This is so that outsiders can easily recognize the roles of our guild members.”

Field workers wear sleeveless cloaks, trainees wear capes for mobility, and curators wear neat overcoats. If you only wear a suit with a collection mark without a separate uniform, you are classified as a general office worker.

There are many guild members who don’t bother to wear it unless it’s an official event, but this time it wasn’t like that. Garasani pointed to the black cloak Sergio was wearing.

“Sergio Hunter’s cloak is also a type of cloak.”

“Yes, no sleeves.”

“So most people would identify Sergio Hunter as a field worker guild member.”

“Would you think so even though it’s not a collector’s uniform?”

“Hunters are stupid creatures who only use familiar products.”

Clothes that are unfamiliar or uncomfortable to wear tend to not be used often. This is because even a small inconvenience like that can often determine a hunter's life or death.

“In particular, since the Collectors’ Guild considers uniforms to be important enough to be worn outside of official events, they tend to end up with similar equipment. Sergio Hunter will likely be judged in the same way.”

Garasani smiled brightly.

“Will Sergio Hunter also wear the collector’s uniform when the departure ceremony takes place tomorrow or the day after?”

“Yes, I am looking forward to it.”

“I know you may have felt uncomfortable, but thank you for your generous understanding.”

After giving a brief thank you, Garasani continued speaking.

“In these various contexts, it is likely that Hunter Sanarae also had the intention of exploring you. Sergio Hunter has been rumored a lot, but he has not shown much actual activity.”

Geo nodded with his characteristically expressionless face.

“I also felt what Mr. Garasani said.”

“Yes, and if not… maybe….”

Garasani stroked his chin as if assessing something.

“Maybe they didn’t want to be in the same group.”

“Is that so?”

“Sanarae Hunter is famous for often showing this kind of appearance at events the day before entry.”

“Aha, you’re famous.”

“I am a person who seems to swallow what is bitter in my mouth, but ends up spitting it out somehow.”

Joohyun smiled faintly as if she knew what was going on.

“…As I said before, these events provide great clues for planning the personnel combination after entry. This means that there is a high possibility that they are intentionally causing conflict in order to get dropped to another team.”

Garasani smiled politely at him.

“And then, in reverse, there are many times when we end up on the same team.”

“Why is that?”

“Sanarae Hunter does well when she’s with those ‘greenhouse plants.’”

“I guess I don’t like it.”

“There are things that you have to work harder at because you don’t like them.”

“Because you want to finish it quickly?”

“You guessed right, Sergio Hunter.”

Garasani nodded.

“Even if that weren’t the case, I know that the fighting style of those ‘greenhouse plants’ and the Sanarae Hunters are quite compatible. Sanarae Hunters are overly free-spirited, so the stereotypical ‘young masters’ and ‘young ladies’ actually dilute that.”

The two types of hunters often had surprisingly good synergy.

“Still, if possible, we split them into different teams. Especially now that we have enough excellent personnel, there’s no reason to let friction grow between the hunters.”

“I see.”

“Yes, then….”

Garasani asked politely.

“What does Sergio Hunter want to do with that human?”

Now that the portrait had given its desired explanation, all that remained was to ask what he intended.

“I have come here to offer you what you desire. If you do not mind, please let me know your will, and I am willing and able to follow it.”

“…….”

“Sergio Hunter, you can use me as you wish. Can you tell me what you want? Whether it’s intervention, indifference, or even mere chatter, I will do as you say.”

"…well."

Geo continued speaking with those blue eyes and an expressionless

face.

“There was no malicious intent.”

* * *

“There was no malicious intent.”

The straight-haired hunter, Sanarae, spoke with a crescent moon-like smile.

“I just thought it looked fun.”

“…That’s all?”

“I guess I wanted to stab it.”

“What a weird….”

“I was just interested.”

He had a sense that was closer to that of a beast than a human.

“That person, he didn’t smell like a person.”

So I had to know.

What kind of being is with us?

* * *

Geo said.

“It seemed like he was just curious about me.”

“Aha, is that so?”

“So I was a little disappointed.”

Argio stared at the Sana'ra Hunter on the screen with his golden eyes.

“…It’s better to be certain….”

Is this a beast or a human?

“…….”

Of course.

Both would be appropriate qualifications.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (173)

173

Episode 173

The day of the official inauguration ceremony.

“When are you coming out?”

“I think we said we would be leaving at 10.”

“I can still only see the attendants.”

In Gangwon-do, where the aftermath of the great disaster has not yet been fully recovered, people gathered beyond the barricaded danger zone near Hwanseongul Cave in Samcheok, which serves as a small living space.

Even in such a harsh area, it was common for reporters and onlookers to flock to cover a raid by a famous guild. Among those with cameras were reporters, but there were also those who came because they were fans of a particular hunter.

“…….”

Choi Ra-on, once called the 'iron-faced woman', was one of them.

“…The collector hasn’t come out yet….”

As she waited anxiously, a woman who recognized her approached her and spoke to her.

“Hey! Sister!”

“Ugh…!”

“What, it’s been so long!”

“Oh, surprise.”

Choi Ra-on held her pounding heart. Her body seemed tense, perhaps because she had left the safe zone of Seoul and come to the infamous Gangwon-do Province alone.

Luckily, the person who spoke to her was one of the fans who had once toured the country with her to take photos of Hunter. As expected, the woman holding the camera smiled and glanced at Choi Ra-on.

“After that Hunter Black Cloak took you away and left like that, did that Light and Salt appear again? Since you came here, it’s another Hunter?”

“Uh… Hunter. But really, why are you here? Where’s the well you were digging?”

The type of fan who would quickly grow cold like Choi Ra-on was not the type of person who would be welcomed in the same fan club, but the woman was able to become close to Choi Ra-on thanks to her similar disposition.

And they had once met while playing on a stone plate. So, they became friends while being idol fans. Choi Ra-on, who remembered that the last time she saw a woman, she was digging a male idol, was puzzled… .

“…….”

“…Oh, sorry….”

"…no…."

Why would she, who was selling civilian idols, come here with a camera?

'Your well has burst too.'

Since she hadn't heard any news of the group's collapse, it seems her favorite had some kind of accident and was heartbroken. She was also a person who was sensitive to the flaws of her fangirls.

‘Where in the world can you find a flawless celebrity these days…’

Usually, the flaws that cool their hearts were character controversies that had conclusive evidence: videos of them abusing their managers, audio files of them belittling and badmouthing others, and things like that.

Although most celebrities have such 'flaws' in the world, Choi Ra-on had a hard time maintaining her affection when she saw the negative side of the person she loved. And she couldn't get over it unless there was a reason to accept it or if there was a face that didn't even need to be accepted...

I was aware that it was a bit unusual.

‘Still… I don’t know how everyone can endure seeing things like that.’

Out of human courtesy, I didn't say, "What on earth did that kid do?" I was curious, but there were things I could and couldn't say. Why should I put salt in someone's wound?

“…Ahem.”

"greatness."

The two tacitly did not delve deep into it.

“Then who did you come to see?”

"ah…."

“It’s okay, I made a new account too.”

“That’s not it.”

The woman answered with an embarrassed expression.

“Sanarae Hunter….”

"huh?"

“I have a child who is so shameful that I can’t even show him. He’s a crazy guy who always causes trouble with that face and covers it up so he doesn’t become famous.”

"huh…?"

“Hey, just cross the line. Just cross it once. I really won’t let you.”

“Oh….”

Choi Ra-on, who didn't know the hunter named Sanarae, was puzzled by the woman's reaction, but he understood the general context. It seemed like there was a hunter who liked to cause trouble without crossing the line.

At that point the woman asked.

“Who did you catch and come all the way here? Didn’t you even use up half a day to come here?”

“No, I came after using my vacation days.”

“Wow, I guess you’ve caught the right one. Who are you? Which guild? Since you don’t know Na-rae, it can’t be Hae-ryung. Eun-wol? Or maybe Tae-yang-gyo?”

“Collector.”

“Collector…?”

The woman glanced at the barricades, where only guards were still clearing the way, and then at the distant hotel where the Hunters were staying, and asked quietly.

“Are you Sergio Hunter…?”

“Oh, you know?”

“You know, I heard your name popped up recently.”

“We met last time.”

"…ah!"

The woman looked surprised.

“A woman with a lot of iron.”

“Thank you for not shouting so loudly.”

“No, are you crazy? Somehow, the silhouette looks familiar.”

“Sergio Hunter saved me from the dungeon too.”

“Wow… I really got into it.”

Even though it was a situation where they almost died, modern people risk their lives to live. If they were saved by the object of their fandom without suffering permanent disability or even just a threat, it would be something to be envious of.

The woman frowned.

“I’m jealous, my account could explode at any moment, it’s such a pitiful situation.”

“Are you such a precarious person…?”

“He’s a bit of a… all-round… crazy hunter….”

“How did you catch that guy?”

“It’s been over two years since I first became a fan.”

“Weren’t you digging another stone at that time?”

“I mean, fuck. That fucking thing.”

The woman looked really wronged.

“When I came to my senses, I saw that kid licking the picture.”

“Well, that’s usually how it goes with a Duktong accident.”

There are some people who, like Choi Ra-on, stab their hearts with an honest stance from beginning to end, while others, like women, say, "That's not it? That's not it? That's not it?" but steadily collect photos with their fingers.

“…Oh, I guess it’s about time.”

“Huh? You see that? Where does it come from?”

“The attendants are stepping aside.”

“Oh, I see.”

When conducting an official campaign, the association often sent people to provide convenience.

People like that are often called 'attendants', and by observing the movements of the attendants who are used to welcoming the raid hunters, you can tell what will happen in the future.

“I guess they’re going to teleport there since they made an empty space. Well, if there was such a way, there would be no need to walk all the way here.”

“It’s not that close to the hotel where the raid team was staying. It would be better to clean it up as much as possible before entering the dungeon so that it can be shown to the public….”

The woman, who was wiping the camera lens, nodded.

“Then see you later, sis. Let’s eat together later.”

“Okay, there’s a kalguksu restaurant in front. They also sell dumplings….”

“Ah, the dumplings are good. This is a place that knows a thing or two. They must be filling.”

The two gave each other a thumbs up and went their separate ways. In a time like now when there are so many reporters, onlookers, and individual fans, the fans also have to move busily to find their own way to survive.

The first to arrive were the priests of the Solar Church.

“It’s the Sun Church!”

“Priests, please give me just one interview!”

“What do you think about the failure of the last attack?”

“Father An Seo-hee, please look here!”

“Priest!!”

As expected, the surroundings were already noisy.

‘Wow, can I take this picture and go back?’

Although Choi Ra-on was a veteran hunter with a long and arduous career, this level of hunter fandom was unfamiliar to her. Sergio was the first hunter to use up his vacation days to film a scene at a military departure ceremony.

Fortunately, the hunters came in groups one at a time, and no hunters from other guilds came right after the Sun Church. Choi Raon decided to relax for a moment and watch the situation.

“…….”

Choi Ra-on was a little impressed.

'As expected of priests, the atmosphere is sacred.'

Even in the midst of such commotion, they were neat and clean without any disturbance. Their immaculate white priestly robes seemed to be made of sturdy equipment, perhaps for battle, and the fluttering cloth seemed to have been woven to enhance their mobility.

Then, I made eye contact with a priest with green eyes, and when I awkwardly nodded, he gave me a small greeting in return. As I watched the priests pass by in a daze, the Silver Moon Guild’s procession came in next.

“Senior, this is Eunwol.”

“They say there are a lot of healers there….”

“I heard that this attack field is completely covered in poison. Could that be the reason?”

“In that case, it’s definitely cheaper to use a healer than a potion. It’s not like you’ll just get sick for a little while.”

“Even true hunters have hard lives….”

“In return, you earn a lot of money. It’s an equivalent exchange. It’s like the price of life.”

After hearing the reporters' conversation, Choi Ra-on turned her gaze back to the Eunwol Guild.

'I feel like it's similar to the priests who passed by before.'

Choi Ra-on was an ordinary person who could not detect even a single sign of movement, but he could not help but notice the atmosphere unique to believers. They followed the Sun Cult, wearing clothes similar to those of the Sun Cult priests but a little lighter, and wearing pure white robes.

‘I can’t see your face very well… .’

Choi Ra-on blinked at the sight of her body wrapped more tightly than that of the priests of the Sun Church.

'Eunwol, is that white robe a uniform? It's the first time I've seen someone's face covered like that at a ceremony.'

The purpose of the guild's inauguration ceremony, which was exposed to the media, was basically to promote the guild. In a world where image is important, it is important to show off a flashy appearance whenever possible, but Eunwol, who had a priest-like atmosphere, seemed very ascetic.

'Come to think of it, the guild that provides manpower to the Sun Church and the Moon Church is called Eunwol. I should have looked into it in more detail.'

The temple attendants were people who performed the priests' orders while keeping their presence as low as possible, as if they were practicing silent meditation. Since there were many such people in the guild, I could understand the atmosphere.

“Oh, this time it’s Daecheong.”

“I heard that you are a big fan of Daecheong.”

“Aren’t you going to take a picture of Daecheong?”

“There probably won’t be anything interesting over there.”

“Hey, still….”

“The main hall is too plain.”

“Then I’ll take the picture.”

The hunters of the guild called Daecheong were all wearing blue uniforms. They looked different from the Eunwol from earlier, who seemed to be characterized by a white cape, but people didn't pay much attention to them.

'I think I've heard of Daecheong before, but isn't it a guild with a high level of recognition?'

Maybe it was my mood, but the flash seemed to go off less often than before.

'Looking at this familiar name, it seems like there must have been at least one collaboration with the guild that I dug up before… Strange, I can't remember at all.'

Around that time, other guild members appeared.

“That’s Hae-ryeong.”

“Hey, they’re still free-spirited.”

“We’re the type of people who hate stuffy things, so what we’re going to wear….”

“Hae-ryung doesn’t originally have a uniform?”

“Isn’t there? Yes, there is a black uniform, but I just don’t wear it.”

“What did the guild leader say over there?”

“They are the ones who don’t hesitate to say anything that isn’t related to combat. They are all kinds of troublemakers gathered here.”

“It’s really scary….”

“The last reporter assault incident happened over there. I told you there weren’t any beasts there.”

Following the reporters' conversation, Choi Ra-on heard a familiar voice.

“-Hunter Sanarae! Please look at this just once! Hunter, please…!!”

It was a woman who had just gone her way, wishing her luck.

A man responded to her voice. Among the hunters who were moving around like a herd of beasts, there was one who was walking particularly neatly. I became curious and followed him with my gaze, and his face was quite splendid.

‘… He looks almost like the commander of the Romance Knights. He still has those stupid genes… .’

His blond hair was long and straight, almost reaching the tip of his tailbone, and his face, without a smile, was devoid of any emotion, but not overbearing either. His actions and manners were somewhat snobbish, and he was quite a flashy person despite his neat appearance.

Perhaps he soon realized his fan's earnestness. The man turned his head toward the sound.

"huh?"

Then, he checked my fan and showed a bright smile on his tired and pale face.

Did those pitch-black eyes suddenly come to life? The smile was so bright that Choi Ra-on, who was absentmindedly looking at her friend's favorite, flinched for a moment.

“Sister! See you again?”

“Na-rae-yaa…! Our Sanarae is so handsome!!”

“Wow, I’m so touched. Should I take a pretty picture of you?”

“I only trust you, sister!!”

The man who had been showing off all sorts of tricks right up to the barricade, Hunter Sanarae, waved his hand and returned to his group. His fellow hunters looked tired of this, but they also looked familiar.

I could hear the reporters talking.

“Sanarae Hunter still provides good service.”

“Even for someone like me, on a weekday, in the morning, I have to provide good service to fans who come all the way to Samcheok, Gangwon-do.”

“Even if you don’t do that, if you have fans who like you, they say you’ll be caught easily….”

“It could be image management, it could be a lack of affection, or it could just be that he finds the squealing reaction funny. What could be the reasons for that punk’s sincere fan service?”

“Anyway, I guess hunters these days have to be good at things like that. It’s a really tough job.”

“What kind of nonsense is this young, young kid doing these days? Just focus your lens properly.”

Choi Ra-on thought to herself as the two talked.

'I feel that way even on normal days.'

The pale and languid Yin-Ki-Nam was so charming. He certainly had the kind of look that her colleagues would like.

‘But, what should I say? It felt a bit dangerous…’

His actions were neat and tidy like a knight and he smiled easily, but his jet-black eyes, which resembled dead fish, were somehow creepy. His smiling face was also a bit creepy because his eyes were thin and curved like a crescent moon, as if he were a fox or snake merchant.

Although he didn't show any particular words or actions, he didn't seem to be in his right mind...

“…….”

It was such a rude thought to meet a hunter for the first time.

‘Nana, you have to do well, why are you impressing others…?’

That was when.

“…Uh, uh! Uh! It’s a collector’s shop…!!”

Choi Ra-on smiled brightly and lifted the camera. The familiar feeling and weight brought her to her senses.

“I’m sorry, I have to go forward! I’m sorry!”

“Oh, what is it….”

“I’m really sorry! Please step aside for a moment…!! Seriously, just this once!!”

There were some who felt uncomfortable, but there were also many who nodded in agreement at her urgent appearance. Those gazes were filled with understanding, as if to say, “Ah, this is the real deal.” Choi Ra-on almost burst into tears at the warm love for humanity.

She barely made it to the barricade, took a serious pose for the camera, and was amazed.

“Wow…!”

I don't know if it's because it's a guild with a favorite, but it seemed like a cooler procession than all the guilds that came before.

At the forefront of the hunters in their different black and white uniforms was a blonde-haired hunter. She was the light and salt that led Choi Ra-on to this harsh Gangwon-do and made him wait anxiously.

‘Crazy, the collector’s uniform is crazy…!’

I've always seen him wearing a black cloak, but perhaps out of respect for the guild's image, Sergio Hunter was wearing a black and white cloak. Even the collector's suit visible underneath looked great.

'Wow, wow, seriously… I just got off work at the Louvre.'

It was something that truly needed to be designated and preserved as cultural heritage.

“…Ser, Sergio Hunter!! Sergio Hunter…!!”

Sergio Hunter responded as I tried to raise my voice with confidence.

"ah."

“!”

“Mr. Choi Ra-on?”

“Ugh…!”

Sergio Hunter came to the front of the barricade just like Sanarae Hunter did just a moment ago and looked at Choi Ra-on. He felt his heart pounding as his favorite stood in front of him. Choi Ra-on covered his mouth.

“I, I, I… I….”

“You came to see me? I appreciate it.”

“A, a photo… just once….”

“Do as you wish.”

"thank you…!"

When she came to, Sergio Hunter was waving his hand and walking away.

“…….”

“…….”

A woman who had come close to Choi Ra-on asked.

“Did you get on the train?”

“…I rode it….”

"me too."

“It looked like that….”

“I’m addicted to this taste.”

“It was a good thing I took my annual leave.”

Although it was still morning, it was a rewarding day.

* * *

“…….”

A woman with pink hair stared at Sergio like that.

“…….”

“Mr. Youngwon? Why are you like that?”

“No, just a moment….”

The woman's name is Jeong Yeong-won.

“I did some appreciation.”

He was an acquaintance of Yoo Seong-un and a gardener belonging to Eunwol.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (174)

174

Episode 174

Gardeners are literally people who tend 'gardens'.

And the way each gardener tended their gardens was different. Some gardeners spent all day working on their gardens, others stopped by every now and then to tend to them, and others treated their gardens like friends or family.

“…….”

There were also gardeners who worshipped the gods as priests.

‘… That is the Eye of Origin that I heard about from the meteor gardener… .’

Among the hunters gathered by guild at the entrance of the dungeon, the eyes of Jeong Yeong-won, a hunter and gardener belonging to Eunwol, were filled only with 'Sergio'. Looking at her, a fellow hunter said.

“Mr. Youngwon, your eyes.”

"ah."

Jeong Yeong-won adjusted his glasses.

“Are you okay now?”

“Yeah, it looks like a normal yellow color.”

“Then, maybe before a while ago…?”

“Um, scarlet?”

"okay."

She rubbed her eyes.

'The gardener finds this inconvenient.'

Gardeners are so closely connected to their gardens that their eyes and hair often change color. The same goes for Jeong Yeong-won, who tends to the gentle flower gardens of spring.

'It's a garden whose condition doesn't change often, so... could it be because the Eye of the Source is nearby?'

At Jeong Yeong-won's gaze, his fellow hunter spoke again.

“Why does Sergio Hunter keep staring at you?”

“…Ah, because you’re handsome.”

“I guess that’s something to say.”

“I did realize that it was rude.”

“I don’t think I really care….”

“It seems like you have a familiar gaze.”

“If I live with that face, I will become like that too.”

“It certainly seems natural that people are familiar with each other’s interests.”

As if he was a being created for show. Jeong Yeong-won looked at

'Sergio' who was stuck among the members of the collector's guild once again.

“Not just the external aspects.”

Is it because she is a gardener that my gaze keeps going to her?

'No, this is a natural reaction for a human being.'

I clenched and unclenched my fists, feeling a little nervous.

'The source of none other than the eyes, among so many humans… .'

There is still much that is unknown about the source. There is much that has not been discovered. Its mystery is something that humans should not carelessly look into, and at the same time, it is something that cannot be easily examined even if qualified.

It was because it was so huge. It appeared in the world in so many different forms and influenced the world in so many different ways. Jeong Yeong-won thought that 'Sergio' would be the same.

'That must also be one of the ways in which the source influences the world.'

Yoo Seong-un evaluated 'Sergio' as the eye of origin.

'... Then, is it that they implemented such an ideal appearance in order to directly experience human life and create data? In order to collect data more conveniently through human kindness? However, it would be difficult to collect overall human data with just kindness... Or maybe they are only collecting the results of kindness.'

Since the gardener's habits cannot be helped, Jeong Yeong-won said to his leader.

“Senior.”

“Huh? Why?”

“Could you please push me to team up with that person?”

“…I’m asking out of concern, but you don’t have romantic feelings for me, do you? Can’t you cover it up?”

“What the hell is that?”

“Yeah, there’s no way our Jeong Yeong-won would love a human. I was worried for a moment because I thought he was sick.”

Although he never explicitly stated that he was a gardener, one of the gardener's characteristics that inevitably came to light was that he did not easily develop sexual feelings toward humans. The hunter in the leader position nodded.

“I’ll try to talk to him, but isn’t he a priest?”

“…Please memorize the information correctly. I am a trainer, not a priest.”

“Ah, the atmosphere is too much for that. Then you’re not a healer?”

“I don’t know much about that part. There’s not much I know about it… It could be a healer.”

“Hmm, then I wonder if I should put them on the same team.”

“I’ll be mainly working as a trainer, so wouldn’t it be okay to have a healer on Sergio Hunter’s team?”

“I know what you mean, I’ll try to appeal to that sentiment.”

The leader asked with a long smile.

“So, why? What part was so funny?”

“…….”

“Hey, don’t leave me out. Don’t you know what I think of our Youngwon-ssi?”

"…just…."

When Jeong Yeong-won looked at Sergio again, it met his eyes.

“…….”

“…….”

okay.

“…….”

How can you have such beautiful eyes?

The gardener saw the essence of the source hidden beneath the shock of the broken blow.

What appeared to be an iris was like the radiance of divinity, and the deeply sunken pupil was a multitude of indescribable colors.

Ah, a source in human form.

'…amazing.'

I was dizzy from the sophistication that went beyond beauty.

My heart pounded, and I couldn't believe my own existence in those eyes. I was breathless at the strange mystery that made me forget my own existence.

It was so vast. It was so deep and huge that I couldn't even imagine seeing the end.

‘It’s so ecstatic… .’

What on earth is it made of?

'I feel dizzy.'

It smells sweet.

The scent of honey and milk, sweeter and more fragrant than that of her flower garden, a cool and soft sweetness like lilacs blooming in spring.

It was a scent that flowed from destiny, containing both life and death.

“…….”

“…Mr. Youngwon.”

“…….”

“Mr. Yeongwon? Are you sleeping?”

"no."

“Then why don’t you stop talking?”

“Our eyes met for a moment.”

I couldn't come to my senses because I was under the gaze of that source and nothing else.

“What question did you just ask?”

“I asked why you were so interested.”

“It’s really nothing.”

In contrast to her expressionless face, her hands holding the staff were tightly clenched.

“…He seems like someone worth observing.”

Opportunities like this don't come often.

Awe and reverence for the source made a simple gardener happy.

* * *

“Mr. Garasani.”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“If you feel like I’m being hated, please let me know.”

“Who do you think hates you?”

“The one over there with cherry-colored hair….”

"aha."

Garasani, who was looking towards the Eunwol Guild, smiled brightly.

“It doesn’t seem like you have hateful eyes.”

“Then why are you staring at me like that?”

“Your gaze is as sharp as an eagle’s.”

“It’s very burdensome.”

“Shall I go and express my intention to protest?”

“Not to that extent, but….”

Geo couldn't help but think conveniently.

“Is it because I’m too handsome?”

“Hahaha…! Aha, yes, I see. That could be true.”

Garasani, who smiled warmly as if she had seen all the cute antics in the world, comforted Geo.

“You will soon be divided into teams once you enter the dungeon, so don’t worry. Were you uncomfortable with the stares of people? I didn’t see any signs of that, so I didn’t take any special measures….”

“It’s familiar, but it’s not that it’s not burdensome. But you don’t need to take action. It’s just that Mr. Garasani is stubborn and threw a tantrum.”

“Oh, that is truly a great honor. If you continue to rely on me, I could not ask for anything more. Perhaps Sergio Hunter and I will continue to be together even after we enter the battle.”

Garasani smiled and glanced at the church, the organizer of this attack.

“The sect likes to play it safe. Since it is rare for a curator to come out of the collection, they will try to assemble a team according to the collection’s intention.”

“If it’s for the purpose of collecting… are you talking about your consideration for my convenience?”

“You understand. People will think that we have come to guard and monitor Sergio Hunter. The church will reflect that as well.”

“Then I feel relieved. If only one person I know could join me.”

“I can assure you that even if you are assigned to a different team, I will be by your side. If anything happens, I will take appropriate action, so don’t worry, Sergio Hunter.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

Sergio, who quickly became quiet when he didn't know anyone, felt relieved.

'Life is all about connections.'

I can't tell you how fortunate I am to have become a collector's portrait artist.

* * *

Even so, Geo was actually assigned to the same team as Garasani.

“I never dreamed I would see you again like this, it’s amazing.”

“Is that so?”

“I really didn’t know, so trust me. I’m so happy to be on the same team as you, Master.”

“Are you the master?”

“Oh, I made a mistake again. Can you forgive me if I put my hands together and apologize?”

"haha…."

Sanarae was also on the same team.

“…….”

“…….”

Geo, who had been meeting each other's gazes without saying a word, smiled brightly.

“…It’s cute too.”

Before Sanarae, whose eyes were wide open, could react properly, Geo's gentle face returned to normal. He looked at Sanarae as if he was looking at a very cute puppy.

“Of course I’ll take a look.”

"huh…?"

“How can I ignore the fact that you are smiling and apologizing?”

“Uh… really? I just felt like I was being treated less than human….”

“Do you like eating? You’ve lost a lot of weight. A grown man like this can’t exert himself.”

“Hey, hey, stop fussing around. Hey, hey, but Hunter, you’re surprisingly strong.”

“Why did you drag this pitiful body, barely able to stand with just skin and bones, all you have left here?”

“I don’t think I’m that skinny… Hunter? Sergio Hunter? Can you hear me?”

“Since it’s come to this, we have to feed them plenty in this attack….”

“Please give me a chance to retreat.”

Sanarae, who barely escaped Geo's grasp with mercy, asked.

“Are you trying to eat me…? Do you tend to eat human flesh?”

“As far as I know, human meat doesn’t taste very good.”

“Putting aside why I know that, that can’t be an expression of my intention not to eat it.”

“Don’t worry, I’m a stickler for things that don’t taste good.”

“That’s why it’s an expression that doesn’t give you peace of mind.”

Hunter Sanarae, who took a rare step back awkwardly, muttered with an old and tired look.

“It’s strange, why does it remind me of my deceased grandfather….”

“It’s an honor. Doesn’t it mean that I’m as trustworthy and warm-hearted as Sanarae’s grandfather?”

“No… That’s something… Something a little different… What exactly is it? I think I can define it better.”

Leaving Sanarae behind, who seemed lost in a strange sentiment, another woman assigned to the same team intervened. It was Hunter Jeong Yeong-won, who had stared at Sergio as if she was going to pierce him right before entering the dungeon.

“Nice to meet you, Sergio Hunter. Didn’t our eyes meet earlier?”

“Oh, that’s right. I thought you were from Eunwol. Did I say that correctly?”

“Yes, thank you for checking with me. My name is Jeong Yeong-won.”

A woman with creamy pink hair adjusted her round glasses and held out her hand with a blunt face.

“Can you shake my hand just once?”

“…? Of course.”

I felt a sense of determination, even though it was just a greeting. I felt a strange interest in his unique way of speaking, and as I lightly waved my hand up and down, Hunter Jeong Yeong-won blinked.

“…You have excellent strength control.”

“Is that so?”

“I thought you’d catch something more painful than this.”

“Did I really look that shabby?”

“That’s not it, but….”

She nodded and said, as if she had figured it out on her own.

“Thank you for your consideration.”

"what…?"

“My position is a healer, and I will be in charge of healing this team.”

“Aha, I see. Thank you for your consideration.”

So what on earth am I caring about?

Sergio, who was complimented on his strength control while shaking hands, didn't show it on the outside, but was momentarily confused. He wondered if it was any different from being complimented on breathing.

“Oh, then let’s also….”

“? Yes, nice to meet you.”

“Please shake my hand too.”

“Yes, nice to meet you.”

Geo, who had just finished greeting the two hunters from the Daecheong Guild, asked.

“So why was I the only one shaking hands with everyone else?”

“…….”

“…….”

“……?”

Surprisingly, no one could give a proper answer.

“…I see…?”

“Oh, this can be so much fun.”

It seemed like a pretty good combination of illusions.

Geo entered the Class A dungeon, 'Underground Four-legged Rainforest', with a sense of absurdity and joy.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (175)

175

Episode 175

Geo wasn't particularly angry at Sanarae.

“Why do I have to do that?”

“Hmm, I see.”

Sanarae said with a long smile.

“Usually everyone gets angry.”

“I think that could be possible.”

“It’s tougher than I thought.”

Contrary to his previous reputation, Sanarae surprisingly showed a cooperative side.

“If you don’t have any feelings, should we start by looking for a house?”

“Are you home?”

As Geo blinked at his words, Curator Garasani, who was standing next to him, whispered.

“A house is a slang term for a temporary resting space for hunters inside a dungeon. If the raid won't be over in a day or two, it's convenient to build a hideout or base in advance."

After finishing speaking, Garasani looked around and opened his mouth.

"The temperature and humidity are high, and there are many poisonous plants. If possible, try to find a vacant lot with firm ground, or if you can't find a suitable place, try cutting down some plants to make room."

"Personally, I think it would be faster to just build it. I'm not sure where the other team fell, but it doesn't smell like dry ground around here… Maybe we should walk a bit?"

Sanarae sniffed around as she looked around.

"The humidity here is really high."

The dense vegetation that had grown so thickly that there was no space to step must have also contributed to the humidity. It was as if I was in a sauna, and I couldn't breathe.

"They say that it rains so hard that it drives people crazy, but it gets even more annoying when it evaporates…."

"They said that the time the fake sun rises also changes randomly. It would be a priority to create a space where people can avoid the rain."

At Sanarae and Jeong Yeongwon's words, one of the Daecheong Guild members looked back at Geo.

"I heard you're a trainer… Could you help me find a seat?"

The answer to that question came from Jeong Yeong-won, not Geo.

"It is disrespectful."

"yes?"

“You were disrespectful.”

“Huh, huh….”

The words were so decisive that even the Daecheong Guild members momentarily pondered, 'Have I committed a mortal sin?' and even Geo was caught up in the delusion of 'Am I actually the reincarnation of King Sejong?'

Giovanni, who had just come out of his useless thoughts, smiled awkwardly.

“Mr. Jeong Yeong-won, are you teasing me by calling me ‘Master’ too?”

“I’m sorry, I didn’t mean to….”

“In spaces like this where visibility is difficult, a trainer must step in.”

Wasn't that why they were added to the attack force in the first place?

“Then excuse me for a moment.”

Geo pulled his hood up and looked for his son. He was really enjoying the high humidity of the dungeon, and he was lying down comfortably.

"honey."

“Cur.”

"oh."

Even before Honey could pop out, Sanarae was amazed. When Geo looked at her with a puzzled expression, he saw Sanarae nodding while holding her chin. It seemed like she was amazed.

“When your face reaches that level, the sound of honey doesn’t seem so bad. That's amazing."

"Thank you for admiring my face. I think I have a pretty face, too."

It was thanks to his mother's sincere and loving care for Sergio from his fetal to newborn days.

"It's pretty well made, huh?"

"Oh, this is another novel reaction. Did you put a knife to your face?"

"No, it's nature. This is a face created by fate."

"Well, that kind of face can't be bought with money. I'm sorry for this."

Sanarae laughed and acted cute.

"I thought you had tampered with it since you said you made it. Your Majesty speaks in a very unique way."

"I apologize for any misunderstanding. We are both responsible, so let's say it's not anyone's fault."

As Geo reached out, Honey climbed on top of him. Geo smiled and muttered softly at the sensation and weight.

"…Have you gained weight?"

"Kung kung kung…!!"

"Even if it looks like this, it can fly."

"Kung kung kung kung kung!!!"

"Honey, help me find a house."

When I lightly stroked it, Honey stopped whining.

"We need to build a decent home before the rain that hurts people comes.”

“…Gulp.”

“I hope it’s not too far away, is that possible?”

“Cur.”

Honey, with her wings lightly fluttering, flew through the thick trees. The hunters were amazed at her speed, which was very fast compared to her small body. Despite her appearance, she was quite a nimble bird.

The Daecheong Guild member spoke as if he were amazing.

“That’s amazing, Sergio Hunter. A monster that listens so well….”

“Aren’t you a trainer by name?”

“Even among trainers, it is rare for them to be this close.”

In a way, it was natural. How many people did the trainer kill and how many wounds did the monster inflict before it was tamed? From the human perspective, they also didn't want to be unnecessarily friendly.

“Oh, now that you mention it….”

Another guild member asked.

“Where is the anti-cat that was a hot topic this time?”

“Huh? Was that an anti-cat? They’re completely different sizes.”

“Uh… well, I don’t really know.”

“Was Sergio Hunter’s cat really an anti-cat?”

Geo nodded to him.

“If you are referring to the jewel cat that lives in the ‘vein of jewels’, then yes.”

“Wow, that’s amazing. For a monster that doesn’t even come near humans….”

“I separated them for a while because I thought they were sensitive to unfamiliar environments.”

“I see you brought it to the dungeon. Are you using a separate cage?”

A cage is an item that trainers use when moving their tamed monsters, and it usually takes the form of an accessory for easy carrying. Geo smiled his characteristic smile and slightly lifted his cape.

“No, it’s in here.”

“Inside the cloak…?”

“In the shadows, to be exact.”

“…Did Anticat have such an ability?”

“Well, I don’t know because it just happened.”

“This is really amazing.”

The hunter of the Great Blue nodded as if he understood.

“Anti-cats are a species of monster that hates humans the most. From what I’ve heard, it seems like the monsters trust and follow Sergio Hunter quite a bit. So it would definitely be more secure if they stayed by their master’s side.”

Around that time, Honey came back. People were surprised at the little monster's return faster than they could have imagined.

“Gurrrr!”

“Did you have a house?”

“Kkurung.”

Honey placed what she was holding in her mouth onto Geo's hand.

“Oh, that’s….”

“It’s dirt.”

Therapist Jeong Yeong-won approached and touched the dirt. The dirt crumbled from the tips of his pure white fingers.

“It’s dry soil. The texture is hard.”

She looked at the honey-colored water bird with astonishment.

“How did they find this soil in such a humid rainforest?”

“I’m not sure, but I’m glad you found a good spot.”

Sergio smiled brightly.

“Isn’t that so?”

I think my kid did something, but I don't know.

* * *

“…….”

“Father Kang Seo-dam?”

“…Ah, yes, Ms. Yujina. I’m listening.”

“Is there any problem?”

“That’s not true, but….”

All I could feel was the energy of the sun from a distance, and I flinched.

“…Yes, nothing. Really.”

It felt like the sun god had overused his miracles for such a trivial matter, but Kang Seo-dam, already tired from being dragged to the forest, really didn't want to pretend to know.

He wisely decided to keep his mouth shut.

* * *

Sanarae tilted her head as she arrived at the place Honey had guided her to.

“……?”

“Why are you doing that?”

“Yeah, no.”

Sanarae sniffed.

“Does it smell like sunshine?”

“I guess sunlight does come into a place like this.”

“Um, rather than that… hmm….”

“Sanarae Hunter?”

“…….”

Sanarae, ignoring the words of the Daecheong Hunter, turned to Sergio.

“…….”

“Thank goodness, it looks like Honey found a good spot.”

“…Is this the original location?”

“I don’t know why you ask that, but what other possibilities are there?”

Garasani added to Geo's words.

“Surely such a great location couldn’t have appeared in an instant.”

“I can see no trace of the monster, so I feel relieved.”

Oh my.

‘The two collectors are giving and receiving well… .’

Sanarae scanned the surroundings with her characteristically sharp eyes.

This cavity, which could probably accommodate 50 people, was actually a space created inside an even larger tree.

This tree was a common type of vegetation here, but none of them had pupils like this one.

'So you're saying that this space was created artificially by something?'

There was no evidence of human intervention. The ground was dry and hard, and the hollows of the tree looked natural, as if they had been formed over hundreds of years. There were no unnatural cuts or scratches, and no burnt parts.

Even the entrance to the cave was covered with long vines that hung like doormats to block out the moisture from the outside. This would also be a great help in hiding from monsters.

'But it smells strongly of sunshine.'

And that smell….

“…….”

It's like the scent from that hunter's water bird.

‘… Even so, I guess it’s still something that can’t be explained.’

It wasn't a space that could be created simply by cutting and destroying.

Hunter Sanarae felt a strong vitality here. It was a space that could only be created through a long process of ‘growth’, not something that could be created through a short-term artificial process.

“…Uhhh, I don’t know.”

“What do you mean you don’t know?”

“Something like the master’s true identity?”

"aha."

Sergio Hunter asked with a rather cheerful smile.

“Shall I tell you?”

“Oh, really?”

“I am actually a priest of the sun god from another dimension.”

"huh…?"

“So I prayed earnestly and the sun gave me this wonderful house.”

“…….”

Hunter Sanarae's smile distorted vaguely.

“…Is it because I teased you too much? Calm down, okay? You know I didn’t mean anything bad.”

“Hahaha, that’s another funny reaction. Was that too ridiculous?”

“If you hate being called ‘Master’ that much, then I won’t do anything more….”

“Well, as I said before, I’m not angry.”

Sanarae was impressed because it sounded quite sincere for a common saying.

“It’s amazing because it seems real.”

“What’s so strange about it?”

“I didn’t speak nicely, did I?”

“It’s really wonderful that you have that kind of awareness.”

“Are you really kidding me…?”

“No way.”

Sergio made a face that seemed to be in trouble. His expression was so idealistic about 'troubledness' that Sanarae suddenly felt an indescribable sense of discomfort.

“I don’t know why you thought I was angry in the first place.”

“…Usually you get angry when I talk to you, so I thought maybe Hunter was the same way.”

“Then I guess that could be called a fallacy of generalization.”

“Is this what you usually say in situations like this?”

“Of course I was a little scared at first.”

“…….”

All the hunters, including Sanarae, looked back at Sergio.

“Why is everyone like that?”

“Sergio Hunter has no talent for jokes…. Indeed, humans cannot be perfect.”

“I was really scared, because I felt like I was being picked on by a scary person on my first day at work.”

“Is there a particular reason why not now?”

“Well, I guess….”

Sergio stared at Sanarae.

“…….”

“…….”

For a moment, Sergio smiled as his eyes turned golden.

"…haha."

Sergio said that and smiled brightly, roughly patting Sanarae on the head.

“Eww…!”

“It’s better to be honest in social interactions, Hunter Sanarae.”

“Uhh… Huh? Huh?”

“Let’s stop small talk and start unpacking.”

“Excuse me, Hunter? What did you just do?”

The curator of the collection, Garasani, approached Sanarae, who looked dumbfounded.

“Our guild member has caused some inconvenience. Is there anything that is inconvenient?”

“Huh? No, that’s not it… Is Sergio Hunter originally like that?”

“You are a very assertive person. Please understand.”

“Are you telling me to stop teasing? Anyway, the collector speaks very elegantly.”

Sanarae muttered as she tried to straighten her tangled hair.

“Do you usually think like that?”

He was a really strange person.

'You really have a different way of thinking.'

Well, he's a person who doesn't have any bad connections, but...

* * *

“…….”

And after five hours of general exploration, Sanarae comes to a realization.

“You’re a witch hag.”

“Yes? Are you hungry?”

“Are you planning to eat me after all?”

“You’re talking nonsense. Are you still hungry…?”

“Are you a tyrant? There is no such thing as food torture.”

Sanarae tilted her head while holding something similar to a cream stew.

“How can a plant from the rain forest taste like this…?”

“I supplemented the flavor that plants couldn’t provide with the bacon I brought.”

“So why are you bringing bacon into the dungeon? And how did you get it in the first place?”

“Why not bring some delicious bacon?”

“Wow, that’s amazing. There are so many reasons, but why doesn’t it feel like you’re listening to any of them?”

Sergio's true identity was none other than the witch from the candy store.

“Is this a hunter or a pig….”

The hunters lying down flinched at Sanarae’s words. The hunters gathered in a circle were lying down like defeated soldiers, feeling guilty for overeating.

It was an unspoken rule not to overfill your stomach when going on a quest, but in the face of overwhelming taste, your reason becomes clouded.

“That’s why Hansel and Gretel were so foolishly lured.”

“I am so happy that you praise my cooking so highly.”

“Hmm, well? Strictly speaking, I don’t think it was a compliment….”

“Then what the heck?”

“It’s like an exclamation right before being executed. Or a final cry in the face of a monster.”

Geo asked him calmly.

“Who dies?”

“A hunter must die if he turns into a pig.”

“Then why don’t you become a hunter?”

“Your way of thinking is truly unique.”

He was a really strange person.

“Grandma, here’s another bowl.”

“How good it looks when you eat well!”

“Okay, if you’re going to make a cookie house, give me a call and I’ll come take a look.”

“I like it because it’s a candy store. I’ll use it as a reference when I work on my art.”

And the way he scooped up a bowl of food made me laugh because he looked so genuinely happy.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (176)

176

Episode 176

After eating, the pupil of the tree.

“I said I had no intention of eating tasteless food, and it was true.”

“Why do I have to eat tasteless food?”

Sergio, who had finished organizing the food, became serious.

“There is no such thing as a bad meal since I am the cook for this team.”

“I didn’t know that Sergio Hunter looked so scary when he didn’t smile.”

“So you don’t go around smiling a lot?”

“I didn’t know you were such a big eater. You took out a pot the size of a person’s torso.”

“Who was it that scraped and ate everything out of that big pot?”

“I just wanted to say that it was delicious, thank you so much.”

“I’m glad you had an enjoyable meal.”

Geo looked beyond the entrance obscured by vines.

“By the way, it’s morning again.”

“It was dinner time until we had dinner….”

As Hunter Sanarae became irritated by the unpredictable environment as he had heard, therapist Jeong Yeong-won, who was helping to organize his pupils, spoke up.

“They say that fake suns and moons rise from time to time, and it really does.”

“You kept observing me while I was eating. Did you find out anything?”

“It seems that the time the sun is up is much longer than the time the moon is up.”

“And on evenings when the moon rises, doesn’t the temperature really drop?”

“Although it’s hard to say that there’s a large temperature difference between day and night, the fact that the temperature difference between day and night is quite large is also a characteristic of this dungeon.”

“People with weak bodies tend to catch colds easily.”

“I guess so.”

To begin with, people with weak bodies won't be able to enter the dungeon.

‘… I can’t say that this is a human way of thinking. It’s so absurd that it’s actually creepy.’

It was just the nonsense of an old-timer who didn't know how scary dungeons were, but she, a gardener, didn't think that far ahead. Jeong Yeong-won called everyone together after finishing cleaning up.

“I took a quick look around here before the meal, and with the help of Honey, who helped us explore throughout the meal, I was able to organize it. Most of it was information that I could find in the previous Solar Cult strategy materials.”

For example, there were characteristics of dungeon monsters.

“There are monsters that move when the sun is up and when the moon is up. Monsters that are active during the day fall into a stunned state at night, and monsters that are active at night are a bit docile during the day and become ferocious at night.”

“I think I confirmed that part in the materials distributed by the church.”

“Yes, and this is the additional information that I found out. The monsters during the day never gather together and are each busy searching for something. On the other hand, the monsters during the night gather together and head somewhere when it gets dark….”

Jeong Yeong-won pointed to Honey, who was confidently sticking out her chest.

“Honey figured it out. And Sergio interpreted it for me.”

“Gurrrr.”

“I think it means to give compliments. Everyone, please give a round of applause.”

“Kuruk.”

Clap clap clap clap… .

The ambiguous and uncertain applause time passed.

“So, Sergio Hunter, can you understand what the monsters are saying? Some experienced trainers are said to have that ability, so if you were to interpret the information that the water bird gave you….”

“It’s a connection. Like a couple at a restaurant who nods to each other for napkins.”

“Ah, so that’s what it means to have a bond. I’ve only heard stories about trainers, but seeing them in person is so surprising. I had no idea such cute monsters existed in real life.”

“Our honey is cute.”

After some small talk, Jeong Yeong-won continued his explanation.

“Honey is really capable. I was worried about how far she could move since she’s a small monster, but it was a needless worry. She somehow figured out where the night monsters move. I think it would be better for us to check that out first.”

“Oh, were you moving to a certain point?”

“That’s how I figured it out for now. It would have been difficult if it wasn’t a bird that could freely fly through the complex gaps between plants. It’s fortunate that we have Sergio, who trained small flying monsters, but the movements aren’t exactly clear… It would have been difficult for humans to figure it out.”

Jeong Yeong-won looked at the oldest of them, Hunter Garasani.

“Should we pass this news on to the other teams?”

“It would be better if we just relayed the news and only our team took action.”

“Well, if there is something that is sensitive to the number of people, then even if many people gather, it will only cause trouble.”

“In the same sense, how about not telling Hae-ryung?”

Sanarae, who was a member of Haeryeong, smiled brightly.

“It’s so heartbreaking. Isn’t this discrimination? Are big companies acting tyrannically?”

“When the Hae-ryeong guild members see a good situation, they are eager to fight. Guild members who guess that there is a dangerous monster may act impulsively.”

“Our guild doesn’t act like that many rascals. That’s a very narrow-minded idea.”

“The Hae-ryung Guild has shown too many behaviors to be narrow-minded. Of course, I admit that it is unfair, so I will leave it up to you, a member of Hae-ryung, to decide whether or not to spread this news.”

“Where can I attack when I’m this scared?”

Sanarae looked back at Sergio.

“What should we do?”

“It would be fun to convey that.”

“…Would it be fun?”

“Try it.”

“…….”

“I told you to try?”

Sanarae, who had been hesitating, slightly averted her gaze.

“I won’t do it.”

“That too is the mind of the Sanarae Hunter.”

Geo said with a smile.

“I will follow Mr. Garasani’s words completely.”

“Thank you for your kind words, it is an honor.”

Curator Garasani continued to speak, smiling gently like an old man who heard his grandson say, “Grandpa is the best in the world.”

“You never know when the sun will set again. As the day gets darker, it’ll be harder to avoid poisonous plants, and while the number of monsters will decrease slightly, they’ll also become more ferocious. I think it’d be best to move to the spot Honey confirmed when visibility is clear.”

And so the full-scale exploration began.

* * *

The Class A dungeon, 'Underground Four-legged Rainforest', surprisingly showed traces of humans.

“Is that a villa?”

“Wouldn’t it be more appropriate to call it a mansion…?”

“This place will also end up being a destroyed dimension.”

Jeong Yeong-won muttered.

“Well, there’s no reason why humans had to live in a destroyed dimension….”

“I don’t think there was a story like this in the data.”

“It’s in a place that’s hard to find unless you look for it with a fire in your eyes.”

“The trees and vines are so thick that it feels like it’s hidden further inside.”

“It may also be because it was so damaged that it was almost impossible to find its original form.”

A team member asked.

“Shall we go and take a look?”

“I think it would be better to move faster when the day is bright….”

“If this were a dimension where humans lived, there might be useful items there.”

“That’s true too.”

Hunters had to carefully collect the harvest from the dungeon to keep their wallets full. They could catch monsters and sell the byproducts, but they also earned a share by collecting equipment and items from unfamiliar dimensions in this way.

“You just have to be careful of traps and curses.”

Jeong Yeong-won, the main healer of this team, spoke with his characteristically blunt face like a porcelain doll.

“Poison can be removed from the body, but curses often affect the soul, so there are many things to be careful about. I advise you to be careful, as you never know when the day will get dark.”

“Don’t worry, you know our guild. Daecheong likes the safe route.”

“If anyone was poisoned on the way here, please let me know in advance. When I asked them earlier, everyone said they were fine, but there are poisons that can cause damage over time.”

“I feel okay so far. I’m a little thirsty though….”

“Then let’s try to enter carefully. It’s very old and broken, so it would be better to enter carefully. And there might be something dangerous guarding it….”

As Jeong Yeong-won trailed off, Geo blew Honey away.

"honey."

“Gulp!”

Honey, with her small body, went into the ruins and returned quickly after a while. Honey flapped her tail feathers to show Geo that there was no problem.

“I guess there are no dangerous traps.”

“What about the poisonous plants?”

“I guess there’s nothing we can do about it because there are grass and trees growing through the gaps in the collapsed area.”

“That’s no problem, everyone, please come in.”

The ruins, which were estimated to be about five stories high when they were built, were probably once the property of a wealthy person, as there were gold and jewels hidden among the plants. The team members looked around the ruins, collecting each of these items.

“It’s almost completely collapsed, so the only places I can see are the 1st and 3rd floors. The 2nd floor has completely collapsed. The 3rd floor in particular looks like it’ll collapse as soon as I step on it… Will I be okay?”

Sanarae frowned, covering her nose, at the question from the Daecheong staff.

“Why does it smell so bad in here?”

“Yes? Hunter Sanarae, are you okay?”

“My nose feels itchy.”

“Hey, is it poison?”

“It doesn’t seem to be poisonous… It seems to be dusty.”

“It doesn’t seem like there’s any harm in getting out quickly.”

A team member said.

“Then let’s just go up with a few people who are light.”

“My body feels light….”

Hunter Sanarae saw Jeong Yeong-won.

“Are you on the light side?”

“The actual weight will be less than yours.”

As the only woman, she had a relatively small build.

“But if you’re talking about being able to use your body nimbly, that’s not true. I can protect myself, but I don’t think it’d be easy to climb up a hallway that could collapse if you hit it lightly like that.”

“Hmm, I see.”

“In that case, I think Hunter Sanarae would be better. I know she uses her body very well, so wouldn’t she be able to go up and come back down without difficulty?”

“If I go up, everything will fall apart?”

Geo smiled brightly at Sanarae's sad face.

“You have a great talent for talking nonsense.”

“Oh, are you arguing?”

“It was pure admiration.”

“You don’t usually express admiration like that.”

“Normal people don’t lie as easily as eating.”

“Why do you think it’s a lie?”

“Of course not. Excuse me.”

"no…."

“Then I will go and do it.”

Geo put his feet on the broken stairs.

“I’m confident in this area.”

And the stairs didn't even make that usual creaking sound.

“Right?”

“…How did you do it? How can there be no sound like this?”

Another team member glared at the Daecheong Hunter's admiration.

“You must have skills.”

“Oh, is it something like a lightweight skill?”

“Sorry, this guy is new to the industry.”

“I… I’m sorry if you felt offended.”

Geo waved his hand.

“It’s okay. I’ll just check quickly and come back.”

“Yes, please.”

And so, Sergio Hunter's figure soon disappeared from their sight.

“…….”

“…….”

They fell into a strange sentiment.

“…There really isn’t any sound.”

“I can’t feel any movement at all.”

It wasn't just the Daecheong Hunters' feelings.

“……?”

Hunter Sanarae wrinkled her nose.

‘… It doesn’t smell.’

I wasn't particularly conscious of it, but I couldn't smell the sweet and refreshing scent I'd smelled in the hotel's event room. I could hide my presence with my stealth skill, but it was a little strange that my body scent was disappearing.

'And so suddenly?'

Or is your nose finally numb?

“…….”

"…hmm…."

Sanarae, who saw Garasani and Jeong Yeongwon not showing any reaction, immediately smiled brightly.

“Then I’ll go and take a look too.”

“Didn’t you say you weren’t going earlier?”

“Now that Hunter Garasani says so, I really want to go.”

“That is a truly amazing symbol.”

“I was so worried because I was sending my colleague off alone.”

Sanarae didn't listen any longer and went up the stairs.

Squeak.

“Oh my.”

As expected, it is badly corroded.

“Sorry, the stairs are broken.”

“Ugh, thump thump…!”

“Be careful of the dust.”

“All the dust has already been poured out…!”

“Poor thing, you should have been more careful.”

Sanarae waved her hand lightly and soon arrived on the third floor.

'It's in better condition here than on the stairs.'

The floor was the same, as if it would crumble if he stepped on it once, but it seemed better than the stairs that would crumble to pieces just by stepping on them. He looked around.

'Where is Sergio Hunter?'

And then it caught my eye.

“…….”

A waterfall that resembles blood.

"…uh…."

“…….”

“……?”

No, platinum blonde.

And the frame beyond the man's back.

“…Sergio Hunter?”

“You came.”

He didn't show his face.

“There was an interesting picture, and I was admiring it.”

“A funny picture?”

"yes."

It looked back at me and smiled.

“There is a peaceful landscape painting.”

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (177)

177

Episode 177

I could handle my body easily.

'Because I have memories from the Argio days.'

However, the ruins were extremely dilapidated and looked like they would collapse if I pushed down on them even a little. In that case, I thought it would be better to climb up in a way that wouldn't burden the mansion at all.

That's how Geo came up to the third floor through the portrait.

“…….”

“…….”

Sanarae, who was staring at Geo, asked with her signature smile.

"landscape?"

“Yes, it is here.”

“It’s a painting of a hut.”

“Isn’t it nice to look at?”

“It looks good.”

“Is that so?”

Giovanni, who was very good at dealing with people, skillfully managed his facial expressions.

“I didn’t know you would come up this quickly.”

“You didn’t look surprised by that?”

“Because I felt the coming movement.”

It wasn't a lie.

'I felt it as soon as I stepped out of the frame.'

I thought that since it was a Sana-Rae Hunter with a symbol of a tree frog, it might come up on its own if I left it alone. However, it came up faster than I expected and I missed the timing to remove the frame.

'It took me a while to get my expression under control.'

That was the reason why Geo didn't immediately look back at Sanarae and instead focused his gaze on the portrait that had become a landscape painting. In any case, it was fortunate that he didn't seem to have been caught as the portrait.

Getting caught would be fun in its own way, but… .

“Would you like to tour the third floor together?”

“Hmm, that’s what I was thinking.”

“I wish we had come together from the beginning.”

“I’m worried because Sergio Hunter is so quiet.”

“I have pretty decent stealth skills.”

“Everyone thinks so.”

“Don’t you think so, Hunter Sanarae?”

“No, I think so too.”

Sanarae, with her signature smile, pointed to a room on the third floor where there were about three rooms.

“You haven’t looked around yet?”

“I just got up to the third floor.”

“Then I guess I can go with you. Wow, that’s reassuring.”

It was true that the mansion was so dusty that it made her nose hurt, and Sanarae was quite cooperative in searching the ruins, as if she wanted to get out quickly. Gold and jewels were also found mainly on the third floor.

Hunter Sanarae's reaction was a little disappointing.

“I wish I had the item.”

“Are you not satisfied with gold and jewels?”

“Rather than just pretty minerals, wouldn’t it be better to have equipment that can be used anywhere?”

“You’re greedy.”

“Rather, he’s a liar.”

“Well, Pinocchio?”

“I don’t like that nickname, but….”

Dalgrak.

The rusty metal jewelry box was closed.

“There are only jewels here too.”

“Doesn’t a hunter like these kinds of trinkets? Jewels that are pretty to look at.”

“It’s not that common for a hunter to come all the way to a Class A dungeon and enjoy such a simple income…?”

“Why is that?”

“…….”

Sanarae continued speaking after seeing Geo.

“It’s not that valuable. It might be of help to ordinary citizens, but we’re pretty high-level hunters. We’ve come this far, so we’d rather make a killing.”

“I heard that glass is quite expensive.”

“Well, glass can be melted down and used to make equipment or items. It takes a lot of work to make it, and it costs quite a bit of money to increase transparency. That’s why glass is the only expensive gem.”

“Won’t these jewels melt?”

The jewels I draw are melting.

'Is that because it's paint?'

Geo continued.

“I know for sure that gold and silver melt. Is there something wrong with my common sense?”

“…Of course, you can make equipment with gold and silver, but the limit of what you can hold is much lower than that of glass. Because the nature of it is too firm, you can’t make equipment as fluidly and diversely as you can with glass.”

“Thank you for your kind and detailed explanation.”

“Hunters’ income, in particular, cannot be resolved with just jewels or gold. It costs a lot of money to buy life-saving equipment. There are so many hunters who sell their land deeds or house deeds to buy equipment.”

"this."

Geo asked, letting out a sigh.

“Thank you for the detailed explanation. I hope you’re not being too annoyed by me calling you ‘Master’?”

“Well, is it really ‘Master’?”

“In a way, you may have hit the nail on the head, but I don’t think it’s ever been that big.”

“I see, that’s unexpected.”

“Do you hate me?”

Geo laughed.

“Isn’t that right?”

“I know it sounds strange, but….”

Sanarae spoke with a blank expression, showing no emotion, and in a casual tone of voice.

“Sergio Hunter seems older than he looks.”

“How old do I look to you?”

“On the website, it says you’re 29 years old, right?”

"you're right."

“But I think he looks older than that.”

“I never thought I would hear such a heartbreaking story about not being able to keep up with trends.”

“…That could be the case.”

They searched the ruins sequentially and then moved to the innermost room.

“I guess this was a bedroom.”

There was a bed frame that was too damaged to be recognized, and a large portrait of a woman, barely recognizable, who was as rotten and decayed as the ruins.

The haunted portrait felt strangely kinship.

'Oh, a portrait.'

Hello, this is Portrait.

'... They say surprising things often happen in dungeons... I've never seen a portrait as haunted as mine before. This portrait looks like just another ordinary, old, broken portrait. It's a shame.'

Geo, who loves to draw and is also a painter himself, felt human sympathy.

'Poor thing.'

I wonder if I can do some restoration work.

“…….”

“Sergio Hunter?”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“What’s in that portrait?”

“There is nothing.”

“Then why do you keep looking at it?”

“Isn’t that okay?”

“Come see me and let’s talk.”

"yes."

Only then did Geo turn his gaze to Sanarae.

“What's going on?”

“…….”

The sight of Sanarae just smiling.

“…….”

By then the sun was setting, and Geo was nervous about the strange pressure and plausible atmosphere.

I was terrified as I stood before a group of thugs who were laughing and talking normally and seemed ready to open fire. The timing was perfect, and the sun set in an instant, darkening the abandoned house, doubling my fear.

‘…What did I do wrong?’

I instinctively knew that I had done something wrong. Staring at people like that was either a social gesture or a signal of war. Now, anyone could see that it was the latter.

And Geo realized.

'Ah, this.'

This is the atmosphere when I was being bullied by Yoo Seong-woon and Joo Hyun.

“…Did I do something weird?”

"well?"

“Did I scare you?”

“I don’t know.”

“I apologize to everyone.”

Geo asked, embarrassed.

“Would you like something sweet?”

“…….”

“I guess you don’t like it.”

I suggested that she eat something sweet at an odd time, hoping that it would lighten the mood a bit, but I didn't get a very good response.

Geo comforted himself with the sweet chocolate cookies he always carried in his arms.

'You're a good cookie.'

He just happened to have the wrong owner, he was a delicious enough cookie.

“…….”

“…….”

And I felt a little wronged.

“Don’t people appreciate portraits?”

“No, I appreciate it.”

“But I don’t know why you are persecuting me with your eyes.”

“…Persecution, as expected, is a very unique way of speaking.”

“Is something strange?”

“Even in this situation, you use such everyday words.”

Sanarae said with her signature smile.

"scary."

“Are you scared?”

Aren't you kidding me again?

“Then please tell me why.”

“Then are you going to fix it?”

“That way, I won’t make the same mistake again.”

“I don’t feel like it, Sergio Hunter, I think you can afford to make a few more mistakes.”

“I don’t like this kind of atmosphere. I want to get better.”

“So I think it’s okay if it doesn’t get better.”

“I don’t know why you say that.”

So what did I do wrong again?

'Can't I even look at portraits?'

I was so wronged that I wanted to write a lawsuit, step by step. Why is it that when I do something that everyone else does, everyone gets scared and makes a fuss?

“I think you’re making fun of me. You’re a terrible person.”

“I know you’re not saying that because you’re angry.”

Sanarae added.

“You just say it because you think it’s the most appropriate thing to say, right?”

At those words, Geo thought.

'It is polite for humans to go through the brain before speaking.'

But he knew that Hunter Sanarae had not said such things in that context. Geo realized what the problem with the current situation was. It was a long-standing problem that had been following Geo's life.

“I know I look scary. I’ve been misunderstood many times before.”

I've seen more than a few people freak out like they've seen a ghost.

“So I went around laughing a lot, but wasn’t it effective?”

“It would probably work for most people.”

“Then what is Hunter Sanarae trying to say now?”

“Do you feel like the more you know, the more scared you become?”

Geo was dumbfounded.

“What do you know, Hunter Sanarae?”

What do you know about me?

'It's been a while since I've seen your face, so I guess I know a lot.'

Geo had never said such things, not even Yoo Seong-woon, the first friend he had made when he was a possessed portrait. Geo felt extremely bewildered by the fact that one side was not welcoming and the other side was showing off their inadvertent and empty friendship.

“I don’t think we’re that close….”

“Are these things only those close to you are qualified to know?”

“Most relationships are like that.”

“Was it unpleasant?”

“What are you afraid of?”

Although she pretended not to, Sanarae was a little anxious right now. Geo couldn't figure out why things had turned out this way. At this rate, there was really no choice but to change her face or live with an iron mask.

'But the people of the world would be afraid of even that.'

It was a very difficult time for a scary person to live in.

“You can’t treat a normal person like a ghost because you’re scared, Hunter Sanarae.”

“Why were you looking at the portrait for so long?”

“I was looking at it with pity in my heart.”

“…….”

Sanarae, who seemed like she was going to say something more, blinked again and her eyes widened like crescent moons.

“What do you like, Sergio Hunter?”

It was a very strange question, but Geo understood. The crazy ones usually had a tendency to jump around topics. Everyone's kind priest, Giovanni, respected human diversity.

“I like food that is delicious and filling.”

“Are you a ghost who died because you couldn’t eat…?”

“I don’t think I’ve ever been possessed by a ghost.”

“Is there anything else besides that?”

“I like good people.”

“Oh, this is a big problem.”

Geo's thoughts were right.

“I’m not going to get eaten all of a sudden, am I?”

“I tell you again, human flesh will not taste good.”

“So, even though it sounds completely unreassuring….”

Sanarae was scared.

Since a long time ago, that is.

* * *

When the two left the mansion, the sun had risen again.

“You came out. Did you get any results?”

“There were mainly ornaments.”

“I see there were no special functions, I understand.”

Garasani, who had been waiting for Geo, continued speaking.

“I received a call while you two were upstairs.”

“Did you hear from another team?”

“Yes, he said that he needs healers, so he asked us to gather together if possible.”

And this team had two healers, Jeong Yeong-won and Sergio. Garasani said while checking the detection equipment.

“Fortunately, it’s pretty close.”

“Is it an injury? Or poison?”

“I heard that you encountered a large number of monsters.”

“I guess it’s both cases.”

Geo laughed, thinking he knew what Garasani was trying to say. I guess he failed at making fruit jelly because of this.

“I think I can help.”

Have you ever heard of the blood ball made by three suns?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (178)

178

Episode 178

Joohyun said and did.

“If you want to imitate a human properly.”

“Imitation? Do you want to see a crying portrait? Is this your first time seeing one?”

“I haven’t finished talking yet, so don’t get ready to cry and just listen, Mr. Geo.”

He was worried that this mindless portrait would return as a false god that mere mortals could not handle. You can get a rough idea of what most evil spirits do when they are having fun.

“It’s better to use items than to do it yourself.”

Joo-hyun was worried about Geo like that.

“Don’t come forward and say you’re frustrated, and then create some strange fanaticism. Just listen to what I have to say.”

“I am a pure sun who does not deal with fanatics.”

“There’s more to Geo-ssi than just the sun inside of him now, right? I have more life experience than Geo-ssi.”

“If you add them all up, aren’t I taller?”

“I guess I worded it a bit strangely. At least I know the criteria for ‘normal’ better than you, Geo.”

“There’s no denying that.”

Geo gave a double thumbs up.

“I’m not very perceptive.”

“I don’t think it’s just a matter of perception, but I heard it from Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

Joohyun asked with a worried look on her face.

“You said that in the old ‘Deep Sea Kingdom’ you made a sea passage in the dungeon?”

“I heard it’s not illegal, but it’s unfair.”

“I’m not scolding you, so keep listening. I heard you even made stairs instead of a slide. Is that true?”

“Of course I would have made stairs. Think about it, Joo-hyun. If you make a slide that deep, how much acceleration would you gain? People would die.”

“I appreciate that you value human life, but humans can’t create a staircase passage in the sea because they don’t want to die. And especially not in a dungeon.”

“I know what you are worried about.”

Geo nodded.

“But I have also lived on Earth for 29 years. Please believe me.”

“After living for 29 years, I’m still in this situation. How can I possibly believe in anything?”

“Shall I show you a crying portrait?”

“If you want to stop imitating humans, you can keep saying things like that.”

“…….”

It wasn't exactly an imitation, but it was still a little hurtful, so Geo kept his mouth shut. Joohyun nodded as if he was grateful for the cooperation and continued talking.

“But Mr. Geo is not the type of person who would not interfere with the lives of humans.”

“What does that mean?”

“My trust in Mr. Geo hit rock bottom the moment I found out he was nicknamed the Smiling Tyrant of the Sea Village. Isn’t that right, Mercy Bomber?”

“Mercy bomber?”

“I’m not the type of person to be quiet, so I have just one recommendation for you.”

Joohyun said solemnly.

“Don’t come forward yourself.”

“And use the item?”

Geo became sad.

“I am a beggar. I have no items.”

“Surprisingly, Mr. Geo’s cabin is made entirely of items, down to every drop of water.”

“Please don’t disparage my peaceful and comfortable cabin like that.”

“It seems like you already know everything and are trying to avoid it, so I’ll keep talking. Use the item.”

Joohyun gave her advice with all his heart.

“That way, you’ll have something to make excuses for later. Don’t forget that the reason Geo himself wasn’t treated as something like a deity during the last Gangnyeong incident was because there was an intermediary called Dana.”

“So what are you going to make excuses for later?”

“It means that Mr. Geo has a chance to make excuses for being human. This time, you shouldn’t use miracles too much just because you find the humans’ actions funny or pitiful. If you really want to do something, avoid the humans’ gaze and somehow eliminate the witnesses.”

“Does eliminating witnesses mean murder? Very interesting.”

“Don’t come out as Argio only at times like this, Mr. Geo. I’m really serious. Even if the collector is a large corporation, it’s hard to hide it when so many people are participating in the raid. After all, it’s an event hosted by the Solar Cult.”

“I will be quiet and come back later.”

And Joo-hyun never said he would believe until the end. He was a truly thorough man.

* * *

But there was one thing that this thorough Joo-Hyeon missed.

“Blood, has the bleeding stopped?”

“What is it? I feel like the warmth is coming back to my body.”

“…the organs have recovered.”

He should have also placed limits on the types and quantities of Geo's items.

Fallen arms were reattached, missing flesh and organs were regenerated, the wounds of hunters cursed with bleeding were instantly stopped, and corpses that had been gradually losing their body heat were experiencing miracles close to resurrection.

The culprit was Geo's blood ball.

“…….”

I sprinkled about 7 of them.

“…….”

“…Ugh….”

Geo saw from afar, Priest Kang Seo-dam covering his face with both hands and holding back tears.

“Oh, my lord, don’t cry! Everyone has recovered…!”

“Ah… I didn’t know that Father Kang Seo-dam would be this worried….”

“Surprisingly, the priest was a very affectionate person….”

For some reason, despite the warm comfort and gratitude from those around him, the sadness emanating from Kang Seo-dam seemed to have grown stronger. It seemed that it wasn't because of his mood, but Kang Seo-dam had a hard time recovering.

Even though Geo didn’t care about what other people thought, he couldn’t ignore this incident. Geo ignored the gazes on him and slowly approached Garasani.

And then he whispered.

“I think I made a big mistake.”

“Don’t worry, I’ll tell you about the collectible items.”

"thank you."

Geo thought to himself.

'How do you write a reflection paper?'

He was not the type of person to write a reflection paper, but he accepted it when he received it, and he didn't mind sending his teacher's reputation beyond the dark matter of the universe in the face of a huge mistake. Geo apologized to Joohyun in advance.

'I should write a letter and send it as soon as I have time today.'

Even though it would only be a pretty letter that the recipient wouldn't read, it was better than nothing. Geo felt the signs approaching him and raised his head.

“Excuse me, Priest…?”

“I am not a priest.”

“Ah, yes, Hunter.”

“You must be a bit out of it because you haven’t fully recovered yet. Wouldn’t it be better for you to lie down a little longer?”

“No. After receiving such a precious gift… how could I just lie down…?”

The hunter who had just come back from the brink of death, literally on the brink of death, was overcome with emotion and had tears in his eyes. Geo felt like he wanted to bury himself in the portrait. It was very burdensome.

“Oh, how could you give us such a… such an elixir….”

“Oh, that medicine….”

At that moment, Geo realized something new.

'This doesn't explain why it was a collectible item.'

Even if I tried to force it, the atmosphere wasn't conducive to that.

The Collector's Guild was not a charity guild that readily gave away valuable items to other guild members, and to anyone who saw it, the owner of this blood feud was Sergio.

“…….”

Giovanni decided to try his luck, relying solely on his own sanctity.

“…The name of the medicine is ‘Pi-gyeong-dan.’”

“Blood ball?”

“Yes, it was a rice cake made with medicinal herbs obtained through the mercy of the god I serve. This time, I was lucky enough to find a colony of medicinal herbs in the place the sun had told me about, and I made the medicine with it the day before I came to the dungeon.”

"that…."

“Actually, I didn’t know the exact effect. However, when I saw the herb, I thought it would be very helpful for stopping bleeding and recovery, so I made it. But I never thought it would be used like this.”

Geo made the sign of the cross with the face of a holy priest.

“This must also be the will of the sun. The divinity whom I love and respect must have wanted this attack to be successful. I am his servant and have only followed him faithfully, so please… I ask that you give me this kind of gratitude, not from me, but from the sun.”

Although it was a story with many holes and questions, the hunters were convinced by the sincere words and actions of Father Giovanni, which were full of 'truth', and his appearance, which was full of excellence.

“Come to think of it, the collector participated when there wasn’t much time left before the expedition….”

“I wonder if it was Hunter Sergio’s divinity that told me to participate in this dungeon?”

“This time, the two suns are praying for the success of the attack…!”

“Yes, if the divine had not helped, people would not have been able to survive like this.”

People who were tired and had no time to think deeply were easily swayed by emotional appeals. Of course, there were still people who had doubts, but when left alone, they resolved them on their own.

“But wasn’t Sergio Hunter a trainer?”

“Idiot, it’s not like only priests can worship God.”

“Oh, really? I didn’t know that….”

“It seems like a rare case.”

“It is difficult for even a priest to be chosen by God, but a trainer….”

“Isn’t he almost a saint at this level? He must be very loved.”

“But since you’re not from the Solar Church, are you a sun from another dimension?”

“Seoul’s Sun Bridge is a bit of a pain in the ass.”

Since they were hunters who risked their lives, as soon as they recovered from their injuries, everyone became excited. Geo looked at those strong people and whispered to Garasani who was standing next to him.

“How far will it take?”

“If you put your hands on it, it will go quite well.”

“I will also find a way as soon as I get back, so please do it this time.”

“Is there any possibility?”

Geo's excuse was not completely impossible in theory, but it was a rare case that only occurred once in a lifetime. Even they would have doubts once they regained their senses.

But that was only if there was no action. If Giovanni continued to brainwash, or rather, tell the truth, and the big business collectors tyrannized, or rather, provided a little help, then this story would have become a fait accompli.

What, why? What can we do if that's what we're doing? What can you do?

“…….”

Of course, there were some people for whom that didn't work.

“Sun god?”

"yes."

“Sun God….”

"yes."

“…….”

“…….”

Sanarae looked at Geo with a face that had lost even a smile. It was a subtle expression that could not be interpreted right away, but Geo understood it. It was a reaction like, 'Isn't that a bit weak of an excuse?'

And Geo ignored it.

'It's not a complete lie.'

His new father was the sun god. Although he was now in the form of a cute teddy bear, he still had the majesty of the sun.

'You even live in our house.'

How much Geo had supported him in both material and spiritual ways. It was never a lie that he was serving the sun. Even though it had a strong meaning of support, unlike a typical priest.

Fortunately, Sanarae didn't dig any further.

“…I guess I really receive a lot of love from the sun.”

“You’ve seen it, Hunter Sanarae. We’re like family.”

“That would definitely be a saint-level thing, but I don’t know how the Solar Church will react.”

“Those are ominous words.”

Geo asked based on experience.

“Surely you will be branded a heretic, put on religious trial, and stoned by the citizens?”

“Are you crazy?”

“Or you could be imprisoned without trial, locked in a tank, or locked with man-eating fish….”

“What are you trying to say?”

“Being eaten alive isn’t exactly a pleasant sensation.”

In that part, Kang Seo-dam, who had come closer without us noticing, came forward.

“Please do not view the Sun Church as such a primitive sect, Sergio Hunter.”

“Oh, my. Was it primitive?”

“…There may be such a religion somewhere, but it is not ours.”

“Excuse me.”

“As Hunter Sanarae said, we may only see a slight reaction from the Solar Church.”

“What kind of reaction would that be?”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been hesitating, answered.

“…At least they won’t be hostile.”

“Then what is it?”

“To put it nicely, it’s like inclusion.”

“Isn’t the divine nature that we worship clearly different?”

“If it was a religious sect that cared about such things, it would not have established itself as the representative religion in Seoul.”

“That is another amazing thing to hear, it’s nice to see you again.”

“…I’ll…try my best to block it, I guess I’ll try my best… phew….”

Sanarae looked at Geo with subtle eyes at the sight of Priest Kang Seodam, who seemed to be crying a little.

“Go ahead.”

“Yeah, it’s nothing….”

“Go ahead.”

“That’s not true.”

"Do it."

“I was wrong.”

Sanarae, who had clasped her hands together and was completely empty, left the place quietly. It seemed that she had gone to say hello to the hunter from Haeryeong Guild who was on the same team as Kang Seodam. The only ones left were Geo, Kang Seodam, and Garasani.

Looking at the messy surroundings, Garasani asked Kang Seodam.

“What happened? I couldn’t hear the exact details because the communication equipment was not in good condition….”

“I think I’ve told you up to this point, but monsters appeared during the fake moon time.”

“We also know very well that monsters during that time period are particularly ferocious.”

“The monsters we encountered are probably quite unfamiliar to you as well.”

Kang Seo-dam continued speaking, frowning as if he had a headache.

“It was an undead monster.”

“Undead?”

“Yes, it was a rotten, decomposed corpse. It disappeared again quickly after I pressed the light trigger….”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam nodded at Garasani's silence.

“It’s definitely a situation that I don’t quite understand.”

Why are there undead monsters living in this rainforest?

“I thought it was a typical vegetation-type dungeon, but it seems there’s a bit more to it.”

“Then there’s a high probability that it’s a dungeon with a story.”

“And these types of dungeons are often difficult to conquer if you don’t know the story.”

“Have you been able to identify the monsters?”

“It was dark, but I was able to confirm it since I am a priest of the sun.”

“Fortunately, I guess it wasn’t someone I knew.”

“Even the clothes I was wearing were a little different from the Earth’s style.”

“She may have changed her clothes. Did you check her face too?”

“Their faces were too damaged to be recognized, but I couldn’t even sense a familiar aura… so they couldn't have been priests of the sun."

Before this attack, the Solar Cult had already attempted one attack and failed. It seemed that the priests of the Sun who died at that time had become undead, but Kang Seodam shook his head and said that was not the case.

"It is strange. I can't see my brothers' bodies anywhere."

"I thought the four-legged monsters here didn't eat corpses?"

"Even if the information from the church is wrong, there should be some equipment left, but I can't see it."

"Since this dungeon is so large, there must be many places that we haven't been able to fully explore."

"Yes, but…."

Kang Seo-dam, who had been pondering, continued speaking.

"Our team has discovered some information."

"What a coincidence, we have that too."

"I confirmed that there were traces of something as heavy as a corpse being dragged somewhere."

"Our team has identified that the monsters of the evening are moving towards one place."

"…Then it seems like there is something to be done."

Kang Seo-dam looked at Geo for a moment.

"……."

"How may I help you?"

“…No, this is….”

Kang Seo-dam asked carefully, her lips tightly clenched.

“…If the attack is successful, you may attend the funeral mass of the Sun Church.”

“Of course I will. Is there anything else you need?”

“Yes, of course. I feel a great sense of gratitude for the kindness and mercy you have shown me.”

Geo thought to himself as he whispered quietly so that no one else could hear.

‘Why doesn’t anyone ask me to help with the funeral…?’

Who is there who specializes in funerals as much as I do?

While Geo was secretly thinking, 'Am I not a very trustworthy god, unlike my father? To the point where I can't even help with a funeral? Should I learn something like the art of kingship?', Kang Seodam called the surviving hunters together.

“We will move after completing one maintenance.”

Up until now, it had been a process of exploration, but now that there were this many clues, the story had changed. Now, it was the beginning of a full-scale attack, and the hunter, who seemed to sense this, asked while checking his injuries.

“Excuse me, Father. Where are we going?”

“Further inside.”

Kang Seo-dam answered.

“We’re going to where the monsters gather.”

There was definitely something going on.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (179)

179

Episode 179

Before the full-scale departure, they had some time to prepare.

“Still, it would be better to sleep on it for a while before you go.”

“Many hunters are relaxed, perhaps because of the sudden recovery.”

“If you keep moving like this, you’ll definitely get seriously hurt….”

“Yes, I think it would be better to take a proper rest for once.”

Then the hunters each took their places.

“No matter how much I cut these weeds, they just won’t shrink.”

“Please light a fire here! Any fire specialist hunters?”

The hunter of Daecheong felt regretful as he saw that sight.

“I think the house we found would be more comfortable to rest in.”

“It would be difficult to move that far in this situation.”

“I know. I just felt a little bad about it, so I said it.”

“It was a good place to call home.”

“Especially in a dungeon full of poisonous plants like this one.”

The sun set and rose repeatedly while the hunters were making a place to rest. The hunters looked very tired of such an environment.

“I’m so tired I could die.”

“I don’t feel like I slept at all….”

Not only was it a vast rainforest filled with humid heat and poisonous plants of all sizes, but the sunrises and sunsets were also quite random. It was truly the worst possible conditions for hunters to rest.

Even so, the hunters who had barely managed to find a place to rest sought out healers.

“Please give me some heels.”

“I got poisoned by a weed.”

“Wow, my arm is rotting! Heal!”

It is more difficult to avoid getting hurt while creating a resting space in a dungeon overgrown with poisonous plants. This strategy took this into consideration and secured an above-average healer, and now the effects are fully visible.

Among them, Geo was frequently asked questions.

“Priest!”

“I am not a priest.”

“Ah, ah… right. That, trainer?”

“That’s right. Are you hurt anywhere?”

“Yes, there was a thorn in my hand….”

“It’s already starting to discolor.”

Geo lightly stroked the black venomous line running through the Hunter's flesh and veins. The Hunter receiving treatment and the Hunters around him were amazed at how natural and clean the process was.

“Wow… How on earth do you purify it so quickly?”

“I thought it would be better to treat you as quickly as possible since you must be sick.”

“Still, this won’t be an easy task….”

They guessed that Sergio Hunter had a high-level healing skill. It was rude to ask about the detailed skill window, so they couldn't ask, but it was almost a given.

“Did you make the medicine I gave you earlier using your skill?”

“I don’t have that kind of skill.”

“Oh, so you just made it by yourself?”

“I didn’t think any skill was needed to make medicine.”

“That’s amazing, usually I get help from skills.”

“The inherent power of the material was great. I was lucky.”

“It seems like you serve a truly merciful God.”

“Yes, he is a very kind person.”

From what I've heard, Sergio Hunter seems to be treated almost like a saint by his god. It would make sense that he would be given a potion filled with the power of the sun.

Then one of the priests of the sun asked Kang Seodam.

“Even though it is a sun from another dimension, it is still the same lineage. Don’t you have bad feelings toward our religion?”

“Don’t think of turning good feelings into bad ones, and stop being greedy. You are clearly the son of another god.”

“But it’s not like there haven’t been cases like this before. There are already many gods who have become part of our sun and family. If we try to persuade them well….”

“What are you going to do by persuading me? I know why you are so greedy, but please be humble.”

Kang Seo-dam shook his head, tired of the irritation that was making his back tingle.

The older priests with experience at least knew how to hide their greed and pretend to be humble, but the younger priests often believed in the power of the Sun Church and were steeped in arrogance.

'It's easier to show off your stupidity so openly than to act like a lunatic, which can feel sinister, but it's still annoying. This little brat probably doesn't know who he's talking to right now... .'

The most prominent religious sect in Seoul, the city of Seoul, is the Solar Church, which ranks first or second in the religious world. Priests usually receive education from a young age, are officially recognized as priests at the young age of 14, and begin their full-fledged activities at the young age of 17.

The priests of the sun, who were filled with pride that they were the best, often showed this kind of arrogance. It was arrogance that naturally the other party would consider this kind of invitation an honor.

“Is Sergio Hunter’s reputation that appealing? His abilities seem very useful. Of course, compared to the Dalnim Church, our sect still lacks saints, so it would be natural for Sergio Hunter, who has such qualities, to be greedy. It is truly amazing that you are evaluating the son of a strange divinity like an object.”

“Oh, no, I just….”

“Put aside your pride. What could possibly be lacking in Sergio Hunter? He is content with his life and is growing in the arms of the divinity I serve. If we seem like a desirable fruit to him, and he would be embarrassed to be offered it to him first, what greed is he showing?”

Kang Seo-dam sighed as he quickly spoke and wiped his face.

“I’m already starting to get worried….”

It wasn't just this young priest's greed. Right now, the information was locked in the dungeon and there was nowhere to escape, but once the raid was over, this news would be relayed to the religious order.

'Then the elders will start making a fuss again.'

As he grew older, his mask only grew more magnificent, and his pride in the Sun Church only grew. The older priests would approach Sergio Hunter in a different, more experienced way than the younger priests.

'Things like burrs.'

It couldn't get any more shitty than this.

“…….”

“I, I was wrong.”

“…Please reflect on yourself.”

The composition just wasn't very good.

'... The mermaids of the deep sea clearly said that their teacher was taken away by the solar cult of their dimension.'

Kang Seodam was a hunter who visited the 'Deep Sea Country' with 'Sergio Hunter'. He was well aware of the story of the dungeon. And its structure was not much different from the current situation on Earth.

'What should we do if the mermaids get angry again?'

The most respected and popular people in the religious world were those who had a unique vessel to hold the divinity. Among the catechumens of the Sun Church, there were Chaisol and Iruda, and among the Dalnim Church, there was their saintess.

The Sun Church and the Moon Church were in a relationship of mutual growth and competition, and the adults that the Moon Church had were not in the Sun Church. The Sun Church was hit hard by the dungeon break incident last year, and is still in disarray… .

"……."

Geo approached Kang Seo-dam, who was standing alone and holding back a sigh.

"What's the matter?"

"…I'm sorry, no, I'm sorry."

It was quite a distance, but there was no way that Sergio Hunter could not have heard the conversation just now. Kang Seo-dam apologized with an anxious heart. Fortunately, Sergio Hunter did not get angry.

"I understand."

"Thank you for your mercy, Hahae."

"I love the sun."

“…Yes, I know.”

“I would like to be friends with you.”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam nodded with a heavy expression.

“Please… I will be careful.”

I had no intention of provoking the mermaids whose anger had not yet subsided.

“I will try to persuade them well so that no problems arise. Since I also have a considerable position within the church, I am sure that the brothers will listen to me to some extent.”

“You don’t have to overthink it.”

“I am ashamed to show such a shallow and greedy side. I will be careful about my conduct to avoid any trouble as much as possible. I am grateful for the mercy you have shown me.”

“…….”

Geo thought about that.

'Do I speak a bit strangely?'

I just made a suggestion for friendship, but she seemed to be thinking too complicatedly, so I said one thing, but she kept spewing out even more complicated words. No matter how I looked at it, it seemed like Kang Seo-dam was living an uncomfortable life.

‘… Anyway, I would appreciate it if you could think about it for me.’

It's okay because it's fun.

“I will now return to my team.”

“Yes, please go in safely. I’ll see you later.”

“I hope you are at peace, brother.”

After all, Geo loved himself because he had a clear mind.

* * *

And no one saw 'Sergio Hunter' that way.

“…….”

This was especially true for Hunter Sanarae.

“Chief? Why?”

"haha."

“What? Why are you laughing?”

“I was looking back on my life.”

“Wow, you do that too? That’s awesome.”

"okay?"

He seemed more awesome than my assistant.

“Take care.”

“You really are saying things that don’t suit you.”

"ha ha ha."

Sanarae waved his hand and left the place naturally. Then he returned to where his team members were resting and sat down as well. He looked at the people sitting in a circle around the campfire.

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

Exchanging glances are Jeong Yeong-won and Garasani, including Sanarae.

The man with his hands clasped asked.

“Is this okay?”

“What are you talking about?”

Sanarae smiled her characteristic smile at Garasani's natural and innocent question, which had a cold impression.

“Isn’t that just too unscrupulous?”

“It would be a great help in understanding if you could provide the exact subject and object.”

“From here? You can hear everything? Are you telling me to go out and die?”

Even though it looked like this, Sanarae was one of those people who knew that her life was precious.

If others saw him, they would ask, 'What the hell are you talking about?' But it was true. He was just a wildling who enjoyed fighting in a dazed state when death was near, and at least he had his own breathing hole open and was running wild.

Well, I've taken the risk I had to take. That's why I didn't leave out the fact that 'Sergio Hunter' was participating in the raid. In the same context, the current situation isn't all that bad...

"haha."

Sanarae laughed again.

'This is driving me crazy.'

At that moment, Sergio, who had come to the meeting after receiving greetings from all the hunters, asked.

“Aren’t you all starting to get hungry?”

“Sergio Hunter is truly a witch hag.”

“Even if it looks like this, it won’t eat you, so don’t worry.”

“I wonder if I can really feel at ease….”

If you can't avoid it, enjoy it.

“What do you want to give me?”

“Do you like fruit jelly?”

“Oh, I like it.”

Sanarae obediently ate the round dried persimmon. The dark yellow dried persimmon, smoother than raisins, had an exquisite clean sweetness.

“How are you?”

“This is really delicious.”

Are you really thinking of eating me when I get fat?

It was a little funny because it was so unfair that even a snack like this could taste so good.

“…….”

Sanarae was a hunter who used her body very well.

His vision was like that of a bird of prey flying in the sky, his sense of smell was like that of a tiger, and his ability to detect danger was as good as that of a herbivore. There were things that such a savage could not possibly not know.

It's like a scent that changes three times within a body.

“…Just give me one more.”

“How good it looks when you eat well!”

“Don’t pour so much out.”

“If it overflows, the ants in the dungeon will eat it.”

“Are there any ants here?”

“Then the monster will eat it.”

“Oh, monster….”

The pitch and volume of a voice heard by the ear.

“How merciful.”

Those stuffed smiles and actions make you guess something even if you don't want to know.

“How far will Hunter Sergio be merciful?”

“If you keep a fool like me by your side, your dinner table will be sumptuous all day long.”

“Uh… I guess so, I guess so.”

For now, I decided to laugh it off.

Sergio Hunter doesn't seem to get angry easily.

* * *

"meow."

A cat cried in the dark.

"meow."

Keep going until you get an answer.

"meow."

Dana waited.

There is a soul here that needs to go home.

“…….”

"meow."

“…….”

Sanarae covered her ears.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (180)

180

Episode 180

One night, when nothing could be seen, something strange happened.

“Huh? What is that?”

“Undead… Aren’t you undead?”

"…wait for a sec."

The hunter's eyes widened as he looked around cautiously.

“Why are there so many?”

It was a monster frenzy.

“Wake up! It’s madness!!”

“A frenzy has occurred! Everyone, get your gear ready!!”

“The undead! They’ll be here soon!!”

At the words of those who were on guard duty, the hunters who were sleeping, the hunters who were checking their equipment, and even the hunters who were treating people's injuries all jumped up. The hunters carefully selected by the Sun Church moved in unison even in sudden situations.

Geo, who had not been sleeping to begin with, muttered.

“Madness?”

“It literally refers to the phenomenon of monsters running wild.”

“Aha, is this also a hunter’s term?”

“Yes, it is not an uncommon phenomenon.”

After explaining this, Garasani continued to speak while organizing his guns.

“But it’s not a very common phenomenon.”

He asked Priest Kang Seo-dam, who was training the hunters on my team.

“What do you think is the cause?”

“I don’t know.”

Kang Seo-dam, who seemed like he would keep his mouth shut, opened his mouth when he met Sergio’s eyes, who followed him. He groaned and immediately squeezed out an answer.

“…First of all, we probably didn’t provide the cause. This phenomenon wasn’t reported in the Solar Cult’s data, and since there were many participants in this attack, it’s likely that another team artificially pressed the trigger. Of course, we can’t be certain.”

The frenzy phenomenon is triggered either by the dungeon itself or by a strong trigger triggered by the hunter's actions. And the former case was extremely rare. For now, the latter had to be considered.

“Now that things have come to this, it would be best for us to stay here until the madness ends.”

“It was worth it to reserve space in advance. I’ll tell my team about that.”

After Garasani left, Sergio asked Kang Seodam.

“Shall I send you honey?”

“…Please.”

“Do you need light?”

“It can stimulate monsters.”

“But it’ll be dark so it’ll be hard to see.”

“The light is too broad….”

“It can be adjusted.”

“Then I would like to ask you to do that as well.”

“No problem.”

As Geo reached out to his neck, Honey, who had been hiding in the hood the whole time, climbed on top of him. He waved his hand gently and Honey flew into the air. The small body of Honey quickly disappeared from sight.

Geo, who had sent Honey flying to search and rescue the Hunters, this time lifted it up by grabbing the end of the cloak.

“Dana.”

From the pitch-black shadow of the cloak, a jewel cat the color of the night sky emerged.

"meow."

“Help your brother.”

"meow."

The cat, which was quite large, disappeared into the bushes. The hunter, who was hurriedly trying to get himself together, was startled. She asked Geo with concern.

“Are you okay? Monsters will be coming soon, and it will be hard to endure without a trainer to protect you. We will do our best to defend you, so if you can heal us from the inside…!”

Geo shook his head at that.

"it's okay."

“Yes? But…!”

“That’s prejudice.”

Turup!!

Geo caught the flying sphere.

“It means that healers and trainers are weak.”

Kkwaddeok !!

Debris flew.

In his smiling hand, something spherical was crushed.

“…….”

“It looks strange.”

"uh…."

“It was quite small, brown, and had a pair of wings as long as its body.”

“Uh, uh.”

“It’s a quiet flying monster.”

Thud, thud…!

As I waved my hand, the monster's remains scattered.

“The monsters have come.”

"…yes."

“See you later.”

The hunter who had left the place in a hurry disappeared, and Geo searched for Garasani with black blood dripping from his hands. He had a question for him out of consideration.

Geo asked, wearing a hood.

“Mr. Garasani.”

“Yes, Sergio Hunter.”

“Would people be surprised if I suddenly turned red?”

“It might be a little surprising, but I’m glad.”

Garasani, holding a gun in both hands, continued speaking.

“It's dark outside.”

"aha."

Argio's hair turned red as if soaked in blood.

“I see.”

The evil deity laughed in excitement.

* * *

Jeong Yeong-won was a typical healer.

“Protect me now.”

"yep…!"

It meant a weak and precious workforce.

“The therapist can be here!”

“We will protect you!”

“But if you could give us some heels…!”

Jeong Yeong-won nodded solemnly in the noisy surroundings.

“If you stay within 5 meters of me, I will make sure you don’t die.”

The hunters were thrilled.

“Thank you, therapist…!!”

“Protect Hunter Jeong Yeong-won! If the healer dies, we die too!!”

Basically, healers were few in number. They weren't so few that you wouldn't encounter them in your lifetime, but they were also so few that you wouldn't have a single healer on your team in your lifetime. To that extent, healers were considered to be high-level personnel who were treated with great respect.

And there were few healers who could provide ranged heals like Jeong Yeong-won.

“Three undead ahead!!”

“There’s a healer behind you, shut up and block it with your body!!”

“I trust you, therapist…!!”

Jeong Yeong-won criticized such zeal, but he continued to hold onto the hunters' lives.

“You brain-dead hunters, if you don’t want to get beat up, buy yourself a body!!”

The reason there were so few healers was because it was very difficult to learn or utilize skills. Skills are not something that can be learned like frozen food that comes out of the oven.

There are means and methods to force the human body to recover, but the actual treatment is extremely complex and requires a meticulous process. There were not many healers who could heal as extensively as Jeong Yeong-won.

“Just stop hurting yourself!!”

“Wow, it’s reassuring to have a healer!!”

“Hey you chicken heads !!”

Jeong Yeong-won, whose back was hot, felt something quickly approaching him.

“Fuck! Up there! There’s a flying monster up there…!!”

When one of the hunters raised his weapon in a hurry.

Crack!!

"…uh?"

Crunch crunch !!!

Something huge flew in, snatching the monster away and sticking it into the tree.

“…….”

“…Who, who…?”

“Oh, no.”

Someone covered in black blood laughed while digging his claws into a tree like an animal.

“You have to be careful.”

A voice that seems to comfort a weak and young thing.

“A monster is flying from the sky.”

“…….”

“You better take care of yourself.”

Golden eyes as sharp as those of a beast.

“Isn’t that right?”

Jeong Yeong-won, who was protected by the hunters, recognized him.

“…Sergio Hunter.”

“See you later.”

Crunch, crunch !!

He climbed the tree and soon disappeared from people's sight.

“…….”

Jeong Yeong-won seemed to hear the beast's joyful growl.

In fact, Argio was in a very happy mood. It had been a long time since he had hunted such wild beasts. These were so cute that he wanted to burst them with both hands because they didn't know the subject.

‘… Good.’

Phew !!

As I put my leg in, a whole head burst open.

'very good.'

Crunch!!

When I pricked my fingernail, dead veins burst like balloons and flesh resembling the bark of an old tree fell off.

'I especially like the ones above.'

There were many beasts on this tree.

The not-so-small figure ran silently through the dark and huge trees. When the bare feet, which had taken off their stuffy shoes, stepped onto the branches, it remained silent without even a slight bounce. The swift and huge figure seemed as if it had wings.

These rainforest trees were no different from Argio's hometown. With such tall trees, the monsters floating in the sky were easy prey for Argio. He climbed between the trees and crushed the monsters in the air.

And Sanarae was watching that scene.

“…….”

He turned his gaze to the man in the sky, slashing at the approaching monsters.

‘… It’s not really flying, right?’

The way it leaped and jumped between trees with its bare hands and feet made it look like it had wings. It was not a small body, but the way it moved elastically gave the illusion that it was as heavy as a feather.

A monster comes into his large hands. He grabs it lightly and it bursts coolly like a water balloon. He smiles as if he is happy with the black blood on his face, hair, and clothes.

The golden eyes filled with reckless joy are eerie.

“Sanarae Hunter, don’t look away!!”

“Oh, sorry.”

Crunch, crunch !!

Sanarae gave a vague response while fighting the monster.

'What is it really?'

He moved flexibly like a cat stretching, cleverly targeting blind spots that hunters could not easily detect.

'It's covered in blood.'

Running on trees, occasionally coming down to the ground to trample on monsters, gently luring them with the tips of your fingers, then quickly and nimbly passing through the swarms of monsters and bursting their heads, necks, hearts, and legs.

‘That’s how it has to be… .’

Doesn't it look like they're dancing happily?

A smile full of joy particularly caught my eye.

* * *

“Whoa!!!”

After the frenzy ended, one of the hunters screamed.

“Stand, stand, Sergio Hunter!! No, Healer!! Healer!!”

“I’m not hurt.”

“Heal…!! Oh, yes? Yes? Oh, you’re not hurt…?”

“It’s not my blood.”

Geo, covered in crimson blood, looked back at Garasani.

“Your clothes are dirty.”

“Oh, I don’t have any spare clothes.”

Garasani asked with a grin.

“Would you like to use this guy’s stuff?”

“What is this, sir? What kind of trouble is this?”

“You too, Yujina, must know the joy of sharing.”

“This isn’t sharing, this is robbery.”

Yujina, who was passing by, saw Geo.

“But if you really need my clothes, I will.”

“No, I don’t think it will fit, but it’s okay.”

“I was just thinking of giving you a cloak…?”

Yujin grabbed the collector on-site staff member next to me.

“I think I can give you these clothes. They don’t fit you well, do they?”

“Oh, why me again.”

“Can you give me one of those for our Sergio?”

“I can give you one, but isn’t this the one? A downward slope?”

“It has to be tormented to be tormented.”

Geo was touched by the warm hearts of the collection staff.

“I appreciate your kindness, but I really don’t mind.”

I didn't really want to wear other people's clothes.

“I was just wondering if it was okay to throw away my wet cloak.”

“You can throw it away as much as you want. Even if it’s not soaked in blood, you can throw it away if you want.”

“I’m not a spendthrift.”

“I was going to pick it up and make it into a family heirloom, so it’s a shame.”

“No, don’t do it.”

“But you should wash it at least once. You’ll feel uncomfortable if you keep doing this.”

“I don’t know if that’s possible.”

At that moment, Honey, who had been flying in the sky for a while, sat on Geo's shoulder.

“Crunch.”

“Honey, did you have a good time?”

“Gurrrr….”

Honey blinked and looked at her father.

“…….”

"honey?"

“Kung kkung kkung kkung kkung kkung!!!”

Geo's son, Naemi, got very upset when he saw his father soaking wet.

“Kung, kung, kung!!! Kung, kung, kung, kung, kung!!!”

“Huh, Honey, why are you doing this?”

“Gurrrr…!!”

Gulp !

The giant honey swallowed Geo.

“Honeyeeee!!!”

“Gyaaaah!!!”

“Geo Ceeee!!!”

Whether the hunters were shocked or not, Honey, who had swallowed my father, soon spat him out.

“Ah.”

“Gurr.”

“Honey, you shouldn’t spit out Dad so harshly.”

“Kung.”

“I collapsed so pitifully….”

Geo, who had fallen in a cautious pose like a princess who had lost all her strength, stood up, dusting off her dusty clothes.

“Are you all surprised?”

“Huh, huh, honey…!! Honey just now…!!”

“It’s okay, I just washed it.”

Thanks to this, the face and body that had been stained with crimson blood returned to their original clean state. In Honey's enlarged body, the crimson blood that had been sucked from Geo was gathering together.

“Kuruk.”

Okay.

The monster blood that had been pooling inside Honey's body soon formed into a jewel and sank beneath her body. It was hard to tell what the blood was as it mixed in with the jewels that Honey had been collecting day and night.

Only then did the hunters realize the situation and looked dumbfounded.

“Ah, that, the washing… you washed it for me.”

“I thought you were going to be eaten in an instant….”

“…Why did that become a jewel?”

Giovanni smiled his characteristically bright smile.

“Because Honey likes jewels.”

“Does that usually make it a jewel inside the body…?”

Although there was no specific explanation, the Hunter, who confirmed that there was no problem, cleared his mind. As the overall atmosphere stabilized, those who had witnessed Geo during the frenzy came up to talk to him.

“That, the one who jumped up on the tree… No, the one who caught the monster was Hunter Sergio, right?”

“I guess I’m right, since there weren’t many hunters active in the trees.”

“Wow… wow….”

One of the hunters guarding Jeong Yeong-won continued speaking with a pale face.

“I thought I was going to get eaten.”

“I don’t eat it.”

“No, the eyes are, like… something… like… something… so.”

“What does it mean when the eyes are like something or other?”

“You know? You know, this feeling.”

“I don’t know?”

Not knowing was Giovanni's specialty.

“How can you be so fast as a healer?”

“It’s prejudice.”

“You are a trainer, but you sent away all the trainers….”

“It’s prejudice.”

Geo nodded.

“Both trainers and healers can fight.”

“Usually when a trainer or healer has to step in, the strategy is already ruined.”

The fact that the trainers and healers were at the forefront meant that all the other hunters were dead. That meant that the healers and trainers had a strong role in supporting the rear. It was hard enough to train and study healing, and they didn't have time to develop their combat skills.

Geo said that part with a smile.

“I’m a bit of a battle veteran.”

“…….”

The hunters' gaze turned to the senior member of the collectors' guild, Garasani.

“…How on earth did you train the Hunter…?”

“I didn’t see it like that in the collection….”

“Didn’t the collector say that he treasures his guild members?”

Garasani just laughed.

“Heh heh.”

Are you a part-time worker?

* * *

“It seems like Team 6 provided the cause.”

Kang Seo-dam continued speaking, holding a currency crystal developed exclusively for dungeon exploration.

“I’ve finished contacting you. I heard that you touched a small tree and this came out.”

“What do you mean by small tree?”

“It is said to be a small tree, less than 1 meter long. The leaves and branches shine with a light purple color….”

“It’s heterogeneous.”

“Because there are only these huge trees.”

It was a dungeon filled with huge trees that were so tall that dozens of adult men would have to cling to them to barely be able to wrap around them. There was nothing that could be done about the fact that a small tree glowing purple seemed like the key to conquering it.

“So, first, he attacked the tree, but it only got scratches and didn’t break. The moment he tried to do something more, all the monsters in the dungeon became frenzied.”

Even monsters I had never seen before appeared.

“I don’t know about those sphere-shaped monsters that were flying in the sky. They were a species that I hadn’t seen during the previous sect’s raids, and it was too dark during the frenzy to see them properly.”

“I know what it looks like.”

“Thank you, Sergio Hunter. I think those guys are monsters that only appear when the lavender tree is attacked. We handled it well, so no one was seriously injured or killed, but….”

“Did it happen in other teams?”

“Yes, the number of healers is large, so the wounded can be taken care of, but the number of dead hunters is also not small. It is said that this monster will self-destruct if you approach it, dealing with intruders with heat and poison.”

The heat and poison were so strong that even with so many healers and items, there were still quite a few deaths. Most of the team was now focused on treating the wounded.

“So, I think we need to figure out the situation for sure.”

Kang Seo-dam, who had said so, stopped immediately.

“…I see, there it is.”

“That’s fortunate.”

Geo nodded.

“I think I’ve found a solid clue.”

Fragile-looking branches and lush, cotton-like leaves.

What they found was the lavender tree that had been the topic of conversation earlier.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (181)

181

Episode 181

“Back flower?”

Geo looked a little pleased.

“It looks like a wisteria. The petals are closer to lilac, though….”

“I didn’t know you were interested in flora and fauna.”

Kang Seo-dam was surprised that 'Sergio Hunter' knew the vegetation of the Earth. It may be that he was able to read the characteristics of living things with his divine privilege, but the line just now felt like a symbol.

'It is rare to find a deity that cares so meticulously for the things of the Earth.'

Kang Seo-dam, who was examining the lavender tree with Geo, nodded.

“It looks quite similar to one of the plants on Earth.”

“Judging by the purple color all the way to the body, it’s probably not a plant from Earth.”

“Yes, most of the Earth’s native trees have brown bodies….”

“The colors are so unified that it almost looks like the tree itself is a flower, which is really nice to look at.”

At Geo's words, Garasani, who was standing next to him, stared intently at Gangseodam.

“…….”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam noticed that strange pressure.

'It seems like it means that once we complete the conquest and gain autonomy from the Solar Cult, we will hand over the share of this tree.'

Is this some kind of stubbornness from a grandfather who has never seen his late grandson?

'If this tree is heavily related to the strategy, it is questionable whether it will remain after the strategy, and even if it does remain, it will be classified as an important research material or a hazardous material, making it difficult to distribute… I am sure that this is something I am not unaware of.'

This was along the same lines as asking a person to make flowers bloom in a barren region in the winter without the help of magic. And it was ridiculous to ask for a miracle right away because you wanted to see your beloved grandson.

“What role does this tree play here?”

“…I guess we’ll have to check it out now.”

Fortunately, Geo himself seemed more interested in solving the strategy than in owning the tree. It was fortunate that he was able to avoid friction with the collector for some ridiculous reason.

Kang Seo-dam called a priest.

“Do you feel anything?”

“…I’m sorry, I just can’t….”

“That actually gave me confidence.”

“Is that so?”

“There is no heat in this tree.”

Another team member questioned him.

“There’s no heat? This dungeon is as hot as a steamer.”

“It feels a little cool when I touch it.”

It wasn't particularly cold, but even that was strange. All the plants in this dungeon were soaked in intense heat.

“Because the average temperature of the vegetation in this dungeon is high, the poison spreads even faster.”

“That was certainly the case, but then why was that…?”

“I don’t know about that. It’s even more confusing for us priests of the sun.”

The priest of the sun has a hard time understanding opponents who are not passionate. This is because their hot sexual power and compatibility are not good, so they refuse to be understood from the opposite side. Kang Seodam looked around at the other hunters.

“Does anyone have any further opinions? I don’t think that simply approaching it will cause the same frenzy as just now, so please make sure that you do not harm the tree.”

Then, gardener Jeong Yeong-won stepped forward.

“I’m also quite interested in plants.”

“Is that so?”

“I came here just because they said there was some unique vegetation.”

“Then please come closer.”

“I don’t feel the heat as the priests said….”

Jeong Yeong-won came within a stone's throw of the tree and examined it carefully.

“…….”

A strange light appeared in Jeong Yeong-won's eyes.

“…Your vitality is very strong.”

“Is it vitality?”

“Just as the priests of the sun are sensitive to heat, I am a healer.”

“So you’re saying that you can feel more vitality?”

“Basically, if you can’t understand the energy and atmosphere of a living thing, you can’t be a proper therapist.”

“I understand, Hunter Jeong Yeong-won.”

“I’m telling you this from my perspective.”

Jeong Yeong-won, who had adjusted his round glasses, continued speaking with his characteristic doll-like expression.

“The life force of the dungeon is concentrated in this tree. In human terms, it’s like an important organ. You can think of it as the heart or the brain.”

“Heart or brain?”

“It seems like it goes beyond simply storing a lot of vitality, and also plays a role in circulating it throughout the dungeon. Actually, this part is ambiguous to me. It could just be that the vitality is so abundant that it’s spread out.”

Jeong Yeong-won took a small step back from the tree.

“It’s not clear whether this tree is favored by the dungeon, or whether the dungeon can be maintained because of this tree. If it’s the latter, there are ways to deal with these trees quickly, but….”

The hunter who was listening to the story made a tired expression.

“Um, therapist. No matter what, that’s… We’ll all die. Judging from what the other teams found, there must be a lot of trees. I think we’ll all be wiped out before we can even deal with them all.”

“Yes, and it’s not a surefire way either. From what I’ve heard, it seems like the six teams that touched the tree weren’t able to handle it either. Even though it looks weak on the outside, it’s not a tree that can be easily broken.”

The collector's maintenance and the hunter's intervention.

“What if it’s the former? If the tree gets favored by the dungeon?”

“At least this dungeon won’t be conquered even if everything is destroyed.”

“Then, will this just make the dungeon more irritating? This is a headache….”

It was a situation where many people died and were injured due to one frenzy. It was not a good situation to hastily clear the dungeon by clearing trees.

The young priest had a weary look on his face.

“Even though we have so many great talents gathered here, how is it that we are in this situation? How on earth were we only A-class…?”

“You must not speak weakly in front of the people who have attended our event.”

“I’m sorry. I was so frustrated that I showed a bad side of myself. I will reflect on it.”

The priest lowered his head, but he didn’t look particularly remorseful. The other hunters’ expressions also crumpled.

In this hot and humid weather, with injuries continuing to occur, the world being a poisonous wasteland, and a highly sensitive situation, it was only natural to feel annoyed when I got caught up in arguments that weren't arguments at all, like, "I paid a lot of money to hire you, so why can't you do your job?"

“I will apologize on your behalf.”

In the end, Kang Seo-dam stepped forward.

“After the raid, we will also deliver an official apology, Hunters.”

“Huh? Oh, no. Why go that far… You don’t have to do that when it comes to the honor of the church.”

“He said that sincerity and humility are more important than saving face. I would appreciate it if you could give me a chance to reflect.”

While Kang Seodam was skillfully coaxing the hunters, Hunter Sanarae, who had a sullen expression, slowly approached the lavender tree. Geo greeted Sanarae with a smile.

“Are you here?”

“There was a strange smell coming from the tree.”

“Could it have something to do with that sullen expression?”

“Fat? What a cute expression.”

As always, Sanarae wrinkled her nose as she changed the subject in an odd way.

“……?”

Jeong Yeong-won, who was also observing the tree, asked with that expression.

“Hunter Sanarae, you are famous for your excellent senses. You must know something that others don’t. If you feel something, would you please tell us?”

“Famous, that’s not really it. I feel good receiving such praise. Well, it’s nothing special, but… well….”

Sanarae, whose voice trailed off, spoke with her signature smile.

“Does it smell like a corpse?”

“…….”

At Sanarae's words, Geo called out to Garasani.

“Mr. Garasani.”

“Speak, Sergio Hunter.”

“What did Father Kang Seo-dam say during the maintenance time earlier?”

“They said they found traces of someone dragging something heavy.”

“And we confirmed that monsters move here in the evening.”

“Sergio Hunter is right.”

“Then, shall we check what the monsters do in the evening?”

This dungeon, where the time of the sun and moon were mixed up, would quickly become dark if you waited a little. Skilled hunters hid after erasing the smell and presence and monitored the movements of the monsters, and the information they found was quite shocking.

“…….”

“…Uh, how….”

The priest, still young, sat down.

“How can a priest, a priest…!”

“Calm down.”

“You’re using the priest as manure!”

The face was filled with disgust towards monsters and dungeons.

“These horrible monsters! Filthy monsters! Such evil demons that even the goddess has turned her gaze away from…!”

At night, the monsters brought 'manure' from all over the dungeon. Most of them were monsters that fell asleep at night, but among them were the corpses of previous expeditions that had not yet been recovered.

The priest, who could be called a young man, was appalled by the blasphemous behavior of the monsters.

“I was wondering why I couldn’t see my brothers, and then this happened…!”

“I told you to calm down.”

“Ha, but…! I didn’t know it would be such a horrible dungeon!”

“You are tarnishing the name of the sun.”

“…….”

“Tsk.”

When Kang Seo-dam clicked his tongue, the young priest finally shut his mouth and turned pale. Within the church, Kang Seo-dam was a sharp priest with a strong voice and a clear distinction between public and private matters. It was understandable that he was scared because he had given him a bad impression.

Ignoring the priest, Kang Seodam looked back at the hunters.

“Manure? That was an unexpected method.”

“Well, that’s only natural, since there was no sign of the floor being torn up.”

“I never thought the ground would split open….”

Kang Seo-dam had a tired expression.

When the monsters of the night brought 'manure' and dug their claws into the ground, the ground would split open as if in pain. Then, 'manure' would be put into the gap.

“The hole looks pretty deep. You managed to smell the corpse, Hunter Sanarae.”

“How did it turn out like that? I was wondering what it was because I smelled something strange, right?”

“Thank you for your cooperation, whatever it may be. Thanks to you, we were able to confirm the location of my brothers' bodies."

"I'm not sure if that can be called a corpse, but…?"

"It's better than not finding it at all."

Even though he saw the place where his family's traces were presumed, Kang Seo-dam's expression did not change. He knew very well what role he had played in this expedition. It was not the time to be weak or show it.

"And I also found out some surprising information."

"If we hide well, the monsters won't be able to find us even if we're near this tree."

"Yes, it is as Sergio Hunter said. I don't know why, but…."

Even if they were hiding somewhere else, the monsters wouldn't be able to figure out their location, but even so, isn't this place near the tree where the dungeon's vitality is concentrated?

Kang Seo-dam muttered, frowning.

"Are you so focused on the tree that you can't look around other places…?"

The hunters expressed their doubts about him.

"Then does that mean favoritism…? If you really cherish it and risk your life for it, wouldn't you look around more carefully? Honestly, if it's such an important tree… I wonder why there aren't any monsters left here to guard it."

"I agree. In the old A-class dungeons, there was a pillar that acted as a heart, and there were monsters guarding it very openly. There were also a lot of traps to keep people from getting close, but there's nothing like that here, right?”

“It’s strange. It’s true that almost all of the dungeon’s life force is concentrated there, so if it was something… well, something deeply connected to the dungeon’s life and death… wouldn’t it have been more difficult to approach? It’s a class A dungeon.”

Jeong Yeong-won nodded at that reaction.

“Then, at least this tree isn’t the heart of the dungeon. I don’t know if it’s because it’s an invincible tree that can’t be hit, so there’s no need to protect it, but even considering that, I’m concerned that the monsters are so indifferent to it.”

Monsters that are active at night seem to be relatively intelligent. Such monsters would not be negligent in matters that involve their own lives. The more clumsily intelligent a monster is, the more faithful it is to its instincts.

“Then what on earth could it be? The dungeon’s life force is so concentrated, yet the monsters that inhabit the dungeon are indifferent to it. If it’s simply favoritism, then the monsters’ behavior doesn’t make sense.”

“In the first place, what role does that tree play in this dungeon? If it has that much vitality concentrated in it, then its significance must be clear, but for now, it doesn’t really do anything other than cause chaos if you touch it.”

“It doesn’t release poison when touched, it doesn’t attack people, and it looks delicate… If it hadn’t eaten corpses and been stabbed by night monsters, it probably wouldn’t have opened up the ground.”

“Then isn’t it just a plant that has no intention of attacking? Why is there such a plant in the dungeon? And why does it cause chaos if you touch it?”

Geo, who had been thinking about it deeply, said.

“Isn’t this how you usually deal with hostages?”

“…A hostage?”

“As a concept of a leash to handle someone useful.”

Geo continued.

“You have to feed them regularly, and check on their condition every night, but since they don’t have any affection for the object, it’s more of a sense of duty. It’s more like a job that needs to be done rather than something to take care of and nurture. So why do monsters have to do that?”

A hunter answered in an uncertain voice.

“If the monsters in the dungeon feel a sense of duty, then… isn’t that because the dungeon is maintained? They seem like monsters that can’t think in high-dimensional terms… but I think that’s why they’re even more sensitive to their own disadvantages.”

“Good idea, Hunter Dangwoo. Then how would the existence and growth of this tree help maintain the dungeon and benefit the monsters? As I said before, monsters don’t have much affection for trees. They don’t even guard them out of obligation, so I guess they’re not an important part of the dungeon.”

“…It’s not the heart of the dungeon, but it definitely helps maintain the dungeon… Well… I’m not sure. Is this where the hostage you mentioned earlier came from? If so, what, and who is the hostage for?”

“It’s a dungeon.”

Geo continued.

“This is an underground villa dungeon. It’s a space that was created underground in a cave. Even though it's not connected to the sky, it rains, the sun rises, and the moon rises."

"That's because a dungeon is a space that goes beyond common sense…."

"Let's make a hypothesis. Who is making this rain fall? Who makes the sun rise? Who makes the moon rise? This is not a completely different dimension."

It is a space that exists physically.

"That could be magic."

"That is true, but…."

"I have a question."

Geo looked back at Yujina, the collector who was a magician.

"Ms. Yujina, can humans make it rain with magic?"

"It is possible if Class A is mastered."

"Can a human make the sun rise by magic?"

"Would it be possible if an S-class is mastered?"

"Can humans make the moon float by magic?"

"That's the same, it's not the realm of humans."

"Then whose magic is it?"

Blue eyes curved gently.

"Isn't it human?"

No human dares to make the sun and moon rise.

“Where does the sun set here? Where does the moon go when it disappears? The sun and moon on Earth rise and set repeatedly during their orbit, but as I said before, this place is a villa dungeon.”

"uh…."

“It’s a fixed, physically limited space. Honey tried to fly as high as she could in the sky, and Dana tried to run around the ground as much as she could, but this place wasn’t as big as a planet.”

“…….”

“Then where does the sun go at night? What does the moon do before the sun rises? The sun and moon rise and set here exactly symmetrically. Wherever the sun is, the moon goes, and wherever the moon is, the sun goes.”

Geo looked at the 'sky'.

“Since this place is a cave on Earth, the sky we see now is not actually the sky, but a huge ceiling. Through Honey, we confirmed that the ceiling here is covered by trees.”

He continued.

“And then it rained.”

“…….”

“If it rains from the ceiling, then it must be water dripping from the ceiling?”

The water droplets are so fine and numerous that it could be called a downpour in a rain forest.

“When the moon rises and night falls, the heat subsides a little, and the night monsters come to this tree to feed. And the monsters here don’t like the heat either. So the day monsters can only sleep when night comes, and the night monsters with high intelligence can be active.”

Here, we assume that 'moon' is a better concept than 'sun'.

“You said that only this tree has no heat?”

“…That’s how it was.”

“And you said that it was a place where vitality was concentrated.”

“It was.”

“Let’s just assume.”

Geo pointed to the 'sky'.

“What if this dungeon is supported by a gigantic ‘something’ and these trees are favored by it? What if these fragile-looking trees are like family members of that gigantic thing?”

He lowered his hand, which had been pointing upward, covered his mouth and smiled.

“If it were me… I think I could endure it.”

I will sustain this great forest for the sake of my family.

“So I brought up the word hostage for a moment.”

"…hostage."

“It’s also very possible that it’s just a delusion.”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been listening to the story, soon wiped her face.

“…All active personnel will be encouraged to focus on exploration.”

There were bound to be dungeons that required you to know the story to clear them.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (182)

182

Episode 182

In some dimension there was a huge life form.

It nurtured a giant tree, its own child. The tree, which it had grown by taking a part of its life, grew into a divine being, and soon the tree acquired wisdom. It eventually came to love a human being.

“Great Tree of Life, please accept this worthless child.”

“Please accept me as your family, great myth.”

“And grant us humans the blessing of life!”

The tree did not listen to him. It was the providence of life that the life given to humans was limited. No one could arbitrarily receive the blessing of being a child of life.

But as the days went by, the love for the tiny human child grew. The child was innocent, affectionate, and treated the tree as family. But the human child was so fragile.

“The child you loved is dead.”

“I was split into five groups and died, receiving the punishment for daring to disrespect the child of God!”

“This is a just punishment, so please do not be angry and only show mercy!”

“We humans, including children, are in the embrace of life!”

The tree was so sad that it burst into tears. The tears that it shed as a child of life became a heavenly blessing to humans. Humans became even more cruel. They offered bloody sacrifices to him.

“I offer a sacrifice, please bless me…!”

“Please give us the rain of life!”

One of the humans shouted.

“If not, then may everyone have eternal life!!”

How shameless.

“Then won’t your child come back alive too?”

“Tree, why are you so cruel to humans? Why are the lives of noble humans so short?”

“Give us eternal life! Grant eternal life to mankind!!”

The tree, having fallen for the human's trickery, eventually broke down the boundary between life and death and brought back to life the human child it loved. Life was so angry at the child's behavior that it undermined its authority that it cursed him.

“Ah, disaster! Disaster has come!!”

“■■■■■…!!”

“The sacred tree is possessed by an evil spirit, it must be burned!”

“■■■■■■…!!!”

“The tree has become a beast!!”

The Tree of Life became a beast with four wide legs that were difficult to move, a long neck that could not see humans, and a huge body that could no longer associate with small things. It was a sin of going against providence and being greedy.

“Ahhhh…! The tree, the tree has cursed me!!”

“Please, we have not committed any sin…! Have mercy!”

“Why have you turned us into beasts!!”

Even humans who received the blessing of life without permission all became beasts.

The evil humans who plotted to kill the humans that the Tree of Life loved became monsters of the night who added the curse of sleeplessness, and the humans who dared to enjoy the abundant blessings that the Tree of Life spread became monsters of the day.

“Kkieeeek…!!”

“Kaaa, kuaaa… ahh…!”

“Kueeeek…!”

They were all turned into beasts and abandoned to life.

Their dimension, abandoned by Providence, gradually narrowed, the heat of the sun that life left behind as punishment was hot enough to make them want to die, and their intelligence became closer to that of animals day by day, leaving only suffering.

“■■■….”

There was also a human child inside, who was resurrected by mistake from the beast that was once the Tree of Life.

The poor child who was torn into five parts by humans, united by beasts, and then divided into five parts again as punishment. This little child wanted to be protected in his arms.

The beast inflated itself very, very large, blocking the boundary between dimensions so that they would not become any narrower. It created the moon to provide shelter from the hot sun, and it shed tears to cool the world.

“Grrrr….”

“Crunch, ugh….”

And the evil monsters who had become four-legged beasts wanted this sweet time to last longer. Even if they had lost their human reason, they wanted this night to last longer and the dimension to expand.

The small beasts circled the small, tender tree that was their beginning. The great beast held all the monsters together for the sake of his small tree, and made the moon rise more often, and visited various dimensions to cool his body.

Yet the terrible heat that life left behind did not go away.

* * *

“…is said.”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been organizing all the clues in the dungeon with the hunters, continued speaking with a tired expression.

“So it looks like Sergio Hunter’s assumption was correct.”

“Oh my, I didn’t know it would be true.”

“But if this happens, I’ll have a headache figuring out how to attack.”

The other hunters also clicked their tongues.

“Then why did the night monsters feed those trees? It rains periodically anyway, so why bother fertilizing them?”

“Oh… That way, there will be more slaves. If those trees grow big, won’t they become the Tree of Life or something? Otherwise, I don’t think there’s any reason to prepare additional fertilizer.”

“Anyway, he didn’t even bother to escort the monsters separately because he knew they wouldn’t kill the tree that he cared for like family. He wanted to quickly create a new tree of life, so he brought fertilizer and offered it separately.”

“Was that frenzy back then led by the Tree of Life? The heart of a parent trying to protect their child…?”

“I guess it’s because all the monsters in the dungeon were running wild.”

Jeong Yeong-won, who was listening to the hunters' story, added his words.

“The rain that falls in this forest is the tears shed by the tree of life.”

Only then did I realize why it drives people crazy when they come into contact with it.

“Well, it would be tears or blood shed by a mythical being in pain and despair… If a mere human were hit by it, it would be enough to drive them crazy. It would be worth investigating.”

“The monsters in the dungeon seem okay?”

“Isn’t it because they’ve already gone mad that this is the result? They’re quite hostile and threatening to humans, so I can see why. It’s strange for them to welcome intruders when they’re sensitive and irritable and out of their minds.”

Basically, they were monsters with a strong hatred for humans, but there were differences. Some monsters hated humans and tried to stay away from them, some monsters made cool-headed judgments and planned out schemes, and some monsters rushed to kill them without warning.

'This is the third case, to be exact.'

Jeong Yeong-won also fell into trouble.

“If you want to conquer this….”

“I have a headache.”

“It’s not something that can be solved by simply beating it up.”

“The religious order that hired us won’t stay still.”

“You have to finish the strategy while making the most of it.”

“It’s definitely a dungeon with a lot of plants that look useful….”

“It’s a place that would be a shame to destroy.”

The poisons in this dungeon were all fast-acting and threatening. If they could be extracted and distributed, they would be a great source of income, and if analyzed diligently, they could even be used to create medicine.

“In a world like today, how precious are poison and medicine.”

At Jeong Yeong-won's words, the hunters' gaze was briefly drawn to Sergio.

“Do you have anything you want to say to me?”

“Oh, no. Sorry, I’ll stop for a moment….”

“I understand. The medicine I gave you must have worked too well.”

Giovanni smiled divinely.

“Please give thanks to the sun.”

“Oh, of course…!”

There were people who started to think, 'Something seems strange'. But Geo wasn't worried. That was because he was the owner of a refreshing brain that didn't worry about buying things.

Instead, Kang Seo-dam was worried.

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been unable to hide his stern expression, nodded with a small sigh.

“…I am truly ashamed to say this in a situation where there have been so many deaths, but it is true that I would like to maintain the dungeon intact if possible. It was even stated in the contract.”

“Yes, I remember. Don’t worry, Father.”

“Fortunately, we have found the overall story and clues of the dungeon. Now, the important thing is how to conquer this dungeon in a moderate manner. First, let’s think about the criteria for conquering this dungeon.”

The criteria for conquering each dungeon were different. Sometimes you had to relieve the final boss of his wrath, sometimes you had to solve a specific puzzle, and sometimes you had to open a specific door to conquer it.

“Well, if we kill all the monsters in this dungeon… wouldn’t the Tree of Life feel a little better? It looks like it’s been stabbed in the back of the head several times, so wouldn’t it have a grudge?”

“If that’s the standard for conquering, then this isn’t something that can be done in one raid. You’ll have to go back and forth multiple times. And what if the Tree of Life takes revenge and dismantles this dungeon?”

“I’m satisfied, but I might not be able to bear it any longer. No, what should I do with this? Seriously, how should I dig up those little trees and move them to a remote place?”

“I feel like we’re all going to die from the monsters that went berserk while moving it. We’re all tired from figuring out the story, so isn’t there a gentler way? I’ve found the story, so isn’t there a good way?”

Geo stepped forward for him.

“What if the heat here subsided?”

“Huh? Open it?”

“Then the daytime monsters will fall asleep, and we can deal with the nighttime monsters.”

“Uh… So what Sergio Hunter said is….”

Before the other hunters could continue speaking, Sanarae tilted her head and asked.

“Carrot rather than whip?”

“It was not the cold wind but the warm sunlight that took off the traveler’s outer clothes.”

“This dungeon is going crazy right now because of the sunlight.”

“Peace brings more helplessness than pain.”

They groan in pain and fall asleep in peace. Most creatures do this.

“If the Tree of Life simply wanted to protect its family, then let it do just that. All it wanted to do was create a safe and comfortable nest for its beloved family.”

The trees that supported this dungeon were not aggressive, except when disturbed by small trees.

“Then wouldn’t this dungeon be able to be maintained as well?”

“Sure, if this place is a good place to raise children….”

The hunters asked with subtle expressions.

“How is that possible? Even if you can stop by and deal with the monsters as often as you have time, it’s too big to dispel all the heat from this dungeon in the first place.”

“That’s right. If we destroy the fake sun, we might be able to do something, but if we destroy the entire environment, including the sun and the moon, all the plants growing here will be destroyed.”

“It won’t be easy to just take out the heat. It’s not something that can be done with just one or two people who know how to use magic or holy powers. Of course, if it were possible, it would be a great method….”

Geo asked him.

“Can several people do it?”

“Oh, yeah?”

“A person who sucks up heat.”

“…Is there such a person?”

At that point, Kang Seo-dam added his words.

“The priest of the sun can basically control heat. But I am at best a vessel the size of ten buildings, and this young priest is at best a vessel the size of a large tree.”

“Aren’t there other priests of the sun here too?”

“If what I know is correct, there are six brothers left, including us. We alone are not enough. However, if the magicians join forces, we may be able to do it to some extent.”

After thinking for a moment, he continued speaking.

“There are artifacts too.”

The artifact that absorbed heat was a patented product of the Solar Church. They had brought quite a large quantity especially for this dungeon, which was reported to be particularly hot, so it seemed like it wouldn't be completely useless.

“But even so, we can’t drive out all the heat. In the first place, unless the sun disappears, there’s nothing we can do about this heat. But there’s no way to get rid of the sun, and the damage to our side would be huge. We wouldn’t be able to maintain the dungeon either….”

Kang Seo-dam asked.

“What does Sergio Hunter think?”

“Let me give you one guess.”

“Yes, go ahead.”

“It’s like a steamer in here, isn’t it?”

“…Yes.”

“The humidity is high.”

“Yes.”

“Why is that?”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam answered.

“Is it raining a lot?”

“It doesn’t rain that often.”

“That’s quite a lot in a short period of time, but, um, I guess.”

“You can’t create this level of suffocating humidity.”

It was a humidity that would be hard to bear if you weren't a hunter. It felt like breathing with a wet cotton cloth on your face. There was no way that this kind of extreme humidity could have been created by a few raindrops.

“It means there is another water source.”

“I thought so too.”

Geo pointed to the trees.

“The trees in this dungeon are very large.”

“It’s big.”

“The roots will be big too, right?”

“…It’ll be deep?”

“Could it have grown this big if the only water we had was the occasional rain?”

“It’s a dungeon, so there may have been other factors, but it makes sense.”

“I think there might be a huge body of water sleeping on this floor.”

“It’s a huge body of water.”

"yes."

Giovanni laughed.

“I’m a person who has a lot to do with water, so I feel confident.”

"…aha…."

At this point, it was no different from a divine prophecy.

'I should be thankful that you informed me in such a kind way.'

Kang Seo-dam, who had been biting her lips due to a strange tiredness, soon asked.

“Then, if we pull up that huge water source….”

“The Tree of Life will also be able to catch its breath.”

“Then the moon will stay up for longer.”

“First, we need to check if there really is water and if there is a way to bring it up.”

“Wouldn’t it be possible to know if we uprooted every single tree?”

“…Yes, well… I see.”

I'm sorry, but I wish humans wouldn't expect such miracles.

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam took a deep breath and continued speaking.

“Let’s organize them one by one.”

There was still plenty of food left, and many talented people.

“If it seems like it’s going to be too long, just turn it into a long-term expedition.”

“Does it really have to be this long?”

“Oh, did I mishear that?”

“If you allow me, I’ll try to catch the heat first.”

As he said that, Geo lifted the hem of his cloak.

“…….”

“Dana.”

In the deep shadows, a cat cried.

"meow."

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (183)

183

Episode 183

"meow."

“…….”

"meow."

“…Hunter.”

Sana-rae, crouching down with her long body folded up, asked Sergio.

“Can you do something about this pet cat?”

“Dana really likes Hunter Sanarae, it’s amazing.”

“I find it fascinating, but I also feel scared….”

“That’s a joke.”

“If I tell you, it all sounds like a lie?”

“Ahahaha!”

Geo, whose bread had burst, pulled Dana along.

“No way. I’m sorry. Were you really scared?”

“It wasn’t that scary, but I find this guy a bit awkward….”

“I will take Dana with me.”

“Muuuung….”

Dana was dragged by Geo while making a discontented whining sound. The hunters were amazed by her huge body and thick fur.

“You said this is how Anticat grew up?”

“Yes, we first met at the jewel vein.”

“It’s surprising that a monster can grow this much, but it’s also surprisingly cute.”

“I don’t say she’s my daughter, but she’s really cute and well-mannered.”

“You take care of me like a real child, you’re amazing.”

In a world where it's hard to take care of even an ordinary pet without a certain amount of affection, it's nearly impossible to raise a monster that can eat a person's head at any time with love.

“Is this the level at which you can tame even an anti-cat?”

“I think this really is a world first.”

“The patriotism is crazy. Hunter, where can I go and brag that I know you?”

“Come on, kid. Why are you acting so awkward?”

One of the hunters who was relieving tension by chatting awkwardly asked.

“Me, but… can I drive away the heat with this guy?”

“To be precise, I will call for people who will drive out the heat.”

"oh…."

The hunters became strangely quiet. One of them muttered.

“…Sunshine Spirit Hunter….”

“Shut your mouth.”

"huh."

They also knew how Sergio Hunter had become famous. Hadn't he caused quite a stir by incanting children's ghosts into reality?

Skills related to the soul were not originally that common. The most representative position among them was the necromancer, but no matter how much you analyze the situation, the situation at the time was not like that.

‘… Even if it’s called a platform, what kind of feeling does it have?’

'I know that the skill of handling souls is quite burdensome.'

'Since it is the ability of the monster being raised, is the burden on the trainer relatively small?'

'No one has ever trained an anti-cat before, so… .'

Ignoring the hunters’ gazes, Geo dragged Dana along and asked Kang Seodam.

“Can we begin?”

“…….”

He nodded slowly.

"…please."

The cat cried at him.

"meow."

“…….”

"meow."

The crying spreads.

* * *

Sanarae was still curled up against the wooden pillar and was far away.

“Captain, what are you doing here?”

“That cat is so scary.”

“This joke is really ridiculous.”

“I can’t believe this is so unfair.”

It was true that it wasn't pleasant.

“You don’t believe me….”

That cat summons the dead.

'But that's not its ability.'

Anticat simply acted as a bell that rang according to the master's command. And the master who made the bell was 'Sergio Hunter'. Sanarae watched the situation with a feeling of inward disgust.

The cat's cry was not very loud. It was a clean, simple voice, as if a person were imitating a cat's cry. However, it spread clearly like a jade ball rolling in a quiet room.

"meow."

That was the moment.

“…….”

“…….”

“…….”

Among the shadows cast by the trees in the forest, several figures emerged.

“…I, I….”

"…excuse me."

They were dressed in white priestly robes and spoke to Sergio hesitantly.

“Can I stay with you for a moment?”

Their eyes were red.

"…ah."

Kang Seo-dam's face was distorted.

As the situation progressed, the hunters' expressions began to harden little by little.

"…what…."

“…Those people, surely….”

“They are priests.”

“I’ve seen that face.”

“Clearly from the report data….”

“…The previous punitive force.”

Dead people talking to each other as if they were alive.

The hunters who had lost their composure due to the harsh environment began to notice the seriousness of the situation one by one. What they were now seeing were the priests of the previous expedition force who had already died.

A hunter muttered.

“There are shadows too.”

It meant that it had a physical form.

“So, this is….”

“…….”

"…her…."

It means that the dead have returned to the providence of the living.

'As simple as that?'

With just a few cries?

There were no grand ceremonies, no long prayers, no pains to bring about miracles, but Sergio summoned the souls of the priests as if he were calling a passerby nearby.

That calm, nonchalant look sent a chill down my spine.

“…….”

“…….”

The hunters broke out in a cold sweat.

They did not dare to turn their heads, but were aware of the presence of Sergio Hunter standing between them. The Hunters' bodies tensed up in awe that bordered on fear.

At that moment Sergio opened his mouth.

“Welcome.”

And then he continued.

“I need your help. The priest of the sun is skilled in manipulating heat, isn’t he?”

“…Yes.”

“We want to take the heat out of this place and make the dungeon environment much more peaceful.”

“Please speak.”

The priests bowed their heads.

“Even if my soul melts… I will be with you.”

“If I can follow the sun’s will in this way, I am grateful.”

“Tell me what to do and when to move.”

“We’ll try to figure it out somehow.”

“If you please give me a chance….”

Geo laughed at those words.

“There is no need to melt.”

Their role was simply to gather heat.

“My son will be the one to contain the heat that has gathered.”

“…Then we….”

“Don’t worry, we’ll send it to where you want it.”

“…….”

The priests in the shadows bowed their heads.

"…thank you."

Immediately afterwards the images of the priests disappeared.

“…….”

“…Uh, where….”

"crazy."

Only then did the priests' mouths, which had been tightly shut, open.

“W-what did you just say…?”

They were all talking nonsense, but it was only the truth that came from extreme confusion. They couldn't believe what they had just seen, and they couldn't bring themselves to talk about it with others.

Garasani approached him with a smile, not even daring to look at Sergio.

“Then shall we begin?”

“Yes, let’s start with the heat first.”

“What do you want to do next?”

“I think I need to turn on the water.”

“I think it would be good to gather as many priests and wizards as possible.”

“As the heat subsides, there will be monsters that will run wild, so we should prepare to subdue them.”

“In the process, we will be able to eliminate a significant number of threatening monsters.”

While they were talking, the collector, Yuji Na, and the hunter looked around at the raiders.

“What is everyone doing?”

“Uh, that, that… just now….”

“I don’t know what you’re talking about.”

"but…!"

“Hey.”

She said with a grin.

“I have things to do.”

That was pressure.

“…….”

“…That, that’s right.”

Pressure to not dig into Sergio Hunter.

Suspicion began to grow in the hunters' minds. Even after seeing such an absurd miracle, the collector was only cautious of his surroundings. It was inevitable that he would think there was some kind of secret.

‘This isn’t just a monster’s ability…’

They thought.

‘…Isn’t this a joke? He really is a saint…?’

'Isn't this similar to the miracles that the saint of Dalnim Church occasionally shows?'

'Could it be that the collector's pervert had sex with some monster and gave birth to a child?'

‘It could be an S-class disguised as an A-class…!’

Most Hunters assumed that Sergio Hunter was a top-tier Saint or a hidden S-class. Some Hunters thought he was a child created by the insane Bisabal. The collector's tales and notoriety made this possible.

And none of them thought that Sergio might not be human.

"…haha."

Except for Sanarae.

“It’s so scary.”

“I would appreciate it if you could refrain from speaking.”

“I told you I’m scared?”

“You are disrespectful, Hunter Sanarae.”

“…….”

Except for the collectors and gardeners.

“…This is driving me crazy.”

Sanarae finally decided to strike again.

* * *

“ Keeaaa ...

The Tree of Life, sensing the dungeon's turmoil, had once again given it a frenzy, or perhaps it was simply a will to act as the heat had died down. The monsters of the night began to run wild.

“Kaaaah!! Kaaaah!!”

“Kurrrr…!!”

“Kue, kuaaaah!! Aaaah!!”

They made a strange noise and fell upon all the humans.

“Protect the weak wizard, you muscle men!”

“Fuck, these magicians are making the tank feel dirty!”

The hunters who had prepared in advance dealt with it skillfully.

It would not have been strange for a seasoned hunter to have died by now, but all the hunters gathered here were veterans. There was no hunter who was afraid to throw himself into a situation where there were an abundance of recovery items and healers.

“Healer, please have mercy!”

“Here comes mercy!”

"i love you…!"

“The therapist’s grace is endless!!”

“Scream out you sick bastards!!”

“Ahhhh…!!”

“Ahhh, here it is, ahhhh!!”

“Scream louder, I can’t tell you from the monsters!!”

“Khaaaah!!!”

Hunters are basically a profession that lives by risking their lives and throwing away their bodies. There were no hunters here who were afraid of pain, and there were many healers, who were high-level personnel called nobles.

Moreover, the roles of the dealers and tanks here were clear: they had to protect the mages and priests from the rampaging monsters while dealing with the heat, leaving the healers behind.

“You won’t touch a single hair on the healers’ head until you kill me!”

“Hey, we! The wizard!”

“The wizards must survive on their own!!”

“You fucking kids! Do you think we only eat rice!!”

In the midst of the chaos, the priests and magicians looked a little bewildered.

“Hey, how is this going right now?”

“It’s even more absurd that it’s actually going smoothly….”

“Hey, this is real, right?”

They were working on concentrating the heat of this massive dungeon in one place.

“Gulp.”

“How pretty you are when you eat well.”

“Kurung gurung gurung.”

“Wow, you did a great job, you’re so pretty.”

“Gurrrr!!”

“Our honey is doing well.”

The heat that had gathered like that was being swallowed by Honey. For some reason, it seemed like Honey was getting bigger, but the hunters ignored it.

If it was about containing heat, it would have been a burden, but if it was simply about moving it to a certain point, it was quite doable.

“Ugh, it’s so hot…!”

“I knew it when I started to lose my breath!”

“I’m never coming to the Urim-type dungeon again!”

It was by no means an easy task, and the wizards were furious. Some wizards only used their skills or techniques to gather heat, while others gathered heat by drawing in the wind and moisture from the air.

And the priests of the sun silently concentrated on gathering heat.

“…….”

“…Sob….”

Some even shed tears, as they felt an intangible force pulling at the heat they could not bring out.

The priests who heard what Sergio Hunter's Anticat had done tried to hold back their tears. They could not help but feel sad when they thought that this would be their last collaboration with their brothers.

“…Oh, don’t you think it feels a little cooler?”

“Wow, shit, this actually works.”

“I think I’m fucking crazy….”

After about three hours of doing this, the hunters could feel a significant change.

“It definitely makes breathing easier.”

It's not just the hunters, the number of times and duration of fake moons in the dungeon have increased. According to records, the Tree of Life that supports the dungeon is responsible for making these moons rise.

And then, when the long evening that seemed like it would never end finally arrived.

“…….”

“…Is there nothing more now?”

“…I’m going to die.”

There were no more monsters attacking them.

The sweat cooled and a slightly cool air settled down.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (184)

184

Episode 184

The sun no longer rose in the dungeon.

“Will it stay like this forever?”

“I guess it depends on what the Tree of Life thinks.”

“That’s true.”

The hunters loitered around Honey, who had grown to be about 5 meters tall.

“Wow, it’s warm….”

“It’s cold because it suddenly got cold.”

“After consuming all that heat, how can you say it’s only warm? Does that make sense?”

“So what if it doesn’t make sense? Just be kind.”

“That’s right….”

Honey didn't fly, perhaps because her body was heavy.

“Kung.”

“Let’s go home and solve it.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“If you blow it here, you’ll get burned.”

“Kung kkung kkung kkung kkung….”

“Want a snack?”

“Gulp.”

Kang Seo-dam approached Geo, who was putting a bag of snacks in Honey's mouth.

“Sergio Hunter.”

“Oh, priest.”

“Thank you for helping me with this.”

“It was something that had to be done.”

“Honey’s help was also great….”

Kang Seo-dam, who was about to say something more, quickly closed his mouth.

“…….”

He continued speaking shortly.

“…I feel the difference from the initial temperature, but the current climate is very mild. If we compare it to Earth’s seasons, it could be considered spring.”

“Are you feeling much more stable?”

“Just in case, we’ve called in people who are capable of working and are majoring in magic to dig up the ground, but it doesn’t seem like there’s been much progress yet. Even if we don’t pump out the groundwater, given the current situation… I don’t think there’ll be a big problem.”

"okay."

Geo asked.

“Now, would you like to check out those little trees?”

“Yes, so we are looking for people to join us.”

“I want to go together.”

“I would appreciate it if you could do that.”

So a small number of hunters moved to where the lavender tree was.

Despite the commotion, the small tree remained intact without a single scratch. In the dark night, the tree was emitting a soft light, and Jeong Yeong-won, who carefully examined the young tree, said.

“Even though the climate has changed a lot, the temperature of the trees hasn’t changed much.”

“It seems less heated than before, but that’s what I saw as well.”

Kang Seo-dam nodded and looked back at Sanarae.

“Is there anything you would like to advise on?”

“Thank you so much for relying on me.”

“I understand that this is sarcasm.”

“I don’t have much to say either… Hmm, it smells good.”

“It’s a fragrance.”

“Before the weather got cool, it smelled like a corpse.”

“I think we should definitely see a change.”

That was when.

"meow."

Dana cried in Geo's shadow.

"meow."

“…….”

"meow…."

The tree branches swayed faintly at Dana's cries. No matter how tired they were, the hunters wouldn't have been able to recognize that level of movement. The hunter of the silver moon made a tense expression at the unknown phenomenon.

“…Sir, could this also be a monster…?”

“It’s not impossible, since the child was once human and turned into a tree.”

“Then shouldn’t we prepare for it?”

And before anything more could be said, the tree began to rustle its branches.

Iron Fist.

“…….”

Flap, flap.

“……?”

Crunch… .

The hunters stared blankly at the tree, which was crawling out of the ground, struggling like a puppy stuck in a swamp. About ten minutes passed like that.

Unable to bear this strange silence, one hunter spoke up.

“…Can I, can I help you?”

“…It makes no sense to help monsters.”

“I don’t even know if that’s a monster in the first place….”

Not all living things in dungeons are monsters. While most dungeons are filled with monsters, some also have ordinary trees and wild animals.

But it was hard to see a tree that was alive and moving like this as anything other than a monster. What if it was a normal creature that lived in this dimension before it turned into a dungeon?

“…….”

“…But it looks weak.”

“…We have also become much weaker. There have been many cases where we have been harmed by coming into contact with monsters that appear weak.”

“But isn’t waiting until it comes out like this a pointless worry?”

“Well, I guess I’ll just watch something until it comes out….”

“Just take it out, it’s like this.”

“It doesn’t seem to be that aggressive towards humans.”

It is true that monsters hate and threaten humans, but there were big differences between each individual. In the end, the hunters, with a puzzled expression on their face, gently pulled out the tree that was trembling and fluttering from the ground.

And then the hunters realized something.

“…! Seal?”

Someone shook their head.

“It has a long neck and four legs. It’s much wider.”

“Then what do you usually call these creatures?”

“I think I saw a similar monster in some dungeon. Well, a water dragon?”

“If we really have to be picky… it would be a plesiosaurus.”

A hunter asked in amazement.

“Are you naming the dinosaurs now?”

“Yes, well, there are dinosaurs that lived in the water on Earth long ago.”

“That’s not what I’m asking, no, how do you do it?”

“Because my son likes it….”

"iced coffee…."

Even though it was an era where many records were erased after the great disaster, records related to dinosaurs remained. Even now, there are many cases where some children can recite the names of dinosaurs.

“Is this what that plesiosaurus dinosaur looked like?”

“Yes. It has a long neck, four legs, is as flat as a plank, and has a tail.”

“I was wondering why I was the only one who wasn’t a beast, and it turned out to be a water dragon….”

“I didn’t recognize it because it was disguised as a tree.”

A water dragon trapped in a dungeon filled with the terrible heat of the sun. You could tell how much suffering life wanted to inflict on the tree. It was like drying fish in a dryer.

“When it was stuck in the ground, it was just like a tree.”

Coming out of the ground like this, it just looked like a dragon with flowers hanging from its back.

A small, lavender-colored water dragon slithered toward Sergio, slapping its tail. It had no particular intent to kill or be hostile, so I just watched it quietly. Then, it approached Sergio. It let out a short cry.

"radish."

A hunter covered his mouth.

"cute."

“It’s a monster.”

“There are lots of cute monsters.”

“There are such tastes too.”

In a world of individualism, Hunter readily respected his colleagues' tastes.

It didn't seem to care much about the hunters' commotion, and the tree that had become a tangled dragon-like shape lifted what appeared to be its head and poked Geo's waist. Geo, who was watching it closely, picked up his pocket.

“Wow.”

“Are you hungry?”

"radish!"

“That’s amazing.”

Hunter Sanarae asked.

“If you’re hungry, does it matter if you’re a monster?”

“If you eat well, you look good.”

“Hmm… Your taste is really clear.”

One of the hunters said in surprise.

“I guess that monster is a good Sergio Hunter.”

“Is it because you’re a trainer…?”

“No, until you tame them, they’re just enemies, regardless of their trainer.”

“Then why are you doing that to Hunter Seo?”

Anyone who saw it would think it was a baby begging for food from its parents, so someone made a guess and spoke.

“Isn’t it already trained?”

“What did you do…?”

“Just with affection and love….”

“…Does anyone know how the training works here?”

But there was no way anyone would know about the precious trainer's skills. In the first place, they would never reveal their precious secrets to others. Above all, each trainer's training method was different.

Eventually, the hunters came to their own conclusion.

'Even monsters look at faces.'

‘Do you smell something good? Like a pheromone… .’

'There may be a skill that lowers the monster's guard.'

'The abilities of a monster that has already been tamed? There's no way they'd show us everything.'

It was a world where it was considered polite not to ask deeply about others. It was a time when you could only imagine stories that you couldn't ask about. The hunters just thought, 'I guess that's just how it is.'

If there had been a trainer like him, he would have been able to see how absurd this situation was, but the probability of that happening was low. This is a society where idolization and assumptions are taken for granted.

“What should I do? This is all the jerky I brought….”

The hunters were surprised by Geo's words.

“Sergio Hunter, did you bring the jerky too? That muffin wasn’t the end of it?”

“What do you mean, a muffin? I got jelly instead?”

“…Wait a minute, I got chocolate. How many snacks did you bring?”

Sanarae thought about that.

'I'll stop freaking out when I see someone take a pot the size of a person out of subspace.'

Sergio, who had been caressing the dragon that barely reached his waist as if he was touching a dog's cheek, tilted his head. Some hunters turned their gazes to him, while others had already noticed something.

And soon water gushed out.

"……."

"……."

"…it's water."

The quick-witted hunter sorted out the situation.

"I guess he was blocking the water vein."

The hunter who said so heard the communication port. It was to stop the Chinese wizards who were digging the ground, sweating blood, in search of possible underground water.

The hunters exchanged glances, dumbfounded.

"There really was groundwater."

"But can it just keep coming out like that…? What's the principle?"

"Isn't it a bit fast?"

Kang Seo-dam, who was contacted by another party around that time, said:

"Other teams are reporting similar things. Some trees are still struggling to get out of the ground, while others have already come out… but they say water is gushing out there too."

“If things continue like this, won’t this dungeon be locked?”

“I don’t think it will be completely submerged. I don’t know exactly how long the groundwater has been dormant, but the world won’t be submerged just by breaking the water veins of the Earth.”

“That may be true, but….”

Knock, knock…

Jeong Yeong-won raised his hand.

“It’s raining.”

“Huh?! Oh, wait a minute, where should I run to…!”

"are you okay."

Jeong Yeong-won continued speaking, feeling the raindrops on his hands.

“Because I don’t feel sick anymore.”

The painful rain that would drive people crazy just by touching them was gone. It was different from before, not a heavy rain that would hurt the flesh, but a gentle raindrop that fell like the morning dew.

At that time, the hunters were able to check the guidance of my system.

“…Attack….”

“…was conquered.”

“P, Priest. Now…!”

“It’s been conquered now!!”

The 'Giant Back Flower Dragon' falls into a long sleep

Dungeon: Completed the 'Underground Four-legged Rainforest' strategy

Please check your receipt of compensation

“We’re leaving work now!!”

“That is a wise decision.”

Kang Seo-dam nodded.

“Let’s go back.”

It was time to return.

* * *

“Ms. Sanarae.”

"huh?"

“I have a question.”

“Aha, what is that?”

“What is the reward?”

“Receive compensation….”

Sanarae, who was looking at Geo, smiled and said.

“You could think of it as a gift from the system.”

“What kind of gift is it?”

“When you finish clearing a dungeon, the system judges how much you contributed to the clearing and sends you a gift accordingly.”

“How do I receive the gift?”

“Usually, you can receive it from the system. It gets transmitted to the assigned subspace….”

“How do you do that?”

“Why on earth would you ask something like that?”

“Because it looks convenient.”

“…Hmm….”

“…….”

“…….”

A semi-transparent system quietly emerged between them. Sanarae's eyes reflexively checked her notification window.

Compensation payment

From the book ■

A gift from Sergio

: Golden Step Sheep Jerky

“I didn’t see anything just now, you know?”

“Could this be a message you were asked to see?”

“I told you I didn’t see it? Why are you doing this to me?”

“You don’t really like beef jerky?”

Giovanni whispered.

“I asked because I didn’t receive anything from the system.”

“…….”

First, if you were a hunter, you couldn't not know about 'received rewards'. It was basic common sense that you would learn if you lived in human society.

Second, no human being can acquire the technology of a system simply because it 'looks convenient', just as one cannot create the Earth because it looks cool.

Third, there was no reason why a contributor like 'Sergio Hunter' should not receive rewards for his strategy. That is, unless there was no system at all, or a different type of system was used.

“…….”

And there was no reason to tell that to Sanarae… .

“Everyone has left.”

“…That’s right.”

“Now we too are returning.”

“I wonder?”

Sanarae decided to shut up and laugh.

After living, I realized that there is no answer as wise as this.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (185)

185

Episode 185

After finishing the strategy, there was a meeting in the hallway right after.

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“So you came here to share a snack?”

“Was it too hasty of an action?”

“Oh, no….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled as he drank the baslamcha that Geo handed him.

“Why are you saying this so suddenly now?”

At first, I was worried. I knew that if I gave humans too many gifts so carelessly, there would be problems. It didn't seem to be good for either humans or the original being.

But now I'm not too worried.

“You have already spread numerous gifts in the form of the Black Cloak.”

“It’s not like there are a lot of gifts.”

“Yeah, that’s quite a lot of presents. What do you mean you gave that much away?”

Basically, the gifts that Geo gave to humans were safe in many ways, and ordinary people would not even notice that the gifts of 'Sergio Hunter' and 'Black Cloak' had the same effects.

“A quick-witted person might notice that he gives gifts frequently, that he always wears a black cloak, or that the spectrum of his gifts is similar….”

“Then you already figured it out, right?”

“The prejudice of the world will protect you. A portrait as human as you is hard to find on any dimension, including Earth. Most people will think that you are just secretly related.”

“Am I the only one who can believe in the world’s prejudices?”

“We’ll also do some work on our collection. First of all, the gift you gave me when you were Black Cloak is a little different from the gift you gave me when you were Sergio Hunter. From what I know, the effects are probably different as well. And since no one knows that Black Cloak is staying at the collection, it’s hard to think of them as the same entity.”

There is such a huge gap between 'Black Cloak' and 'Sergio Hunter'. Few would have thought that Black Cloak, who makes one feel awe bordering on fear just by looking at him, would actually be good at imitating humans.

Geo asked him.

“It’s difficult, but I think it’s possible to figure out that they’re the same person.”

“Honestly, that’s true. At this point, it seems impossible to deny the relationship between Black Cloak and Sergio Hunter.”

“I will prepare an excuse.”

“You can’t even call it an excuse….”

Yoo Seong-un laughed innocently.

“Well, don’t worry too much about that, because you can overcome it with a little storytelling. You’re a mysterious character that the world has never heard of, so there are plenty of stories you can make up.”

“It seems like I’m happy, but it also seems like I’m not happy.”

“Actually, even if that’s not the case, I don’t think you care much about spreading gifts.”

When I didn't know Geo well, I had to focus all my energy on how to handle the gift I received. I thought, 'He'll get angry if I share this with other people,' and I was also wary that I couldn't easily give away such an expensive gift.

But now Koreans have adapted to the existence of the 'black cloak'.

“You spread presents through portraits like Santa Claus, and people have become accustomed to that behavior. There is no reason to worry about you spreading presents again.”

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“Is that gift a gift that will be poisonous to people?”

“No.”

“See, I told you it was safe.”

Even if someone came after that precious gift, they were protected by 'The City of Emptiness', one of Geo's portrait children.

Even if that weren't the case, it didn't seem like the favor the black cloak bestowed upon him would be poisonous.

'Geo is not a derived child, but the eye of the origin itself.'

If he were a child of common origin, he would have shown poisonous favor, but Geo was different. He was as skilled in dealing with humans as the Hunters were in the system. It was even better when he was skilled in imitating humans.

“Hey, actually, when we first met, I was really scared.”

“You seemed nervous, but I appreciated your kindness.”

“You were the kind one, Geo. As for me, I’m the type of person who usually does this kind of thing.”

“I think you were very worried about my gift.”

“I guess I have learned a lot as a gardener….”

It didn't matter now that he knew that Geo wasn't among the beings he had learned of. It was just that he had been very anxious at first.

“I know a lot of guys like that. They curse you if you share a gift with others, or they resent you if you take pride in your kindness, or things like that.”

“If that’s the case, what’s the point of a gift?”

“Anyway, Geo, you know very well now that you don’t belong here. You want the world to be a little bit more obese… yeah, closer to pigs. There’s no way you wouldn’t be offended by sharing gifts.”

“I would be happy if my gift could be helpful in any way.”

“Yeah, well… I guess you could say it’s a relatively common occurrence so I don’t feel the need to be too cautious. So I wouldn’t worry too much about how you shared the food in the dungeon.”

Yoo Seong-un, holding a mug, shrugged his shoulders.

“I ate all the fruit juice you gave me last time.”

“Why did you finish it now?”

“No, it’s not that recent. It’s been around for quite some time….”

This was after Geo became certain that he was the Eye of Origin.

“It tastes better because I ate it with peace of mind.”

“Would you like me to make you a new one?”

"huh…."

Yoo Seong-un smiled bitterly.

“It’s necessary for people like me who work overtime every day.”

"ah…."

Geo became silent.

“I guess it was a good thing I didn’t live outside the portrait.”

“It feels really weird to hear that from someone like yourself.”

“But the current Earth is too barren. I don’t want to live there.”

“But isn’t Seoul a decent place to live? There’s a lot to see.”

Joo-hyun, who had been quietly listening to the story until then, intervened.

“Why are you trying to drag away a person who wants to live in peace?”

“I wasn’t trying to bring it out, I was just saying how I felt.”

“Mr. Geo looks happiest when he’s in his portrait.”

“That is true.”

Yoo Seong-un admitted it obediently.

“Surely the day will never come when the Earth will be as peaceful as the world inside your portrait.”

Above all, wouldn't a portrait feel the most comfortable when it's framed?

“Anyway, if you could make a new fruit punch, I’d welcome it.”

“I’m glad you’re welcome. If it’s alright, I have a new flower tea that I’ve tried out, and I’ll pack it up right away….”

“Stop it, that’s it.”

Yoo Seong-un said firmly.

“What are you going to do with my humanity?”

“I don’t know if giving a gift is something that speaks of humanity.”

“Just by what I have received so far, how much longer will my lifespan have been?”

“I hope we can live in peace for a long time.”

“I’m sorry, but can you please let me die on time?”

At that moment, Geo's hair turned platinum blonde.

“Okay, let’s start there. What is the optimal lifespan for a human?”

“The more you get interested in that kind of thing, the more scared I become, so stop it.”

Geo nodded again with black hair.

“It was a joke.”

“I need to develop a better sense of humor.”

It didn't really sound like a joke.

“I don’t mind receiving gifts. The snacks you give me are really delicious. So… I’d be happy to give you a lot of small gifts, like cookies or chocolates that you give me when you meet me on the street.”

They usually had effects like painkillers, sleeping pills, and tranquilizers. Of course, they could be excellent drugs, but they were at a level of efficacy that could be easily mass-produced in modern society.

“But sometimes, gifts given this way are a different story.”

“I think you’re talking about things like fruit juice, sausages, or flower tea. What’s the difference?”

“I guess it’s a big burden on my mind because I feel like I’ll no longer be human if I eat it.”

“Isn’t what you are drinking now my gift?”

“Why are you eating this right now, so fatally….”

Yoo Seong-un hugged the mug cup carefully.

“You’re not going to take it away, are you?”

“I am not a malicious person who steals food.”

“Then what are you going to do?”

“I thought you liked it, so I thought I’d give you a few bags.”

“Yeah, how many bags is that?”

“Thanks to my father’s love and affection, who gave me something to do while I was away, we had a good harvest….”

“The main point.”

Geo nodded.

“About 50 bags.”

“Dismissed.”

“45 bags?”

“I reject it.”

“43….”

“Oh my.”

Joohyun smiled awkwardly as Yoo Seong-un shook his head.

“I think it would be a bit burdensome to receive that many ordinary tea leaves.”

“I didn’t even give you a box.”

“But that’s not true.”

“So, about 40 bags….”

"no."

“…….”

A rustling sound was heard from inside the portrait. The familiar sound of wrapping paper. Joohyun asked.

“You didn’t prepare it already, did you?”

“I just packed it up for now.”

“If you pretend to step back like this, it will end up being delivered right in the middle of your house in the evening….”

“I will send Dana in advance to deliver the notice.”

“That’s not the point.”

“Yes, I was joking.”

"okay!"

Joohyun spoke firmly, but with a smile.

“A gift that is too effective is a problem.”

“That doesn’t mean you can make food that doesn’t taste good.”

“Are the taste and efficacy of the food that Mr. Geo makes linked?”

“I don’t know because I’ve never really thought about that part.”

“Well… it would be difficult to be aware of the effect and control it.”

Even ordinary people can cook food that provides nutrients to their bodies. Even if you intentionally destroy only the nutrients in delicious food, it is hard to tell. Geo, the Eye of Origin, would have been in a similar context.

Geo asked while looking at the meteor cloud.

“So, did you eat all the snacks I gave you before?”

“It’s been a while since I received it, and I had no reason not to eat it, so it’s already disappeared into my stomach.”

“It’s nice to hear it again. I’ll make a new fruit punch for you this time.”

“I would really appreciate it if you could do that.”

“You may share the gift I give you.”

“No, it’s a gift I received anyway. I don’t really need to share it.”

Geo's gift was really delicious, and it was especially helpful to modern-day Yoo Seong-woon who lives with overtime work. It was just that he had worried about it at one time, apart from the possibility of it coming true.

“Sometimes the amount of gifts is so large that you need someone to share them or store them….”

The most comfortable opponent was the guild leader, Bisabal. He was the one who originally bought the 'Portrait of Geo', and as an S-rank, he was reliable in many ways, and there was no place safer than him in the safe.

Yoo Seong-un made an embarrassed expression.

“Anyway, I’m sorry if I pressured you too much with the gift.”

“I just meant that you could do that if you wanted to.”

“If something like that happens within the collection, we will do so.”

There was no reason to smuggle out pieces of the artwork and blatantly reveal hints about the relationship between the collector and the black cloak. Doing so would have only raised questions about the identity of the 'Sergio Hunter'.

Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently.

“I keep saying this, but as long as it doesn’t interfere with your social life, you can give gifts to other people as much as you want.”

“Is that so?”

“As long as it’s not too much of a gift for humans.”

“I have something to say about that part.”

“Yeah, I heard that too.”

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“You resurrected a dead human?”

“He is not dead.”

“Isn’t that a bit excessive?”

“I think it’s greatly exaggerated.”

“I almost crossed the river, but I survived after taking the elixir you gave me.”

“That is correct.”

"haha."

Yoo Seong-un thought to himself.

‘That’s why my heart skips a beat every time I receive a gift…’

I wondered what kind of strange miracle he would perform. He knew his place. He did not want to be distressed by receiving an overly precious gift.

In a similar vein, the elixir that Sergio Hunter had been spreading really needed an explanation.

“You said it was an elixir given to you by the god you serve, but you said you made it yourself.”

“Yes.”

“Mr. Joohyun.”

Yoo Seong-un looked back at Joo-hyun. Joo-hyun didn't look at him.

“Mr. Joohyun, look at me.”

“Do I really have to do that?”

“We have something to talk about now. I told you to take good care of Geo.”

“No… But isn’t it amazing? I told you to use the item if possible, and you kept your word.”

“That item just brought the dead back to life?”

Geo intervened.

“He is not dead.”

“If it weren’t for you, I would have died?”

“Humans don’t die that easily.”

“Surprisingly, it’s easy to die.”

The precious portrait in our house has not changed the fact that the medicine given to us saved the life of a person who was supposed to die.

“First, let’s go with the saint concept.”

“I guess there’s nothing I can do about this….”

Joo-hyun nodded at Yoo Seong-woon's words. Geo expressed his doubts.

“Should I become a saint in the future?”

“Actually, now it’s hard to come up with any excuse other than that.”

There was no divinity that could bestow such an elixir upon a simply faithful believer.

“If you can exchange elixirs like that, then you’re a human who can communicate with the divine. And 99.9% of humans who interact with the divine cease to be human. There’s a high probability that they’ll die or go mad, so what if they receive an elixir?”

“I tried to gloss over it as some kind of revelation….”

“That’s because I don’t think that will work. Even if it’s a simple revelation, it doesn’t make sense. In the first place, a saint is someone who interprets revelations received from the divine and takes on the role of a shepherd who guides foolish humans. This is something that cannot be explained by anyone other than a saint.”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“But then, I think we’ll have to figure out exactly what kind of god we’re worshipping. We’ll have to make it a god who can easily exert influence on Earth to the point where he can grant elixirs….”

Joohyun asked him.

“For example, a black cloak?”

"…aha?"

“The behavior patterns of Black Cloak and Sergio Hunter are somewhat similar. As mentioned earlier, they give gifts of the same spectrum, and they even wear the same clothes….”

“You guys just met each other?”

“After studying it, I found that, except for artificial religious groups like Dalnimgyo, gods and saints who are compatible usually meet. Since Geo-ssi actually has divinity, it is possible that the Black Cloak will be revealed to be a god someday.”

“If you think about it, it might be better to strike first. I get it.”

“The Black Cloak already has a moderate influence on Earth, so even if the worst happens and it is treated as an evil spirit, it is unlikely to be subjugated….”

“Because it’s an image that has become quite familiar to Koreans.”

“I think it can be explained by the degree to which the Association is hiding the divinity as a monster. In reality, there are many cases where the Association disguises the divinities that enjoy playing as monsters or natural phenomena.”

“That way, there will be less confusion among citizens.”

“Yes.”

Joohyun asked next.

“Then what type of saint should I be seen as?”

“I think I should go to the highest saint possible, but this is….”

“Considering Mr. Geo’s nature, it would probably be better to lay a strong foundation from the beginning.”

“Then people will be convinced and won’t dig any deeper. For that, a saint of the highest rank is suitable.”

“I think it will have an impact around that time.”

“That’s why it turned out like this.”

Yoo Seong-un said.

“From now on, you will be a saint. It will be fun, right?”

“That sounds interesting. Which saint, exactly?”

“Let us go to a vessel that can contain any divinity.”

“Does this mean that he is a talented human who can serve various gods?”

“I understand, that’s it.”

One of Geo's identities was the sun god. He would have many opportunities to interact with various deities, so it was much more cost-effective to establish him as a 'vessel of the saint coveted by the gods' in preparation for that.

“Let’s listen to the advice of Father Kang Seo-dam on this part.”

Kang Seodam's increasing worries were to be repaid with material compensation. He might be reluctant to accept it, as it would mean he was also in debt to the collector, but he probably wouldn't reject it outright.

“And… you went wild with Argio?”

“Yes, it was nice to relax after a long time.”

“If it’s to that extent, then you don’t necessarily need your own battlefield, right?”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, are the cup ramen you eat as a midnight snack and the meals you eat three times a day the same?”

“Ah, that kind of feeling….”

“Snacks are optional, but meals are a must.”

“I understand.”

Anyway, this part was also a problem.

“Since they saw you using your body like that, even if they weren’t aware of it inside the dungeon where you were so out of your mind, they must have sensed something strange by now. Even if that’s not the case, there must have been people who had already begun to suspect you during the raid.”

Joohyun gave her opinion.

“Can we call it a hidden S-class?”

“I guess a lot of people think that way.”

“Because it’s probably the easiest case to think of in today’s world.”

“There are actually quite a few hunters who cheat on their ranks, and conspiracy theories about that are particularly rampant….”

“The story of an S-class with a hidden rank is also somewhat romantic.”

“It feels similar to the story of a hunter who becomes friends with a monster.”

Since it was an era where the idolization of hunters was at its peak, there were several absurd 'romances' about that world. Since it was a subject matter that was familiar to people, people would quickly accept it even if they set the concept in that direction.

“For a saint of the highest rank, for a romantic S-class, what else is there to do?”

“Well, I’m a little cautious about saying this, but….”

“Be careful, Geo, and give your opinion before your identity is revealed.”

“You said you briefly saw Mr. Argio’s appearance.”

Geo nodded.

“Yes.”

“Mr. Argio has red hair and golden eyes?”

“Are you perhaps thinking of the leader of the Visabal guild?”

“Yes, with him….”

Yoo Seong-woon interrupted Joo-hyun, who was hesitating.

“There might be someone who suspects that you are related by blood to the guild leader?”

“I don’t know if there’s already someone like that, but I think it might be a good idea to go in a similar direction.”

“Well then, that would explain why Geo is being sold out all over the collection.”

“It will also explain why you are hiding your identity as a saint or S-class.”

“Uh… If we do this, will our guild leader turn out to be quite the pervert?”

For some reason, he kept his bloodline hidden inside the collection, and only let it out when he was 29 years old, and he even had surveillance personnel assigned to it.

Even the part that could be recalled as 'some reason' was a bit rough.

“I guess the guild leader… You know, right?”

“He is someone who is obsessed with his work.”

“I think it would be expressed as someone who sees his own son as a masterpiece.”

“But aren’t there already people who are suspicious of that…?”

“Should I have gone on this expedition with you?”

“Can’t we just say it’s the karma of the guild leader of the Visabal?”

“He really isn’t that kind of person, ha, please don’t be so talkative….”

Joohyun added to that.

“I think Mr. Geo’s lack of common sense could also be the basis for that.”

“I admit that I lack common sense.”

“Of course, it’s natural that Mr. Geo doesn’t know much about the current Earth, but other people don’t know that. And they shouldn’t know.”

Yoo Seong-un agreed.

“Because you were raised in a lockup at a collector’s shop, you’ve become lacking in common sense?”

“I’m really sorry to say this, but doesn’t it flow quite naturally?”

“You don’t seem very sorry, and if you keep doing this, people might even say that you had sex with your work and have a child.”

“The Collectors’ Guild has a lot of ghost stories.”

“This kind of ghost story is embarrassing even for a country like me, Joohyun.”

But then all the peculiarities seen in this attack are explained.

“…….”

“Don’t you think there are too many settings?”

“…Geo, you can do it.”

“I’m not sure if cheering will help.”

“You can handle all these settings.”

“Am I an actor?”

“I know your potential…!”

“If this continues, there is a chance that I will merge with actor Geo.”

“But this much is excessive enough to cover you.”

If you add the setting that he is the son of a secret S-class saint who was raised in captivity, wouldn't people be convinced and say, "Wow, he's crazy."

“It has to be such a shocking setting that you don’t want to dig any deeper.”

“So you’re saying I’m going to use shock therapy to numb people’s brains before they find out I’m a portrait?”

“With such a crazy identity revealed, there are probably few people who would think that an even more shocking identity is hidden.”

“I’ve already been caught.”

“Oh? I see.”

Yoo Seong-un humbly accepted reality.

“How many people?”

“Are you going to ask?”

“People don’t have to ask, but secrets have to be asked.”

“Let me just say, two people for now.”

“I know who you’re talking about, Jeong Yeong-won. He’s a gardener like me.”

“Yes, I think he had guessed it from the beginning.”

“Then who is the other one?”

“I am Hunter Sanarae.”

“Sanarae….”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been memorizing the list of targets for this expedition, asked back.

“Pinocchio?”

“Are you known as a liar?”

“First of all, he’s famous for lying. He’s a famous gangster.”

“You became my friend.”

“No, wait a minute, what are you talking about?”

“You have a good sense.”

Joo-hyun, who had been listening quietly, asked with a broken face.

“Yes? But, it definitely seemed like we were picking a fight and getting into trouble….”

“What is this story about?”

“Sanarae Hunter openly picked a fight with Geo.”

“I’ll find out the address soon.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, please sit back down, and Mr. Geo, why did you become friends with someone like that?”

Geo asked, feeling something strange.

“Are you more concerned about your relationship with your classmates than about why your identity was revealed?”

“I don’t think he’s a very nice person. Don’t you hate rude people, Geo?”

“It’s hard to say that he was particularly polite, but he wasn’t a bad person.”

Geo answered Joo-hyun's question.

“I wanted to ease your tension because you were afraid of me.”

“…What part of it do you think made you feel scared?”

“I was also wondering, but I think it was probably like that from the beginning.”

“From the beginning… from the moment you started picking a fight?”

"yes."

Geo agreed.

“I guess he wanted to see how I could make him angry.”

He risked himself to see the danger of Geo.

It was because Sanarae cared for her family.

* * *

“Uhm….”

Sanarae, who was hanging out in the guild, twitched her ears.

“My ears are ticklish.”

“Normally, you’re fine even when I swear at you like that. Who the hell are you swearing at?”

“Are you jealous right now? Don’t worry, I belong to all of you.”

“Hey, stop talking nonsense, Captain.”

“Hey… Are you sure you don’t believe me?”

Sanarae lay on the sofa laughing.

“It’s so sad?”

“Just tell some lies.”

“Oops, I got caught.”

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (186)

186

Episode 186

In a world where the hunters' dungeon raids weren't known in detail, this raid had many people talking about related topics, perhaps because of the number of participants and their ranks.

“I heard that one of the Urim-type dungeons was conquered this time.”

“Woorim-hyung? What level?”

“Grade A.”

“It’s been a long time since a B-class or higher level was conquered.”

“There seem to be a lot of guilds participating in the raid, so I guess the church will take the entry ticket?”

Every time a decent dungeon was conquered, the quality of life for the citizens improved. This was because they could obtain a lot of resources from the dungeon. In particular, many people were excited when they heard that an A-class dungeon had been conquered.

“If it’s Woorim-hyung, then something will come out of the vegetation.”

“Um… I’d like something like a crop. Like fruit.”

“Even so, the guild will monopolize everything.”

“It will work out someday.”

Conquering a dungeon meant occupying a new dimension. The citizens were excited by the opportunity to enjoy unknown benefits, and the guilds worked hard to conquer the dungeon because of this atmosphere.

It was an opportunity to gain not only resources but also the praise and support of the citizens.

That is why this attack was a blessing for the Solar Church.

“I was really anxious because of the incident at the last initiation ceremony….”

“I can take a breather now. The mood among the citizens is not bad.”

“I still need to check it out, but the resources you can get from this dungeon are of good quality.”

“Since they sell poison under the name of the sun, if we want to make it into medicine, um… let’s ask the Association for help.”

“Even though it was a villa dungeon, it was quite large, so it would be easy to pay the price here as well.”

“In this respect, the association research institute is certainly trustworthy.”

The priests of the Sun Church were happily thinking about how to use the resources they had acquired this time. They were able to save face as a member of the Sun Church. They had also been considering a long-term strategy, but this was the result.

“I never thought I would be able to conquer it in such a complete form.”

“Father Kang Seo-dam’s activities were great.”

“I heard you became good friends with Sergio Hunter too?”

Kang Seo-dam, who was listening to the elder priests, opened his mouth.

“…We’re not that close.”

“Enough with your humility, brother, you have done a great job.”

“It’s thanks to the help of other hunters.”

“Even if we do that, it doesn’t mean that what happened will disappear.”

The priests' interest was not limited to conquering dungeons.

“Is that really so… Ahem.”

“…There is a story that Sergio Hunter is a saintly vessel.”

“You are serving the sun from another dimension?”

Kang Seo-dam almost closed his eyes tightly.

'It was meant to be.'

Kang Seo-dam also knew that there had been rumors going around for a few days. That Sergio Hunter was actually a saint, or that he was the son of Bisabal. It seemed that the collector had probably done something about it.

'It was probably a ploy to somehow package it as human by making it bigger before things got too big and difficult to handle.'

There is no divine being in the world yet who is so adept at human imitation and disguise that people can't think of it. Through this strategy, everyone who knows about it thinks it's strange.

'So, it was a wise and quick decision to protect Mr. Geo.'

It was just Gangseo Dam that was tired.

“…I don’t know if he is truly a saint, but it is true that he serves the sun of another dimension. He said so himself.”

“Even if it is a sun from another dimension, it is a great blessing to have been given a herb that can revive someone who is almost dead. If it is that much favoritism, then aren’t they truly part of the family of God?”

The priests each went on telling their stories, tired of Kang Seo Dam's story that was told as vaguely as possible.

“It is not enough to simply explain it as receiving grace.”

“Yes, how could a Hunter who has not even awakened as a priest be so loved?”

“The fact that he took the herb and made it into medicine in the first place speaks volumes about Sergio Hunter’s skill.”

“If I had been a human who was only loved by God, I would not have been able to do that.”

“No matter how much I think about it, it sounds like communication with the divine is possible….”

It was when Kang Seo-dam had a tired expression on his face as the priests whispered in low voices.

“…….”

He looked at me and saw an old priest who was quietly smiling for some reason. He was an experienced priest who was called the next bishop.

“Father Kang Seo-dam.”

"…yes."

“Would you like to come to my room later and talk?”

“I will do that.”

Kang Seo-dam thought as he answered obediently.

'The religious world is like a worm.'

Just imagining where I should start and where I should end my talk made me tired.

* * *

Even if Hae-ryung was known as a brainless guild, and that was true, there were bound to be people who did the bare minimum to keep the guild going.

“Hey Narae.”

“Whose name is that….”

“Oh, okay, Sanarae.”

“Yeah, why did you call?”

“Are you crazy about the report?”

The people who usually did that job were the team leader, squad leader, workplace, and guild leader. The squad leader in charge of the team leader, Hunter Sanarae, asked while handing over a sloppy report.

“Do you have any complaints? Then speak up, and don’t do this to precious reports.”

“I drew a pretty picture of a flower and submitted it to them, but they just scolded me… I’m so upset that I’m about to cry.”

“It’s a guild where rebellion happens as easily as eating rice, but this is the first time I’ve seen someone rebel through a report.”

“Is this really the first time? Put your hand on your heart and think, is this really the first time, class president?”

“To be honest, it’s not the first time.”

And it wasn't the first time that Sanarae had submitted a report like this.

"Shit."

Wham!

The foreman, who had torn up the report, asked.

“Do you have the will to write beautifully again?”

“If you ask me something like that after already tearing it apart, I’ll be too scared.”

“It won’t work if you say that with a completely innocent face.”

“Ah, my heartfelt report is being treated like this….”

“So when are you going to release the new one, just tell me. Are you going to come and write with me?”

“I love you guys, but wouldn’t that be too gross?”

“I told you to give me a normal report before you start nagging me.”

A report that only had the sentence 'Have a nice trip' written on it couldn't be called a report.

“If you’re going to rebel, do it with your fists.”

“You usually don’t say much, so why are you saying that today?”

“I don’t think you’re doing this because you don’t know.”

The class president said.

“You saw Sergio Hunter this time too.”

Sergio Hunter has been a hot topic lately.

There were only a few skills related to the soul. There were few opportunities to learn them, and even if they were learned, they were difficult to use. There were some representative magicians, such as necromancers, but they were different.

“I heard that the trainer and healer are both adults.”

“Ugh….”

“There was even a story that he ran wild like a wild boar in the dungeon.”

“Isn’t it closer to a devil than a wild boar…?”

“What are you talking about? Anyway, write down all that information.”

The class president clicked his tongue.

“You were the one who actively participated in this attack because you were interested in that gentleman in the first place. Did you lose interest after seeing him in person and seeing that he is such an amazing young master? What on earth is going on?”

“No, it seemed difficult to call him master.”

“Well… I heard the guys who participated this time say similar things. I thought he was a young master who had never touched a drop of water since he was treated so well by the collector, but he was actually a better person than I thought.”

As he said that, the class president sat down on the sofa opposite Sanarae. Sanarae, who was lying down in her assigned seat as usual, smiled brightly.

“Wow, you’ll play with me? Aren’t you going to tell me to write a report?”

“It’s better for me to hear it all here and write it myself rather than expecting you to write it yourself.”

“This is why I don’t get promoted to class president.”

“You shouldn’t come up here, you little punk. Where are you looking, you sloth?”

The class president clicked and opened his pen.

“Tell me the story.”

“What do you want to hear?”

“First of all, Sergio Hunter’s personality?”

“You made a delicious meal….”

“He's a good person.”

The class president nodded and asked.

“What can I do for you?”

“Cream stew on the first day.”

“Can you do that in a dungeon?”

“Was it possible? He even brought a pot the size of his own body.”

“He looks like he’s not going to do that, so he’s a tough guy.”

“And they gave me snacks too. Like fruit chips….”

“It must have been delicious.”

“For some reason, it was easy to digest.”

“I know how to eat too.”

“I ate it all.”

"know."

After all, Sanarae wasn't a very special person.

“If you cook for yourself, you don’t seem like the type of person who takes pride in anything. From what I’ve heard, you seem quite honest, but have you ever shown yourself particularly angry or irritated?”

Sanarae shook her head.

"doesn't exist."

“There’s a high chance that he’s not in his right mind.”

If you've never been annoyed by that steamer, you weren't a human being.

“I heard he’s a saint. Is he really from that lineage?”

“It felt similar, didn’t it…?”

“What skills do you use most?”

"rice…."

“Other than rice.”

“Hmm, is it the training side?”

“The trainer will train you, Inma. Why are you answering in a questioning tone even though you came here to see it for yourself?”

“How do I know other people’s skill windows….”

“That’s true, too.”

The class president groaned.

“The contract number is two in total?”

“If I’ve already investigated everything, can I just go to sleep?”

“Will that work? Open your eyes and answer. What are the characteristics of a contract number?”

“One is a water bird, one is a cat.”

“The ability to have.”

“Uh… I don’t know.”

“What do you know?”

“There is nothing.”

“I’m bragging, you crazy idiot.”

The class president decided to ask for more details.

“What did that water bird do in the dungeon?”

“I flew around diligently to ask for information. I drank water and got fever….”

“What did the cat do?”

“They were calling the dead by meowing.”

“It still sounds crazy even when I hear it again.”

The foreman said, scribbling down information on the documents.

“Then let’s go back to you. We talked about your personality, your training skills, and your healer that deals damage and is a tank. What the hell is this? Explain it to me.”

“A healer who deals damage and is a tank.”

“Are you deaf? I told you to explain?”

“I corrected it because you were dismissing the facts as nonsense….”

The class president asked with a look of bewilderment.

“Then what is this guy? Did the Collector finally succeed in his human experiment? Is Sergio Hunter a left-handed fireballer dragged from some hell? Is there anything he can’t do?”

“I guess there is…?”

“What can’t you do?”

“Why are you asking me that?”

“You’re this kid, right? You came with me.”

“Why are you so angry?”

“What the hell, how did a kid like this come under my wing?”

“Yeah, but I didn’t hit the reporter.”

“You call this bragging? Is this the time for you to bring up another guy, Sanarae?”

The class president sighed after giving a light reprimand.

“I want to go do some dungeons too.”

“Come back then.”

“I can’t go back because of kids like you.”

“Poor thing. Should I rub your shoulders, class president?”

"go away."

The foreman who was organizing the documents said.

“This is such an absurd rumor that I plan on reporting it privately, but what is this nonsense about Hunter Sergio being the bloodline of the leader of the Bisabal Guild? Do you know anything about it?”

“Sometimes the color changes. It has red hair and yellow eyes.”

“You little shit, these days, how well do hair dyes work? If you really mean bloodline, then I can understand why a hunter like this suddenly appeared without a record.”

It was common for famous hunters to hide their family identities.

“No matter what, this one is a bit creepy….”

Isn't it true that he kept such a talented person hidden until he was 29 years old? It was no wonder he was out of his mind to leave his child like that.

“Anyway, I understand that’s what collectors do.”

“Do you understand?”

“What are you going to do if you don’t go? The situation is just going that way.”

“That’s true….”

“Is there anything else you want to tell me? Like the unique parts?”

“Uhm….”

Sanarae waved her hand.

“I don’t think there are any.”

“Damn, if anything comes to mind, report it to me even if it’s late.”

"okay."

“…….”

The class president asked a beat later.

“…Why did you pick a fight with Sergio Hunter?”

“I did it because it looked fun.”

“And when you came out, you seemed quite friendly, given your personality.”

“The Hunter has a really good personality.”

He smiled with his eyes wide like crescent moons.

“Aren’t you so lucky?”

* * *

Meanwhile, employees who had been on a raid with Geo testified.

“You seem more human than I thought.”

It was a generous evaluation for the work, but other employees seemed to be feeling the same way.

“I guess that’s true, since I haven’t heard anyone say they saw a monster anywhere.”

“The snacks you shared were also delicious.”

“The actions you take are so similar to those of the Black Cloak, yet it’s hard to believe that you’re the same being.”

“Isn’t that why those rumors started? We did something about it, right?”

“When I heard that he was the guild leader’s son, I cried.”

“Why are you crying?”

More than I expected, 'Mr. Sergio' showed a human side that was more natural than I expected.

“You seemed overly competent, but….”

“Still, to that extent, he is a nobleman.”

“Anyway, it was something that could be dealt with.”

This served as an indicator.

“It seems like you’re doing well without a curator in charge.”

'Mr. Sergio' is a person who can skillfully blend in even among strangers.

“It’s good, since we can’t control him anyway.”

“I feel relieved now that I have received confirmation like this.”

I've been with 'Mr. Sergio' for quite some time now, and I've never had any major problems. Even though he's a ghost story, it's a situation where I can feel a sense of stability.

And Yoo Seong-woon, who managed to get a vacation from working overtime, said:

“Let’s go on a trip.”

"yes?"

"oh."

So the sea voyage was decided.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (187)

187

Episode 187

“Is this okay?”

Geo asked Joo-hyun, who was squeezing into the backseat of the car.

“What's the problem?”

“There are a lot of things I want to say….”

As Joo-hyun trailed off, Yoo Seong-woon, who was holding the steering wheel, smiled innocently.

“You’re moving without any luggage. It’s okay. I made a separate request, so the pension will have all the clothes and food you need to wear there.”

“That was a question, but I wasn’t particularly worried about it.”

“Are you surprised by the sudden trip? Well, Joo-hyun might be worried about security issues, but that’s not a problem either. We’re going to a sea where there are no people.”

Geo asked in the car as it moved smoothly.

“Are there no people in the sea?”

“Usually there aren’t many people at the sea.”

“I guess it’s not being used as a tourist attraction.”

“Rather, it is often a food source or a danger zone.”

The modern sea is not a very good place for people to live.

“But the place we’re going to will be even less crowded. Our destination is an unreconstructed area.”

“What is an unreconstructed area?”

Joohyun from the backseat answered that part.

“It literally refers to an area that has not been rebuilt. To put it simply, it is a space where the aftermath of the great disaster remains and it is difficult for people to stay.”

“I see. I think Gangwon-do, where I visited just before, had that same feeling.”

“Oh, let me explain further. It’s a little different from that.”

Joo-Hyeon gave an additional explanation for the immature portrait in the human world.

“The Samcheok area in Gangwon Province that I visited this time was at least minimally rebuilt. There was only one hotel, and there were a few restaurants. Of course, the restaurants only had a variety of food, like bungeoppang, a street food in the city… But that doesn’t mean it’s an unreconstructed area.”

The areas that had been rebuilt even a little were completely different from the areas that had not been rebuilt at all.

“Unreconstructed areas are generally perceived as dangerous. They are not even suitable for human habitation. There is no infrastructure, so it is inconvenient to move around, and it is not a good place to go for a trip, I know that….”

Joohyun saw Yoo Seong-un driving a car.

“…The Hunter’s world looks somewhat different?”

“If you have money and ability, what can’t you do?”

“So there’s a pension in the unreconstructed area? And by the sea?”

The coastal area, where you never know what kind of bizarre monster might pop out, is designated as a restricted area unless it is properly developed.

“How is that possible?”

“With the money of a first-class citizen and the power of an A-class hunter….”

“How do you expect me, a second-class citizen, to react?”

“You don’t have to react, so why are you reacting?”

“I was worried that Mr. Yoo Seong-un might go somewhere and hear people say he’s unlucky.”

“I also have that much respect for myself. I’m just saying this because we’re among ourselves.”

Ju-hyeon, despite being from an orphanage, was not disillusioned or angry about class. He was someone who didn't care about that at all, so Yoo Seong-woon was comfortable talking to him. He also knew how to live in society by being mindful of others.

“There are service areas where you can stay under the premise that you take full responsibility for whatever happens. It’s quite risky and costs a bit of money, but other than that, we can enjoy the ocean alone in a rich environment without anyone around us.”

Joohyun whispered softly to him.

“Money is a fucking joke.”

“Oh my.”

How can you say something like that on a vacation that was torn off?

“Except for the pension, there are no other buildings around. It might be inconvenient to get around, but once you arrive, everything will be ready, and the fact that we’re the only ones here is a huge advantage.”

“That’s definitely reassuring. I was already worried because Geo-ssi has become so famous lately, but if I don’t have to be so careful….”

“Oh, is that what you were worried about?”

Yoo Seong-un asked with his characteristically innocent smile.

“Because it feels like you’re going to explode a bomb and then run away?”

“Honestly, that’s not true either. It does exist.”

The internet community was in an uproar because of the rumors spread by the collector. All the provocative elements, including the saint, the S-class hunter, and the hidden son of the three major guilds, were brought out.

“The city is very noisy.”

“That’s why you have to leave at times like this. If you hold on to someone faithfully, you’ll think, ‘Oh, this person has the will to work,’ and you’ll push them even harder. That’s the reality of Korea. I have no intention of turning our Geo into a rolling pin.”

“The more capable you are, the more you roll, they say, like a hunter.”

“I thought about it, but does it really have to be Geo? Of course, it doesn’t matter if you want to, but you just finished a big project. There must be an original mystic concept. In this case, it’s okay to jump out.”

If it was a Hunter's custom to take a vacation after finishing a big project, it was a custom in this world. Of course, there were many situations like Yoo Seong-un where that didn't work, but they had everything they needed, so there was no need to stay stuck and watch what others thought.

“Mr. Joo-Hyeon, you have a lot of worries too.”

“Well, I was worried about that too.”

“What else is there?”

“…….”

“…….”

"after…."

Joohyun asked with a resigned face.

“…I was wondering if it was okay for me to fly around with a portrait of someone as dangerous as Mr. Geo.”

“I didn’t know you would ask so openly.”

“If you knew all that, you shouldn’t have kept beating around the bush.”

“Yes, my sin is great.”

Yoo Seong-un asked Geo, who was sitting next to him.

“What do you think about this claim?”

“No one can stop me from going to the beach.”

“That’s right.”

“Yes.”

It may be confusing, but the top speaker at this meeting was 'Portrait of Geo'.

“It’s been a long time since I’ve been to the Earth’s oceans.”

“Just don’t say that in front of other people.”

“I’m not that smart.”

Yoo Seong-un thought to himself.

'You have a brain.'

It was simply surprising that there was an organ called the brain, but no matter how much I thought about it, it was not something I should say out loud. Yoo Seong-woon pointed ahead with his characteristically innocent smile.

“That’s the teleport terminal over there. Is this your first time using a terminal?”

“It is connected all the way by road.”

“You could call it a car-only area. There’s a separate area where only people can move.”

“It’s convenient.”

For a moment, Sergio thought of the drive-thru. He really liked the idea of everything being resolved without having to get out of the car. Honey, sensing the magical aura, suddenly popped out from under Geo's hood.

“Gulp?”

“We’re going to be teleporting soon.”

“Cur.”

Honey went back in quietly. Unlike his father, who was very interested in teleportation, he seemed to have no interest. He was a son without any romanticism.

Yoo Seong-un checked the terminal sign.

“Okay, since we’re going to Jeju Island….”

“?”

"yes?"

“Oh, didn’t I tell you?”

He grinned.

“We’re going to Jeju Island.”

“Why are you telling me that now?”

“I was so busy rushing out that I didn’t notice anything.”

“You call this an excuse….”

The weak Joo-Hyeon couldn't bring herself to hit the A-class hunter. Even if she did, it would only harm her.

* * *

And at the pension they arrived at, Aria welcomed them.

“It’s been a while, gentlemen.”

“?”

“??”

Giovanni, leaving behind the confused Yoo Seong-un and Joo-hyeon, smiled brightly and hugged Aria.

“It’s been a while, Aria! How have you been?”

“When I think of our teacher, I can’t help but feel safe.”

“It’s sad news for dead humans to be told by mermaids.”

“I’m glad you’re happy.”

Joohyun muttered.

“What kind of conversation is that?”

Aria and Geo's conversation continued separately from the humans' delusions.

“I brought some food. Can I join in?”

“The clams of Edlan Village! It’s been a while since I’ve made tomato stew.”

“It’ll be okay to grill it. There were a lot of monsters around here that didn’t even know the place, so I chased them all away, so you can enjoy it comfortably, sir.”

“It seems like Aria is the only one who thinks of you, teacher.”

Yoo Seong-un thought.

'Isn't that just a normal monster territory marker?'

Anyway, there was no human who refused Aria, who had joined the vacation without much thought. In the first place, Joo-hyun was a human that even Geo could sympathize with, and Yoo Seong-un was a gardener who was used to dealing with non-human beings.

“I don’t think the pension has any women’s clothing.”

“You didn’t think I’d be wearing clothes made by humans, did you?”

“I wonder how far you’re willing to go for the sake of showing off.”

“Oh my god, how can someone be so considerate?”

Geo, ignoring whatever Yoo Seong-un and Aria were talking about, called Joo-hyun.

“You must have had a hard time traveling such a long way. Would you like to enjoy some light grilled clams?”

“If someone heard, they’d think you were the only one moving by yourself. I’m glad, but aren’t you tired?”

“I don’t feel particularly tired, perhaps because the terminal is well-suited to my body.”

It is said that some people are physically unable to use teleportation. Fortunately, none of those people were among Yoo Seong-un, Joo Hyun, and Geo. Joo Hyun approached Geo with his signature smile.

“Then shall we prepare together?”

Then Aria intervened.

“I’ll light the fire, sir.”

“Would you mind? The fire Aria lights feels warmer.”

“Even if you praise me like that, nothing will come out of it.”

Aria, waving her hand, went out of the pension. Yoo Seong-un blinked his wide eyes at the sight of her really rolling up her sleeves and cooperating.

“Are you really going to light a fire?”

“The charcoal that Aria polishes smells even better.”

“Are you a princess?”

“Does the princess live without eating?”

“I thought mermaids were a little different.”

“That seems like a very human-centric statement.”

“Okay, I’ll reflect on it.”

Since it wasn't a task that took much time, the preparation of the grilled clams was completed quickly.

Aria actually made a small brazier outside and put an iron plate on it, and while Yoo Seong-un prepared miscellaneous items like chairs and utensils, Geo and Ju-hyeon cleaned the clams neatly.

“Those clams don’t need anything like a sunscreen?”

“Aria said she already did it.”

"aha."

So the four of them sat in a circle and really enjoyed grilling clams.

“…….”

Joohyun was a little taken aback.

“Why is it so natural?”

“Is there something so unnatural about eating a meal?”

“There are so many different types of people here, but we are just casually eating grilled clams.”

“This is the effect of delicious rice, Joohyun.”

“I think Mr. Geo is too much of a foodie.”

“I will reflect on it.”

Aria, who was cutting and eating a long, scallop-like piece of meat, opened her mouth.

“Oh, I just found out about this recently.”

“Please speak.”

“Is it your work that the saint of Dalnim Church went mad?”

A meteor shower was heard.

“Cough!! Kehek, ugh, gulp…!!”

Geo scolded Aria.

“Why can’t people even eat?”

“I didn’t know that someone who is a so-called A-class hunter would be this weak.”

“Even an A-class hunter needs to eat to live.”

“That’s why I didn’t know you’d be this weak.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had suddenly become a weak and frail hunter, cleared his throat and spoke.

“Why are you suddenly talking about the Saintess of Dalnim Church? Geo, what did you do?”

“I didn’t do anything….”

“Yes, I don’t have anything to ask you. Would you like to speak, Princess?”

Aria shrugged.

“I thought you might be a good candidate for the teacher’s Demon King project, so I gave it a try. You seemed so useful in that regard that I thought you might have already done the work.”

Geo felt wronged.

“This teacher doesn’t drive people crazy.”

“I often do that when I’m bored….”

“What do you mean?”

“Um, nothing.”

Aria smiled calmly.

“So when do you plan on becoming the Demon King?”

“Did you come all the way to Jeju Island to ask that?”

“Did you think it would be difficult for me, who is the sea itself, to come to an island like this?”

“That makes sense. It would have been as comfortable as a convenience store in front of your house.”

Geo smiled cheerfully.

“It will take some time.”

Argio hasn't even returned to his hometown yet.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (188)

188

Episode 188

“I will show you my individual skills.”

"suddenly?"

After finishing his meal, Geo ran out onto the shore.

“Taran.”

“…….”

“The miracle of Moses.”

“Cover the road.”

“If not now, then when?”

“Do it at home.”

Geo obediently followed Joo-hyun's words, who was terrified at the idea of splitting the sea in half. The beach near the pension, which had more rocks and stones than sand, was quite deep. Geo lay down on it.

“I don’t have any more individual skills in mind.”

“I think what you are doing now is also sufficiently considered individual skill.”

“Can’t hunters do anything?”

“No way. Hunters aren’t salt shakers.”

“Am I a salt shaker?”

“It looks even worse when you’re lying down.”

“Then I’ll lie down for a while. It’s comfortable.”

"hmm…."

Joo-hyun, sitting on a rock near where Geo was lying, looked around worriedly.

“It’s gotten really dark. Are you okay?”

“If you’re worried about the darkness around you, there’s a way.”

"wait for a sec."

“Please speak.”

“What are you planning to do now?”

“I tried to get the water birds out.”

“Ah, water birds.”

Joo-Hyeon smiled with relief as he thought of the small, harmless bird.

“Excuse me, I’m a worrier.”

“We are being considerate of each other, so how can we say it is rude?”

And Geo sat by the sea.

“……?”

Joohyun blinked.

“Are you sitting down?”

“Yes, I sat down.”

“I know Mr. Geo is a unique case in many ways, but this is….”

“Are you curious?”

"yes."

“Me too.”

"…okay!"

Although he seems to have gotten quite good at it recently, it was still a portrait that was awkwardly imitating humans. It's not like he empathizes with humans just because he puts himself on the same level as them.

“Now how do you plan on getting the waterfowl out?”

“It’s already here.”

“…….”

Something entered Joohyun's field of vision.

"ah."

For some reason, I could see tiny flowers or fruits floating next to Geo's feet, which had become translucent.

It was hard to see because it was so dark and in the water, but it was definitely a trace of a 'water bird'.

“You’re already here. How long has it been since?”

“It’s been here since I set foot in there.”

"aha…."

“Mr. Joohyun, come up here too.”

“I will miss you.”

“I will help you.”

“…Excuse me.”

Slap.

Joohyun did not fall into the sea.

“I feel strange.”

He was walking on water, even though he was not awakened.

“You can see the water birds better here.”

“Do you see us moving among ourselves?”

“Yes, there are quite a few more than I expected.”

“Because they are children who live in groups.”

“But it’s not bright yet….”

“It will get brighter soon.”

Geo sat on the surface of the water and swung his legs under the water.

“If you make this place your nest.”

Only then did the water birds come together and shine.

“…….”

“Okay.”

It seemed like lights were turned on in the sea.

“…It looks like there are fireflies in the sea.”

“Have you ever seen a firefly?”

“I’ve never seen it spread out in nature like this because it’s an extinct insect, but I’ve participated in restoration research separately from that… so I know what it looks like.”

“There are more extinct species than I thought. It’s sad.”

“Is this what it feels like when you actually see it?”

“I thought it looked like a glowing jellyfish.”

“That could be the case.”

A comfortable smile appeared on Joohyun's face.

“It’s golden.”

“I have never seen any other color than this.”

“I think you like it here.”

A color that could only be appreciated from the terrace where the cool spring breeze blew at night while I was at Geo's cabin. The golden color that the water birds gave off when they gathered together was an indicator of their happiness.

“…It’s great.”

The sea shimmered golden.

An enchanting light, as if the sunlight had been captured by melting the sun made of gold. It was as beautiful as if the universe was contained under the sea.

As we splashed lightly in the water, the water birds inside showed off their cute movements.

“It’s cute.”

“That’s what makes my children special.”

“Yes, it looks like that.”

The unawakened Juhyun could not accurately count the water birds in the water. So all he could see was a feast of flowers, fruits, and jewels, but even that alone allowed him to feel the water birds' affection.

They loved this sea.

“If you think about it, it’s like we went on a trip together….”

Golden scales rippled on Juhyun's hands, on his retina, and on the rugged rocks around him.

“I’m happier when I’m with my family.”

“I think so too.”

“It’s very bright.”

Even though I was on the cool sea, my whole body felt drowsy as if it had been touched by the spring sunlight.

“…….”

“Mr. Joohyun.”

Geo called his friend.

“You shouldn’t go too far inside.”

"…ah."

“Because Mr. Joo-hyun can’t breathe under water.”

It was only then that Joo-hyun realized that he had put his arms too deep into the sea.

“…….”

Joohyun looked back at Geo.

“…Isn’t this a bit dangerous?”

“Our children are not in danger.”

“That’s it, Water Ghost.”

“Isn’t a water ghost a ghost that pulls people into the water?”

“I know there are ghosts that tempt you to come inside.”

“The Earth has become really scary.”

“…Being too beautiful is also a problem.”

Joo-hyun sat cross-legged on the water with an awkward smile on his face. He let out a short sigh and pressed his forehead.

Just now he was entranced by the enchanting light of the water birds.

'Perhaps the fact that I am an unawakened person also played a part.'

If it were Yoo Seong-un, he wouldn't have been so easily fooled.

“Would you please refrain from calling these guys in areas with large civilian populations?”

“Even if I don’t call, the water birds can find the home they want.”

“…Wait a minute, doesn’t that sound like you’ve already moved to another place? Is that right?”

“It is living water, so I guess it is true that it is leaky.”

“Where did you go?”

“I must have gone into the picture I drew.”

“Into the picture….”

“There aren’t many places, so don’t worry.”

Geo reassured Joohyun.

“There probably won’t be this many of them gathered together.”

“…Will that make you less possessed?”

“It would be embarrassing if you said that I was fascinated by something I deeply admired, but it would just be pretty to look at.”

“That’s fortunate, but….”

“Probably went to the Void or the Four-legged Forest.”

“Why is there a dungeon that has already been conquered… No, could you tell me about that in advance?”

“I will keep that in mind.”

Geo looked under the water.

“You can see a similar scene in the ‘Deep Sea Kingdom.’”

“Isn’t that also said that it was Mr. Giovanni’s hometown?”

“Yes, there you can see the Milky Way floating above your head, not below.”

“The Milky Way… What does it feel like?”

“This is the Milky Way created by life in the ocean.”

Giovanni laughed as he swam through the golden sea.

“I’ll invite you there soon.”

“…….”

Joohyun nodded at the affection and pride in her voice.

“I look forward to it.”

Oh, what a poor man he was.

* * *

“What was Giovanni’s world like?”

Aria looked back at the meteor cloud asking while looking at the golden sea from afar.

“You’re asking that now?”

“Now that you’re here, there are things I can ask you.”

“That makes some sense.”

Aria nodded.

“It’s been a long time since I’ve heard about that person….”

“You asked me to tell you about my hometown, not about myself?”

“Shut up and listen, Manager of the Structure. The only world I know is Giovanni.”

“Then I understand.”

There was something blind about these mermaids.

“How much can you tell?”

“You can tell me anything as long as you have the protection of the teacher.”

“That is truly… amazing affection.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was looking at Geo and Ju-hyeon standing on the shore of a steep cliff, soon asked.

“What kind of person was Giovanni in that world?”

“I think I got the general idea.”

But Aria explained obediently.

“He was truly… the saint of the century. To the people of the world, he was the Son of God incarnated among the filthy humans. To his neighbors, he was a great friend and adult who devoted his life to them. To the religious community, he was a precious genius who raised their profile.”

Aria continued speaking calmly.

“And yet, he died so easily.”

“That’s how all humans are. You can’t expect eternity.”

“That’s why it has a disgusting and repulsive side.”

I felt a murderous urge, as if I had encountered a bug crawling up onto the bed.

“Let’s see, are you curious about the method of execution?”

“If you could tell me, I would be grateful.”

“The first was torture on land. It was barely enough to maintain one’s form….”

“What next?”

“They threw him into a huge tank filled with sea water.”

Aria was looking at a meteor cloud, not a golden sea.

“Then they blocked the entrance and chained them so they couldn’t get out.”

“Why did you do that?”

“The priests of the sun said that if he was truly the son of the sun, he would survive even in the cold tank.”

“What was the result?”

“I survived.”

Giovanni remained in the tank for over four months without dying.

“But still, you didn’t take it out.”

Some of them came to believe that Giovanni was truly the son of the sun, others that he had been helped by the sea deity. Whatever their opinion, they ultimately came to fear Giovanni's presence with great fear.

“If he is truly a child of the sun, there is no way to turn back since he has been treated so cruelly. If he is a child of the sea, then he must be a monster worse than a mermaid… I am saying that he must be killed immediately before he takes revenge on humans.”

The problem wasn't just retaliation.

“Public sentiment may also have been an issue.”

“They are a religious group, so why are they receiving public support?”

“It was a religious sect more powerful than the kings of each country.”

Giovanni was once a perfect son of the sun, loved by everyone in the world. If it were revealed that he was in fact a true child of divinity, it would certainly be unmanageable for even the Cult of the Sun.

“I wonder if it was foolish to say that there was skeptical public opinion even within the church.”

“So how did the Solar Church respond?”

“They took advantage of my poor younger brother who was caught around that time.”

He was tortured on an empty stomach and locked in a tank with Giovanni.

“The intention was probably to create a disgusting scene to allay that sense of skepticism.”

But Isser endured, and Giovanni did not die until the end thanks to the divine protection. The priests of the Sun, who felt that this was some kind of revelation, could not bear the fear and poured a potion into the tank.

“Thanks to that, my blinded brother ate Giovanni.”

“Wasn’t Giovanni supposed to receive the medicine too? If it was put into the tank….”

“Even then, Giovanni didn’t seem to react much.”

Only then did Aria catch sight of Geo sitting on the surface of the sea.

“So they must have thought my teacher was dead and eaten him.”

It's Isser.

It's not that Isser was trying to fill his stomach right away because he was drunk. However, seeing him lying limp like a corpse, did his final line collapse? In the end, Isser ate Giovanni.

“…Does your younger sibling know about that? Is it true that you ate it without knowing in the first place?”

"well?"

Aria never asked about that.

“After doing that, it seemed like they were far from the divine punishment, so the priests stole the remaining body of Geo and used it for the operation of the sect. How do you think they used it?”

“…I’ve heard of something called a basram flower.”

“You got it right.”

The elixir of the century that would wither away without the loving touch of the sun. The body of Geo, who was most loved by the sun, was used to grow the flower.

“That’s why it took so long to find Geo.”

“Where did you find it?”

“I found it in the Pope’s residence.”

“Oh, that’s great.”

“And yet the sun did not punish me.”

It was the same even in severe conditions.

“So I decided to get off instead.”

Neither the deep sea that gave birth to her nor the sun that her brother served brought down divine punishment on these filthy believers. In the end, Aria turned herself into the deep sea and caused the entire world to sink into the sea.

“I know I sinned. I also know it was just venting my anger.”

“But you’re a monster, not an evil spirit.”

“There’s no way that divinity can be easily obtained by venting one’s anger a few times.”

“Geo wasn’t that easy to get….”

“It’s embarrassing when you compare me to your teacher.”

“From what I’ve heard, it seems like you don’t regret venting your anger.”

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“Why are you bringing this up?”

“At first, I didn’t even think it was a sin.”

But after meeting my teacher again, I realized that it was a sin.

“I am the one who lost.”

Although he did not regret it, it was enough to show that the mermaids were impressed by Giovanni. Since my teacher said it was a sin, I could not help but recognize it as such.

“The only time life was heaven was when I was young and with my teacher.”

"so?"

“…Geo said to take responsibility.”

“Then will you forgive me?”

“No way.”

That wasn't Giovanni's job to begin with. He probably thinks so too.

"just…."

Aria laughed.

“It's just a matter of choosing.”

What kind of hell will I walk through now?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (189)

189

Episode 189

Giovanni loved the sea.

The sun was warm but hot. The sea was cold but cool. Everything in the world has its pros and cons, and this world was not only land but also sea. The sea breeze had a clear flow.

So it was only natural that I would take a liking to mermaids.

"aria."

With his familiar bare feet, Geo walked across the surface of the water.

“You know, I can’t swim.”

“Teacher, you are such a unique person.”

with a splash….

The mermaid's fins made a light splash.

“It was very rare to find a human on that planet who couldn’t swim.”

“Strangely, it just kept sinking.”

“You have to relax your body so you can talk to the sea.”

“Maybe it’s because I’m already satisfied with just you guys.”

“You’re good at saying awkward things.”

Aria asked.

“Are you sure it’s okay for me to come this far?”

Pale, thin hands wrapped around Geo's legs.

“A mermaid might eat me.”

“Ahaha….”

Giovanni took the cold hand.

“That sounds good too.”

“…….”

“Can you teach me how to swim?”

"…okay."

Aria also took that cool hand.

“Okay then.”

Splash .

Guided by the mermaid, the priest fell into the sea.

* * *

“This has happened before too.”

Aria continued speaking, hugging the lukewarm body temperature.

“You looked like a prince, as if you were made of sand. I thought that among the children of the sun, there was no one more noble than you.”

“…….”

“I was so interested in what I didn’t have, and the light that sparkled under the water seemed to last forever. Maybe I wanted to hug you and go down to my deep-sea home.”

“…….”

“Even now… it’s like that.”

Even on this dark night, Geo's platinum hair was as warm as the spring sunlight.

Aria raised her hand and carefully stroked Giovanni's cheek, which was floating above her. It was not as warm as it looked, whether it was because the sea at dawn had taken away his body heat, or it was already this cold.

But he was smiling.

“…….”

"…teacher."

Aria laughed and cried, holding her cheek. Pearls flowed out.

"love you."

The child of the land that I wanted to have first when I was born.

The one and only teacher who taught me the world, my heart, and my daily life. A unique human being in all aspects.

“I love you, teacher. I have missed you for countless hours. Without you, the whole world seems so dirty. Oh, the world you loved so much….”

“…….”

“I tried to love you too, but it wasn’t easy. When you were here, it was easier than swimming, but now that you're gone, it's so hard. Why didn't the sun save you, teacher? Why didn't the deep sea punish you?"

"…aria."

"I know you won't forgive me. The only forgiveness that my brother and I need is yours, but you don't have any forgiveness to give us. It wasn't yours to begin with."

The mermaid regretted it for the first and last time.

"I regret it."

If I had known you would truly come back to me, I would have waited more quietly.

"And my regret is not for the poor lives that were lost to me."

"I know."

"Also, this is not the regret you were hoping for, Teacher. But what can I do, I am such a selfish and evil monster…."

If a monster regrets its sins, how can it still be a monster?

"Am I still human?"

"Is there any reason not to?"

"……."

"Humans can be as selfish and evil as they want."

"…that's right."

Aria hugged her teacher again.

"You know best."

It was his master who died of the most terrible selfishness and wickedness. If Giovanni does not know the ugliness of man, who can?

“I’m just a little cold, and I’m a good swimmer….”

“He is a man who drops pearls when he cries.”

“Whatever the teacher says is right.”

"I see."

“I wish our graves had been the sea of that day….”

Aria fantasized about drowning in the ocean, even though only 'humans' could do that.

“Nothing can be undone.”

Even if we brought back all the dead, fixed the broken families, and returned the sun to the planets that were trapped in the ocean, that day would never come again.

Aria reproached herself for her selfishness.

“I now have only two choices.”

“What is that?”

“I could become a demon and stay with you forever.”

"and?"

“…I can take responsibility for myself and wait for it to be accepted someday.”

“It’s my responsibility alone.”

Warm voice.

“What would you like to do?”

"teacher."

Aria asked like a young student that day.

“…you love us?”

“Of course.”

Geo never knew how to abandon something he once loved.

“I will love you forever.”

In it the mermaid found the answer.

“…….”

“When can I see you again?”

“…when you’re ready.”

Aria laughed, releasing Geo from her arms.

“I will invite humans.”

And so Aria disappeared into the deep sea.

Deep into the darkness, beyond Giovanni's reach.

* * *

“…??”

Joohyun was dumbfounded.

“Isn’t that a declaration of war?”

"you're right."

"…okay!"

Yoo Seong-woon laughed in vain at the sight of Joo-hyun trying hard.

“These days, monsters declare war in a very romantic way.”

“Was it romantic?”

“Yes, it’s romantic. A hug by the sea at dawn….”

“I guess I missed this teacher’s warmth.”

“It feels really strange because I don’t think that’s a wrong statement.”

Yoo Seong-un asked next.

“How long do you think it will take to prepare?”

“Are you asking that of me, a worthless portrait?”

“But among us, you know the most about mermaids.”

“Aria is an excellent doctor and researcher. It shouldn’t take that long.”

“So, can you guess roughly how much that would be?”

“Um… about a month?”

“Oh my.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was deeply impressed, asked back.

“You only have one month left to prepare for an attack on an S-class dungeon?”

“In reality, all that is needed is mental preparation, so it may take even less time than that.”

“Has the time finally come for the Earth to perish…?”

“I don’t think I’ll go until I’m ruined.”

“I thought this day would come soon.”

“It won’t fail.”

Joohyun asked incredulously.

“Then isn’t this not the time for us to be doing this?”

“What’s wrong, Joohyun? Do you know how long my vacation has been like this?”

“To be honest, I think the fate of the planet is more important than my personal vacation.”

“So is it really something that should be buried like this?”

Yoo Seong-un let out a deep sigh.

“…First, let’s notify our guild leader.”

“If possible… I think it would be a good idea to let the association know as well.”

“I don’t know how to use the sea, so it would be better to leave the coastal area alone.”

“If the collectors and associations find out about this, they will also find out about other symbols of eternity.”

“Even so, I don’t think they’ll all come forward. Well, I don’t know about Justitia….”

Geo, who didn't know much about the guild's situation, asked.

“What is Justitia?”

“This is the name of the number one guild in South Korea.”

As always, Joohyun explained.

“It is said that it was named after the Statue of Justice.”

“If the Association is in charge of the overall administration of the Republic of Korea and our collection is the lifeline, Justitia is in charge of the country’s large and small security issues.”

“The Guildmaster of Justitia is one of the symbols of eternity, and is dedicated to protecting human life and eradicating crime. He does a lot of small volunteer work and often takes part in large-scale campaigns.”

“Since the guild leader is a leader by example, if a national disaster occurs, they will probably do something….”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“I don’t think they will directly participate in the attack as they are protecting ordinary citizens.”

Justitia has always had a strong sense of being a 'last resort'.

“Unless the country is in danger of total collapse, I don’t think we can expect much from this side.”

“But isn’t it reassuring in that it can prevent casualties that may occur in the event of an accident?”

“It certainly is trustworthy in that regard.”

However, it was difficult to expect that he would participate in the attack.

“Just because it’s an S-class dungeon doesn’t mean you need the same level of hunters. It’s something where you can win with quantity, and especially since Korea is a country that succeeded with manpower, hunters are scarce.”

“More than anything, the fact that the S-class is moving has a great symbolic meaning. If they were to step forward themselves, there would be many people who would feel uneasy. Even the president of the association, who puts a lot of effort into administrative management… would try not to step forward if possible.”

“The Symbol of Eternity usually came out when the aftermath of a great disaster was severe. Considering that there are still many people who are afraid of a great disaster, it is unlikely that it will come out easily.”

Geo tilted his head.

“What if we don’t step forward to avoid provoking people’s fears and then a bigger problem arises? I think it would be better to step forward thoroughly from the beginning than to leave a dangerous possibility unattended.”

“That is true, but….”

After thinking for a moment, Yoo Seong-un continued speaking.

“That’s not an explanation. The symbol of eternity is too busy to come forward every time there’s a problem on Earth. You could think of it as a kind of name recognition, but in order to move those people, Korea has to stir at least once.”

“Does this mean that it is a burden to utilize human resources?”

“It may seem a little strange to you. But a country is originally entangled with a great number of interests. It is possible to think that being in a high position has made you feel burdened.”

“Is it a question of status?”

“Um… I guess that’s the gist of it?”

This wasn't just a problem for the symbol of eternity.

“More than anything, if we rely on a few S-class Hunters every time a problem arises, this planet will soon be destroyed. Even now, the world is sustained by the mercy of a few strong people, but if S-classes take care of everything, all the human habits will be ruined.”

This part was a matter decided long ago at a meeting between S-classes from around the world. Unless it was a matter that involved the fate of a nation or a dimension, S-classes were to refrain from intervening.

“The rest of the humans have to adapt to this environment in advance while the S-class Hunters take care of them so that they don’t reach the worst. You never know when their minds might change.”

“It gives you a chance to adapt.”

“No matter how capable an S-class is, that small number of people can’t solve all the big and small problems on Earth. Even if they could, they wouldn’t do it. So it’s hard to expect an S-class to step up.”

They'll keep an eye on this, but they won't do anything about it from the start.

“So, for this part… it would be better to form an alliance with other guilds.”

“Don’t you collaborate with the religious order?”

“That depends on the situation. There are times when you can provoke mermaids for no reason.”

Joohyun nodded at him.

“Then shall we go back for now?”

“I can’t even go on vacation with peace of mind. In my next life, I will definitely be born as an unawakened being.”

“I don’t know if that part is something you want to do.”

Geo intervened.

“Can I help you?”

“Please take care of me when I die.”

“I will try.”

“I don’t know what I’ll try, but I know what I’ll do.”

“Now you are my friends even after death.”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un asked hesitantly.

“…Did we just sign some kind of contract?”

“I’ve lived this long, so you should be my friend in the next life too.”

“You’re so positive, it scares me.”

“You are too kind.”

Perhaps he felt the atmosphere had become tense. He smiled gently at Giovanni's face.

“It was a joke, so relax.”

“How is that a joke?”

“Why would you think not?”

“Mr. Joohyun, please say something.”

Joohyun laughed.

“I hope I can be friends with Geo in the next life too.”

“No, if I continue like this, I might be friends with Geo in the next life too?”

“You’re a dependable friend who stays by my side even after I die and come back to life.”

"…okay."

Yoo Seong-un was convinced.

'I've already given up.'

It was a smile of resignation.

“I told you it was a joke?”

“Okay, I get it.”

No one listened to Geo's words.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (190)

190

Episode 190

The mermaid was a child of the sea.

The sea was a part of them, and they were also a part of the sea. Among them, Aria and Isser had the power to interact and communicate with the seas of other dimensions.

And Isser smelled a familiar scent through the sea. Somewhere, like sunlight, the traces of a small, delicate child… .

“…….”

“Oh! It’s silver!”

“…This is Isser.”

Isser was so taken aback by the warm greeting from Chaisol that he asked,

“What are you doing?”

“I was practicing, huh!”

“There must be many people participating in the training for the prospective priests of the Sun Church, so why are there only two people left?”

“They’re all fried!”

"ha…."

At the sight of her sighing deeply, Iruda, who was next to Chaisol, flinched. Isser, who suddenly found himself in a position where he had to take care of the feelings of a young human, spoke with a miserable heart.

“From what I’ve seen, it looks like the two of you were left behind by the other priests. Judging from the fact that the smell of blood only comes from you two, it seems like they intentionally wanted to cause trouble.”

“It’s too difficult to explain.”

“I would appreciate it if you could decide whether to use formal or informal speech. In short, I am saying that the two of you seem to be being bullied or harassed. I believe there is an expression in Korea called ostracism.”

“Yeah, it’s really lethal.”

“I don’t think you don’t know.”

Isser swung his mermaid hand and bit the sea of the dungeon. A familiar smell came from the sea connected to Earth, and I didn't know this would happen. If I wasn't careful, I could have been seriously injured.

'Then the teacher would have been sad.'

I didn't want that.

'This could be Giovanni's first apostle.'

There was no reason not to do something that would help Geo in some way. Isser looked around the quiet beach of the dungeon. It was a dimension where space was quite twisted.

“Don’t prospective priests have separate priests to guide them?”

“This training was just for us.”

“Even so, given the nature of the Korean Solar Church, there will be people watching.”

“That, that… is that so?”

Instead of the stuttering Chae Sol, Iru opened his mouth.

“…Even if they don’t lead, there will be priests assigned in case of a major accident. However, since we recently had to develop a Class A dungeon, there aren’t many priests left.”

“Are you trying to say that because there are few people available to operate, there are few priests assigned to dungeon training? In that Solar Cult that was teeming with humans? Well, there is a faint smell of humans in this sea. There probably aren’t that many people there.”

“It is true that there are many priests in the church, but there are not many teachers who take care of the prospective priests. Of those, there are probably only two at most, but they seem to have been too busy taking care of the prospective priests who are scattered here and there to even think about us.”

Chaisol grumbled.

“It’s because we did too well.”

“…There might be something like that too.”

Among the entire Sunkyo Knights, the pair of Chae Sol and Iru Da, who were considered to be the most talented, were often evaluated as 'children that cannot be reached'. The accompanying priests would have been keeping an eye on those who were at greater risk of injury.

Isser thought.

'It's barbaric.'

The religious world, regardless of its level, had a blind or forced side. It seemed as if they believed that all the problems in the world could be solved by faith alone. There were no fools.

‘… or perhaps something of a higher dimension has shaped the frame of destiny… .’

He hesitated for a moment, but this was not Isser's specialty. He thought back to the reason why he had come here in person.

“You are being presumptuous. Black Cloak will be sad when you die.”

“Oh, how are you, hyung?”

“I am not a source or anything. If you need information, you should contact me directly.”

Isser, who was giving off a bad vibe, disappeared through the sea just as he had first appeared. Iruda, who had been holding his breath at the sudden appearance of the humanoid monster, soon let out a deep breath.

“…Haaaah….”

“What’s wrong? Were you scared?”

“If you’re not scared, you’re not in your right mind.”

“Me, me…? Then me?”

“Sometimes I feel like I’ve lost my mind.”

“Was I crazy?!”

“Be quiet.”

Iruda, who had instinctively covered Chae Sol's mouth, corrected his words.

“Oh, no. Just explain the current situation.”

“Uh… a monster friend I know appeared and helped us out when we were in danger.”

“Do you really think that’s a perfect explanation?”

“If you have any further questions, feel free to ask!”

“That’s what I was most curious about.”

Then Iru asked.

“Are you close with monsters? Are you a trainer?”

“I was awakened as a priest?”

“Then what kind of confidence do you have to be so friendly with monsters?”

“I don’t think Eunha likes me that much, so we’re not close.”

“It could be dangerous, so why are you being so friendly?”

“I thought we were close enough to have that level of conversation!”

“Chaisol’s friendliness is also….”

It was a sociality that was so cheerful that it was a headache. A monster came to save a human.

“…And there’s something else I’m curious about.”

“Yeah, what is it?”

“Are you really going to become a priest of the Black Cloak?”

"suddenly…?"

“The mermaid I just met said something with that nuance.”

The mermaid clearly said, 'Black Cloak will be sad when you die.'

“Haven’t you chosen to become your own disciple?”

“I don’t think so….”

Chaisol tilted his head.

“I just want to do that!”

“You… If you summon the Black Cloak, be sure to call me. Okay?”

“Huh? Yeah, I told you before that I would do that. Trust me.”

“I can’t believe it.”

Iruda really liked this cheerfulness of Chae Sol, but it was a different story if there was a problem with her personal life.

'Chae Sol isn't the type of person to think about other things later, but... sometimes he acts before he thinks, and it makes the onlookers' hearts sink.'

Hogu's talent was so strong that he had to protect Chae Sol.

“Ah, Sakshin….”

“What is a sack?”

“The muscles and bones in the body.”

“Why are you calling that?”

“It meant that my whole body hurt.”

“Oh….”

“…….”

Unlike Chae Sol, who was acting as usual, Iru Da was on the verge of venting her anger.

‘… these bastards dare.’

Are you leaving me and Chae Sol behind?

I never imagined that I would get stabbed in the back of the head by a human and receive help from a monster.

'I don't know why the mermaid helped us in the first place, but if this is the result of Chaisol's crazy friendliness... it's truly a miracle that we're safe like this.'

Even the monsters, who were obviously displeased with the fact that humans had helped them, were clearly laughing at the sight of the Sun Cult returning.

'Even I would laugh at that.'

The Solar Church is not just some ordinary religious cult. It is a huge religious sect that represents Seoul. Even though they are busy with the A-class dungeon, they manage their prospective priests in this way.

“…….”

No, even this could be part of political maneuvering.

“…Like a dog….”

“Why are you like a dog?”

“You shouldn’t say things like that because I was wrong.”

“You’re telling me not to swear, right? Okay. But really, why?”

“No matter how much I think about it, I feel like I was too complacent.”

There was no guarantee that the religious world would be clean and pure. Rather, modern priests with blind and arrogant faith developed a more political side in a closed environment.

'I was clearly warned by my mother, but it's pathetic that things have come to this.'

There were two ways to gain power in the religious world: either to be loved by the divine, or to be politically successful. Otherwise, it was difficult to even gain a voice.

'I guess I'm not the only one who knows how to use my head.'

A priest who simply has talent without any of this or that can easily wither away under strict guard. It was even worse during the pre-priest period when he was still immature in many ways. He should have overcome that well.

“To try to kill my spirit like this….”

“Who is scared?”

“I think our classmates are determined to kill our spirit.”

Iruda then laughed in vain.

“No, to be exact, I think he was targeting me.”

Chaisol is basically a person who is not hated by people, and objectively speaking, he is very cooperative. At first glance, he even has the appearance of a pushover, so there was no need to keep him in check and build up ill feelings with him.

But he was held in check along with her just because they were a pair.

“What exactly did they do… Did they bribe the priests? Or maybe they simply cooperated to steal the attention of the teachers. Our pair are students who are usually out of reach….”

“Could you summarize it for me?”

“I’m not good at summarizing this either.”

Even though he was a mature young man, he was still only a trainee priest. He had heard a lot and knew a lot, but he had no experience. He was aware that he was hated by his peers, but this was unexpected.

That's literally crossing the line.

“…….”

“…Would you like to start with treatment first?”

“Okay then.”

Iruda didn't ask, "Do you regret being paired with me?" Chae Sol wasn't the type of person to regret something like that. But she couldn't help feeling sorry towards her precious natural monument.

'If it weren't for me and the pair, this wouldn't have been so difficult. No, if only I had been a little more aware of my surroundings and behaved a little better...'

No matter how I think about it, this was an intelligent project. It seemed like a few smart people got together and planned it while the church was in disarray due to the dungeon development. Or maybe one person made up their mind and got support.

'Otherwise, things wouldn't have turned out like this.'

This was not a sect that would leave its precious reserve priests until they were badly injured by monsters and rendered incapacitated for battle. At least, that was the case with the Sun Cult she knew. And yet, it had come to this… .

As expected, the priest who came to see the two late was furious.

“W, what the heck is going on…! Are you okay?!”

“Suddenly, the other team members left our pair. So….”

“No, I clearly took action…? Why haven’t I heard anything…?”

Before the training, the chaplain said, 'You will go in alone without our help,' but, yes, that couldn't have been true. It seemed like he had taken magical measures to contact the priests if there was a problem.

'But if things turned out like this, then someone must have been bribed or someone must have spent a lot of money.'

Among the prospective priests, there were some children from poor families like Carnation Ai, but there were also many children like Iruda who lived in the city and had first-class citizenship. Since they grew up in an environment with many connections to hunters and the religious order, they would have a wide range of areas in which they could act.

'Even so, this was too much.'

The guy who did this probably wanted to suffer a fatal blow and took a huge loss. Even so, it wasn't something that could be easily overlooked.

As if he had realized the seriousness of the situation, the accompanying priest also hardened his expression.

“This incident is my fault and the fault of the church. I would like to contact the guardians and offer an apology and compensation, but this part… Uh… Can we talk about this after the two brothers and sisters have finished their treatment?”

“Yes, I will do that.”

“I am truly ashamed. I apologize again. I should have paid more attention since it was a training session for the novice priests. I was watching other children, but these precious people… No, I am sorry. Let’s go straight to the treatment room.”

The priest in charge hurriedly moved the two to the treatment room, perhaps because he didn't want to keep talking nonsense in front of the children. And then he saw Iruda.

“…….”

“…….”

One of their classmates glared at them with a very displeased expression.

‘… That kid?’

Iru vowed revenge.

* * *

Hallway meeting after returning from Jeju Island.

“…Do things really turn out that way?”

Yoo Seong-woon laughed awkwardly at Joo-hyun's words.

“The politics of the religious world are quite fierce.”

“But that must be the work of the prospective priests.”

“The younger you are, the more people there are who take advantage of your clumsiness.”

There had always been a war of wits between priests, but even considering that, this incident was quite big. Kang Seo-dam, who had been preoccupied with the development of a Class A dungeon, belatedly learned of the situation and contacted Yoo Seong-woon.

He said, looking at Geo.

“Father Kang Seo-dam said he was truly sorry to you. He said that he was sorry to the people involved in this incident, and that he was making excuses about being busy and not caring about the class he was managing, which is why this happened….”

Above all, Chaisol wanted to become the priest of the Black Cloak, and the Black Cloak also thought Chaisol cute. It was a wise decision to bow down beforehand in order to avoid incurring the wrath of the divine.

“He said he would gladly accept the punishment.”

“Why do I punish you?”

“I’ll tell you that.”

At that point, Joohyun asked again.

“I asked this before, but does it usually… happen like that?”

"huh?"

“Isn’t it that someone broke the device that could have protected the minimum safety of the prospective priests? Even though it was a training session without a guide, there must have been quite a few people watching from the rear. If it was to that extent, it seems like it would have needed the help of an adult rather than the child’s own work….”

“Aha, that part.”

“The incident is too big to be said to have been committed simply because of hatred for the person involved.”

“That’s true, but….”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“Isn’t that how the world is?”

For a single grain of power, people of all ages and genders would trample on others. This was because the world believed that only by living so viciously and meanly could they protect what was theirs, and that this was also how they were wise.

“What are you talking about all of a sudden?”

“… Well, that’s not something I should be saying, since I’ve fallen into politics.”

“But it is true that it was a rather bold measure for someone of his age.”

“I think there might be more to the story that we don’t know about….”

“There’s no way I could know all the conspiracies in the world.”

“Eventually, the word conspiracy came out.”

“You could call it a ruse.”

Geo nodded.

“I definitely feel like I’m being hated by my other friends.”

“Who? Oh, the prospective priest named Iruda?”

“Yes, I had a few similar situations when I was young.”

Giovanni also knew well the blindness of the priest. He had been not only injured, but also consumed poison that burned his internal organs, was pushed off a cliff, and was falsely accused of being an evil demon.

There were various reasons why they did such a thing. They didn't want to see him show off. They wanted to kill his spirit and make him docile so that they could use him. They wanted to eliminate Giovanni in advance, who would inevitably rise to a high position.

“This case must have had the same context.”

“There are people who claim to worship God….”

“There were times when it was internal turmoil, and times when we joined hands with the outside world. I wonder what it will be like this time.”

“Was there some other big conspiracy?”

“Well, it’s not really a grand conspiracy….”

Geo tilted his head.

“It might have been a tantrum.”

“What kind of complaint is this so vicious?”

“That’s true.”

* * *

The red jewel of the lab became gloomy once again.

“Lord Sankalut…!”

“■….”

I wanted to go home, but it wasn't easy.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (191)

191

Episode 191

Sankalut, the god of suffering and blessing, was a typical evil god who was subdued when the gate to Earth was opened.

But basically, the subjugation of the divine meant sealing. No matter how clumsy the god is, a divine is a divine. Even if they are of equal rank, it is difficult for divine beings to harm each other, so how much more difficult would it be for mortals?

As a result, Sankalut was trapped in a research lab on Earth.

"■…."

There was no malice in it.

The evil divinity born of the hands of humans understood why the Earthlings had imprisoned him, but he never thought that his ways were wrong. That was the way he was made.

Sankalut gradually took over the lab with a pure desire to return to the old days.

"Ah, Lord Sankalut…."

"Please bless us."

"I hope for your salvation!"

People who were already mentally trapped easily accepted his salvation.

“■….”

Poor thing.

Sankalut wanted to return to his home again. There was a sense of security that could only be found in a familiar place. He also raised his children to start anew.

The laboratory was gradually dyed in the color of Sankalut. The process was extremely quiet and secretive.

“ ”

Sankalut knew that the master of ...

He eventually succeeded in bringing one of his research labs into his product. Sankalut scanned the surroundings while regularly receiving food from his children. However, the sprout of a cult leader who would put him back in his place did not appear easily.

“■”

And before it could even reach out to the lab, I found a human being called 'Joohyun'. That child's bowl was very wide and cozy. I wanted to hold it in my hands.

Sankalut knew how to make humans accept him easily.

“Yes, I see.”

“■….”

“That guy… Yes, I understand.”

“■….”

“I will do that.”

In order to narrow the vision of a broad human being, it was necessary to show the limitations of the species. When the best human beings are disappointed by their fellow human beings, they accept faith gently. That is how Sankalut learned.

I tried to do the same to 'Joohyun'.

“……?”

But it failed.

It was so sudden. Something so big had intercepted 'Joohyun'.

Sankalut was saddened by the passing of the good sprout, but he could not help it. The divinity bowed down to a greater and more splendid divinity.

Sankalut, who had lost his precious vessel, broadened his perspective a little. Since it was so difficult to find a decent jewel in a dust pit, he decided to dig for jewels in a gold mine from the beginning.

“■….”

It was extremely difficult to avoid the gaze of the other divinities and aim for the sprouts of their vision, but in the most chaotic place, Sankalut saw some very good sprouts. They were vessels called 'Chaisol' and 'Iruda'.

“■.”

Since one had already been in the arms of another divinity, Sankalut decided to take what was called 'Chaisol'. Now, apart from that, there was no sprout of a cult leader in this land that could safely contain Sankalut.

The vessel was huge and the age was young, so the possibilities were endless. Sankalut reached out before it was taken away again. He chose one of the lab's limbs who had a child in the arms of the sun. He finished preparing the materials.

“■….”

“Ah, this is….”

“■….”

“Thank you, Sankalut! This will be the greatest blessing for my child…!”

“■….”

“I will raise your child in the arms of the sun, please believe me!”

When it comes to making the best human beings disappointed in others, the most effective way is to make those they hold dear suffer at the hands of fellow humans, because they are insensitive to their own suffering.

He looked around. He had many friends and family. However, trapped in the arms of the sun, the closest thing he could see was the limbs of another deity called Iruda. Sankalut aimed for that.

“ ”

Such a background had already been created.

The precious sprout is rejected by the rotten sprout. Sankalut whispered to the child of the water tribe, and the young sprout who heard his whisper began to feel the anger and jealousy he had long harbored as pain.

It eventually succeeded in cornering 'Chaisol' and 'Iruda', but… .

“■”

No, not like this.

“■¿”

Who would have thought that Sky Blue, who hates humans, would help a human child?

“…■….”

Sankalut became gloomy. He was so unlucky.

It felt like a great destiny. After all, there were many divinities residing in this narrow land, and few coveted vessels, so it was inevitable that there would be fierce competition to embrace such vessels.

But it doesn't seem like it had no effect at all.

“ ”

If I back off like this, I don't know when I'll be able to return home.

“ ”

Little 'Iruda' harbored a desire for revenge, and her own children were still suffering from jealousy. It wouldn't take long for the fragile heart of the vessel to be broken.

Above all, the distrust of 'Chaisol' has already begun.

Sankalut opened his mouth and whispered.

* * *

He was seriously injured while doing it.

“…….”

Chaisol looked at her unconscious friend.

“Rudaya….”

“…….”

"make."

I was a little upset.

“What if you’re the only one sick and I’m not there?”

The partners that the church gave us were said to be a community of shared destiny, so last time I was able to endure the sadness, but this time it wasn't the case.

Chae Sol leaned against the bed where Iruda was lying and wiggled her fingers. She poked Iruda's hand, which was covered in calluses, and then gently grabbed it.

“…….”

It was full of wounds.

“This makes me sad.”

It was said that Iruda, who had found out the circumstances of the last individual training incident, had a fight with the instigator. And that too in another training dungeon. They were angry and fought together, but Iruda was the only one who lost consciousness.

Because the mastermind had collaborated with other friends in a lethal way. Because he had borrowed the power of a terrible tool with the help of his parents. Chae Sol really hated that.

'You smile so much at me, but you treat Ruda so badly.'

Chae Sol knew that too. He seemed easy and Ruda seemed different, so he attacked the difficult one first. I guess he thought that I didn't cooperate because of Ruda.

'You're stupid.'

I just didn't hold her hand because I didn't like her.

"……."

I hated everyone a little bit.

It would have been better if Iruda had been a little more calm. It would have been better if the instigator had not been so greedy in the first place. It would have been better if the adults had paid more attention to the prospective priests.

'Then we wouldn't have gotten hurt like this.'

No, if I had been a better partner, maybe this situation could have been avoided.

"…What should I do…."

I'm starting to hate this huge white house.

'I miss you, hyung. And you too…'

I thought of my family who loved me the most. This house, where so many fatal things happen, was also happy thanks to Iruda who gave me so much love, but now even that was burdensome. I felt frustrated and sad.

'I just want to go back home.'

In the winter, the cold wind blows in, in the rainy season, the rain leaks in, and even though I couldn't eat every day, I missed the noisy meals I used to have with my family. I also missed my friends in the village.

“…Why, everyone….”

Chaisol buried her face in the bed and mumbled.

“…Is it because I can’t hate that I’m impatient?”

I was scared.

'It's scary here, sis.'

People were all acting so lethally.

The villagers said that they were the same family even though they were born from different ships. They shared crops and food with each other, and they laughed happily even when a child who was not good at playing in the vacant lot joined in. It was a village where the sky was clearly visible.

But this wasn't the case. The building was so big that you couldn't see the sky, and you definitely had friends and neighbors, but they didn't look at each other, and they were so awkward that they were often ostracized, saying they weren't 'qualified' to play together.

'Why do you have to do that?'

The townspeople were busy gathering together, but this place was busy badmouthing and biting each other. If they didn't do that, they acted like they would die.

Maybe that was actually true, and that's why I ended up getting hurt like this.

“…Rudaya….”

I was depressed.

“I want to go home.”

I missed home.

“Home was better. It’s too scary here….”

"that's right."

“…….”

“Are you scared?”

Chaisol lifted her head from the bed and looked at Iruda, who had to have her eyes closed.

Why?

“I understand.”

It was strange.

Something in the shape of my friend comforted him. It reached out and took his hand.

“I want to go home too.”

"…at home?"

“Yeah, being stuck in a remote place is scary.”

"that's right."

“Should I let you out?”

“…….”

When Chaisol closed her mouth, 'Iruda' laughed.

“You’re more suspicious than I thought.”

“Who are you?”

“I want to be your friend.”

"friend?"

“We can help each other.”

“That may be the case, but….”

Chae Sol, who grew up receiving the teachings of her older brother and sister who said, "There are many scammers in the world, so if a stranger who talks strangely well approaches you, rely on a trustworthy adult," took out a piece of paper with scribbles on it from her bosom.

“I think we need to consult with a guardian first.”

"…huh?"

“You speak so well it’s suspicious.”

The paper that Chaisol took out was one on which a black cloak had been drawn before.

“Brother Geo, save me!”

In that way, Chae Sol and Iru were sucked into the painting.

* * *

"too bad!!"

The piece of Sankalut that had borrowed Iruda's body began to cry.

“I was the one who started talking, so why are you asking another brother for help?!”

“As I said before, you speak too well, it’s suspicious!”

“I haven’t even said half of what I need to say yet, because you brought in another divinity!!”

“Then I did well, because I asked for help before you got possessed by half of half of your class!!”

“I was trying to help, so why did you call another adult…!!”

In the house that had suddenly become noisy, the mermaid Isser smiled bitterly.

“Teacher, can I kick them all out?”

“No way.”

Giovanni approached the two children with his characteristically cheerful smile.

“Student Chaisol, why did you call me?”

“He keeps flirting with me!”

"oh my god."

As Geo Sankalut approached, he hesitated.

“…I, last time… last time that…!”

“It’s the jewel that was used to seduce Joohyun before.”

“Why do you keep intercepting every bowl I choose?!”

“I didn’t intercept it.”

Giovanni declared proudly.

“If a great divinity is present, people will gather around just by remaining still.”

“That, that…!”

“Bees also flock to flowers with lots of honey. In short, it’s because I’m better than you.”

“I worked hard too!”

“Oh, working hard is the basics. No matter how hard the flower blooms, isn’t it ultimately up to the bee that flies in to choose?”

“Ugh…!!”

Joo-Hyeon, who was sitting on the sofa sipping tea while the two deities were talking, thought.

'He's comparing himself to a flower.'

It was a tremendous confidence.

'Is this really a conversation between gods?'

Joo-hyun, who had come to talk to the mermaid before going into full-scale war, felt a strange sense of emptiness. It could be said to be a kind of resignation. Joo-hyun looked at Isser with his characteristically sincere smile.

“Would you like another drink?”

“Yes, this is my first time drinking this tea.”

“They said it was a flower that was obtained with the help of Geo-ssi in the dungeon he conquered.”

“I think the fresh scent is really nice.”

In such a warm conversation, Geo called Chaisol.

“Student Chaisol, would you like to go to them?”

“What about your brother?”

“I must have a conversation with this intruder.”

“Isn’t it dangerous?”

“It’s been a long time since I’ve had a conversation with a deity, so I’m excited.”

“Wow, who else have you talked to?”

“I’ll tell you later while we’re having tea together over there.”

“I’m sorry to disturb you when you have guests!”

“It’s quite special.”

Geo, who sent Chaisol to the side of the trustworthy Joohyun, saw Sankalut.

“Let us have our conversation.”

“Oh, are you going to get angry?”

“We are of equal divinity, so it is not appropriate to call us mixed.”

"lie…."

“You may think whatever you want.”

So Geo disappeared upstairs with Iruda.

“Oh.”

“Student Iruda won’t wake up.”

“I was sleeping originally.”

“Is that so?”

Soon, he returned with Iruda in his original state.

Chaisol asked with pure curiosity.

“Exorcism?”

“It was closer to a conquest through conversation.”

“Aha, I see.”

Joohyun thought about it.

'In this place, even evil spirits as small as Sankalut are treated as evil spirits.'

It was so unrealistic that I laughed.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (192)

192

Episode 192

“Is the original divinity a bit childish?”

“What is this?”

Yoo Seong-woon, who was waiting for Joo-hyun at home, asked with his signature smile.

“I guess you had a lot going on with the portrait today?”

Joo-hyun, who has a bold side in strange places, visited the portrait today. Unlike Aria, who is certain to be the instigator of the incident that will soon explode, he wanted to ask his younger brother Isser what he thinks.

“Why? What did Geo do again to deserve this reaction?”

“Sankalut visited Mr. Geo’s portrait.”

“Oh, I remember that name.”

Yoo Seong-un became serious.

“Why did the evil spirit suddenly appear?”

“Yes, I was also very surprised when the divine being who was supposed to be locked up in the lab suddenly appeared.”

“Is it right to just say ‘I was very surprised’? He’s the evil spirit who has a lot of connections with Joo Hyun.”

“I guess I should react a little more strongly, but I don’t know, what should I say about this….”

Joo-Hyeon, who had been mumbling, soon gave an answer.

“Because it doesn’t feel real.”

“Oh, then I understand.”

Yoo Seong-un quickly understood what he meant.

“Your brain hasn’t accepted reality yet.”

Yoo Seong-un placed a cup of warm coffee in front of Joo-hyun.

“First, drink this to wake up your brain.”

“I’m feeling a bit dazed right now, but I wonder what kind of trouble I’ll cause when I come to my senses.”

“Don’t worry, I was surprised too.”

Yoo Seong-woon, who was comforting Joo-hyun, asked.

“Do you feel like you have a desire for revenge?”

“…I thought about that part too….”

Joo-Hyeon, who had been thinking deeply, soon shook his head.

“Not really.”

“You’re colder than I expected.”

“I also find it surprising.”

“Did you decide that it was some kind of natural disaster?”

“Maybe so.”

Or maybe the situation at the time was so childish that he didn't even have the energy to get angry. He wasn't sure. If I were to describe his current state, the word "bewildered" would be more appropriate.

“I felt like I got slapped while I was sleeping soundly….”

“I don’t think there’s any resentment.”

“I do resent it. I know that mere human resentment is just a snack for the evil spirits, but even so… I perceive it as a divine being who harmed my family and friends.”

“I guess so.”

Although Geo never said anything explicitly, both Ju-hyeon and Yoo Seong-un assumed that the previous tragedy was a plot by Sankalut. And they never took any further action.

Joohyun fiddled with her coffee cup.

“Thanks to Mr. Geo, I think I can be more calm.”

He has already properly buried what happened back then and has come to this point.

“I think it was because Geo-ssi responded so calmly to that sudden meeting that things didn’t get any more serious. I wasn’t even the topic of conversation, so….”

“Yeah, in the first place, why did that evil spirit called Sankalut come to Geo’s portrait? Was it because he wanted to have a showdown with Geo? There’s also the mermaid thing, so it’s a headache.”

When asked about the part that he cannot ignore as a curator, Joo-Hyeon made an awkward expression.

“He, rather than saying he came of his own volition….”

“Could it be that you were dragged here?”

“In my opinion, yes.”

“How on earth did that happen…?”

Even the weakest and most foolish evil spirits can perform many miracles as long as they have divinity. Sankalut, who was worshipped by a planet, would not be an easy opponent, but I didn't quite understand.

Joohyun asked him.

“Do you remember student Chaisol?”

“Geo is a very caring child.”

“It seems like he got scolded by Mr. Geo for talking to that kid.”

“Even if you say it like that, I still don’t understand.”

“I was dragged here, possessed by the body of a child named Iruda.”

"…therefore…."

Yoo Seong-un roughly guessed the situation.

“…In order to do something to Chaisol, he possessed the body of his partner, Iruda, and tried to do something, but for some reason, Chaisol and Iruda’s bodies were dragged into Geo’s portrait, and does that mean that Sankalut’s plan was thwarted?”

“I understand you well.”

“It looks like another strange incident almost happened without me knowing.”

“It seems like an extension of what happened to me.”

“That’s… definitely true.”

Yoo Seong-un, who was familiar with the work of the Source Being, figured out Sankalut's trick.

“It seems like you want a new beginning.”

“I thought it was sealed now, but if that’s true….”

“I think there’s a problem with the lab’s seal.”

“Otherwise, there would be no way that Sankalut could reach the children of the Sun Church.”

“We need to formally protest this to the Solar Church’s research institute.”

“Since it’s related to Mr. Geo, I will contact him separately. Since I met Father Kang Seo-dam last time, I’m sure he won’t ignore my contact.”

“He’s a flexible priest, so he’ll handle it well.”

If they had overlooked it and passed it by, it could have been a big incident, but since Geo had prevented it in advance, it wasn't something for humans to worry about. As long as they handled the aftermath appropriately, the rest would be fine.

Yoo Seong-un observed Joo-hyun's complexion.

“But is it really okay?”

“…I don’t know.”

“…I think it would be better to talk again later when I have gathered my thoughts.”

He changed the subject skillfully.

“How did Isser react? Did he meet you?”

“Yes. Whether it was because Mr. Geo called, or because he was interested in something else, or for some other reason… he complied with my request more readily than I expected.”

“What is your opinion on this matter?”

“I agree with what Aria is doing.”

“I thought it would turn out that way, but….”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“I’m glad you came back safely after the conversation.”

“I didn’t expect any problems to arise as long as Mr. Geo was there, but we’ve had much more cooperative conversations than that.”

“I was worried because Joohyun was so brave.”

“I’m sorry I made you feel uneasy.”

“It’s so strange to lose your fear in such a strange place.”

“Still, I couldn’t help but listen to your opinion. Of course, I will never be the one to start the war between the mermaids, but we are friends anyway.”

Aria expressed her opinion sufficiently, but Isser did not. Joohyun was worried about that, and Isser told him his position and opinion. Joohyun was satisfied with that.

“I know it’s not something I, an unawakened person, should worry about.”

“Thanks to that, we were able to solidify each other’s positions, so it wasn’t a bad thing in the end.”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“Still, you better be careful, Joohyun doesn’t have much means to protect himself.”

“I’ll be more careful in the future.”

“I’m sorry I nag you so much.”

“I know you were worried.”

“Yeah, well, if you think about it that way….”

Yoo Seong-un, whose voice trailed off, sipped his coffee.

“…Any other information?”

“I heard that things will start to happen in about a month.”

“Isn’t it possible that it’s a lie? After all, it was something he said in front of Geo.”

“Mr. Geo didn’t say anything either, so I think he’s being sincere.”

“What a strange method.”

This is what you call the core of a storm.

'Absolutely not, it's peaceful.'

It was a world that had gone absolutely crazy.

* * *

Isserdo returned to the sea, and all that remained in the portrait were Chaisol and the sleeping Iruda.

“Have you calmed down a little?”

“Hyun-uh….”

“That didn’t work out, I knew it.”

“I’m so sad.”

“You still have a great vocabulary.”

It was a great feat for her to be able to express her feelings so skillfully in words at such a young age.

“What were you so sad about?”

“People are cruel.”

“The world these days is really scary for me too.”

“Did you do that too, hyung?”

“Of course.”

It was more than Chaisol, not less. Sergio was an old-time modern man who remembered the time before the great disaster when public order was maintained to some extent.

“The Earth of the past was not as openly dangerous as it is now.”

“The old Earth?”

“I’m talking about the Earth before the catastrophe.”

“How do you know that time? Wasn’t it a very long time ago?”

“It doesn’t seem like it’s been that long….”

Wasn't that something that happened less than 100 years ago?

“Is that why you were sad, student Chaisol? Because people were cruel to you?”

“It’s so scary. It wasn’t like that in our town, but city people are cold-hearted….”

“I can sympathize with you on that point too.”

Having lived in a kind-hearted mountain village in Gangwon Province and moved to Seoul, Geo also understood Chae Sol’s feelings. Of course, the public sentiment back then wasn’t as vicious as it is now, but it felt roughly the same.

“So you started hating people?”

Chae Sol pursed his lips at Geo's question.

“…A little.”

“It’s so disgusting to see you hate each other so much.”

“I think so. I hope not.”

“But no matter what dimension you look at, humans hate each other.”

“…I don’t like that….”

“Student Chaisol is like me.”

The way of thinking was unique.

“It’s hard to hate easily, so when I see people casually slandering each other, I can’t understand. That’s how they start to feel distant from each other, and eventually they grow apart.”

“…What did you do, hyung?”

“I failed.”

In no case of Geo did people treat him with kindness. They idolized him or treated him as an object of fear. Geo could not bear to ignore that and approach him.

Because that's what they wanted.

“But student Chae Sol is different from me in that regard.”

Chaisol was very friendly.

“It has good stickiness.”

“But what if I live like this and become too distant and start to hate people? Even now, I want to run away to the village….”

“It seems like he wants to rest rather than run away. Chae Sol loves the family of the Sun Church more than he thinks.”

“Do you hate people, hyung?”

“I don’t hate you.”

Basically, that kind of thinking just doesn't work.

“Because I understand them.”

“What do you understand?”

“Why have you become so evil and vile, why are you throwing a tantrum, why are you crying….”

I understood all those things.

“Do you know what I mean?”

“…Are you feeling sorry for me?”

“You understand correctly.”

Geo felt sorry for the people.

“Poor people.”

These are people who end their lives in pain, suffering from worries and anguish throughout their lives.

“What do you think, Chaisol?”

“It was me and Ruda who got hurt….”

“Oh, I’m not forcing my thoughts on you. I was just asking.”

“…I don’t know what I want to do or how I want to do it.”

“That is a truly sweet answer.”

Unlike the horse, Chaisol chose development rather than running away and avoiding.

“Do you want to be angry?”

“A little bit.”

“Do you want the mastermind behind this to die?”

“No, that’s not it.”

“Do you want to live your whole life in pain?”

“That’s not it….”

“Then you want me to reflect and repent?”

“…Should I say sorry?”

“There are many choices.”

Anything could be done as long as it wasn't buried.

“You can either simply submit to fate and wait for the sinner to repent, or you can help him do so by being there to scold him.”

“I don’t know if I can help you. Ruda, or any of my friends….”

“You seem to lack confidence in yourself.”

“I’m not a god who can do anything. I can try as hard as I can, but what if I end up making things worse?”

“Then another path will be revealed.”

“I’m scared of going down a path I don’t know.”

Chaisol, who had been hesitating, extended his hand.

“Can you help me?”

“How may I help you?”

“Please hug me.”

“It’s not difficult.”

Giovanni hugged the little priest gently, and only then did Chaisole smile as usual.

“…I feel like I have courage.”

“That’s a good thing.”

Chaisol, who had fallen away from him, asked.

“How do I become your brother’s priest?”

“You just have to be my friend.”

“Then be my friend.”

“It’s a happy day….”

Giovanni lightly swept Chaisole's forehead with his thumb.

“Your soul will always remain warm.”

A warm feeling seeped into his forehead.

* * *

“I did it!”

“…What, what is it?”

“Ruda, does anything hurt?”

“What is it, Chaisol, who are you?”

“I’m a healer now!”

“What are you?”

Iruda woke up again in the infirmary of the church and grabbed Chaisol's shoulder while shivering.

“Why do I feel the weight of divinity in you?”

“I decided to be friends with Black Cloak!”

“I told you to consult me before doing anything…!!”

What on earth happened to this natural monument while I was unconscious?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (193)

193

Episode 193

The Divine Contract of Chaisol caused a stir among the elders of the Solar Church.

“Are you saying that the black cloak was divine?”

“No, but in the association….”

“Well, they’re not authors you can trust.”

“How on earth did this happen…?”

The play of the divine being disguised as a monster has already been reported several times. Furthermore, since Chae Sol had directly shown the connection to the divine being, it was impossible to deny the proposition that 'the black cloak is the divine being.'

But the doubts continued to grow.

“Then what on earth is the identity of the black cloak?”

“Shouldn’t we investigate that priest-to-be named Chaisol a little more?”

“This is a child who has just made a contract with the Divine. If the connection is tangled or broken, he may suffer damage, so it is right to leave him alone so that he can find stability.”

“But if the Black Cloak is an evil deity, it would be right to cut the connection in advance.”

“Even that hasn’t been decided yet, has it?”

And most priests, although confused, were not that worried.

“More than anything, student Chae Sol’s position has become a healer….”

“If it were a truly evil deity, would it have granted the power of healing and regeneration?”

“The evil gods hate providence, so the divinity that made a contract with Chaisol cannot be evil.”

“I checked it several times, but I didn’t feel any dangerous aura.”

Why would healers be treated as nobles in the first place? It's because there are so few of them and it's hard to learn. What could be the reason? The power of recovery and regeneration that most of them possess comes from a miracle of providence.

“A traitor cannot give the power of healing.”

“Traitor, even if you are an evil deity, please refrain from making rash remarks.”

“It’s just the context.”

What evil spirit would help heal humans?

“I checked to see if it was a trick of the evil spirit, but there was no defect in student Iruda that student Chaisol had healed. There was no mental confusion, no physical problems, so isn’t it a complete recovery?”

It would be right to assume that the power that Black Cloak lent was not malicious.

“And the evil deity will show its malice in some way. The fact that there is no abnormality despite all this examination proves the goodness of the being called the Black Cloak.”

“That makes sense, but we can’t be sure of anything yet. It would be safer to take some more time and watch the situation. For the time being, let’s exclude students Chaisol and Iruda from the internship.”

“If we confine ourselves to the church too much, the divinity that made the contract with Chaisol might be displeased.”

“But there’s nothing we can do about it. If by any chance the Black Cloak turns out to be an evil deity, what are we going to do about the aftermath? You all know what happens to a priest possessed by an evil spirit, right?”

“Hey, what if Father Kang hears this…?”

Their confusion gradually calmed down.

“If we can determine that the divine being who embraces student Chaisol is truly the Black Cloak and that the mystery is not evil, then there is no problem. There is no need for us to be anxious among ourselves.”

“That's true.”

The catechumens were literally only catechumens, not full priests of the sun. The catechumens who had not yet entered into a contract could serve any other divinity. That was the custom of the current religious world.

“This is a story I heard separately, but I heard that you can feel the energy of the sun from Chaisol….”

“…The sun? Isn’t there something I misunderstood?”

“It’s not just one person who says this, they said they felt a warm feeling.”

“It could simply be a divinity related to heat….”

“Come to think of it, isn’t there no one who knows the Black Cloak’s true name?”

“What kind of deity did student Chaisol sign a contract with?”

The Black Cloak, who had already established himself as a native monster of Korea. He was famous for denying evil, affirming good, and giving gifts to special people. The number of priests who thought he was an evil spirit gradually decreased.

Eventually, the priests gently coaxed Chaisol to find out his true identity.

“Uh, that… I’m not sure either.”

“I want to get some clues, even if they are vague. It could be a dangerous deity….”

“I don’t think it’ll be dangerous. I mean, the sun… I think it’s something similar.”

“…The sun, is it something similar?”

“He said he gave me sunshine.”

“Aha, I see.”

The priests were very happy when they heard the news.

“Even though she is not the goddess we worship, she is another sun. Doesn’t that mean our family has grown?”

“No, but when I think of the image of the black cloak, it doesn’t seem like the sun at all….”

“Isn’t it literally a being wearing a black cloak? No one knows what’s inside it.”

“There are some doubts, but it is certain that it is a being that has a great connection with the sun. Even Iruda Yang, who is famous for feeling the pressure of the divine, did not deny the fact about the warmth.”

“Then it would be difficult to judge it as an evil deity.”

At that point, another priest had another question.

“I heard that student Chaisol called a person named ‘Geo’ right before signing the contract.”

“…Geo? Are you talking about Sergio Hunter?”

“One of the priests-to-be in the same infirmary fell asleep, but it is not certain….”

“I think I need to check this out.”

And Chaisol obediently agreed.

“I called Brother Geo.”

“Are you talking about Sergio Hunter?”

“Yes, please help me….”

It was already a well-known fact that Sankalut, one of the evil spirits sealed in the association's research institute, had taken advantage of the chaos to reach out to the Sun Cult. The priest of the Sun Cult, who was in the middle of taking action against him, coughed in embarrassment.

“Ahem, that… I apologize again for that part.”

“I already received the apology?”

“Because of our negligence, the evil spirit reached out to student Chaisol.”

“It’s okay because Geo hyung helped me!”

“…Wasn’t it the Black Cloak that helped you shake off that evil spirit?”

“Oh, that’s true, but….”

Chae Sol, who was worried that he might not be able to organize his thoughts, answered with difficulty.

“They both helped.”

“What that means is….”

The priest concluded.

“…It means that the power that Sergio Hunter possesses is the same as that of student Chaisol.”

The priests of the Sun Church realized something that was not so surprising.

“Oh, right, the deity Sergio Hunter served was Black Cloak….”

“I think I know why you never told me about the existence of the Divine before.”

“It would be difficult to say that we worship a deity that is treated as a monster.”

“Even if that’s not the case, isn’t it possible that acting as a monster is Black Cloak’s amusement?”

“Is it that the Divine itself did not want it revealed…?”

“I don’t know if it’s a coincidence, but wasn’t Sergio Hunter’s position also a healer?”

“I feel like I finally understand it.”

The priests each nodded their heads.

“In the previous dungeon raid, it was clear that Hunter Sergio received the herb from the divinity….”

“Isn’t Black Cloak famous for giving gifts to good people he likes?”

“Then is giving gifts just a trait of the Black Cloak? Since ordinary citizens can receive gifts as well, the hypothesis that Sergio Hunter is a saint is….”

“Even taking that into account, I don’t think Sergio Hunter’s vessel can be compared to that of an ordinary person.”

“Yes, the size of the gift received is different. When I listened to the story, I heard that he also heard the intentions of the god he served directly….”

“If this is true, it will be a great success for the Solar Church.”

It was very difficult to witness the power of providence in this world. Traditional gods, to put it nicely, loved nature as it was, and to put it badly, were very lazy. They rarely intervened in human society.

“Why did Sergio Hunter and Black Cloak act so similarly…?”

“Huh? Were the two that similar?”

“I thought they were strangely similar. Sergio Hunter also likes to give gifts to others, especially when those gifts are full of food.”

“Ahaha, you really do care a lot about pleasing others.”

“They say you can’t just sit by and watch a hungry person.”

“They say that the gifts given by Black Cloak are mostly snacks that can be eaten. When I see them so similar, I wonder if they are truly the vessels of an adult….”

And the Solar Church came to a new conclusion.

“Wouldn’t it be better to build a closer relationship with Sergio Hunter?”

“Well, even though his awakening was different, he is definitely a person fit for a priest with that level of talent….”

“There is no Korean who worships a deity related to the sun who does not come to our church.”

“It wouldn’t be such a disappointing story for Sergio Hunter either.”

“Of course, since we are becoming friendly with the Solar Church, wouldn’t they be happy about it?”

The only one who was disturbed by such noise was Kang Seo-dam.

“…….”

The religious world is like a swamp.

'This is truly a den of bugs.'

It was so disgusting.

It was disillusioning that I had gone on an A-class dungeon exploration before I had even recovered from the damage I had received from the 'Deep Sea Kingdom' incident last winter, that the evil spirits had infiltrated the dungeon while I was developing it, and that I was too greedy even in the current situation where I was still recovering from the aftermath.

'How can you be this greedy?'

I'm just making a big deal out of it when I should be reflecting on my mistakes and focusing on recovering. The result was just barely good, so no major problems arose and it passed amicably. If it hadn't been for that, we would have been blushing.

Kang Seodam had no face to face with his students. He sighed deeply and eventually went to find Chae Sol and Iru Da.

“Student Chaisol.”

“Yes, sir!”

“And then Iruda student.”

“Yes, I will listen.”

“I am sorry to both of you.”

Kang Seodam was only one of the teachers who educated the prospective priests, but he had a lot of responsibility to bear. He failed to properly protect his students, which led to this situation.

“Have you had sufficient conversations with your guardians?”

Chaisol nodded.

“My brother and sister said they wanted me to do whatever I wanted.”

“My mother said the same thing. She also said she was looking forward to your future response….”

Kang Seo-dam also nodded his head.

“Of course. This incident was a huge mistake on our part, so you don’t need to worry about it. Please recover and then go your own way.”

“What path can you take?”

“Since you both worship our Sun Goddess and other divinities, you can stop your education right now and find another path. I can even help you graduate early.”

Before Chae Sol could ask anything, Iruda grabbed her partner's hand and said.

“Even if you want to find another sect or guild, it would be better to get an official priest’s ID. Of course, I respect your opinion, but since things have come to this, the guys who have been bothering us will probably quiet down.”

“Sister Iruda’s words also make sense. The main students who were making the atmosphere bad have already been expelled from the church, and the priests here have no choice but to watch out for you if you are at fault.”

“As Professor Kang Seo-dam said, you may have fallen out of love with this place… but now we have the upper hand. Our peers will be watching us closely, and we have a reason to demand more benefits from the school.”

Chae Sol said to him.

“Summary….”

“There’s more to eat if you stay here.”

“Am I the only one who’s stupid? No…?”

“…I, I originally, um, I heard a lot that I was precocious. It’s not that you’re weird.”

Although Chae Sol, who came from the countryside, has a strong innocent side, Iru hopes that Chae Sol does not consider that trait as a weakness.

Thanks to Iruda's encouragement, Chaisol quickly recovered.

“Okay then.”

“This is just my opinion, I want to hear what you want to do.”

“I want to continue to be with Ruda. I like the teacher too.”

“Then let’s try to graduate early. It won’t be difficult for us.”

“If I graduate quickly, at what age will I become a full-fledged priest?”

Kang Seo-dam answered that part.

“Depending on the circumstances, it is possible to complete the course in as little as three years.”

“Oh my god, really?”

“The number of internships will increase and you will be busy in many ways, but… if you can handle it, maybe.”

“Then I want to graduate quickly!”

So when two young priests dream of early graduation.

The Earth's oceans were surging from the depths.

* * *

“Let me get to the point.”

Aria asked politely.

“Would you like to be kidnapped?”

"oh."

Geo was amazed by the novel suggestion.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (194)

194

Episode 194

“So what did you say…?”

To Yoo Seong-un's trembling question, Geo answered calmly even though his shoulders were grabbed.

“Of course I declined.”

“I’m so glad that I have common sense to the point where I can take it for granted….”

“How were you looking at me?”

“If you think it’s interesting, just buy it and look at it.”

“It’s not entirely wrong, but it’s unfair.”

Geo also had some common symbols like that.

“Who in the world enjoys being kidnapped?”

“Maybe so, there are too many crazy people in this world.”

“If you put it that way, I have nothing to say, but I don’t think I’m that crazy.”

“I can’t help but feel reassured when you say that.”

Only then did Yoo Seong-un take a deep breath and remove his hand from Geo's shoulder.

“Those mermaid friends are really unique. Do they usually ask the person involved before kidnapping them?”

“They’re not the kind of friends I usually have a relationship with.”

“Why did you say you wanted to kidnap me in the first place?”

“They didn’t give me any details about that part.”

“You don’t have any other guesses?”

“I guess I don’t want to get directly involved in this fight.”

Although he had blond hair and blue eyes, Geo continued speaking with his characteristically blunt expression.

“This is not my fight.”

“It’s not your fight?”

“I’ve never been involved with the mermaid incident.”

“If I say that, wouldn’t there be a lot of people who would think it’s absurd?”

“Strictly speaking, my relationship with the mermaid disciples ended on the ocean planet.”

It was a relationship that ended with the death of 'Giovanni'.

“To put it simply, I am now a spin-off of a certain story. The mermaids began to despise humans after Giovanni’s death, and so they have been destroying many planets, and Earth is no different.”

However, the story was briefly interrupted here by the encounter with ‘Geo’s Portrait’.

“They seem to be taking responsibility by doing the same thing they have been doing all along.”

“So you’re trying to exclude you from this fight? Because if you get involved, their responsibility will be obscured?”

“Or maybe they just wanted to kidnap me once.”

“What are you trying to say when you say it so refreshingly…?”

“I don’t think it was a very refreshing tone. Your voice is shaking, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“Do you look like you’re not nervous?”

The precious source that I would not mind putting in my eyes was almost kidnapped by the scoundrels in the sea. Even though I knew that such an act would not harm Geo, I couldn't help but feel uneasy.

“I’m already upset because the sea has been so chaotic lately.”

“Is the sea very noisy?”

“It seems that those mermaids can influence the sea. I felt large and small vibrations in the deep sea, and upon investigating, I confirmed that it was a giant native monster that had been sleeping and was moving.”

“Oh, should I be worried about a tsunami?”

“I guess I’ll have to prepare for that part too. Well, I’m not really close to the ocean….”

“I understand that you were often sent to sea for that kind of work.”

“It’s true that cold-type hunters have an advantage in the sea.”

At least you can save your own life.

“The east coast is really noisy these days.”

“It was definitely on the side where the entrance to the ‘Deep Sea Country’ was.”

“I’ve relayed the Mermaids’ declaration of war to the guild master, so I’m sure other guilds are making rough preparations as well. Judging from the commotion at the Association and Justitia in particular, I think they’re preparing for possible casualties.”

“Did you declare that you will not conduct a separate attack?”

“Rather than a declaration… I think it’s closer to watching until the worst happens.”

I guess they were keeping an eye on this.

“The sea level has risen considerably. Since there aren’t many areas with human habitation along the coast anyway, it shouldn’t be difficult to prepare for it, but the question is what exactly the mermaids will do to the sea.”

Yoo Seong-un glanced at Geo.

“As your old teacher, do you have anything to say?”

“Well, my disciples at that time were still immature….”

I have never been able to move like I do now, completely immersed in the sea.

“However, mermaids are known to be children of the sea. To be exact, they are said to be children of the deep sea, and as such, they have various powers related to the sea.”

“What kind of power is it?”

“Becoming one with the sea.”

“I already have a headache.”

“Or change the ocean currents….”

“Are you crazy?”

If either of these two conditions were to be established, the lifeline of the Earth would be cut off. The planet Earth could be destroyed at any time by changes in ocean currents alone.

Geo rested his hand on his chin.

“Since the deep sea is said to be noisy, it is not unlikely that it will cause a tsunami. Basically, the sea is a place where natural disasters occur. It is very suitable for sweeping away many people.”

“Is it as easy as breathing?”

“That is not true. The seas of the Earth are not their family. No matter how hard the mermaids, who have not yet embraced divinity, try, they cannot catch a sea in an unfamiliar dimension like a mouse.”

"then?"

“It will take time. However, I don’t think it will take that long, considering the power they have accumulated over time. It seems like they have already prepared themselves mentally.”

“In short, it’s a fight against time.”

We had to strike first before the mermaids passed us by like the planets they had passed by.

“I need to quickly gather a strategy team.”

“Are the hunters gathering like the last time at the Four-legged Forest?”

“I don’t know how many guilds will participate because the risk is high in an unexpected situation and the rewards are unclear, but I don’t think they will be completely uncooperative.”

There was a special characteristic of Koreans.

“This country is characterized by fighting like crazy in normal times, but joining forces when a national disaster strikes….”

As Yoo Seong-un said, quite a few guilds have expressed their intention to participate.

Basically, guilds with high recognition had no choice but to participate, if only to be conscious of the public's attention. The Sun Church and the Moon Church in Seoul had already announced their intention to participate, and Justitia also declared that she would help save lives.

“The coastal area has already issued an evacuation notice.”

“They said Justitia is waiting over there.”

“I wish this commotion in the coastal area could somehow be quelled….”

“What about the residents’ reaction?”

“He said that, other than feeling anxious, there were no problems, perhaps because the association provided separate support.”

“If you have important items or someone you left behind, tell them to bring them in advance. If it gets any worse, it will be difficult to enter. Make sure there are no complaints later.”

“I have also obtained the development consent. Now it seems that we can tear down the house and build a defensive wall. Have we properly obtained the cooperation of the neighboring areas?”

It wasn't long ago that the chaos of the Great Disaster had passed.

Even the guilds with a long history and a high reputation had not yet been able to shake off their fear of dungeons, and they had been preparing with their minds sharp.

So, even if a sudden disaster like this occurred, we were able to deal with it quickly. We were grateful that the monsters themselves declared war.

“But by the way, why did that monster come and talk to me first?”

“I heard you spoke to the collectors who went on vacation to Jeju Island….”

“I heard that news too. I looked it up and found out that Sergio Hunter and Yoo Seong-un Hunter were previously dispatched to the ‘Deep Sea Country’ as part of a rescue team.”

“Did you get to know each other and announce it in advance? I really can’t read the minds of monsters….”

“Did you decide that these people were worth giving that level of warning to?”

Around that time, the story about 'Sergio Hunter' also came up.

“Will that hunter Sergio participate this time?”

“I haven’t received a clear answer from the collector yet, but I don’t think he’ll attend.”

“I heard you’re a hunter who really likes helping people, so it would be strange if you didn’t come.”

“I will participate unless the guild leader detains me.”

“No, why is the guild leader detaining a guild member…?”

“Haven’t you heard the rumor? I heard it was said that he was the blood of a Bisabal who was raised in captivity at a collector’s shop.”

“Let’s stop talking nonsense. Do you really need to say something controversial at a time like this? Are you going to fight with the collector?”

“I’m just trying to say something, you know. It’s kind of weird.”

And the collector also clearly expressed his intention to participate.

“Is Sergio Hunter also participating?”

“I thought it was the rear.”

“I guess there’s nothing I can do since I’m a trainer.”

“No, but I heard that they are fighting….”

“This guy? Are you going to put the trainer in front? Are you the devil?”

“No, really….”

“The position is also a healer, but would you really put a healer in front of the trainer unless you were really crazy?”

In this era, trainers and healers were basically in charge of rear support. This was because both were perceived as being weak.

Those who still did not know the exact information about 'Sergio Hunter' took it for granted that he was deployed in the rear. Those who knew the truth could not strongly refute that.

“Well, he is a trainer.”

“If you put a healer in front, you’re crazy.”

It was just the perception of the world itself. No matter how well they fought or not, they could not accept the fact that the rear positions were being set up in the front. Thanks to that, Geo was safely placed in the safe zone.

Argio seemed a little dissatisfied.

“…….”

“Mr. Geo, this is not your battlefield.”

Joo-hyun stopped by to check on Geo's condition before going to the safe zone and patted him. Geo nodded to his friend's words.

“I know.”

“Then why are you mumbling like this?”

“You haven’t even opened your mouth yet, what kind of nonsense are you talking about?”

“I can feel it all with my eyes.”

“You seem to know me too well, it’s uncomfortable.”

“I know you’re saying things that you don’t mean.”

Argio, who was 24 years old, was more of a grumbler than the other Geos. It must have been very humiliating for a personality who was used to running wild as they pleased to be tied up at the rear.

And then this good news arrived for Geo.

“S, It’s an attack…!! It’s an attack, all hunters who can fight, please come to your positions!!”

“What do you mean?! Even the coastal front hasn’t received any attack notifications yet!!”

“Monsters are emerging from the hail that falls from the sky, what on earth is going on…!!”

The hunters who had been on guard around the area urgently gathered the hunters who were able to move. The hunters who had gathered in the rear area each took out their weapons and equipment, and soon learned the meaning of the phrase, 'Monsters are emerging from the hail.'

“What the heck is this…!!”

As soon as I stepped out of the tent, I felt a cold, bitter wind, and through the strong wind, large and small hailstones fell to the ground. Crunch-!! The hailstones that fell with a loud noise soon melted and turned into bizarre monsters.

“S, slime…?!”

“Slime doesn’t look like that!!”

“What is that…! It’s horrible!!”

The monster, which seemed to be made of melted flesh, attacked people in a languid manner.

“Request support from all directions!!”

“Communication has been cut off, we have sent Hunters who can teleport urgently!”

“There weren’t any monsters in the sea, so how could there be monsters in the sky…!”

The battle continued, separate from the confused hunters.

“Oh my.”

Kwajik—…!!

Yoo Seong-un, who had stuck an ice spear into the monster, smiled awkwardly.

“This is really tricky.”

“Is this a surprise attack?”

“If it was a surprise attack, then it was a surprise attack. This is embarrassing, I forgot about the sky because I was so concerned about the sea….”

“I didn’t know that mermaids would attack like this.”

“Geo, how long can you hold out?”

Chook!!

Yoo Seong-un, who had pulled out the window, asked.

“What are the limits of your current body?”

“Not as much as when I’m at home.”

It was talking about when he was inside the portrait. Yoo Seong-un was convinced.

“There will be restrictions. Don’t push yourself too hard. If you get hurt, it will really break my heart.”

“It’s not like it’s going to tear, it was already planned?”

“That’s just how curators are. If there’s even the slightest flaw in what they do, they start to resent the world and shed tears of blood. Do you understand?”

“It’s unusual.”

“It’s unusual.”

But it was better than creating an irreversible situation.

“So I want you to be careful, okay?”

“I will keep that in mind.”

And as if they really had taken note, a few days later they heard that Geo had gone missing.

The sound of Yoo Seong-un lamenting the world echoed throughout the battlefield.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (195)

195

Episode 195

It wasn't just that Geo went off on a different path to satisfy his own selfish desires.

“…….”

No, that's something too.

'It's a prickly feeling to my conscience to insist that I'm innocent after causing this mess.'

Geo tried hard to ignore the surrounding scenery of monster remains.

Perhaps because he had not yet fully become one with 'Argio', there were times when his self as Argio felt separate from Giovanni. Geo wiped the blood off his face with an ambiguous expression.

“…Um, okay….”

“…….”

“Should I say it’s been a while?”

Giovanni smiled awkwardly as he looked at the mermaid standing in front of him.

“I didn’t know you would come to me like this.”

“I didn’t know you’d come all the way to this outskirts.”

“I followed my interest and ended up here.”

“Is that really all?”

“There are people left here, so how can I be the only one to step back?”

Geo tilted his head.

“You were aiming for that, right?”

It was hard to believe that the civilians and vulnerable rear-position hunters who should have been evacuated to this outskirts long ago were isolated by accident. The splendid monsters that had taken away Argio's vision were also likely the work of mermaids.

“Why did you call me here?”

“I understand you declined my sister’s invitation last time.”

“Can you accept being blatantly asked to be kidnapped?”

“Surely you don’t make sacrifices without a reason.”

Isser smiled faintly. It was a seemingly affectionate, emotionless smile.

“So I made up a reason.”

Isser pointed to the humans around him.

“It was injured.”

His speech was long and drawn out.

“It can’t move because its two legs are broken. It’s quite young even for a human. It’s probably not even 12 years old yet. It’s panicking, and it’s so disgusting that it can’t even understand what you say….”

“What is the main point?”

“I don’t think you don’t know.”

He rolled his eyes.

“Come to us.”

“That’s a very ambiguous expression.”

“You may agree to the kidnapping I proposed earlier, or you may join us completely.”

“Both seem like difficult propositions.”

Geo rubbed his chin. As if he were going to refuse, one of the isolated men shouted.

“Huh, Hunter…!!”

"oh."

“Please save me, I don’t want to die…! Please help me!!”

"okay."

As always, Giovanni smiled gently.

“I understand that feeling.”

Whether it was because of those words that gave them courage, or because they had been waiting for it, the people who had been keeping their mouths shut in fear began to cling to me one by one and beg me.

“Please save me….”

The sound got louder and louder.

“Please, Hunter…!”

“I don’t want to die!!”

“It hurts so much, please save me!!”

“Why are you so late!!”

“You should have come sooner, how many people have died!!”

“Please save me! You can do it…!!”

thud-!!!

The mermaid slammed the staff down.

“…….”

“…….”

The commotion died down as if a mouse had died, and Isser asked the still smiling priest.

“They are looking to you for salvation.”

“It seems to me that it is.”

“Don’t these humans who force sacrifices look as disgusting as insects?”

“He just looks so pitiful. He’s scared, of course.”

“You side with humanity until the end.”

The smile disappeared from Isser's face.

“If you won’t side with the deep sea, then come with your body.”

“Is this a threat?”

“You have found the answer well.”

The mermaid's eyes shone with a strange color, like the ripples of water.

“Before I can no longer tolerate my hatred towards humans.”

He held out his hand.

“…You should come this way.”

"otherwise?"

“It would be quicker for these humans to die than for me to die for you.”

“That could be the case.”

Geo could use quite a few means, but Yser wouldn't have been unaware of that. He must have come prepared enough, so even if he couldn't do it, he would be able to kill at least one person.

And Giovanni was a man who did not want even a single death to be allowed to be in vain.

'So what should we do now?'

He thought for a moment about the evil nature of the evil spirit.

“Well… there is also a way for me to ignore these poor people and fight.”

“No, you won’t. I know that.”

“Oh my god, this is impossible. I didn’t know I was such an obvious person.”

“Maybe you’re the only one who doesn’t know.”

"…okay."

Giovanni's smile crooked for the first time.

“It will be like that.”

“…….”

Isser did not answer.

Geo looked around. The eyes of the frightened people were filled with fear and resentment. The eyes of the ordinary people, who could not be called evil, were filled with acrid venom.

He knew those eyes.

“It must have been just one time.”

They were not evil people at all, so they would soon regret it if they got what was theirs back and had their leisure time back. Giovanni could not bear it because it was so pitiful and pitiful.

Why do these people walk the path of suffering on their own?

“Okay, I’ll go to the deep sea. What happens to me then?”

“…The Black Cloak will be locked up so that he can no longer protect the humans of this planet.”

“Is that how it feels?”

Giovanni smiled brightly.

“I understand, it’s interesting.”

This was the mermaids' last act of foolishness and gift. No matter how their responsibility ended, it would ensure that 'Black Cloak' would have a place in the world and continue another story.

If you had prepared such a cute farewell, there was no need to take the loss.

'People are scared too.'

Geo decided to go along with the mermaids' surprise party. It was the most comfortable way to go, as he would not shed any more blood and had nothing to lose in any way.

“It’s been a while since I’ve been threatened.”

This is so embarrassing.

'What should I do to make everyone happy?'

Geo thought about it for a moment, then came to a conclusion.

Since it had come to this, I thought it would be better to show the world the 'Black Cloak' more clearly.

“…Even if I am imprisoned in your hands, that ghost story will not disappear from the Earth. Even if you kill me, it will be the same.”

“You have to try it to find out. I don’t know if its roots are on Earth, but shouldn’t we at least stop it from spreading its branches?”

This is definitely a tantrum. It seems that the mermaids were not happy with the fact that their teacher had roots on Earth. It was obvious that they were planning to hold Giovanni in their arms.

Geo nodded.

“Do you promise to release these people safely?”

“I swear on the honor of my family and… my right to hold the Golden Bough now.”

“I’ll believe that.”

Then he raised both hands in surrender.

“Take me.”

Now that the everyday story was over, it was time for the mermaid and the human to settle things.

* * *

Meanwhile, as the sea becomes more chaotic, Seoul falls into a state of eerie anxiety.

Joo-Hyeon was extremely shocked when he heard the news inside the collection office.

“…Missing?”

“Strictly speaking, it seems like kidnapping.”

“I think you need to look into it more closely. It was just Geo-ssi who matched the rhythm.”

“As expected, Mr. Joo-Hyeon has great insight!”

Bisabal, who was in the meeting room with Joohyun, smiled his characteristic smile.

“Aren’t you thinking of catering to the mermaids’ whining?”

“Why did it have to come to this….”

“Rather, it must be because it is a time like this.”

“Is this some kind of mercy that Geo gives at the end?”

“Or maybe it’s just work to make the story of ‘Black Cloak’ more certain?”

“…Would the mermaid help with that?”

Joohyun, who asked like that, held her head.

“No, it might have been a mess for that purpose in the first place. Oh, my head….”

“You really have great understanding.”

The visa holder clicked his tongue.

“I don’t know why I sometimes do brainless things when I have a brain.”

“Excuse me, I’m listening. The person in question is listening.”

“Oh my, did you hear that? It’s really embarrassing that my monologue was heard that far.”

“Aren’t you telling me to just listen to what you’re saying if it’s something that can be heard by an unawakened person like me?”

“When I see you talking back every now and then, I can tell you that you really do have a brain… but you’re really a person…”

Joo-Hyeon asked in a tone that even contained sympathy.

“Why do you keep picking on me??”

“I have a chronic disease of picking a fight with a foolish person.”

“Go to the hospital.”

“I’ll take note of that.”

For the safety of the humans that Geo cherished, Bisabal was specially protecting Juhyun in the inner room of his guild. Juhyun also knew his intentions, so he did not run out of the room despite all the trouble.

But just because my body was safe, my mind was not at ease.

“I heard that when Geo went to the ‘Deep Sea Country’ to rescue student Chae Sol, he came back really badly injured, and I’m worried that it’ll be the same this time too.”

“That is also Mr. Geo’s intention. I don’t think you will disrespect it, but it seems like you can’t help but worry about it, but if you change that foolish attitude, life will be a little easier.”

“I would really appreciate it if you could give me some advice or some bad words. I’m starting to get attached to you at this point.”

“No, this can’t be happening. Are you saying that Joo-hyun was treating me so cruelly? I’m so upset I could cry….”

“I think I’m going to cry, Guild Leader.”

I was so weak and unawakened that I felt like I would die from sadness and not be able to go anywhere.

“…The collectors don’t seem to be very concerned about Mr. Geo’s safety.”

“That is the discomfort that arises because Mr. Joo-Hyeon treats ‘Portrait of Geo’ as a person.”

Visabal continued speaking with a rare calm expression.

“Think of an ordinary piece of art. An artist rips a canvas with a knife to show performance art. What do you think about that?”

“I don’t know much about art… so I guess that’s what it’s like.”

“Yes, that’s the perspective we have on the work. Moreover, this is the path that the work itself chose, so how could a mere viewer deny that choice and block its path?”

“…….”

“Of course, Joohyun would like to say this.”

He still had a pouty face.

“Are you saying that it is okay to treat a being that knows how to eat, how to talk, how to sleep, and how to laugh as a ‘work of art’? Wouldn’t that be so disgusting that you couldn’t stand it?”

“…It’s a bit gross.”

“A bunch of those disgusting guys got together and formed this guild.”

The Bisabal created such a guild. Not wanting to be left alone, he set up a collection shop and displayed his family in this huge display case. Then he managed them diligently so that they would not run away or become corrupted.

“Mr. Joo-hyun’s perspective is not strange. Strictly speaking, it’s not that I and the other guild members don’t know that the collector is on the strange side. But we gathered here for that ‘gross act’.”

“Just for the guild leader?”

“I thought this was a win-win deal for both of us. Of course, Joo-hyun might think differently. I want to respect that, but I personally don’t like it that much….”

“I’m just curious, but how many times a day do you hear that you have a bad personality?”

“I’ve heard it about 12 times. Our guild members are loyal and only say the right thing. Aren’t they cute?”

“That’s sick.”

“I know, I know.”

The visa holder laughed.

“Didn’t I just say that I have a chronic illness?”

“I wonder if there is another disease besides the chronic disease of picking a fight with a foolish person.”

“In the end, it’s all in the same context. The way I treat Mr. Geo isn’t much different.”

He just saw the work as the work, and the hero as the hero.

“I find Mr. Giovanni’s actions really strong and brilliant.”

They just saw things differently.

“When I heard the stories of the rescued survivors, I heard that he sacrificed himself for other humans. Even though he was harshly criticized and betrayed by humans, he only felt pity and stood up for the cause. He is a true ‘hero.’”

That was the path that Geo had chosen himself. He had decided to save so many people on his own. As a result, many people were freed from suffering, and Geo himself was satisfied with that.

“I think that decision is very noble. No one should belittle its value when so many people have actually been saved.”

“…I’m surprised to hear you say that.”

Joohyun asked.

“I guess you don’t hate ‘heroes’ like that.”

“It’s a story about a dead person, so there’s no reason to hate it.”

“Do you hate me because I’m alive?”

“There is a huge difference between a story completed with death and a human being who is still alive.”

Although Bisabal cherished his guild members as collectibles, he never forgot that they were human. So it was true that dead 'heroes' and living 'heroes' felt completely different.

He soon burst into laughter.

“Am I wrong? The actions of Mr. Giovanni are extremely noble. Who else could do such a thing? Not the wise men of the century, not the many saints, not even one could give himself so much and show such affection and mercy to humans….”

“…That is also a part of what Geo-ssi has, but it is only a fragment. Regardless of his essence and origin, he is a human being who can cry, laugh, and feel pain. I don’t think what I see is wrong.”

“That’s right, that’s also one of the aspects of ‘Portrait of Geo’.”

“So you’re thinking that everything we see is not wrong?”

“You saw it exactly, Joohyun.”

They were so different.

“I don’t think we’ll be able to become close.”

“…I agree.”

The world you see is different.

* * *

And Yoo Seong-un spoke with bloodshot eyes.

“Rescue team.”

“Ah, no. Just a moment….”

“When are you going to create a rescue team?”

“I, the Hunters’ maintenance isn’t finished yet….”

“Then didn’t you ask me to let you pass through?”

“You know that you can’t take personal action in a situation like this, Hunter Yoo Seong-un….”

“Do you know what kind of trouble Sergio Hunter is in? Why are you so slow?”

“…Why are you doing this to me….”

The association staff member who went on a dispatch wept in sorrow.

'Hunters are scary.'

I wanted to go home.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (196)

196

Episode 196

“I thought I was used to the hunters’ faces changing all of a sudden….”

The association staff member who came to check on the bloodshot eyes of the meteor hunter muttered.

“I guess it’s not time yet.”

“Don’t worry too much. It’s not common for a meteor hunter to do something like that.”

“Oh, isn’t that common?”

“Yeah, I’m basically a person who’s indifferent to everything….”

The employee, who had experience enough to be deployed in such a disaster situation, looked embarrassed.

“It’s been a long time since I’ve seen you so angry.”

“If you say it’s been a while…?”

“That’s what it’s like for curators to be collectors.”

“I know you’re not an easy person.”

“That’s true, but, you know, there’s a clear trigger.”

It never causes problems as long as you don't touch sensitive areas.

“Because it’s a guild that values saving face.”

“Is that… because of the collector?”

“I guess so.”

The members of the Collector's Guild were all members of the Bisabal collection. They had a duty to maintain dignity that met the standards of the Bisabal. That was also the reason why they wore their uniforms without fail.

“But that doesn’t mean that the members of the Collectors’ Guild take special care to make something up.”

It was just their original personality. People who viewed the world with a cynical perspective but were faithful to a sense of responsibility above average. However, there were times when such guild members of the collectors, especially the curators, failed to do so.

“Usually when there is a problem with the work I am in charge of….”

“What work are you in charge of? Those monsters?”

“Be careful what you say. Yes, about those dangerous items.”

“Curators really do a good job of preserving such horrifying objects.”

“Because it’s also a problem related to those people’s sense of responsibility.”

The overwhelming burden of the 'affection', 'freedom', and 'duty' required by the guild must have been manifested as such an obsession. An employee who had even worked in a research lab for a short time understood that feeling.

“That’s true, but….”

“…Sergio Hunter isn’t that kind of dangerous item, is he?”

“…That’s what makes it special.”

As I said before, this wasn't a common case.

“It’s very rare for a meteor hunter to get that angry.”

It wasn't like this when an error occurred in a function he was in charge of before. The staff member who was on site at the time knew very well what kind of hunter Yoo Seong-un was.

“When I was younger, I was a bit temperamental, but I wasn’t the type of person who would tire out many people.”

“Are you saying that you didn’t pressure other employees like you did just now?”

“To put it simply, yes, I guess. The members of the Collectors’ Guild are the type of people who really hate causing trouble to others.”

“Then why are you doing that? Sergio Hunter isn’t even a ‘work in charge’ of Meteorite Hunter.”

“Well, maybe I’m just looking at it from a very narrow perspective.”

He could have just been worried about his close friend's well-being.

“…But it’s still difficult to understand….”

The guild members of the Collectors' Guild tend to have a very dry sense of camaraderie. If there was a good reason, they could use someone as bait and then discard them without any ill feelings.

It's not that there is no affection or trust. Rather, it's that strong faith is expressed in such a harsh form, but the current appearance of Hunter Yoo Seong-un is far from what the staff knows.

“…….”

“…I heard that story….”

“I know what you want to say.”

It was a sensitive topic, so everyone knew about it through rumors.

'So Sergio Hunter is a collector by blood?'

It is said that Bisabal, who viewed his son as a 'work of art', secretly locked him up and raised him.

'I thought it was a really ridiculous rumor, but when even Hunter Yoo Seong-un shows up like that... I thought it couldn't be true, but for some reason, it feels more believable.'

Sergio Hunter, who often shows a lack of common sense, and Yoo Seong-un Hunter, who never reacts sensitively unless it is a problem with the artwork. And the collector's abnormal affection for the artwork...

“…….”

The employee groaned and cleared his head. It was a topic that had no merit in thinking deeply about.

“It’s not our problem how the collectors turn out. Once Sergio Hunter returns safely, Yoo Seong-un Hunter will come to apologize and offer compensation, so don’t worry too much.”

“Huh? How do you know that?”

“Usually, curators do that when things related to their work are resolved well.”

“Then doesn’t that mean you really see Sergio Hunter as a work of art…?”

“Didn’t you say it wasn’t our problem to get involved? I heard he’s tall and capable. Don’t you think he deserves to be treated as a work of art? It’s not uncommon these days to lock up children and raise them.”

“It’s disturbing that a large corporation that collects money did something like that.”

“It’s not even a certainty.”

It is a situation where the picture can be drawn quite well.

“I asked about it after receiving a recommendation from the Meteorite Hunter, but the association sent down an official document. Full-scale dungeon entry is not possible until the coastal area is almost completely cleared. Even if we carry out a diversionary operation, they are of the position that at least a minimum of priority suppression is necessary.”

"but…."

“It’s so noisy outside the entrance, how are you going to get to the deep sea? It’s not something that can be done just because you’re impatient. It’s right to start from the front and organize things step by step.”

“Even so, how can I convey this to the meteor hunter whose eyes are still wide open… This time, I feel like I’m really going to get grabbed by the collar.”

“Don’t worry about this, I’ll go and tell you.”

“Is there any problem in the country?”

“I haven’t heard anything about it, so, it’s obvious.”

The employee clicked his tongue as if he knew what he was talking about.

“Isn’t everyone shivering?”

It was truly the end of the world for such a disaster to strike before the aftermath of the great catastrophe had even subsided.

* * *

There were still many people in the world who remembered the great disaster.

“Ha, Grandma….”

“Hey, come in, hey! This is not the time to go out.”

“I'm scared.”

“What a shame, we live without seeing the ocean. It’ll be okay.”

It was a natural thing for older people.

“Honey, how much food do we have left?”

“I think I can probably last a month….”

“Just in case, let’s save more, I even used up my vacation days.”

“Wouldn’t it be better to talk to the person next door?”

“No, in times like this, it’s best to stay still.”

“It’s really scary….”

“It’ll be okay, since the big guilds are stepping up like that.”

“I hope this dungeon mission goes well.”

It wasn't much different for the middle-aged and older age groups.

“Oh my, people died on the coast this time.”

“How did that happen?”

“The sea went crazy and jumped around as if it were alive.”

“No, didn’t all the people on the coast evacuate?”

“If there are people hiding all over the place, will it be possible to pull them all out…?”

An era of overpopulation where even conventional life is difficult to sustain.

“Oh, really… Even though you asked me to come live with you.”

“What can I do if I’m scared?”

Most of the people who fled and hid in deep mountains or sparsely populated areas during the great disaster were not registered residents and could not be easily found.

When such disasters strike, those people are the first to die.

“It seems dangerous.”

"right?"

The children were also anxious.

“Why the sea….”

“Aren’t we surrounded by the sea on three sides?”

“What if I get submerged in sea water?”

In addition to being a country closely connected to the ocean, sea levels have been rising little by little since the great disaster, and the land has been submerged. Children have also begun to feel confused by the emergence of a disaster related to the ocean, a sensitive topic.

It was the same with the Sun Church.

“Chaisol.”

“Uh, yeah.”

“Have you contacted your family?”

“My older sister and brother are at the collection center right now.”

“In the collection…?”

“Because I’ve been helped by you before.”

“That’s unusual.”

Iruda, who had come to see Chaisol out of concern, tilted his head. The collection company had gained a citizen-friendly image through various events, but it was basically closer to a financial company that invested and managed capital.

'Isn't this a guild that is kind enough to care about the safety of third-class citizens?'

But I nodded, thinking that there must be something I don't know.

“Anyway, that’s fortunate, since he’s a collector, I can trust him.”

“Yeah. There aren’t any hunters in the village other than my older sister, but she said she’d help….”

“The collector promised to protect your village as well?”

“No, Justitia? They said that hunters were dispatched from there.”

“Oh, over there.”

Although Chaisol's hometown was not close to the sea, the sea was a factor that could cause many disasters, so it seemed that hunters were dispatched to various parts of South Korea.

“Justitia is famous for its volunteer work.”

“That’s right, I’ve received help a few times before….”

“Are you still worried?”

“It’s okay because it’s not just a village.”

Chaisol received all the help she could from adults.

“…….”

Still, the reason I didn't feel motivated was because I was just scared of this whole situation.

“…They said someone died.”

“…There’s nothing we can do in this situation.”

“I hope no one died.”

“It’s hard to hope for something like that in a dungeon break like this.”

Dungeon Break refers to the phenomenon in which monsters invade the outside of the dungeon. It is not a case of a large number of monsters causing a commotion like in the usual case, but it is also possible to see the same phenomenon in which a small number of large monsters pop out like now.

Iru told me the information he had heard from his mother.

“I heard that all the villages along the coast were completely reduced to ashes. Most of the registered residents were evacuated, but there were a few exceptions, so it seems there were casualties.”

"victim?"

“It’s obvious. People who didn’t register, or people who acted on their own without following the instructions of the association or the government. Or people who hid at their own discretion… and then suffered a disaster.”

“…Could it be that the hunters who came to help couldn’t find it?”

“It’s sad, but there’s a limit to how much Hunters can do to evacuate people one by one. Hunters with search skills could have found them, and there have already been many such cases, but even so, there are still people who haven’t been found.”

I heard that some people were stubborn and stayed behind on purpose. The hunters, who already had a lot of work to do and were burdened, couldn't take care of all of those people. There were too many people who wanted their help to take care of uncooperative people.

“But after this dungeon raid is over, the association or the government will push for a reconstruction project. They’ll also provide places for people who have nowhere to go until then. Well, this is why we collect taxes.”

“Taxes… My brother and sister pay them too.”

“That’s right, the government collects taxes for times like this, and we pay our own. You learned that in class, we, as weak creatures, cannot survive a disaster like this unless we stick together.”

“Yeah, that’s why I said harmony and peace are important.”

“We all help each other. The reconstruction project will be after the dungeon raid is over, but I know that the government is currently working hard to find places for disaster victims to live and provide them with food.”

“That’s fortunate, but….”

Chaisol, who had been hesitating, asked.

“Won’t there be more damage?”

“Why not? Even the hunters are dying right now.”

I was literally 'dying' and 'going out'.

“They say that the sea is really chaotic in many ways, with strange hailstones falling and monsters turning into monsters, and waves crashing down as if they were alive.”

Although considerable information was being controlled in order to alleviate public anxiety as much as possible, Iruda was able to obtain some information through her mother's authority.

“Not only were the villages that had already been evacuated destroyed, but the aquatic creatures that had been doing their jobs in their respective places were also displaced. The most serious of these is that the ocean currents are gradually changing.”

“What is an ocean current?”

“I’m talking about the flow of seawater. Originally, this phenomenon was often observed due to the movements of sea monsters, but this time it’s a little different. It’s different from before when it could be controlled with magic.”

It's really the sea itself that moves.

“There must have been similar problems during the Great Disaster.”

“What happened then?”

“The climate has changed.”

“What happens when the climate changes…?”

“The weather is so changeable.”

To put it extremely,

“The entire planet would become a steamer or a freezer. It would be so hot that life on Earth would never be able to survive naturally.”

An environment is created where it becomes too hot or too cold for people to live.

“It hasn’t even been a few years since the world’s most capable hunters gathered their heads together to barely manage the aftermath of that time. It’s not for nothing that there are still so many people who fear the great disaster.”

An ecosystem thrown into chaos by the influx of monsters from another dimension. A vicious epidemic that seeps into everyday life due to completely different germs and air. Spatial problems caused by various creatures and objects that invade a small planet… .

Humans had to artificially analyze and adjust these various problems in order to survive on Earth. And they barely managed to do so.

“But then this problem occurred again….”

“So what should we do now?”

“There is not much a novice priest can do.”

“But isn’t there something I can do to help?”

“Of course you and I can do that, because we have the ability. But that’s not okay.”

"why?"

“I got caught.”

"huh…?"

“People are just dealing with it.”

Although there were rare instances of compassionate eyes, in most cases the young and inexperienced catechumens were easy prey in these turbulent times.

Iru decided to endure with Chaisol even if it meant sending them away from the Solar Church.

“That’s why I’m telling you to relax a little. I know people are worried, but you have to realize that the most important thing in this situation is yourself. If not yourself, who will protect you?”

“Ruda…?”

“…Of course we will protect each other….”

“…….”

“…….”

After a moment of silence, Iru opened his mouth.

“Don’t act so cute, I can’t allow it.”

“Luda, sometimes I think you look at me a little strangely.”

“I know you’re a natural monument who likes to help people, but this is not the time to step forward.”

“…….”

“…Don’t be too heartbroken.”

Iruda comforted him as if she felt sorry for him.

“Well, since all the famous guilds are gathered here, it will be conquered quickly. Your family is also in Seoul, so you will be safe. The village also sent hunters to guard Justitia.”

"…huh."

She spoke only of the comfort of those who knew and loved Chaisol.

“…….”

And Chaisol was worried about more people than that.

‘… I’m good at healing. Why don’t I hide in a safe place and heal the injured?’

Brother Geo, I'm worried too.

Chae Sol, who had been left alone in a daze, decided to do something.

* * *

"teacher."

“What’s going on?”

“Tea, tea….”

"yes?"

“Where is Chaisol…?”

Then he asked with a haggard face.

“Where did my round pebble go?”

“What is that….”

“You wouldn’t have sent that little kid to the coast, would you?”

“A dispatch? Sister Iruda, calm down….”

“Hand me back Chaisol! What did you do to my foolish partner!”

“Ah, no….”

There was a big problem with Chaisol's decision.

First, he made up his mind at an odd time and immediately went into the portrait without telling his partner, Iruda. Second, he sent a letter from inside the portrait later, but it was lost in the process of going through the frame.

As a result, Iruda's face became bloodshot.

“What happened to our child!!”

It was the crime of having a capable, well-connected, and quick-acting fool as a partner.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (197)

197

Episode 197

Geo laughed.

“Have you come to see me?”

"that's right!"

Chaisol also laughed.

“But where is this? This isn’t a beach?”

“This is one of the rooms in the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea.’”

“What were you doing, hyung?”

“As you can see….”

Clank.

Geo waved his hand.

“I was tied up.”

“Huh.”

“I think this is your first time seeing someone tied up. Are you feeling okay mentally?”

“Why, why are you tied up? And this isn’t the first time I’ve seen you, I saw it on the news….”

“It’s going to be a little different from those people.”

Geo did not commit any specific illegal act and was not arrested or sent to prison.

“If you think about it, my very existence is illegal.”

“What is that?”

“Okay, what is it?”

It seems like people these days live very complicated lives.

“When I was younger, even if aliens showed up, I just let it go.”

“Wow, really?”

"sure."

Don't you just dismiss it as nonsense? But in today's world, it's not at all strange if real aliens appear, so it's become really hard for portraits like Geo to survive.

“Why did the conversation come to this point?”

“Why are you tied up?”

“Oh, right. Those evil mermaids kidnapped me.”

"galaxy?"

“Yes, that’s what the student Eunha said.”

"uh…."

Chaisol was embarrassed.

“Why the galaxy?”

“He said he wanted to live and die with me.”

“Why is that? It’s too burdensome.”

“Isn’t that so?”

Geo asked with a smile.

“By the way, is it okay for me to stay here?”

The place where he is currently being held was once one of the Pope's residences, the place he usually used when he was staying in the temple. Geo thought that this place was similar to the Jeongjeon or Pyeonjeon of Joseon.

But of course, it was not a safe space like the old temple.

“Even though it looks like this, it’s still a dungeon.”

“No matter how you look at it, it looks like a dungeon.”

“Hmm, I see.”

The atmosphere became quite tense.

The temple was adorned with gold, silver, and marble, but for some reason, it had a chilly air all over it, and it was rusty and broken everywhere, just like a ghost house. The gloomy atmosphere unique to the deep sea was clear.

The tight pressure that can only be felt in front of a giant deep-sea creature. Skeletons scattered everywhere with greedy goods. A temple within a temple with sparkling yet cool water scales… .

Geo was bound to the Pope's throne in the middle.

“Perhaps Isserna Aria also sensed that Chaisol student had arrived.”

“You came through that portrait?”

“Yes, I know very well what happened before my eyes.”

“But you know what? Mermaids?”

“Because this is the home of mermaids.”

It was a sea of mermaids who became one with them.

“Even if it’s through a portrait, there are children who wouldn’t recognize my spirit.”

Chaisol drew 'Portrait of Geo', and 'Portrait of Geo' accepted Chaisol as such. There were some problems because it was a portrait without an owner, but it was possible with the help of the teddy bear father who was at home.

And surprisingly, Chaisol expressed his intention to meet Geo. Geo was not in a state to move and he did not know the situation well until this happened, but Chaisol could go back anyway. If it was now.

“This is a dangerous place, so it would be best to return to the safe Temple of the Sun.”

“But I also want to help in some way.”

“Oh my goodness, this is so wonderful. But it can’t be.”

"huh."

“Kids aren’t supposed to help with this.”

“Say the same thing as Ruda….”

“Iruda is a really smart friend.”

Argio thought that children should not be in a battlefield like this.

“Children have the right to be protected, but they also have responsibilities. The time that only children like Chae Sol can enjoy is extremely limited. I think that only then should they enjoy pure happiness.”

However, Chae Sol's persistence in crawling all the way to the portrait was incredible.

“So you’re saying that I shouldn’t get hurt or get sick?”

“Wouldn’t it be mentally painful to see me like this?”

“The more I look at it, the more I feel like I’m getting used to it.”

“That’s why I’m saying that you shouldn’t adapt like that, because it will diminish the purity of student Chae Sol.”

“I don’t think it’ll be dangerous if I stay with you. Do I really have to go out? I’ll just stay put.”

“I wish I hadn’t gotten involved in this in the first place.”

“I’m going to sit here and chat with my brother. I was going to treat the people who were injured on the beach, but I couldn’t do that….”

“Can’t you hear me?”

“I don’t want to do nothing since I’m already here. I’ll do this because I’ll be bored if I’m alone.”

“I’m so amazed and frustrated that I’m going crazy.”

Geo smiled brightly.

“Go back.”

"no, I do not want."

“Oh, go back.”

Unfortunately, I couldn't send Chae Sol back home because she was tied up by the mermaids. I would have turned her into paint if possible, but the mermaids must have been doing research, because no matter what I did, it wouldn't work.

When Chaisol realized that Geo could not force him back, he crouched down at Geo's feet. Chaisol asked with a bright face.

“You can’t send me back?”

“Even if you don’t tell me one thing, I feel like I know ten.”

“But how did you call me?”

“Please be precise, Chaisol. The student came over himself.”

“The portrait just opened?”

“It was a portrait without an owner, so my father accepted it.”

“Oh, so that’s why Grandpa Teddy Bear….”

“First of all, the frame itself was opened and brought in by student Chae Sol himself.”

“Oh.”

Chaisol blinked.

“You didn’t open it for me?”

“My wishes were not reflected, and strictly speaking, I only gave the key to Chaisol so that she could express her intention to visit. The house key.”

“House key…? Ah.”

He stroked my forehead.

"This one?"

“Yeah, that’s it.”

This is the 'sculpture' that Giovanni gave to Chaisol as the sun god.

“There are some abilities that I can share, but I am a portrait artist. As these characteristics of mine are also shared, Chaisol also gained the ability to draw portraits.”

“My grandfather helped me get in.”

“Student Chae Sol is still immature. She is not a perfect portrait artist like me, so it seems like she can only frame it, but it will be difficult for her to get it in. That’s why my father must have helped me.”

“Wow….”

“I was planning to share the other abilities little by little, but if I had known that Chae Sol was this brave, I would have thought more about the piece I gave him back then. His ability to take action is better than I imagined.”

Chaisol was puzzled.

“You didn’t know I could do this?”

“I’m certainly smarter than average, but that doesn’t mean I know everything.”

“No, but I think you know everything. You’re a god.”

“Not only am I not a proper believer, but then what fun am I going to have in life?”

Geo did not want to master all knowledge and wisdom.

“I really didn’t know that student Chae Sol would come all the way here.”

I didn't know that my father, ignorant of the weakness of this human being, would send this palm-sized child right in front of my nose. He sent the child, the child, knowing how harsh this place was.

“Isn’t it true that Father guided you to the ‘Breathing Sea’?”

“The name of that frame was ‘Breathing Sea’?”

“If you are talking about a painting of the sea, then yes.”

“Then I think that’s right too.”

“Oh, I should have kept it hidden a little tighter.”

The 'Breathing Sea' and the 'Deep Sea Country' were connected spaces. Geo had often wandered around this temple through it before, so he knew the general idea.

“I think my father placed ‘The Breathing Sea’ in this room after hearing straight from Chae Sol, who said she wanted to see me. Chae Sol said it was good and came to me through the picture frame.”

Fortunately, the frame of the 'Breathing Sea' itself still remained. The view from here was of a peaceful cabin, but in any case, a path for Chaisol to escape was temporarily open.

“If you have any trouble, run away over there.”

"yes!"

“I feel really uneasy, so it would be better to go now.”

"no, I do not want!"

“Who do you resemble to be so strong?”

Its integrity and sturdiness were greater than those of bamboo in winter.

“Fortunately, Isser and Aria don’t seem to dislike student Chaisol that much, and they are people I can communicate with to some extent, so there won’t be any major problems.”

“Then can I stay here?”

“You already have it? I’ll tolerate it since you’re quite good at listening to me with one ear and letting it go out the other, because there’s nothing I can do right now. But you must never do that again.”

He could have sent a will to his father and told him to take Chaisol away, but it seemed unlikely that the Sun God would welcome that. His cute teddy bear grandfather had never been human, so he had no conscience.

'I guess they'll just leave Chae Sol alone, thinking it'll be helpful to both of them.'

Above all, Giovanni's hometown was a world where children's rights were not established. It was absurd that Giovanni's father, who was a god there, was now worried about Chaisol's safety.

“Is there such a thing as a one-sided argument?”

“What is a foreign language?”

“It’s a word used when playing a game called Janggi, but it’s also used in situations where you can’t help but lose no matter what you do.”

“Did you lose, bro?”

“Haha, you lost to student Chaisol.”

I guess I'll have to fix that safety insensitivity someday. Kids these days are so bold and precocious.

“Did you really tell the students and the other teachers properly? If you had told them that you were going to see me on my mission to the coast with the help of Black Cloak, you wouldn’t have come like this.”

Chaisol blinked.

“Uh… I came as soon as I thought of it, so I contacted you later.”

“It was already a certainty that I would get in trouble, but how did you contact me?”

“I received a letter from Grandpa Teddy Bear….”

“I would appreciate it if you didn’t just tell me that you sent the letter.”

“I sent a letter.”

"this."

Geo let out a sigh.

“It probably wasn’t delivered.”

“Yes? Why? I saw you leaving?”

“As I said before, student Chae Sol is not a portrait, so, um….”

“So?”

“To put it simply, it means not being able to pay the phone bill.”

“…Call charges?”

“Even though I am better at drawing portraits than Chaisol, the letters I send are blurry.”

This was a problem that occurred during the process of the picture becoming reality. When something virtual becomes something of the earth, it becomes distorted during the process of interpretation and analysis. Because of this, there was a problem that Geo's letter was virtually unreadable.

“Then what about student Chaisol?”

“Oh, it’s not being sent…?”

“Even if it is sent, there is a high possibility that it will be lost in the process.”

“…Then I won’t get a reply…?”

“I haven’t even received a reply yet. It’s only one-way communication at the moment.”

“Uh uh….”

Only then did Chaisol's face turn pale.

“I, I came here without telling Ruda!!”

I came here because I judged that it couldn't be dangerous since Geo would be with me, but if I hadn't even sent him a message that said something like, 'I'll go check first, so if it's really safe, would you consider going with me one more time? Of course, if you don't want to, then don't. I'll wait for your reply!', then it would have been out of the question in the first place.

So I jumped up and ran to the portrait.

“Huh?! It’s gone!!”

“Oh, sun….”

Giovanni sighed.

'There's no need to be this childish.'

Of course, even though this incident had the potential to help both Geo and Chae Sol grow, he didn't necessarily want to force the child to develop. If there was an easy path to take, why should he refuse it?

'I guess we'll have to talk about this later.'

It's not that I have any ill intentions towards the teddy bear sun god. For example, I would like to raise the abilities of the characters in the game. I would send them into battle to gain experience points to level up.

The sun truly believed that this path would help them both, and it was also a fact based on affection. However, it would be ridiculous if the sun followed human sympathy and the ethics of a small life.

“Instead, I apologize, Chaisol. It seems like my father has closed the door.”

“Why, why…? It was open just a moment ago?”

“If it seems like Chaisol is in danger, you can open the door again, but until then, it seems like it will stay like this. I guess you want Chaisol to develop during this process.”

“The development is all good, but let me explain to Ruda first… I really need to make an excuse just once…! I knew it wouldn’t be dangerous, so I was just planning to come and take a quick look…!!”

“Considering that, wasn’t the doctor who tried to sit next to me too firm?”

“I was just going to wait with you until Ruda replied because it was safer with you…!”

“Oh, that’s too bad. But Father won’t open the door.”

Giovanni laughed. Giovanni, who had been a believer, had an intuition about how the situation would unfold.

“Student Ruda has a fate that she must accept if she doesn’t know about this.”

Seeing that he couldn't squeeze out such a fate, it was clear that he wasn't a god.

'Is this the true power of God?'

Yeah, I'm average.

* * *

“I guess….”

The priests of the Solar Church have come to a conclusion.

“It seems that the mermaid has kidnapped the priestess of Chaisol.”

“Sergio Hunter said he was in the same situation….”

“Even Brother Chaisol had the same thing happen to him before.”

“Is it possible that the evil spirit from the research institute entered the Solar Church and approached Brother Chaisol?”

“The divinity of the Sankalut Church and the mermaids may have joined hands. Why, the disciples of the Black Cloak?”

“It may be a hasty judgment, but it looks like the mermaids are trying to keep Black Cloak in check.”

“Actually, a mermaid named Isser made a similar statement.”

“What on earth is going to happen….”

Iruda sobbed.

“…Give me back the teacup….”

“I’ll contact you shortly about this, he might be in the dungeon.”

“Do you know how unlikely it is for a kidnapped child victim to return alive…?”

“We are well aware of this, but the order to enter has not even been given yet….”

“I want to go on a business trip too…!”

I had no intention of being safe alone, not knowing when or how my partner would die.

“Send me a dispatch!!”

Everything was according to God's will.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (198)

198

Episode 198

Iruda wasn't the only one who cared about her partner's well-being.

“Take care of the sea.”

“Yes, even if all the cold-type hunters gather together, it’s still difficult to deal with the sea… Even one hunter is a pity. I understand that you are upset, but please lend me a hand.”

"then."

Yoo Seong-un asked with a smile.

“Do you have permission to enter the dungeon?”

The eyes did not smile.

“…Probably so.”

"maybe?"

“Almost certainly.”

"almost?"

“Meteor Cloud Hunter.”

The association staff sighed as if they understood.

“You know, I can’t send just one hunter in this situation. I know that Hunter Yoo Seong-un is capable, but it would be difficult to clear a dungeon with a humanoid monster as a boss in solo play.”

“If you send it to me, I’ll just take out Sergio Hunter and come back. Yes, I’d like to, but the association won’t give me permission. So let’s do it all together?”

“There are already many hunters who are dead or injured, and many who are missing. If we only give convenience to Hunter Yoo Seong-un at this point, how will we explain it to the other hunters? Please calm down….”

"All right."

Yoo Seong-un was also convinced.

“Then, please confirm that permission to enter will be granted as soon as the sea is cleared.”

“…I’ll talk to the association again. It seems like they’ll proceed as soon as the minimum necessary arrangements are made to carry out a diversionary operation, so it should be possible.”

“I'd like to have a definitive answer before I finish organizing everything.”

“The sea is acting strangely. It seems like the monsters are slowly gaining control, so please be careful.”

“I know full well that I am a valuable asset that cannot be lost.”

I hadn't even properly analyzed 'Portrait of Geo' yet, and I already had no intention of dying.

“Let’s get started right away.”

It's easy to say 'tidy up', but it couldn't be as easy as cleaning a room.

The hunters froze a giant wave that moved like a living creature, and had to deal with various sea creatures and monsters that were running wild inside it.

'This is a headache.'

And only after building a barrier against all these seas could we say that we had 'finished organizing'.

Yoo Seong-un was dispatched straight to the scene.

“Meteor Cloud Hunter—!!”

There were many hunters who recognized Meteor Cloud, who was famous for his cold-type abilities. The hunters were very interested in a hunter who handled the same element as me. Meteor Cloud opened his mouth with his characteristically innocent smile.

“Where do I start?”

“I freeze everything that catches my eye.”

“Are you crazy? How are you going to handle this?”

“The words have become harsh, I heard that Hunter Seo was kidnapped and then got into trouble.”

“What’s the main point?”

“It costs money, you know.”

Rather than fiddling around thinking about the capital that would be lost later on as a trainee, it was a much cheaper situation to start out with the determination to write a statement and make a big bet.

“If we delay any longer, we’ll leave the coast and head inland. The seawater has gone crazy and is trying to crawl in like a snake. Not to mention the monsters caused by the hail….”

“Is stopping the coastline an urgent task?”

“That’s right. But you can’t stop the water with your hands, and feeding them seawater isn’t easy either, and even if you build a big wall, they’ll climb up like monkeys, so the only thing left is to freeze them.”

“You don’t use flame-type hunters?”

“There’s already chaos over there, and the manpower is too inefficient to stop this massive tsunami. Let’s stop being sarcastic and get into the ocean.”

“This is really….”

Saaak—!

A chill gathered at Yoo Seong-un's feet, and soon it became daylight.

“Things got really messed up.”

widely!!

I tapped the ground with the toes of my shoes that had turned into skates.

At that moment, the meteor's shadow disappeared. He immediately climbed up the huge barrier and jumped into the sea beyond. A thick sheet of smooth ice formed along his path, which served as another barrier.

“…….”

Phew—!!

Just before crashing down the high wall, Yoo Seong-un looked up from the air.

'One extra-large, six large, thirty-two medium.'

Other miscellaneous small objects were not in charge of the meteor cloud.

"ha…."

Phew—…!!

He thought as he fell rapidly.

'I want to leave work.'

Kwajijijik!!!!!

A meteor has set foot on the 'ground'.

From where he stepped, a huge, solid 'glacier' of the type you would see only in polar regions was created.

The terrible cold spread across the sea surface and even below, instantly freezing the rolling waves. The hunters who heard the loud noise shouted.

“Fuck, it’s support!!”

“Save me, the sea is so fucking shit…!!”

“Wow, Class A is here, clear the way! Clear the way quickly!!”

“Hey you idiots, if you don’t want to freeze, make way!!!”

The hunters who noticed the meteor cloud moved away from their positions, and the meteor cloud quickly passed between them, freezing the sea.

High-level hunters who are skilled at handling the cold wear skates similar to those used by Yoo Seong-un.

If used well, it could not only increase speed, but could also be used as a weapon. There were even jokes that it was influenced by the fact that South Korea was once famous for figure skating before the great disaster.

'It's true that it's useful, but.'

A cold wind brushes my cheek.

Strengthening my legs, I lightly do a single axel. I smoothly jump over the swaying and twisting ice, and slash--!! I spin around and slash at the monster. I land. I spin around. I avoid the obstacle and move again.

Run fast and bang with the window!!! You hit the ice and jump up. You spin vertically and slam the monster down, and you use the momentum to float into the air. The body fluids of the monster that got cut by the skate blade freeze and fall down.

Just repeating the same thing with a few changes. Using the skates for softness, the spear for destructive power. Go forward, jump, slam down, cut, land, and go again.

'This task itself is not difficult. It's simple labor.'

Bam, bang!

Move while stepping to avoid multiple monsters. Bang!! When you strike, a spear rises from the ice and pierces the monster. Blood flies.

Yoo Seong-un knew what he had to do here. Monsters that had frozen along the ice path he had created as he passed by were breaking the ice and causing chaos, but other hunters were dealing with them.

“…….”

But that wasn't the end of the situation.

'The sea is wide.'

And it's deep.

'This isn't something that can be resolved by just me doing something.'

Even if the meteors blew up and drew on the power of the garden, it would not be possible to freeze all the oceans on this planet. Considering the survival of the Earth, that would not be possible, as it would be beyond recovery.

‘But just a little bit…’

Yoo Seong-un once again took out his long ice spear, held it in his hand, and bang-!!! He hit the ground, and the recoil sent him flying into the sky.

“…Hoooo—”

He levitates into the air and aims his ice spear at the eyes of a large monster.

I took a picture.

“…….”

Paang-!!!

The monster's body burst apart.

“…Ugh, ugh.”

Squeak—.

The meteor cloud, which had circled around and stopped on the ice, spat out the ice fragments that had entered its mouth.

“Oh, really.”

The combination of the monster's fluid and seawater was bound to be salty.

The meteor cloud, which had shaken off the unmelted ice fragments, quickly skated back out onto the sea surface. In his path, huge glaciers formed and monsters froze.

But this was something that other A-class hunters continued to do.

'It's repeating itself, it's a vicious cycle.'

The Meteor Cloud was a hunter known for creating large, solid ice, especially the polar ice caps. But even with all the capable ice hunters gathered here, the sea continued to crash and crash.

'Then there is only one answer.'

I had to pester the 'owner' of this wave to come out on his own.

“My specialty.”

Crunch. Splash!

The meteor broke through the ice and entered the sea.

'What would happen if all these monsters here were to become cold?'

The training would be difficult, but that was not something for Yoo Seong-un to feel sorry about. After all, the work related to it was a problem that Yoo Seong-un himself would have to solve in the future by working overtime and getting a pay cut.

'And if this works… .'

Yoo Seong-un thought of the gardener, Jeong Yeong-won, who had participated in this war.

'It could be quite annoying.'

He grinned as he watched the sea monsters approaching him. In such waters, humans, as land creatures, would be at a great disadvantage, but it was different for a gardener in the snowy field whose soul was frozen like that.

A gardener was a worker who took care of the seeds and fruits of the garden.

“…….”

Wouldn't any monster be troubled if another garden bloomed inside its body?

The meteor cloud stabbed the ice sword into my body and cut me. The monsters opened their mouths wide at the sweet scent of blood.

'Let's go somewhere as far as we can.'

A bright red snow flower has bloomed on the sea.

* * *

“The meteor hunter has gone missing!!”

The hunters on the shore beyond the wall, who had retreated with their injuries, were muttering.

“Huh? Where is the Meteor Hunter…?”

“A hunter who can create that much ice wouldn’t be unable to protect his own body in the sea, right?”

“But I confirmed that he was falling into the sea, so shouldn’t he be rescued?!”

“If you say he’s missing, does that mean he’s been gone for some time?”

“I know you’re busy, but I feel I should let you know….”

“No, how many hunters are missing right now?”

However, there was no manpower that could be sent to rescue a single hunter right now. This was especially true if the hunter had fallen into the sea. In this situation, everyone had to figure out how to survive on their own.

Therapist Jeong Yeong-won, who was receiving treatment from the rear, asked him.

“Did you fall into the sea or go in?”

“Huh? That, that’s… well….”

“I think it went in.”

A gardener does not die easily unless he is eaten by the root.

“Look at the sea more. If you look at the situation of the sea a little more broadly than the comfort of a single object called a meteor cloud, it will be easier to figure out what is going on.”

“What do you mean…?”

“…….”

Jeong Yeong-won said, blinking his eyes.

“…The sound is dying down.”

“What are you talking about in this noisy place?”

“Don’t look small, look big. The sound of the waves breaking on the sea is getting smaller.”

"that…."

“Okay.”

Jeong Yeong-won turned around and laughed.

“You can leave that guy alone, he’s doing fine.”

“Ha, but…! If the Meteor Hunter goes wrong, things will go wrong!”

“I told you, you’re doing well?”

And soon, some hunters also felt something strange.

“…? No, wait a minute….”

“Is there really a sound…?”

It was just a moment.

“…….”

“…….”

It became so quiet in an instant that the inside of the wall became cold.

“…What the heck is this?”

“I think it’s almost completely frozen.”

Jeong Yeong-won said with the faint sound of monsters howling in the background.

“Everyone, go and get to work, catching monsters.”

“Oh, yes?”

“And bring me some meteor hunters too.”

“Are you talking about the meteor hunter?”

“It must be lying around somewhere.”

As expected, the hunter in front came running out of breath.

“Chi, healer! Healer!! Healer!!”

“Put it down.”

A bloody meteor hunter was heard.

'I see you've grown up, Jeongwon.'

Jeong Yeong-won understood what Yoo Seong-un had done. She checked Yoo Seong-un’s consciousness while treating his wounds on the bed in the barracks. Then their eyes met.

Yoo Seong-un smiled brightly.

“Is it pretty good?”

“You must have grown a lot.”

“It’s been so cold lately, I feel a bit chilly….”

“It’s a greater force than the last time I saw it.”

“I drank a lot of good tea.”

The garden is growing very well.

“…….”

“The sea is completely frozen!!”

“I told you to go and work?”

“Ah, yes, yes…!!”

The cracking and crashing of ice and glaciers created by the hunters was no longer heard. Instead, there was only the heavy noise of the squawking and flailing hunks of flesh stuck between them.

'It's amazing, even considering it's much quieter beyond the barrier.'

At this point, almost all of the sea visible to us was frozen.

'All the way through.'

Jeong Yeong-won knew what Yoo Seong-un had done.

“Was it effective?”

“That’s usually what happens when you say something.”

Once a seed is planted in one place, it will continue to grow.

“It only takes a moment to harden.”

The meteor cloud used my body as a 'seed' and fed it to the many monsters in the sea. The sea monsters, soaked in his terrifyingly cold blood, instantly froze, freezing the inside of the sea.

It was the cold air of the source, and there was no need to explain its effects further.

“I thought it would be easier to start from the inside rather than just attacking the outside.”

“It certainly seems that way, judging by the way my ears feel more at ease.”

“There were many places that couldn’t be frozen, and the cold air from the garden had a limit to spreading to the deep sea….”

“I understand.”

“Still, it was definitely faster because the other hunters had frozen it.”

It would have taken a long time for Yoo Seong-un to lower the temperature of the ocean from the beginning to create that vast glacier, and it would have been beyond his ability alone, but the fact that capable hunters had already stepped in and lowered the temperature of the ocean by a considerable amount helped a lot.

All he did was give the sea a plausible starting point on the verge of freezing.

“It was somewhat effective, wasn’t it?”

“That may be true, but it must have been a burden to you.”

Gardeners are punished for keeping them inside the garden and for letting them out.

“Were you that worried about Sergio Hunter?”

“Wouldn’t you be worried in a situation like this?”

Yoo Seong-un knew the mermaids' greed.

“If you’re not careful, the roots might get moved.”

The mermaid's obsession was more than Yoo Seong-un could have imagined.

They had built up such great achievements that they had been the center of attention of many evil gods, even though they did not possess divinity. It was quite possible that they could do something to Geo, who was weakened for a long time because he was not in the portrait.

“So, I had to push myself a bit. How long will it take to recover from this?”

“Those damn dealers clearly have brains as small as chickens. How dare you say that when you look like this? Healers aren’t vending machines for healing, they don’t just snap out of it.”

“No, I don’t know. How much is it? I’m just asking for the period.”

“There are aftereffects of the garden, so it is impossible to cure it in a short period of time. Even if we put in more effort, we cannot completely treat the aftereffects. However….”

Jeong Yeong-won was a pretty decent healer.

“If Hunter Sergio is in danger, I will also take the punishment of heaven.”

And he was a pretty good gardener.

“I will borrow the power of the flower garden.”

“Thank you for this.”

“If you know, please bring Hunter back safely.”

The Eye of the Source gloriously took root on the earth. It was a situation that any gardener who had his own garden could not help but be greedy for, and Jeong Yeong-won in particular was a human who worshipped the Source as if it were his own divinity.

“If he is safe, the painter will be happy too.”

A soft rose-colored glow was felt at Jeong Yeong-won's fingertips.

It was the power of life drawn from the garden.

* * *

“…….”

"…hello…."

"haha."

Geo said with a smile.

“Would you mind taking a look?”

“What? This child who is obviously imbued with the power of the sun?”

Aria also smiled with her eyes wide open.

“I’m so jealous that I want to throw myself into a rage.”

“But still, he is my first believer….”

“If you say so, why kill me again?”

Aria hmm, and rubbed her chin.

“Well, this fight isn’t your fight, teacher.”

“So that’s why you left it in such a remote place?”

“Of course I will satisfy my selfish desires, but if it has come to this, there is nothing I can do.”

She smiled with the politeness that befitted a gentleman of high society.

“Can I use you as a cute hostage?”

“Please don’t get hurt.”

“Don’t worry, if the teacher pleases us, Chaisol won’t have a single hair on his head.”

“You’re talking like a villain again….”

“He is indeed one of the best villains in the dimension.”

Chae Sol was astonished by their conversation.

“Is Geo hyung hurt because of me??”

“Don’t worry, little gentleman. You won’t get hurt.”

“Ha, but just now…!”

“If you know, it will hurt.”

“G, I was wrong to come into the house without permission…! I’ll stay quiet! Don’t make Geo-hyung sick!”

“It’s cute, but no.”

Aria looked at Giovanni.

“I should get to work soon, the sea is starting to freeze over too much for my cute children to handle. Before the person responsible for this incident empties the temple… I have to do what I have to do.”

She stroked my teacher's cheek.

“Are you ready to return to the sea?”

“Oh, how pitiful….”

Geo leaned his face against his hand.

“You need my mercy.”

“Of course, sir.”

Mermaids have always wanted the mercy of the sun.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (199)

199

Episode 199

“What are you doing?”

Aria paused at the innocent question, mixed with a hint of sadness and worry, and then answered after a moment.

“So to speak, it’s like moving the roots.”

“Do people have roots too…?”

“Every being has roots.”

Even inanimate objects.

“Why? Because Chaisol-kun also wants to come to the sea?”

“I like things the way they are.”

“That’s such a shame, if you had come, Giovanni would have felt much more at ease….”

“Why are you coming back?”

“I guess you have a lot of questions because you’re a newbie.”

“If you don’t like it, I’ll keep quiet.”

“You have a good grasp of the subject matter….”

Aria, whose voice was trailing off, continued to refine the system.

“He was the one who should have been in this sea originally.”

This should have been 'home'.

“For now, it’s just been taken away.”

“Who took it?”

“Fate.”

The cruel fate made them like this.

“…….”

“Are you sick, hyung?”

“…It’s not painful.”

As evidence, Geo's face, submerged in seawater, was as calm as a sleeping person.

“I just gave this person back where he belongs.”

“Is this where Geo-hyung was supposed to be originally?”

Chaisol muttered with a sad face.

“It’s so cold here. There’s a lot of shiny things, but it’s too big, there are no friends, it’s quiet… That chair that Geo hyung is sitting on doesn’t even look soft.”

“But that chair had the honor of the century.”

“If I sit for a long time, my butt will hurt because it’s so hard.”

“You sound similar to Giovanni.”

He also often had such absurd ideas. The buildings of the Sun Church were so shiny that it was tiring for the eyes, or this vast and huge temple was so lonely that it was not a place for people to live…

“Are you really the first apostle chosen by the teacher?”

“My sister said she was jealous of that. Is it any good?”

“Well, if you look at that alone, I’m not sure.”

These were words spoken from the perspective of a disciple who had once been the recipient of Giovanni's affection.

“This person is so special that he can’t be ordinary for even a moment. He has to be swept up in all kinds of tragedy and praise, or he has to be in the middle of it all.”

“…….”

“But… he’s so ordinary that it makes you yawn. In many ways, he was like that. It’s really hard to love and be loved by someone like that.”

Aria suddenly saw the Pope's room filled with sea water.

“Isn’t it beautiful?”

“What is it?”

“It looks perfect.”

It was a position that should have rightly gone to Giovanni.

“All the glory and honor was his….”

How wonderful it would have been if Geo had been the master of that throne when this temple was not as cold as it is now, when the sun had not been destroyed by the hatred of the mermaid. Then the sea and the sky would truly have become one.

If that was the case, then her ugly younger brother wouldn't have had to suffer either.

“…….”

"…excuse me."

Chaisol asked cautiously.

“Why should the roots return to their original place?”

“Are you asking why I’m harassing Geo like this?”

“You can also repot plants to a larger space….”

“First of all, the flowerpot called Earth doesn’t look very good.”

Aria folded her fingers and said.

“Second, I just want to die with you, teacher.”

“That’s really… incredibly… burdensome.”

“The teacher said the same thing. You all are similar after all.”

Strangely, there is no tension.

“Is that all you want to say after seeing Giovanni like this?”

“…….”

Chaisol turned his head and saw Geo tied up in the middle of a room filled with seawater.

He really looked like he was asleep. His calm face, which was not smiling but still enough to calm the viewer, seemed to be swallowed up by the sea water that had swallowed up all sound.

The jewel chains that bound him were shining transparently… .

"…just…."

Chaisol felt a similar emotion somewhere.

“It’s similar to when you climb a high mountain.”

“I wonder what that means.”

“When you climb to the top and look down.”

It was like when the whole world was visible at a glance and you felt 'wonderful' or 'beautiful' for a moment. Chae Sol's young vocabulary was not yet able to explain the feeling. It was just like a masterpiece created by nature.

So I felt sad.

“Brother Geo is a human being, so why are you acting like that?”

“I made it that way.”

“That’s a little different….”

“…That could be the case.”

Aria was like that too.

“Every time something like this happens, my heart skips a beat.”

You led us as a human, but when we reunited, he was no longer human. That brought strange pain to Arya.

“Come here. If you touch that seawater, a little kid like you will easily die.”

Aria bent down and tapped the jewel on a small necklace hidden inside Chaysol's cassock.

“If you get hurt, won’t your lovely friend be sad?”

“…….”

“Don’t worry, as long as Giovanni is there, I won’t hurt you or make you sick.”

“…I’m sick right now.”

“After seeing the teacher locked up there?”

It's so affectionate.

“I hope that affection eats you up someday.”

Like Giovanni.

That was the best blessing and advice Aria could give.

“…….”

“…….”

Chaisol walked holding Aria's hand.

‘…I came here because I wanted to help Geo-hyung and other people.’

It would have been better for both of us if we hadn't been so stubborn when I told us to go. We ended up causing trouble.

'I told him it was okay, since it was supposed to be like this from the beginning.'

And although he knew that it was true and sincere, it was also true that Geo's position was becoming more disadvantageous due to Chae Sol's presence. He couldn't help but fall into worry.

I wish I could help in some way.

'What can I do?'

Now, I couldn't just stay by Geo's side and chat with him to keep him entertained. I thought Geo would be fighting on the coastal front, so I followed him, but I never imagined he would be in a dungeon already.

'Rudarang and the teachers must be worried too. It's different from the village where it was okay to move without thinking. If only I had thought a little more before moving...'

Chaisol suddenly remembered the fluffy sun that had sent him here.

"……."

There is a reason for everything God does.

Oh, I see. Chaisol smiled brightly.

"…Why are you laughing?"

"They said that if you laugh, good fortune will come."

"Well, I wasn't really like that."

"Isn't it because you're from a different world than me?"

"Maybe so."

Aria asked.

"Have you finished thinking about it?"

"yes!"

"Then I guess I should lock him up soon."

"yes?"

Chaisol narrowed his eyes.

"You promised Geo hyung, didn't you…?"

“Yeah, we decided not to kill him right away.”

“I said I wouldn’t hurt you.”

“So I’m just going to lock you up.”

“Adults are lethal.”

“It’s wisdom that comes with experience.”

And then, on the other side of the hallway, Isser appeared.

“Sister, are you going to the sea?”

“So, I entrust you with this child.”

“Where should I put it?”

“Where it won’t hurt.”

Aria glanced down at Chaisol.

“…Put it somewhere where it won’t hurt.”

A cold but gentle hand fell away.

“It looks like humans are running wild in the sea, so it’s time for me to go.”

“From the outside, it is difficult to move the Earth’s oceans as a whole.”

“Do you think I don’t know that? You have to fill the gap left by my appearance on Earth.”

“I’ll deal with the humans who come in here.”

“Yeah, it’s no different than usual.”

Aria walked down the halls of the temple.

“Monsters have their own way of being monsters.”

I don't know what will happen, but the ending has come after a brief, sweet dream.

“I’ve waited a lot.”

"…All right."

A miracle came to me.

Now it was time to go and meet him in person.

* * *

Kang Seo-dam was speechless.

“…….”

“…Turn it off, ugh….”

“…Sister Iru?”

“Tea, tea….”

“Why are you here?”

He looked at the brothers of the Solar Church who had come with him with cold eyes.

“Are you bringing the prospective priest to this battlefield now?”

“Oh, no! We really didn’t want to bring you…!”

“Even if the child was stubborn, you should have stopped him. That is the role of a leader!”

“I brought you here with a condition because you were crying so much that you almost lost your breath.”

“What are the conditions?”

“If Father Kang Seo-dam refuses, I will go back….”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam clenched his teeth at the sight of his colleague who insisted on passing on his work. His face turned red, but he couldn’t bring himself to raise his voice in front of the crying child, so he let out a faint sigh.

He looked down at Iruda, who had a tearful face. He thought he had seen her many times, but this was the first time he had seen her face like this. Even though her thoughts were mature, she was still a child.

'That's why you shouldn't be here anymore.'

Kang Seo-dam bowed.

“Sister Iruda, I heard you came because you were worried about your partner.”

“…Hmm, I got caught, I got caught. So….”

“Can’t you trust the other brothers and sisters here?”

To be honest, even in this situation, Iruda was a helpful person. Especially Chae Sol, who was presumed to have been kidnapped by mermaids. Their talents were so great that they surpassed their years.

But Kang Seodam wanted those clean sprouts to not get hurt here. Not mentally, not physically. Childhood memories are deeply engraved in the brain and not easily removed.

“I promise, I will bring Brother Chaisol back safely.”

“Ha, but….”

After sobbing and trailing off for a while, she sniffled again and opened her eyes sharply. She tried to control herself and make a wise decision.

'Pushing emotionally won't get me what I want.'

She couldn't just be sent back here without having to convince the priests and come all the way to the actual scene. Yes, she really got what she wanted. She just had to do a little more.

“…I don’t think there is a provision that says reserve priests cannot be dispatched to the field. Rather, I think the Seoul church is required to summon reserve priests in the event of an emergency.”

“You’ve been studying.”

Kang Seo-dam was very angry at the current reality where the human rights of young priests are not taken into consideration. If related laws had been created or provisions had been prepared earlier, this kind of trouble would not have happened.

“That also depends on the situation. It is true that this is an emergency, but it is not a critical situation that requires the mobilization of reserve priests. If we call the priests of the church, we will call them, but reserve priests are not a manpower that can be easily handled.”

“But in all religions of providence, partners are considered as one body. I have the right and duty to act for my partner. I have checked several cases of the Sun Church in emergency situations. My actions are fully within the rules of the Sun Church.”

“Even so, it makes no sense to mobilize a reserve priest. Above all, we cannot be sure whether Brother Chaisol is really in the ‘Deep Sea Country’. The timing of his disappearance was just too coincidental, and there is no evidence, so using Sister Iruda, a reserve priest….”

“Z, I have proof.”

My hands, unable to do their job, fumbled around my neck. I wanted to act calmly and cleverly, but controlling my body was not easy. After a few short attempts, I finally succeeded, and with trembling hands, I hastily pulled out a round jewel.

“…….”

“It’s a resonance stone, this….”

Looking closely, I saw that not only the hand, but also the jewel itself was shaking.

"under."

Kang Seo-dam let out a hollow laugh.

Resonance stones are twin stones, and as the brother stones get closer, they have the property of shaking each other. Now, they are processed and used in various communication devices, but this was the pure stone itself.

“I shared it with my partner, Chaisol. I also brought the quality certificate. It is a natural resonance stone that has not undergone any processing or treatment… Its functions may be inferior to those of other artifacts, but its characteristic of reacting when near brothers will never change.”

Kang Seo-dam frowned.

“The being holding the resonance stone right now could be a monster.”

“I, I gave this to you in the form of a necklace. It is an artifact whose necklace chain does not come off naturally. Unless your neck is cut off… you will be together. Even if that really happened, it can be evidence that Brother Chaisol is nearby.”

“If there is this much evidence, there is no reason not to search.”

Kang Seo-dam, who had said that, opened his mouth a long time later.

“…I think I know why you came all this way, even if it meant making excuses.”

“…You could hide the truth about the resonance stone under the pretext of protecting me.”

“It sounds pretty lethal, but it’s true. I may have actually done that.”

There is no law or rule that says we shouldn't mobilize cadet priests in this situation. It's just that small and young people are a burden in this situation, and it's not ethical, so we just don't do it.

'Fuck.'

It made no sense to reject a priest who could do the job well enough when all the pretexts were ready. There must have been some priests who brought Iruda here who thought the same thing.

Kang Seo-dam's silence made him feel uneasy, so he took out the papers one by one again.

“This is the performance report I’ve received so far. I’ve achieved sufficient results while going out for practice. My performance is no less than that of a regular priest, and my position is a tanker… I don’t get hurt or die easily wherever I go.”

“…….”

“Look, I’ve also brought my medical records here. The divinity I serve is watching over me. The sun goddess has graciously given me her gaze, so I’m free from illness, and other… things like that… and my regenerative powers are also good…”

“Please stop.”

In the end, Kang Seo-dam couldn't hold back her sighs.

“You don’t have to say that.”

I couldn't stand to hear a little kid like Iru talking about his own usefulness any longer. Kang Seodam spoke to Iruda, who was once again disillusioned with this world and turned pale.

“I certainly have no reason to refuse Sister Iru’s cooperation any longer. If you have prepared this much information in a chaotic situation, you won’t get carried away by emotions and ruin your work, or get seriously hurt.”

“Well, then…!”

“But there’s something you have to promise me.”

He nodded as if he understood without me saying anything. He was still shaking, but his expression was bright.

“I will never get seriously injured. If I am in a dangerous situation, I will definitely use the escape seat. I will never go out alone, and I will receive ample help from other adults. I will not do anything reckless… I promise this on the trust I have built with you over the years.”

He was a smart kid.

“…….”

“Trust me, just this once… I won’t be stubborn again from now on.”

“…I believe in student Iruda.”

I just distrusted the world.

“May the sun bless you.”

"…thank you…!"

Even if he had been 15 years old, he would have felt better than he did now, but Iruda was a much younger student. Kang Seodam resented the world that could not stop Iruda just because he was 'young'.

Even the one who makes up that world.

* * *

“Oh, really.”

The laughter of the sea rang out.

“It’s a shame to ruin your hometown like this.”

“…….”

“Humans are truly fickle.”

The shape made of seawater and ice, like a jewel, was dark and blinding.

“Isn’t that right, Meteor Hunter?”

“I don’t want to hear that from a monster.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled at me.

“Now you want to fight yourself?”

“I can’t stand by and watch the ocean get destroyed any further.”

“Where did we leave our Sergio Hunter?”

“He is truly moving his roots, from this filthy earth….”

“Aha, you must have been very busy. How did you manage to get out?”

“So you can think of it as an honor. Isn’t it a great achievement for a human being?”

“You really are good at talking the talk.”

“Isn’t this the characteristic of the humanoid monsters you know?”

“Yeah, I know this conversation is pointless.”

Chae-Ang!

He lifted the window.

“Do you like the snowfield I created?”

“Oh my god.”

Aria burst into laughter.

“This is absolutely ecstatic…!!”

Kwaaaa ...

The icy sea shook with the mermaid's hatred.

“…It’s so hot here, isn’t it?”

The screams of the sea echoed.

“I have tinnitus…!!”

“Ugh…?! What is this…!”

“Be careful under the water!!”

“A large number of monsters are approaching!”

“Right now, inside the sea….”

Someone saw a shadow beyond the ice.

“That’s…!!”

“Hey, mermaid…?!”

A school of mermaids was emerging from the deep sea.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (200)

200

Episode 200

Chaisol was moved to a really safe place.

“??”

It felt like a different world here.

“It’s really bright?”

“It wasn’t that dark elsewhere in the temple either.”

“No, it was dark.”

“As I said last time, please just use formal or informal speech….”

“Then, Galaxy.”

“That’s informal speech. Okay, what’s going on?”

“Galaxy, you can speak informally to me too.”

“I don’t like it.”

Isser was disgusted.

“I don’t want to become that close to humans.”

“I want to become friends….”

“That's your opinion.”

“I thought so.”

Chaisol nodded.

“It’s been like that since the first time we met.”

“…Did you get a lot of tea?”

"huh."

Galaxy's eyes were always cold.

“But I thought it was fortunate that it didn’t seem like only I was the one who hated it.”

“Why did I think it was lucky?”

“You hated everyone else. That must mean something happened in the past that made you hate people.”

“They say there’s a sharp edge in strange corners….”

“Why do you hate people?”

“…….”

Isser laughed.

“I even hate that kind of ignorance.”

“Yeah, so why?”

“Because you took away my most precious thing.”

“Is that you, Geo hyung?”

"you're right."

I dreamed of the priest of the sun when I saw him.

“So, Chaisol, I tried to kill you too.”

I did it because I couldn't stand this disgustingness.

“But now you are the first believer of the Black Cloak. No matter what happens, I cannot harm you.”

“Is there a reason for that?”

“Because I wanted to be in your place someday….”

“My seat?”

“In the arms of the sun.”

When Giovanni becomes Pope someday, under the sky he has created, and also on the earth.

“I wanted to live as my teacher’s only disciple.”

It seemed like a predetermined fate. It felt like a future that would come naturally if I just enjoyed my sweet daily life without any special incidents. There were so many reasons why it would happen that way.

“But humans trampled on me.”

“…….”

“…Teacher too….”

Isser knew.

“…….”

“…….”

He knew very well that he had eaten his living teacher that day.

“…There is nothing I find more horrible than myself. My sister who piled up horrible corpses on my path, the priests of the sun who locked me and my teacher in a tank, and the humans who were busy pointing fingers without knowing anything, I hate them all, but not as much as I do.”

Isser asked.

“What do you think?”

“I don’t know what you’re asking.”

“What do I look like?”

"galaxy?"

“That’s so typical of you.”

But he was not a galaxy. He was not the Milky Way, which is what my name means. He could not be compared to the jewel of the night sky that can be barely seen with the eyes when all the lights on earth are turned off.

“Do you like this room?”

“I don’t think it’ll be dangerous.”

“I put a little effort into it.”

The room, filled with soft dolls, was round without a single sharp corner. The lighting was warm and bright, making it hard to believe it was in an undersea dungeon, and it resembled a spring day with a gentle atmosphere.

“I referenced the teacher’s cabin.”

“Oh, it’s nice there. There’s a lot of delicious food.”

Chaisol said while eating the dried fruit that Isser had given him.

“But it’s different there….”

The warm and cozy atmosphere definitely resembled Geo's cabin, but something was off. It felt damp and unpleasant, like the buzzing of a fluorescent light in my ears.

“I feel like I’m going to get dementia, not a nap.”

“You use some strange phrases.”

“You know.”

Chaisol said.

“I want to be friends with you.”

“…….”

“Ouch, face….”

“…Please don’t be so disgusting.”

He wiped the corner of his mouth as if he was feeling dizzy. Isser barely managed to answer with a pale face.

“Forcing someone to do something when they say they don’t want to is also violence.”

“But hasn’t the galaxy already committed an enormous act of violence…?”

“Surprisingly, you know how to fight back, but you’re wrong. You shouldn’t have even thought of treating me like the same being in the first place.”

Isser was resolute.

“If you are my teacher’s third disciple.”

“…….”

Chaisol's mouth stuck out.

“Brother Geo isn’t my teacher.”

“Be honored to be his disciple.”

“We are friends.”

“How dare you?”

“That’s what Geo hyung said.”

The child asked.

“What happens if the roots are moved?”

“…I will return to the sea.”

That was the last hope the mermaids had.

“It might be difficult though.”

Geo always did what he wanted.

This time it would be the same.

* * *

Giovanni saw the world through his eyes.

“…….”

I looked down at my hands.

"…hmm…."

Young.

'How old am I?'

He seemed to be about 13 years old.

The place he was in was a bustling market place. The clothes he was wearing were somewhat shabby, not befitting his status as a nobleman. Young Giovanni really enjoyed going out into the world wearing these clothes.

“Saint.”

“I am not a saint.”

“Yes, Father….”

“What’s going on?”

“You cured my son last time.”

“It was nothing, it was just my greed.”

“Please accept this.”

An old man with wrinkles on his face handed me an apple and disappeared.

“…….”

It was a very pretty apple, round, unblemished, red and ripe.

“…It’s delicious.”

The old man had a small apple tree growing in his yard. It was a young tree, so it didn't bear much fruit and didn't hang well. So these glossy apples were very valuable.

'I like it.'

I felt good.

“Baby Saint.”

“I am not a saint.”

“Yes, baby priest. Is it hot today?”

“It seems like the sun is in a good mood today.”

“Thank you for blessing our daughter, she gave birth to a child without any problems.”

“It’s not me, it’s your daughter who has shown strength. Congratulations.”

“Please take this water with you. It’s very hot today.”

The water that the old woman handed me was cool. It must have been water that had been cooled deep in the yard of the house, and had just been taken out. She saw me as she passed by, and on this hot day, she went back and forth to that deep place.

It was a grateful thing.

“It’s cool.”

The water in the ceramic cup had a cool forest scent. It must have come from a good water source. It must have been thoroughly managed to keep out dust and bugs.

“There, saint.”

“I am not a saint.”

“Oh, I see. But you treated my leg before, right?”

“I remember, you broke a bone?”

“I brought some honey from home to show my gratitude.”

“It’s what I wanted, no reward required.”

“But, saint, you should eat a lot of sweet and delicious things.”

“Why?”

“Because he is the kind of person who can do whatever he wants.”

“…….”

Honey flows down into the bowl.

"…thank you."

People called him a saint.

They called him the Son of the Sun. They said that he was a god who appeared and became a small body. They said that his smile was like sunshine and that his steps were like destiny.

Then isn't it not human?

'Why is that?'

He was human.

'I'm just living the way I want.'

People have always attributed meaning to it.

Giovanni kept walking. He walked and walked. He came to a familiar town. The warm sunlight, carrying the scent of summer, fell on the land and the sea. Geo realized that he was looking at the sea.

This was the sea. It was the end of the land. It was the dazzlingly beautiful sea of a seaside village.

“…….”

The wind caressed him, and he looked back without realizing it.

“…….”

It was the sea.

I looked ahead again.

“…….”

It was the sea.

“…Have we come too far?”

His feet were already floating above the sea surface. It seemed like it would be really cool to just jump in.

The sun was extremely hot, and there was not a single cloud in the sky. The surface of the sea that touched Geo's bare feet was so cool that he felt a moment of ecstasy.

'I think I fell into this place at some point.'

It seemed that if he went inside, a small and beautiful mermaid princess would welcome him.

“…….”

"teacher."

The little mermaid reaches out her hand.

“Isn’t it hot?”

“Where has the ground I was standing on gone?”

“That’s gone now, I ate them all.”

“How old was I?”

“I think it’s been over 30 years since I was born.”

“Aria, and you?”

“I don’t remember.”

The mermaid, who had become the sea, withdrew her outstretched hand. The beautiful woman whispered as if her young appearance had been a mirage.

“It’s been so long.”

It was a calm and sweet voice.

“It was so long, we could have taken a shorter route.”

“Was it greed?”

“You can say that.”

The mermaid who became the master of the sea had no trace of a small and delicate successor. She was no longer a child, but a wicked woman who had to take responsibility for everything, and also the great sea.

“Draw me a picture, teacher.”

“What kind of picture should I draw….”

“Draw me, my little brother likes it too.”

“This sea is truly beautiful.”

“I really loved the sea you drew.”

“Why?”

“I feel alive….”

The mermaid had already risen to the surface with both feet. Standing upright, she was only slightly shorter than Giovanni. Aria leaned over and hugged Giovanni gently.

“You know what? When you hug like this, you can hear your heart beating.”

“I can't hear very well.”

“That’s right, the teacher is dead.”

She asked innocently.

“Why did you do that?”

Poor thing.

“You could have just run away, obviously.”

“He must have run away and been caught.”

“Wouldn’t it have been better if we all died together? Wouldn’t it have been less horrible than it is now?”

“I didn’t think anything was terrible.”

Even the evil deeds of the mermaids were like that. I understood their choices apart from the weight of their sins. That's how it ended up being.

“Because, as you all said, I am already dead.”

“…My body feels cold.”

Aria asked without raising her head.

“Did you fall into the sea?”

“It was.”

“It wasn’t cold?”

“It was very cold.”

“Don’t you resent humans?”

“I feel resentful and sorry.”

“It must have hurt.”

“It was painful.”

The feeling of salt water rising between his torn flesh and bones was not very refreshing. The shackles that bound his legs were so tight that they seemed as if they would break his ankles, and Giovanni wanted to writhe in pain, but he had no energy and sometimes floated around the tank like a dead ornamental fish.

“I didn’t know that Isser would come in there….”

That hurt so much.

“I am grateful to Isser.”

“Why?”

“That kid killed me.”

“Why didn’t you die before then?”

“I wanted to see you.”

It seems like quite some time has passed, but how much has it grown in that time? What kind of expression will it have? Will it not get along well with humans and starve or become absorbed in strange research? Will it suffer from a serious injury?

“I couldn’t see Isser’s face in the tank.”

My eyes hurt so much that I had trouble seeing.

“But it was nice to meet you.”

“It didn’t hurt when you were eaten?”

“To be honest, it was better because it was more hazy.”

I wondered why the sun kept Giovanni alive.

“It was to let me hear that child’s voice.”

That voice reached my ears. It was thanks to the mermaid's ability to speak even in the deep sea.

“Wouldn’t it be enough to thank the sun for this?”

“…The teacher is so positive….”

“I feel like my arms are getting wet. Is it because I’m imagining things?”

“It must be my imagination.”

Aria cried sadly.

“Mermaids don’t cry.”

I can't cry.

“This is a dream.”

“Can I call you Aria?”

“…I am just her thoughts.”

“So it must be one of your pieces after all.”

“Well… you speak well, don’t you?”

“What is she doing?”

“I bet he’s freaking out.”

“Do you want me to stay here?”

"…haha…."

Awkward laugh.

“…….”

“…….”

The mermaid couldn't bring herself to ask him to stay.

"I see."

And Geo also didn't say anything about going back.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (201)

201

Episode 201

A little way from the coast.

“Hey, does the boss usually come out…? It seems different from the normal dungeon breaks….”

Kang Seo-dam, who was leading the team, answered the young priest's question.

“This rarely happens with humanoid monsters. Monsters with intelligence higher than humans have a wide range of activities. The scale of their power is so vast that they can accomplish various tasks even if it’s not their own dungeon.”

“Then, if we go down like this and the submarine we’re supposed to board gets attacked… I just heard that mermaids are rushing up from the deep sea.”

“That won’t happen thanks to the combined power of the ice-type hunters. Above all, the psychic-type hunters will also be going together to prepare for that. Since we, the children of the sun, can also attack from a distance, we have no choice but to carefully observe our surroundings as we go.”

They were heading to the Mermaid's Dungeon, taking advantage of the gap that was barely created when the dungeon boss came out of its nest. One side was attacking the boss outside, while the other was attacking the heart of the dungeon.

However, in this situation, they couldn't move around bare-handed, so they had to use a submarine. They moved under the guidance of the association staff. Kang Seo-dam let out a soft sigh.

"I wish Sister Iruda was in the rear…."

"That part has been discussed well, so I will leave it alone."

"That would be the case, it's not that safe that way."

"Because he's a kid who keeps his promises well."

"I think so too, but…."

It was assumed that Chae Sol would be in the mermaid dungeon, 'Deep Sea Country'.

Iru entered this war with great difficulty to find his partner, Chaisol, but he could not take her, who was a prospective priest, to the dungeon. It was an S-class dungeon where many people had died.

"… Well, worrying like this won't help."

Now, all I could do was hope that Iruda would be able to control himself well.

"How far is it until the submarine?"

"I'm sorry, but the mobile hunters can't work in crowded places…."

"No, it was purely a question of how much further I had to go. I also know very well that it takes a lot of effort for mobile hunters to focus their minds."

"Thank you for your understanding, I will be there shortly."

At that time, I received a call from an association employee.

“…Huh?! Oh, no, what is that….”

“What’s wrong? Is something wrong?”

“It is said that the mobile hunters and submarines are under attack.”

“Yes? If we go now….”

“In this situation, the mobile hunter prioritizes retreat.”

“…That’s right.”

Simply put, those with the ability to teleport were like water beings. They had no attack or defense power, but their evasion ability was higher than that of any other group.

They mostly work in safe places, and even if they are mobilized in an emergency, they are legally allowed to run away if their personal safety is threatened. This rule was created after countless hunters were exploited and killed as a means of transportation.

“What happened to the submarine?”

“I don’t think we can expect much from you since mermaids are crawling out of the sea and attacking.”

“But aren’t there any submarines left? Normally, you wouldn’t prepare just one in a case like this….”

“Considering the considerable number of mermaids, the situation does not look very hopeful.”

One of the hunters frowned at him.

“So what are you saying? We came all the way here, so why don’t we go to the dungeon?”

“No, we have to go to the dungeon. If we don’t conquer it, we don’t know when this damn battle will end. The amount of resources could be infinite from the dungeon….”

“That’s why we’re here now. But there are no submarines, and the teleportation hunters can’t be sent straight to the dungeon, so what are we going to do?”

The association staff presented an alternative, although with a puzzled expression.

“There is a submarine that has been placed in reserve. However, it will take quite some time to bring it here. The existing mobile hunters are probably quite tired from moving the large submarine, so we will have to deploy other personnel….”

“I think that will take quite some time.”

The hunter of the sea, Sanarae, asked.

“Can we go back?”

"that…."

“Huh? Can I go back?”

It was a pretty rude and uncooperative question, but it wasn't actually wrong.

The hunters here, who were carefully selected to conquer the dungeon, were at a loss for what to do, and the hunters who went to conquer the boss had no idea how many more would die on the shore while they were preparing a new submarine.

“You can’t just kill time here.”

“What Hunter Sanarae said is correct.”

It was when the faces of the association staff became gloomy.

“…….”

“…Wait a minute, that….”

"frame?"

The hunters detected an anomaly.

“Since when has there been a picture frame there?”

A concrete wall on the shore that still retains traces from before the catastrophe. The hunters sensed something in the picture frame hanging on the old, collapsed wall and approached it.

Sanarae made a tired expression.

“The smell of the sea.”

"yes?"

“…….”

“…Oh, it’s true.”

It was a painting of a familiar temple.

“Black cloak…?”

The picture in the frame swayed at someone's muttering.

"crazy?"

“What, what is this situation?”

“The painting inside is probably the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’….”

“So what do you want me to do? What does this mean?”

“Aren’t you telling me to go in?”

“No, what… Are you saying you’re going to help us?”

The hunters were dumbfounded.

“Why do monsters help humans?”

“But even in normal times, Black Cloak likes to give gifts to good people….”

“Are we good? No. We didn’t do anything good.”

“Does conquering count as a good deed?”

Kang Seo-dam looked at the association staff while feeling complicated about the reaction of recognizing the black cloak as a monster.

“…….”

“…? Why, why are you doing that?”

"no."

Perhaps this side did not know the truth. Kang Seo-dam was convinced.

'Well, even though they're association staff, they won't share all the information down to the lowest level.'

Although it would be impossible to dismiss the staff who had come all the way to the front lines as mere low-level employees, this ‘information’ was too risky to spread anywhere.

Kang Seodam thought about hundreds of things in a moment, but in the end, he decided to follow the will of the divine. If he did not follow their will, he would not be qualified to be a priest.

“…It is difficult to talk about this in this situation, but I will talk about it now. In our Solar Cult, we have determined that the Black Cloak is a type of divinity that embraces a very small number of apostles.”

"…yes yes?!"

“No, what is that…!!”

Not only the hunters, but also the association staff looked shocked. Kang Seo-dam couldn't understand why he had said such things and blamed the world, but as a human being, he had to do what he had to do.

“And the apostles were identified as Sergio Hunter, the collector, and Chaisol, the reserve priest of the Sun Church.”

“Sir, if that’s true….”

“It is not certain, but it is a settled fact within the Solar Church. I too have felt the energy of the Sun since I first met Sergio Hunter, and the ordained priest Chaisol has also testified about this on several occasions.”

“…Ah, so….”

They seemed to know why the 'Black Cloak' had opened the 'door' at this particular time.

“Are you asking me to save your children?”

In fact, there have been several instances where the Divine has been unable to exert direct power on Earth due to interference from the dimensional system and has sought help from humans. In particular, the Black Cloak has already established itself in Korea. It would not have been difficult to open a door like this.

“I’d like to delve a little deeper into this topic, but….”

“Where’s the time for that? I’ll think about the black cloak later. Anyway, if this isn’t a door opened by a monster, then it’s okay to use it, right?”

“It could be a demon, Black Cloak. I don’t know if this door is really safe.”

“But we need to get inside quickly while the coastal hunters are catching the boss’s attention. We can’t just sit still like this.”

“But are you saying that if we act rashly, we could all be wiped out?”

“Are you just going to wander around here while there are hostages captured inside the dungeon?!”

“If Sergio Hunter or the aspiring priest Chaisol were really the disciples of the Black Cloak, then this situation would be understandable. But that doesn’t guarantee our safety!”

“No, no matter what, the situation is like this now…!”

At that moment, something suddenly popped out from within the frame.

"dream."

“…What, what.”

“Huh?”

“…….”

One of the hunters doubted his eyes when he saw something fluffy hanging from the frame like laundry on a drying rack.

“…A teddy bear?”

It was a soft, warm-colored teddy bear with faded fur, but it looked like it had been regularly cared for, and it was filled with fluffy cotton. It was small enough to fit in your arms, had short arms and legs, and was warmly colored.

“What is this?”

“No, wait a minute. That….”

“…Tae, I can feel the power of the sun.”

The priests of the sun, like Kang Seo-dam, were making a fuss.

“That’s right, it’s definitely the power of the sun! I can’t feel the divinity, but I can definitely feel its traces…!”

“Could it be one of the Black Cloaked Apostles? He, he looks like that, but he really feels like the sun!”

And Kang Seo-dam realized.

'I was wondering who opened the picture frame while Sergio was locked in the dungeon.'

Kang Seodam, who had never been invited to the cabin, knew nothing about this teddy bear, unlike Yoo Seong-un or Joo Hyun. However, he could sense the traces of divinity and the energy of the sun, and he could tell that he had a close connection with the Black Cloak.

‘No, rather this is… .’

It was similar to the feeling I had when I visited the 'Temple of the Deep Sea' before.

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam looked around after reaching a conclusion.

“I can guarantee you that this teddy bear definitely exudes the energy of the sun, and in no dimension has the sun ever been on the side of providence. That means it is not an apostle of the evil spirit."

"But, but…."

"If you are not sure, let's go to our Solar Church first."

The Sun Church had the aforementioned expression, perhaps because they thought that another sun was helping them. Friendship rather than purity. The priests who had been united with the suns for a long time also treated the suns of other dimensions very friendly.

"I really didn't know that the Black Cloak was the sun deity…!"

"I've heard stories about it, but I never thought there would be an apostle with such a cute, incarnated body."

"It feels similar to the gift you give. Do you like cute things?"

"The black cloak itself is also a gentlemanly and kind mystery to humans, isn't it?"

"I am so grateful that you are so considerate of humans."

The other hunters' expressions also gradually relaxed at the priests' commotion.

"…Well, Black Cloak was always kind…."

"…Is there anyone here who threw away their colleagues?"

"I said that even Black Cloak wouldn't attack unless the person's character was severely damaged."

"Honestly, isn't being picky here just certifying that you're trash?"

"Yeah, fuck, I can't be a self-proclaimed piece of trash."

Although they were still anxious, they seemed to have gained confidence in the peaceful appearance of the Sun Church priests.

“I still feel a bit dizzy, but….”

“Let’s go in.”

So, the hunters borrowed the power of the black cloak and were drawn one by one within the frame.

“…….”

“…I, team leader.”

“Don’t talk to me, I’m confused too.”

The association staff were shocked to see the 'paintings' of hunters moving alive inside the frames.

“This is not the time. Quickly… Quickly, bring me the upper communication port. I need to ask my superiors what happened.”

“Ah, that, I’ll call the moving hunters right away. This place is close to the safe zone, so they’ll be here soon.”

“I’m going to go back, I don’t know what’s going on.”

There was so much to report.

* * *

“…….”

“…Here….”

Slap… .

A marble floor with shallow water.

“…It is definitely inside the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’.”

“But isn’t the atmosphere a little different?”

The hunters scanned their surroundings with anxiety and caution.

“I’ve been here once before, but it wasn’t like this.”

Dark.

Brilliant.

It's dreamy.

“Something… feels ominous.”

“I feel like I’ve fallen into the hands of an evil spirit.”

“I felt that way too….”

One of the hunters asked Kang Seo-dam, the leader of the team.

“The mermaids in this dungeon, were they evil spirits?”

"no."

but.

“I have only achieved something comparable to that.”

Kang Seo-dam looked at the world of mermaids with a tired feeling.

“…….”

The temple I found again was eerily peaceful and beautiful.

‘… I can see who influenced me.’

It resembles a funeral.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (202)

202

Episode 202

A soft song was heard from the temple.

“Isn’t this a hymn…?”

“I am a believer in Dalnim Church, so I listen to it sometimes, and it is really similar.”

The priests of the Sun Church looked a little offended.

“…If we have to be strict, it does meet the standards of a hymn….”

“No matter how similar it is to the music of Earth, you can’t say that it’s the same as music from another dimension.”

“I don’t know what kind of clue this will give, but I don’t feel good.”

Hymns were music to praise God and increase faith. It was blasphemous to hear such strange hymns in this place, which was once the temple of the sun. It was insulting to the sun and praising evil.

The faint singing that echoed throughout the temple was strange because of its slight dissonance, and its soft melody was languid like the twilight of a summer day, and incomprehensible because it resembled the howling of an animal.

It rippled like the cry of a whale spreading across the sea.

“…….”

"…anyway."

The hunters found their work even in this strange atmosphere.

“Is the most important thing understanding the heart?”

“Yes, there are many cases where the monster itself is a heart… but there are also quite a few cases where it has a separate heart.”

“And securing the kidnapped Sergio Hunter and the ordained priest Chaisol is also important. They are both great talents, and we can’t let them die like this.”

“I think I need to look around.”

Kang Seodam said, holding up a small, round jewel.

“You can find out the location of the prospective priest Chaisol by looking at this resonance stone.”

The resonance stone that he had shared with his partner, Chae Sol, began to vibrate more vividly as it entered the frame. It was beating like a small, living heart.

“It is definitely inside this dungeon.”

“Then Sergio Hunter too…?”

“We will proceed under the assumption that two people will be trapped in the same place.”

“How do you go about finding the heart?”

“As I said above, let’s split into two teams first.”

One side is to rescue the hostage, the other side is to find the heart.

“Sanarae Hunter, please take good care of me.”

“Yeah, I’m good at that. Don’t worry.”

“Even if a strong monster appears, lead your crew well so they don’t run away to another place….”

“Haha, don’t worry, don’t worry. We are really honest people.”

'I can't believe it.'

Kang Seodam met the eyes of the hunters who were on the same team as Sanarae. They also nodded, holding back a sigh. It was an urgent battle, so hunters of all kinds had gathered, but at least there were no random hunters.

'I guess I can trust this one.'

He nodded.

“See you later.”

“Okay, see you later.”

They were divided into two.

* * *

A gardener belongs to the garden.

They called themselves in many different languages. Some called themselves literally gardeners, others called themselves servants, errand boys, apostles, and believers. Still others called the gardeners his sons.

What we can learn from this is that 'gardeners' are those who cannot go against the garden.

“Ah, Mr. Flower Garden….”

Knock, knock…

Blood-stained flower petals fell beneath Jeong Yeong-won, who bowed his head.

“I’m sorry, Mr. Hwa-won. I made a mistake.”

Jeong Yeong-won wiped his eyes with his hands, shedding tears of blood. The rich texture of the flower petals touching his palms was soft.

While she is ecstatic at the pure smoothness like the skin of a newborn baby, she also sheds tears and apologizes at the anger and sadness that the flower girl cries out.

“Hwa-won.”

“Forever.”

“Oh, please….”

“You can’t let your guard down here, you know that, right? Huh?”

“It’s so cold here.”

“Oh my gosh, this is driving me crazy.”

The man was the team leader who managed a team member named Jeong Yeong-won. Even though he didn't know that she was a 'gardener', he knew that she was a being carrying a great mystery. He guarded Jeong Yeong-won, who was locked in a narrow and dark place, with a troubled face.

“What did you do this time to deserve this scolding?”

Jeong Yeong-won's eyes and hair were in full bloom like bright flowers. His fingers were sprouting tender buds. It was truly an eerie sight of a living person being absorbed into nature.

For those who are crazy about art, like collectors, this might be described as “beautiful” or “artistic.” However, for men with ordinary sensibilities, it was simply a horrifying and terrifying punishment.

“Mr. Flower, Mr. Flower….”

“I think it was after the meteor hunter was treated.”

Jeong Yeong-won was one of the best healers in the Eunwol Guild, but even she sometimes overdid it. This was especially the case when she borrowed power from her 'god' without permission.

'Was there a reason to do this?'

Of course, if the Meteor Cloud Hunter hadn't recovered, the place would have been scorched by the boss monster that had just appeared. There were many A-class hunters gathered here, but each and every one of them was a valuable resource.

'If even one person had been missing, it would have been a mess, but even so… .'

In the first place, I couldn't figure out how the meteor hunter recovered so quickly.

It was guessed that Jeong Yeong-won had done something, since it was something that could not be done by human power, but I could not understand everything.

“…….”

The man let out a long sigh and stayed by Jeong Yeong-won's side.

“Get well soon, I’ll stop other people from coming.”

“Ah, ahhh… huh…!”

“Oh my, there’s chaos….”

I don't know what was so urgent that they had to resort to the power of God.

'He's not a stupid guy.'

There must have been a reason for doing so, a reason he didn't know.

The man went out of the room to guard the surroundings. Then, as he closed the door, he saw a small figure standing nearby with a slightly bewildered look on his face. The man blinked and continued to assess the situation.

“Little priest?”

“Oh, yes, Iruda is a prospective priest.”

“Why are you here?”

“Because other people said they would entrust me to the Eunwol faction.”

“Aha, is that what the priests said?”

"you're right."

“Then you should welcome us anytime.”

Eunwol had friendly relations with the Sun Church and the Moon Church. The same was true for the prospective priests of those churches.

“What position do you usually play?”

“It’s a tank.”

“I thought you had already made a contract with God, Sister.”

“Thank you to the divine being who looked upon me favorably.”

“Sister Iruda was famous for receiving God’s gaze as soon as she was born.”

“It was a great blessing, if not for that, I wouldn’t be where I am today. If you ask me to do anything, I will do it above average.”

“There’s no need to say that much….”

He had been forced to stay at the front line, but he was quite humble. Feeling uncomfortable about voluntarily bending down in case he was kicked out, the man smiled awkwardly and waved his hand. The child with an overly large vocabulary was a bit unfamiliar.

“So you’re saying you didn’t come here because you were hurt somewhere?”

“No, that’s not it. I just wondered where I should be….”

“Oh, I see. If possible, I would like you to protect our camp.”

Although it was rare, it was not the first or second time that I had seen a child of Iruda's level step forward. The man was used to organizing Iruda's work and location.

“This place is mostly filled with healers, so they’re all covered in water.”

“I will do the best I can.”

“Uh, and….”

“…….”

“…Did you hear?”

I'm talking about the sound of Jeong Yeong-won writhing in pain.

“Can you pretend not to hear me?”

“I will keep my mouth shut in the name of the sacred.”

“I would appreciate it if you could do that.”

I'm glad I didn't ask why it ended up like that.

'I don't have the confidence to explain it either.'

It wasn't just for a day or two that Jeong Yeong-won was showing off his awkwardness towards 'Hwa-won-nim'. Since he was a close friend of her, he thought, 'Do you have a god you serve?', but he didn't know Jeong Yeong-won's circumstances either.

'But there's no good to be gained by spreading the word.'

Jeong Yeong-won was a good colleague and a decent friend. If there were circumstances that she didn't want to talk about, I would want to hide them from her as much as possible.

“Can you tell me what tanking is like?”

“It’s a method of gathering monsters in one place and then creating a defensive barrier.”

“Is it like a barrier? Then maybe you can just lock it up?”

“It’s not impossible, as it’s the concept of setting up an invisible wall, but I’m not there yet….”

“It’s amazing that you can even build a single wall. I respect that.”

What was I doing at that age?

“What is the shape of that barrier?”

“We have recently succeeded in making it in the shape of a hemisphere.”

“What is the accommodation area?”

“Up to five adult males are allowed.”

“Oh, that’s pretty….”

It was a great thing.

The most effective form of the barrier was the sphere, followed by the hemisphere. However, most barrier hunters felt a great barrier to changing their form in that way.

'But it's already possible to have a hemisphere and can accommodate five people.'

Even though he was chosen by God, his talent was outstanding.

“Hmm, so what if we just build a rectangular wall?”

“If that’s the case, then this tent is possible. All we can do is block the entrance….”

“Then, little priest, let’s conserve your strength as much as possible, and then come forward when the front line is breached and the amount of water pours in.”

“…I don’t want to contradict the decision maker, but is that really the right thing to do? In the situation you mentioned, it would be time to consider retreating, and that would be tantamount to losing this battle.”

“As expected, Sister Iruda is smart.”

But that's enough.

“Sister, your ability is exactly what you need to use at such times. In the final situation, when no one can protect you and the patients here.”

“…….”

“Until then, you can just laze around without doing anything. Do you understand?”

“I’m so sorry about that….”

“If you’re sorry, at least the healers could help me out. I heard that the Solar Cult learns about first aid from the time they are novice priests. Go find people who need things and help them out.”

“Oh, yes, I will do that.”

“More than anything, I don’t think you need to worry too much.”

The man smiled his characteristic smile.

“I’m not being lazy, I’m trusting people beyond the walls.”

Both the A-class hunters who could operate in the sea and the B-class hunters who could not, were all gathered to block the boss. The man believed that they would not let it in until they reached the mainland.

* * *

“Whoaaaah!!”

“What the heck, who brought that crazy person here!!”

“누가 어리바리래 개새끼야…!!”

Of course, the situation at the front line was not so easy.

“You damn thing, where the hell are you pulling that seawater from!”

Thanks to the activity of the meteor cloud, they succeeded in freezing the surface and the area below it. However, unfrozen seawater continuously rose from the deep sea and attacked the hunters.

Of course, there was a limit to this, as the seawater gradually rose and froze in a fluid manner like slush… .

“What kind of sea water has an ego!!”

“Wow, shit, I’m going crazy…!”

Kwajik! Kwajik! Kwajik—!!

The sea water mixed with hard, thick ice moved like a living snake, flying towards the hunters and slamming them into their sockets.

The hunters had to deal with mermaids crawling up from the deep sea, fighting off living ice and freezing seawater.

“What the hell are those mermaids…!!”

“Hey, someone call some flame hunters!!”

“This isn’t something that can be solved with just this staff…!!”

The mermaids laughed at those humans.

“Ahahahahaha!”

“Hahaha, uhhhh…!”

“Ahhh, ahhhh!!”

with a plop-!!

“Kuaaaah!!”

“Hey, catch that kid!!”

They did not speak a language, but they grabbed the ankles of panicked humans and dragged them under the sea. Even the most skilled hunters would have difficulty surviving if they fell into the frozen depths of the sea.

It wasn't hard to deal with the mermaids made of flesh. You could tear them apart with your weapons or freeze them with cold air. The problem was the number of mermaids crawling out from the deep sea.

“Why are there so many…!”

An endless stream of mermaids emerged from the sea.

“Fuck, did the attack team actually enter safely?!”

“I got a call that they entered that dungeon!!”

If they had traveled by submarine, there would have been considerable damage, but fortunately, that did not happen. The situation was so urgent that even though they had not heard of any help provided by the 'Black Cloak', the hunters were able to hear some news.

And the meteor went wild.

Paang-!!!

“…….”

The ice on the snowfield is harder than anything else.

He drove his spear into the ground, and used the recoil to fly up and create another spear in an instant, freezing and tearing the mermaid princess's body apart.

Clink! A sound like glass beads or diamonds being scattered spread out.

But it soon subsides.

“Oh, this hurts.”

“Oh, right.”

Kkwaddeok!!!

The meteor landed, creating another iceberg on the glacier, and then ran again.

“The joke is too much.”

A face with a mocking smile, a torso without a heart, legs with obvious decoration.

He flew out like a bullet and froze and shattered the woman's face once more, but the result was the same. Not only Yoo Seong-un, but also many hunters repeated the freezing and shatter, but the mermaid princess was not affected at all.

'I guess so.'

The sea exists even in the polar regions.

'No matter how cold the place is, there is an ocean.'

It can freeze some, but not all. Freezing the entire ocean would be like bringing about an ice age in that dimension. It can't be done, and it shouldn't be done.

'So it's impossible to freeze and hit the mermaid who has become one with the sea… .'

Choaaaak—!!!

Yoo Seong-un held the spear tightly as he slid on the ice.

'All the cold can do is stop its movements for a moment.'

Even just that alone was a great help to the humans. Every time the boss monster moved, it would cause a lot of damage, so we had to freeze it. But this was just standing still.

'The damage on our side is even greater.'

The mermaid was the living, breathing sea, but the humans were not the cold itself. Even if this war of attrition continued, the only one who would benefit was the mermaid princess. That thing could move whenever the humans got tired.

“Ha, shit.”

Yoo Seong-un's face distorted fiercely.

“And then.”

“Meteor Hunter, freeze!!”

“Ah, here we go!!”

Aaaa ...

Kwajijik-!!

Kwakwang, Chae-Ang!!

Freezes the harpoons of seawater flying towards you like arrows, one by one.

The meteor stepped on it and slipped. The moment he was about to approach the princess's body, the ice bridge shattered, but he stepped on more ice, jumped, and flew to reach the princess again.

The moment our breath touched each other.

"hey."

The sea spoke.

“Who will win?”

"I."

Yoo Seong-un smiled firmly at the monster's question.

“Win.”

Kwajijijik, paang—!!!

The princess's face shatters into pieces.

“…….”

Choaak!!

As she stepped onto the glacier once more, the mermaid princess, who had recovered in an instant, smiled.

“…Ahaha, haha…!”

“Why are you laughing?”

“Isn’t it funny how confident you are?”

“Sergio Hunter will be on my side.”

“How can you be sure of that? Do you believe that he loves these ungrateful humans?”

“Well, of course. He was born that way!”

“Do you really think so?”

Aria asked.

“Do you believe that man is the embodiment of compassion?”

“You know this is far from ordinary, right?”

“He was human too.”

“…….”

“I like to laugh, chat, and joke around….”

Love and hate.

"person."

The mermaid says that Giovanni was not the epitome of charity.

“He also feels pain as pain. He knows how to feel pain when he’s in pain, and he even cries when he’s sad. But you only see Geo as a work of art.”

“Do you want to say that I am arrogant? Ignorant? And unreasonable?”

“Oh, yes, it’s so horrible. Humans are truly so disgusting. Why must such a precious being be placed among you and become an idol?! Why must he become a symbol of good luck, a saint of mercy…?!”

The woman was angry.

“He is just a normal human being!!!”

Screamed.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (203)

203

Episode 203

On the vast ocean of dreams.

"…teacher."

The mermaid cried.

"love you."

“…….”

Giovanni is like that too. He loves these little, silly mermaids.

He loved them too much to forgive them. He knew these horrible and cruel mermaids. They were committing sins again and killing innocent lives.

Those fools who think that's really 'responsibility'.

"…okay…."

His innate specialness separated him from all the fates of the world, but no matter how special I am, will it be as great as the time we spent together? In the end, Giovanni, who is only human, decided to reach out.

“…In the end, I will have to drag you to hell myself.”

A mere priest laughed.

“How can you be this stupid.”

And then he cried.

I had no regrets, but that did not mean that my suffering was alleviated. Despite always doing my best to love and give, Giovanni had to die a horrible death.

And now, I have to bear in mind the sins of my beloved disciples.

“I should not have lived such a wicked life that I had to face such sins….”

* * *

“Priest…!”

“Brother Chaisol!”

Kang Seodam saw Chae Sol trapped inside a barrier.

“I wanted to ask this all along, but why are you here?”

“Excuse me, how do I write a statement of facts?!”

“Brother Chaisol, a prospective priest, has enough of a letter of reflection!”

“I don’t know, but please tell me how to use it when you get back…!!”

“I will do that!!”

It was a dizzying experience.

“Can someone analyze this barrier? We need to get Priest Chaisol out of here before another monster comes!”

“I have skills, please step aside!”

The Hunter quickly analyzed the composition and structure of the barrier. He looked back at the priests of the sun with a bewildered expression.

“Is this the sun?!”

“No, what does that mean?”

“It’s the sun, in terms of its composition and structure…!”

“If that was the case, how could we not have noticed…?!”

“Ha, but really…!”

Kang Seo-dam quickly accepted reality.

“They refuse to let us read it.”

“It is absurd that the sun would reject its own child!”

“That ridiculous thing just happened, don’t lose your spirit with nonsense and accept reality! Are you going to look so ugly in front of the prospective priest!!!”

“Eek….”

“Listen carefully, I’m dismantling the barrier before the monsters come!!”

The priests who were trying to refute Kang Seo-dam’s face, which was like a devil, had their shoulders hunched. Kang Seo-dam was famous for being a senior who hated foolish or incompetent priests because he had a clear sense of duty and personal integrity, and did not treat them like human beings.

“Even so, it’s still not readable, so what should I do…!”

“Shut up and get out of the way, you filthy bastards! Don’t waste time, at least give me cover!!”

“Yes, yes, yes!!!”

The hunters who followed along were amazed at the priests standing guard around the entrance in perfect order.

"scary."

“Oh, it’s scary….”

No, I was scared.

'I've heard many times that the religious world is strict from top to bottom…'

'I'm glad I didn't awaken as a priest.'

'When Father Kang Seo-dam gets angry, that's what his face looks like. He's amazing.'

They took their places among the priests after separating out the personnel who could not help in dismantling the barrier. They were all hunters who had studied how to cooperate with the priests in such situations.

Kang Seo-dam and the hunters were finally able to break the barrier after pulling out their hair.

“Brother Chaisol, come here.”

“Oh my goodness, teacher…!”

“I will tell you what happened after we get to a safe place. We cannot bring Brother Chaisol to land right now, so please follow us to safety. Did you hear? We will move to safety. Do you understand?”

“Yes, I’m sorry…!”

“It’s also the fault of the teachers who failed to manage the reserve priests. No. As I said before, let’s talk about this later. For now, we need to quickly join up with the other teams and proceed with the strategy.”

Kang Seo-dam, who had been extremely excited by the numerous monsters he had encountered on his way here, took a deep breath. He asked Chae-sol with his usual cool-headedness.

“Do you know where Sergio the Hunter is? Or maybe the Mermaid Hunter named Isser….”

“I know where Geo is!”

“Good, where exactly are you and what is your condition?”

“The Pope’s room is tied up with seawater in the middle!”

"oh my god."

The other hunters were also astonished.

“Ah, no. Why on earth…?!”

“Why in the Pope’s room?!”

“What kind of special treatment is this…?”

“Isn’t this too brutal to be called special treatment?!”

“That, that means I’m also speechless….”

Come to think of it, the mermaids had a history of using civilian hostages to kidnap Sergio Hunter. Seeing that they even kept Chaisol in separate ‘storage’ like this, it seems like they really had plans to do something to the Black Cloaked Apostles.

'Well, they are talented people who are too valuable to just kill.'

'Considering that the black cloak's frame was occasionally hung inside the temple in the past, I wonder if there really was some kind of connection. It might be worth investigating.'

‘Are the mermaids not on good terms with Black Cloak…?’

Kang Seo-dam let out a deep sigh in the strangely chaotic atmosphere and calmed the people down.

“The orphan priest Chaisol knows the location of the room where Sergio Hunter is imprisoned. We should head straight there. Everyone, be on your guard, as we don’t know if there will be any sabotage along the way.”

“Yes, leader.”

"All right."

While moving like that, the hunters who had been divided into two teams met again.

“No, why are you here?!”

“I’ve almost finished figuring out the story.”

“Aha, then….”

“There was nowhere else to check!”

There have been some truly absurd monsters and traps along the way.

“The pig-human priests are about to eat us…!”

“Was it the same for you too?”

“There was also something like a sweet scent reaching out from inside the pond.”

“I lost three of them there because I had a charm skill….”

“There were also undead chasing us with farming tools?”

“Oh, that’s really gross.”

“There were also some guys who just ran towards me because they were hungry….”

“That was in the old dungeon too.”

“The new mobs are insanely difficult, really.”

But even after wandering around like that, I couldn't find the 'heart'.

“In the worst case scenario, the boss monster might be the heart of the dungeon itself.”

“But the boss monster has already become one with the sea for a long time….”

“Damn, what do you do in this case? Burn them to death with fire?”

“If you keep doing that, there will be no end to it.”

“In the first place, evaporation rises into the sky and turns into vapor.”

“This is why liquid monsters are so tricky.”

“It would be better if it were slime….”

“They even have nukes.”

Most liquid monsters have nuclei in their bodies, and if you destroy them, they die. But the sea, and a mermaid who has become one with the sea. How on earth are you supposed to deal with that?

“First, let’s make sure there are nukes.”

If there was really no way to kill it, then it was a divine realm. However, all the priests felt that there was no such level here. They were just monsters, so there was no way they could not kill it.

“You can organize it step by step.”

“That’s true, but I can’t help but feel anxious.”

“Oh, come on, let’s not talk heavy words.”

“It’s true that it’s a difficult situation, isn’t it?”

The moment I arrived at the Pope's room.

“…….”

“…That.”

Someone opened their mouth at the same time.

“Aren’t you Sergio Hunter?”

“You’re not a mermaid…?”

Isser, the mermaid who had been leaning on her master's lap, opened her eyes.

“…….”

His eyes sparkled with intense disgust.

“You are an intruder.”

“…What did you do with Sergio Hunter?”

“He is moving his roots to where he should be.”

“Where should I be?”

“In the sea.”

Woof—….

The water that filled the room resonated.

“Coming to the sea.”

So I was on my knees and praying.

“This earth is too small a pot for him to be in.”

“That’s not for you, a mermaid, to decide.”

“That may be true, but since when have humans only followed providence?”

“There is a minimum level of good.”

“Then what about my teacher?”

Why did my noble human teacher die like that?

“I hate you guys.”

“Ha, did we kill your teacher?”

“I hate your short life.”

Clank!

A staff full of golden decorations is held in the mermaid's hand.

“You humans hate the fact that you are one of the children of Providence.”

They were evidence of providence and traces of deception. That was the fundamental reason why humans became the target of mermaids' wrath.

Yeah, that's unreasonable.

'But it's okay.'

There was no intention of winning from the beginning. The mermaids had already decided to take 'responsibility' and finished their story. This was just a play to get to the end.

Isser laughed.

“I have put in a lot of effort to welcome you. I have decorated the temple to make it even more beautiful and luxurious, and I have brought out the pigs that I have been saving for the audience who are curious about the story.”

“Is this a story about monsters…?”

“Are you satisfied? No, I know you aren’t. Humans are so greedy that there is no end to it.”

Whew Whew.

Isser's ears change from human to mermaid's.

His ears, which hung like mystical silk, became indistinguishable from his mermaid hair, the color of the clear sky, his teeth became sharper, and his pupils shone even more pearly.

The staff grew lushly, even growing a long tail that resembled that of a water dragon.

"purple."

Hwaaaa ...

A golden staff grows in the shape of a tree.

“The sun grew in the deep sea.”

It began to envelop the entire temple with an ecstatic light like the sun.

“So me too.”

"…under."

“I will welcome you with the sun.”

Chorus.

Isser, too, was soon dyed gold.

“Oh, right….”

Two horns resembling tree branches grew above his forehead.

"yes."

The mermaid, momentarily shedding the cold light of the deep sea, asked.

“Is your sun merciful?”

“At least better than you.”

“Then why don’t you try asking for it?”

“You want me to save you?”

"no."

He smiled broadly.

“Please live.”

The suns of countless dimensions that have been submerged in the sea until now.

Who ended up eating them?

* * *

Yoo Seong-un thinks.

“…….”

Is Giovanni human?

'that's right.'

He was 'once' human.

There was Sergio, an eccentric art teacher from South Korea, and Argio, the demon king who survived in a forest full of poisonous plants. They lived in human bodies without being human, and eventually became non-human.

Is it bad to see him as a work of art?

'I'm already treating him the way he wants to be treated?'

Geo liked that kind of person called 'Meteor Cloud'.

'That's right.'

His cherished portrait, 'Geo', was so generous and kind that it was possible. The mere gardener was so moved by even a single glance from the source's eyes that he didn't know what to do.

Yoo Sung-woon was doing well. He was a gardener and a curator. He was doing his job. Geo was not angry about it, but rather pleased.

Then suddenly my thoughts wandered to another place.

“…….”

Would Geo hate it if I treated him like a human?

‘… No, that’s not it… .’

I know that's not the case because there's a case called Joohyun.

'But I'm not doing anything wrong, am I?'

This is the attitude that Yoo Seong-un wanted, and it is an attitude that Geo does not hate. It is never a sin for a curator to treat a work as a work of art according to a situation that satisfies everyone. Why not?

The mermaid was looking down at the meteor cloud while her entire body was being torn apart and exploded by countless hunters. The princess sat between the throne made of giant waves and the ice sculptures and looked neat.

“Arrogant.”

“Admit it.”

“You are no different from your master.”

“Of course we resemble the guild leader….”

“That’s terribly selfish.”

“That’s just how humans are.”

It was a sound that incited the mermaid's hatred, but there was nothing she could do about it.

“That's true.”

It's a bit unsettling to define humans like that.

“…….”

“…….”

In the battlefield where tinnitus rang and glaciers broke, Yoo Seong-un's eyes grew wide.

"…ah."

Was Geo human?

What was it like to be human in the first place?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (204)

204

Episode 204

One day, a portrait appeared in Yoo Seong-un's life.

“…….”

It had artistic value.

A balanced body that looks like it was carved from the most ideal human being, a stuffed form that never changes, and above all, eyes that captivate people and make them fall into a vast abyss just by their presence.

How could you not be captivated by that?

No, there wasn't.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was a gardener. He was a curator. He lived like that his whole life since he started taking care of the garden, and nothing changed. He respected, admired, and loved 'Portrait of Geo'.

But could it be a person? Could it be?

“…….”

What was a 'person'?

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un…!!”

“…….”

“Hey, shit, Yoo Seong-un, what are you doing!!”

“…….”

“You fucking punk!!”

Yoo Seong-un blinked slowly. His eyes were dyed the color of glaciers.

“…It’s definitely a topic worth thinking about.”

His superior, Bisabal, divided everything in life into works and non-works. Recently, he confirmed that there was a category called 'hero' in there, but that was none of Yoo Seong-un's business right now.

However, he treated his guild members, who were his collection, as works of art while also treating them as human beings. Yoo Seong-un was moving according to that framework. Then, is it seeing people as works of art or as human beings?

'Or can both coexist?'

Or is there none?

“It’s difficult.”

Yoo Seong-un did not like his own changes that much. His changes were like the changes in the garden and the deterioration of his work, so whenever he changed, there were always sacrifices, big or small.

How many sacrifices will be required this time?

“This is a bit unpleasant.”

Amidst the ear-piercing noise, Yoo Seong-un readjusted his window again.

‘…the sea cannot be frozen.’

This was especially true of the Earth's oceans, which are full of salty water.

It is difficult to freeze easily, and when frozen, it hardens in an instant. And then melts again in an instant. Yoo Seong-un decided to think of another way.

'Flame.'

What if it just evaporates?

'No, that's hard.'

This foul-tempered sea showed that it could rule the sky by using hail. No matter how much the sea water was evaporated, it would just fall again as rain.

'If it's a monster that is the sea itself...'

If freezing or burning doesn't work, then it will still remain in the form of water.

'We have to take the initiative away.'

Someone else had to be eaten, just like those mermaids did.

“…….”

Although he didn't know the method, Yoo Seong-un felt a little sorry for Jeong Yeong-won.

“Ah, what should I do….”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, have you come to your senses?!”

“My hearing is deaf, move away and speak.”

“If we don’t freeze, go inside, come to your senses, and throw the spear!!”

“It’s not like that’s going to work now.”

“Then what are we going to do? Let’s all die together?! Isn’t this guy a bad guy!!”

“Let’s think about it.”

“Let the others think, you move!!”

“Oh, you’re so rude.”

Yoo Seong-un looked at the hunter he was close to, his ears almost numb.

“Go and call Hunter Jeong Yeong-won.”

“What? Why, therapist?”

“Call all tree type hunters, and also….”

“No, this is sea water, you know?”

They also thought about having other plants absorb this overflowing seawater. If they could just take the initiative, they could eliminate the danger of the absorbed water.

How to restore the reduced seawater is a problem for later, but for now, that's what it was. But the liquid they had to deal with right now was not just water, it was seawater.

“How can plants eat this!”

Unless it was a monster of some kind, it would wither and die. And there weren't many hunters who could grow such a monstrous plant. After all, plants are plants.

“Well, if we just fire whatever we can, we might be able to win with quantity, but that’s not going to happen…!”

“It’s frozen.”

"yes?"

“This is ice, we all froze it together.”

Thanks to the cold hunters' bang bang skills, the sea was gradually turning into colder ice. And the meteor cloud couldn't create this solid ice in an instant, and it took time for it to freeze.

'I almost fell over doing that.'

If you freeze it suddenly and quickly, it doesn't become solid ice. It took time to create such a strong glacier. I'm a little out of my mind, but anyway, what Yoo Seong-un wants to say is... .

“The salt would have sunk to the bottom.”

It's one of the scientific common senses.

“That’s just how seawater is.”

“What are you talking about, no, ah, ah… ah…? Ah!!”

“That's what I said.”

Water and salt have different freezing points.

'Salt after water.'

So if Yoo Seong-un's thinking was correct, that meant that while the oceans around here were frozen solid like vast snowfields, the salinity would have gone down. At least that's what happened to the oceans on Earth.

“I didn’t think about this and put in the effort to freeze it….”

Crunch-!!

I pulled out the spear that had been embedded in the ice.

“If you just melt it on top, there will be no problem feeding the flowers.”

“Fuck, that’s right.”

“Have a nice trip.”

“I’ll call you right away.”

What was needed was a tree type hunter who could grow flowers and trees in an instant, and a fire type hunter who could melt the upper layer of this ice. Fortunately, all of these manpower were available here.

As he sent the contact away like that, Yoo Seong-un thought.

'There's no way that mermaid wouldn't know this.'

A doctor and PhD who has achieved achievements that border on evil and has produced numerous research materials.

'But the fact that these bustling humans didn't do anything until the sea froze over...'

Yoo Seong-un clicked his tongue.

“Are you looking down on me?”

This was a mercy and a condition. If the intelligent beings were too stupid to even think of this, they would all just die.

'He kept saying things like the Earth is too small to be Geo's flowerpot, so maybe he's testing his qualifications in some way before leaving forever... .'

In such a difficult and noisy situation, it would be difficult to think of common sense, but from the mermaids' perspective, even that would be pathetic. Yoo Seong-un felt very dirty.

'… How arrogant of you to be a murderer who doesn't even know the value of life.'

Among the hunters, Yoo Seong-un, who was rare and not a monster hater, was the one who got the most out of it.

"You're tired, aren't you?"

This flower pot was personally chosen by Geo.

It was blasphemous to dare to question the choice of the source.

* * *

"What, what is this…!!"

The priests of the sun were greatly astonished, as were the other hunters.

"The sun's energy is this strong…!!"

"Poem, this is blasphemy! This should not happen!!"

"What on earth is this crazy monster doing…?!"

It was clearly the sun that was felt in the great golden tree that surrounded the great temple, and the priests of the sun belonging to Earth felt that there were many 'suns' gathered there.

That crazy monster has been eating the suns.

"……."

"…Fuck…."

There were also hunters with strange appearances.

'This is… too much… to be a spectacle created by a monster.'

Isn't it sacred?

It was so beautiful. I couldn't help but stare at the enchanting sight.

Warm sunlight shone throughout the temple, as if gold dust was falling, and the various gold and silver treasures decorating the temple shone with a dazzling light that was almost blinding. The hunters hesitated at the sight of the colorful light.

‘It’s really the sun… .’

'And you say it's not divine?'

It was a beautiful sight, as if only the sun's most precious and pure light had been collected.

“…Phew….”

Kang Seo-dam pushed Chae Sol back.

“Stay among the hunters.”

“I’m useless here?!”

“It’s useful, but isn’t Brother Chaisol’s position a healer?”

“Ha, but what if the teacher gets hurt…!”

You seem to have some favoritism that you don't pretend to have.

'Well, if you don't have this much preference for humans, then it must be Black Cloak.'

Chaisol seemed to want to protect Kang Seodam more than a stranger or other priests who had never taken care of him properly. There was no greater shame than being protected by this small child.

Kang Seo-dam hesitated for a moment, but then spoke strongly again.

“Chaisol.”

"! yes yes."

“Go back.”

"All right…!"

They say that even a rotten tooth is a good tooth, but Chae Sol was a valuable talent who had never rotted. Although he was still a young student, he immediately understood the seriousness of the situation and followed Kang Seo Dam's words.

Kang Seo-dam fixed the staff.

‘The staff I usually carry around has grown into a tree like that… .’

The staff of Mermaid Isser had also seen Kang Seo Dam. It was a golden staff with a wooden texture that had an antique charm. And I also knew that it had once belonged to 'Giovanni'.

'Is that an obsession?'

The mermaids in this dungeon were overly emotional.

“I think the conversation is over.”

“You are so considerate.”

“I don’t want to make a fuss here without manners.”

Isser stood in front of Sergio, who was still tied to the Pope's chair. The long, straight hair of the mermaid, dyed in gold, had something in common with Sergio's and Giovanni's.

However, the mermaid's eyes were the color of pearls, a terribly blue color.

“Let me take this guy.”

A red face appeared on Kang Seo-dam's face.

“You are encouraging sacrifice.”

“Sacrifice? No, that’s not it. It’s a better development.”

“Did Sergio Hunter agree with that development?”

“He promised to stay instead of the weak and incompetent humans.”

“It’s a threat, it’s very barbaric.”

“I didn’t know I would hear that from humans.”

Isser laughed as he came down the steps one by one.

“I’m quite honest and I’m not capable of doing such barbaric things.”

“It’s a truly amazing story.”

“Instead, let me propose a deal.”

“A deal, in this situation?”

“I have been very weak since I was young.”

“…….”

“I’m not that strong even now….”

That's why Isser always did something different.

“Let’s try it.”

As Isser spread his arms slightly, the golden tree shed a bright and sacred light like the sun.

“This tree will show them dreams.”

"dream?"

“It could be a dream, an illusion, a fragment of the future or the past. It is up to you and these many suns to decide in providence.”

“You’re talking nonsense.”

“If you wake up healthy, you can fight me.”

“What if I don’t wake up?”

“It will become fertilizer for the trees.”

“Can you refuse?”

"no."

The mermaid smiled, carrying her backpack on her back and swinging one hand.

“May the blessings of the sun be with you.”

So, humans lost consciousness.

“…….”

“…….”

Except for one person.

A strange silence flowed, as if behind a curtain after an actor's performance, and the two creatures' eyes met.

Chaisol's pupils shook.

“…….”

“…Uh, uh, uh….”

“Chaisol.”

“Why can’t I sleep…?”

“You know you’ll wake up anyway.”

“Hey!”

Chaisol's face brightened for a moment.

“Just talk comfortably!”

"…okay."

“Are you friends with me?”

“You still say that to me at this point?”

“Even the Milky Way didn’t knock me down….”

"that…."

Isser sighed.

“…How could two people like this be born in the same dimension?”

It's Seo Ji Oh and Chae Sol.

He walked slowly down the stairs. The priestly robes he was wearing caught the golden light and followed him step by step. Soon, Isser kicked away the humans who had fallen in the path without any sincerity and stood in front of Chaisol.

He made a stern face as if he was scolding his younger brother.

“I didn’t tell you to stay in a safe place.”

“I didn’t want to be alone…!”

“I didn’t know you were a lonely person.”

“You too.”

“…….”

The mermaid was momentarily speechless.

"…me?"

"no?"

“…I don’t know.”

“Why don’t you know that?”

“It’s been so long since I’ve been with someone.”

“Huh? Weren’t you with your brother?”

“That may be true, but….”

The galaxy opened its mouth.

“…….”

He said.

“…That’s right, I was lonely.”

This cold dungeon was cozy, damp, and quiet.

“So, wouldn’t you like to talk for a moment?”

“What are you talking about?”

“Just, this and that….”

anyhow.

“I feel like this might be the last time.”

“…….”

Chaisol nodded after a while.

“Okay then.”

It's not that I don't know that mermaids have committed terrible massacres and are still doing so. They are truly bad guys who have committed unforgivable sins.

But the one in front of him now is Eunha, Chae Sol’s friend. Even though everything was a lie, they were once partners…

'I wonder if the will can be heard.'

Because it's really the last one.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (205)

205

Episode 205

“What are you all dreaming about?”

“Happy dreams.”

"happiness…?"

“Then they won’t try to escape.”

Eunha sat on the marble steps reflecting the golden waves with a tired face. Chaesol followed him and sat next to Eunha. It was just a few steps above where Geo was sitting.

He saw human hosts sinking in the Pope's chamber filled with sea water.

“As time passes, the wounds grow.”

The world was not as beautiful as the dream.

“I know human nature, and when a situation is disadvantageous to me, I try to find a solution. My sister and teacher call that ‘growth.’ It’s a very vague word for a mermaid….”

“Don’t mermaids grow up?”

“There may be different types depending on the dimension, but on my planet, mermaids are not born in the stomachs of living creatures, but in the ocean. At some point, seawater coalesces to create a being called a mermaid.”

“Uh uh uh….”

Chae Sol poked Eunha's bare arm, which was exposed.

“…There is?!”

“Well, that does exist.”

However, mermaids are cyclical beings.

“We are born from the sea, take on a human-like form, and as time passes, we become more and more one with the sea, enjoy its power, and eventually melt away. That is the mermaid cycle.”

It was also the providence of the sea.

“Strictly speaking, I am not as attuned to the sea as my sister.”

“Why? That older sister seemed so smart, why didn’t you help her?”

“Because I lack the qualifications….”

Isser was neither a pure mermaid nor a pure human. Although each mermaid has a slightly different appearance, Isser was born far from the sea. Even his tail was separate like an animal.

“He was not a child fit to contain that vast ocean.”

So, all the seas that had passed by were eaten by Arya, and the sun, whose divinity had been shattered while trapped in the sea, was eaten by Isser.

“That’s one of the reasons I can still imitate the Priest of the Sun.”

“How can you eat it? It’s the sun? Wasn’t it hot?”

“It’s hot.”

The galaxy laughed hollowly.

“That’s why my body is still so weak.”

Although Aria did her best to make him as strong as possible, it wasn't enough. In the end, he ended up 'growing' into something like a key that contained the many divinities and powers of the sun.

“So if we fight directly, I’ll definitely lose. That’s why I usually stay in this safe dungeon and use the weapons and traps my sister made, or borrow her powers.”

“The sun?”

“As you can see, it is not I who contains the sun’s divinity itself, but this golden staff. In order to use the fallen power of the divinities, it had to blossom into a form that could handle that power, and to do that, it had to be made into a large tree like this….”

"frustrated?"

“It was a hassle.”

Knock knock, knock knock.

The galaxy coughed loudly.

“…It can be a lot like this.”

Isser was a worthless mermaid.

“If my sister hadn’t taken me in at first, I would have died on my own because I was so weak.”

“You must be a very strong older sister. My older sister is like that too. She protects me.”

“My sister was like that too….”

“You’re not protecting me now?”

“Because I committed a sin.”

“What crime? What did I do wrong?”

“I ate the teacher.”

“…….”

Chaisol asked with trembling eyes.

“…I’m going to eat it too…? Seriously, you must have left me behind until now….”

“Are you saying that now?”

“Oh, really? I was scared for a moment.”

“Of course I didn’t eat it while in my right mind.”

To begin with, mermaids are born with bodies that cannot digest humans. They don't even have a mouth structure that allows them to easily eat meat. What would it take for such a creature to eat a living human?

He was able to do that because he was crazy.

“Since that day, my relationship with my sister has become strange.”

The two still cared for and loved each other. The form and weight of that feeling remained the same, but after the teacher's death, the feeling of 'hatred' naturally seeped into them. It was inevitable.

“At times like this, the teacher would try to make things right, but after that, it became a bit difficult.”

“Don’t you know how to make peace…?”

“Because I just didn’t bring up the subject.”

“No, why?”

"hmm…."

Isser raised his hand and patted Chaisol's small belly.

“Let’s say you ate something bad and an indigestible thorn got stuck in your stomach.”

“On the boat…?”

“Further inside, down the throat, below the navel, here in the belly.”

"no."

“I guess so?”

“Can’t you take it off?”

“That would require major surgery.”

He took his hand away.

“The thorns are so tangled that it’s not easy to remove them, and they’re not food that can be digested naturally even if you wait. And to do that surgery, you’ll be in a lot of pain, and you’ll have to open up this stomach, and you’ll get hurt when you take out the thorns….”

“…….”

“Well, it costs a lot of money.”

“I don’t have money….”

“I know, that’s why I said it as an analogy.”

But that's it.

“Instead, you can leave it as is.”

“A thorn? It’s inside the boat?”

“Only when you move around very actively will you notice the presence of this thorn. Even if you leave it like that, it doesn’t hurt much. It rarely stings, but it’s not something that bothers you all day long. It’s also not a health problem.”

"uh…."

“Would you still have the surgery? Putting up with the pain, taking the time, and spending the money?”

“…Well, I need to think about it.”

“We did that too.”

I needed time to think about what to do with the thorn in my side called teacher.

“Because it’s something that doesn’t need to be removed in a hurry.”

They had so much time.

“Let me give you another analogy. Actually, it wasn’t a thorn, it was a… resonance stone that you treasured.”

“…What did Ruda give you?”

“That’s right. But if we leave it like this, the resonance stone will remain intact without breaking, but if we take it out through surgery, it will be damaged and broken, and we will never be able to see it or hold it again.”

“I think it would be a shame.”

“I understand.”

The same was true for mermaids.

“I was scared that I would erase you like that, too.”

“Teacher?”

“He was my thorn and my jewel.”

“…But we still have to reconcile.”

Chaisol said.

“Only family is left.”

“You’re right, but I’m a coward.”

I always deviated from the right path. In the past, I only walked the right path, and when I came to my senses, I felt sorry that my hands and feet were all worn out, so I just did that.

“Maybe it would have been okay if I had been born a little stronger.”

Be it body, power or mind.

“If only I could excel in anything like my sister….”

I would have guided my sister, who was crazy about revenge, on the right path.

I wouldn't have been possessed by a drug and eaten the teacher. I wouldn't have been captured by the priests and put on a demonic trial. I could have done a better job of helping people not to fear me.

and.

“Teacher.”

That person might have helped me avoid getting caught that day.

“…I might not have caught the teacher.”

From the beginning, I would not have even stretched out my hand to yearn for the sun.

“It makes me sick to think that all of this happened because of my greed from the beginning.”

“Why is it so greedy to want to be friends with a good person…?”

“I knew you would say that.”

He was a kind person.

“In the end, I still use these tricks to vent my hatred towards humans.”

Isser saw humans immersed in 'good dreams'.

"oh."

"…uh!"

At that moment, a man woke up.

“…….”

It was Kang Seo-dam, the priest of the sun.

“…Why are you sitting there now….”

“Would you like to talk?”

“If you were me, would you do that…?”

Isser smiled brightly at the sight of her glaring like a ghost, her teeth gritting. At the smile that somewhat resembled Mr. Sergio, Kang Seodam frowned, and the mermaid pointed to the empty seat next to her with her hand.

“This is a place closer to Sergio Hunter.”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam sat down in that place, groaning, once again, blaming the world.

“Did you have a good dream?”

“…Thanks to you, I was able to see my partner’s face for the first time in a long time.”

“Isn’t that sarcasm?”

“No, just….”

He let out a deep sigh.

“…It is true that I am grateful to you.”

Kang Seo-dam had almost forgotten the face of her old partner.

“What on earth are you doing, sitting here and chatting so peacefully?”

“I waited for you to wake up.”

“So, why? For what reason?”

“There is something that Father Kang Seo-dam needs help with.”

“Do you think I can help you right now? When you’re feeling the worst?”

“It’s probably not a bad story.”

Isser pointed to himself.

“Kill me.”

“…….”

“And wake up the teacher.”

Kang Seodam narrowed his eyes.

“What is the reason?”

“The teacher has already decided.”

“What did you decide?”

“To remain on Earth.”

“Why don’t you wake up?”

“This is just a courtesy to us.”

The humans will win anyway, and the mermaids will leave forever.

Isser rose from his seat and leaned back against his master's lap.

“We just need you to spend some time with us.”

“…Are you saying that Sergio, you still have any regrets about your life as a human? Are you really saying that right now? Against this great mystery?”

“This person is an ordinary person who can have ordinary foolish thoughts.”

“Now the divinity of the sun is given to mere mortals….”

“It's a person.”

He listened.

“…….”

I could hear tears falling.

“…I also know how to cry.”

It might have been the sound of falling dream drops.

“I’ll say it again, it’s not such a bad proposition for you humans. With my sister’s death and mine, the existence of the ‘Black Cloak’ in this world will be confirmed, you won’t have to shed any more blood than necessary, and we… can take responsibility for our own responsibilities.”

“Was this your goal from the beginning?”

Kang Seo-dam stared at the mermaid.

“For your ‘teacher’?”

“That’s not all there is.”

But it wasn't just a stage for his teacher.

“No matter the method or process, we all have to end up like this….”

“Speaking of the end, that’s sophistry. How many people have died to you all this time?”

Kang Seo-dam finally revealed his anger.

“Don’t you think it’s disgusting? Even now, you are still talking about the heavy word “responsibility” and committing sins according to your greed. What are the things you have done so far that are no different from those of the priests of the sun that you hated so much?”

“My regret is not for our sins, but for our greed. That is why we are monsters.”

“Even if you wag your tongue quite a bit, you are still a monster. It’s really a shame that all you know how to do with that intelligence is to repeat the same sins.”

“If everything is a deception, wouldn’t it be cleaner to choose the path that suits you? That’s why you can arrogantly bring up ‘responsibility’.”

Only then could I have even a slight 'chance' of being accepted by my teacher.

‘Perhaps a place called hell… .’

Isser blinked, leaning against the thigh of his master who was sitting on the Pope's throne like a corpse, and straightened up.

“…They will soon wake up. If you kill me while there are no eyes to see, you can avoid a useless battle. I did my part, and I have eliminated unnecessary emotions.”

“…….”

“But it won’t be easy to kill me. My sister made me into a thousand bags of the sun that she had been eating. But as I said before, this body is much weaker and more unsightly than my sister’s….”

“If you put too much sun power into it, it will explode?”

“I think you understand well.”

He saw Chaisol.

“…….”

“…There is.”

The first apostle of Giovanni asked:

“Is it cold here?”

“Yeah, it’s cold.”

On the subject of mermaids, he caught a cold in the deep sea.

“So show me your sun.”

The galaxy prayed.

To return to providence, the sun was needed.

* * *

Kwajijijijik!!!!

"-omg!!"

The heat exploded with a tremendous roar.

“Wh, what is going on…!!”

“Where am I now…?”

“Everyone, wake up, we’re in a dungeon!!”

A loud noise, as if a huge bolt of lightning was crashing through a narrow gap. The hunters who woke up from their sleep due to the great shock were only able to secure their vision after a terrible flash of light passed.

“Cluck, cluck…!!”

“What, where did all the monsters go?”

“Ah, my eyes….”

Only then did silence come.

“…….”

"…ah…."

The golden tree that used to hurt my eyes has returned to its thin branches.

“…Sergio Hunter?”

The apostle of God who was chained to the throne woke up.

“Hey, are you okay now…!”

“Be quiet.”

“No, why…!”

“The condition is strange.”

One of the hunters tried to stop his comrade from coming forward.

“…You’re crying.”

In the sun-ravaged temple, Geo was weeping while holding a golden branch.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (206)

206

Episode 206

Everyone said Giovanni was special.

“…….”

That might have been an undeniable fact.

Giovanni was born in a dark room without windows, receiving sunlight. He grew up in a bed in a location where the sun could not reach during the cold winter days, receiving warm sunlight, and even during his indefinite newborn days, he performed miracles big and small as if they were natural.

The son of the sun. The healing power of sunlight. Words and gazes that bring warmth even in winter. People saw this and made Giovanni a god, an apostle, and a hero.

“… Mr. Geo.”

“Shouldn’t someone go and talk to him?”

“If you leave it like this….”

So Giovanni was always special.

“Mr. Geo.”

“…….”

“Sergio Hunter.”

“…….”

“…Do you need recovery?”

"no."

Those children were the only ones who made me a human being. Just as I loved all my past life, I loved that simple daily life with the same weight of heart.

"it's okay."

They may have seen me as a respected teacher and a beloved benefactor, but Giovanni also had no idea how much joy and peace he had received from his students. The grace had been shared with him as well.

“I know the way.”

“Sergio Hunter…?”

“I can hear your heartbeat.”

Giovanni loved greatly, but he also knew how to resent. He hated the people who hurt him. He hated the townspeople who separated him from his disciples. He hated the world that made it so.

Only the love that won it raised Giovanni up. That was all.

“This way.”

He went down.

The temple was filled with sea water, but it wasn't too cold. I took the steps one by one with my familiar bare feet and headed deeper.

Giovanni never visited here while alive, but stayed after death.

“Hey, is it okay for me to come in?”

“I don’t think Hunter Seo is in his right mind right now….”

“But I might actually have a clue.”

“That’s true, but the condition is a bit.”

He led the people and eventually reached the lowest level.

“…….”

“…What is that?”

“That’s….”

It was a large flower pot.

“What is that?”

“It looks like it’s meant to hold something….”

“Isn’t that a big deal?”

“The decoration is pretty.”

“No, look at the contents.”

And it was water containing molten gold.

“Doesn’t it feel similar to the golden tree we saw earlier?”

“I don’t think it can be compared to that. There’s something, um, a pure energy flowing around….”

“At least it’s not like the tree that used to let the sun shine through it.”

“…But it’s still warm.”

“It looks divine.”

It was the water that 'Giovanni' had melted into.

“…….”

“…Uh, wait a minute.”

“Inside me now….”

He approached the flowerpot before the others could get close. But even from that distance, those with good eyesight could see something, something faint inside the huge, carved crystal flowerpot.

“Are there people there?”

Some sharp-eyed people looked back at Geo.

“…I can’t see that very well….”

“…Doesn’t he look like Sergio Hunter?”

“What the heck is this…?”

It was good anyway.

Eventually, Giovanni shook off the small piece that was holding him back, saying that time was up, and it must have been a painful thorn even to the mermaid of the living, breathing sea. Giovanni felt flowers blooming under the sea where the dark clouds had cleared.

He muttered as he looked at 'Giovanni', a transparent figure that was no different from water.

“…You said you tried several times.”

Aria said that she had tried many times to bring 'Giovanni' back to life, but had failed. Could this be one of those traces? Or the result of a new attempt after reuniting with him on Earth?

The mermaids of my sea had a very blind side.

“It’s heavy.”

Phew .

Giovanni placed a golden branch over his shell of water, where he could not even breathe.

“It’s heavy….”

The mermaids shaped my heart into the shape of their master.

This was another chain that would stay with Giovanni for the rest of his life.

* * *

“…….”

On the sea.

“…….”

Flowers.

White flowers, soft yellow buds, shyly blooming pink, vibrant green that grows brightly, their thin and transparent petals are in bloom.

Infinitely fragile lives bloom in countless numbers.

“…….”

Now, in hindsight, the mermaid born in the sea wanted to see this sight so badly.

“…It’s beautiful.”

It's as if my sea has turned into land.

“When I knew nothing, I dreamed of a sea like this.”

“Wouldn’t someone like you be able to create something like this?”

“It’s different from that, I….”

This kind of thing would be meaningless if it weren't for humans.

“…Ahahaha.”

It's childish.

'Do you still have these thoughts?'

She, too, once dreamed of a world where the sea and the sky, the mermaids of the deep sea and the humans of the land coexisted.

Like my brother, I didn't have any noble thoughts, I just thought it looked cooler and stronger.

‘… a piece of me fell apart.’

Giovanni eventually shook off the dream fragment and returned to Earth, and Aria, who had planted a part of herself in that dream, was hit hard. On top of that, her heart was torn apart, so she had no reason to live and breathe anymore.

I was so exhausted that I lay stretched out on the surface of the water. I felt like a jellyfish, one of those things I'd seen in the oceans of Earth.

“Hey, isn’t it pretty?”

Aria looked at the sky.

The dark clouds were clearing.

“The sun that was hidden has risen, the sea has become a field of flowers, and the sky is clear.”

“Are you sure you’re dying now?”

“Of course. What else can I do now that even the heart of the dungeon has been taken away?”

“What do you get out of this?”

“Maybe… hope?”

It may have been too much for a sinful monster to receive, but he eventually succeeded in robbing it.

There was a hope that came from the tender belief that I would never forget them as I lived through the long years that the human I loved was no longer human.

'How much more serious must it be, since such a deep wound has been engraved.'

Also, with this the mermaids finished their story. They will reach the hell led by their master.

“…….”

After a cool dawn, the sun rose into a clear sky.

“…It’s really over now….”

It was too long.

It was too long, sir.

* * *

“Chaisoooo !!!”

“Rudayaaa ...

The adults looked pleased at the sight of the children hugging each other and shedding tears.

'So cute.'

'I've done that with my partner too.'

'We're really close.'

Even in this situation, they both did their part and acted dignified. No matter how much the Solar Church proudly boasted about their talents, they were still young. It was a nice sight to see.

As if sadness had soon turned to anger, Ruda, who had been shaking his neck, suddenly fell down. Chae Sol was startled and hugged Ruda. It was a tragic scene that seemed to have come straight out of a classic painting.

“What’s wrong, you didn’t eat breakfast?! I told you not to skip breakfast…!!”

“You… you were kidnapped, how am I supposed to eat alone….”

“Even if I die, the living must live on!!”

“Who… killed… you… Don’t talk nonsense….”

The hunter of the Eunwol faction smiled awkwardly.

“You used the power of the sun like that… I guess it was too much.”

“Well, the god that made the contract with Miss Ruda is not of the sun god family.”

“You must be very tired right now, since you borrowed strength.”

Creating a flower garden in the sea was not as easy as it sounds.

In addition to the tree-type hunters who could make the plants bloom, they also needed fire-type hunters who could melt the frozen seas, water-type hunters who could clear away the salty ice and water, and even a priest of the sun who could help the plants bloom steadily.

Since the mermaids had already taken over the sky, Iruda, the reserve priest, could not just sit still. He must have had a hard time trying to clumsily imitate the power of the sun among the remaining priests of the sun in the camp.

“But that wasn’t even at the level of a prospective priest.”

“I heard you’re preparing for early graduation. You really are a talented person with a lot of potential.”

Before a novice priest makes a formal contract with the Divine, he is attached to the Sun and uses its power. The initiation ceremony is a ceremony to pray for that contract and mercy, and he learns how to borrow power while staying in the temple.

Considering that many of the regular priests who had not actually made a contract with the divine were working in this manner, it was possible to see how important a role Iru had played as a catechumen.

“…….”

“…….”

"…haha!"

“It makes me laugh.”

It wasn't just Chae Sol and Iru Da who had a tearful reunion.

“…I, I… I’m Geo… My heart really broke….”

“Why are you crying? Judging by the momentum, it wouldn’t be strange to say that these aren’t just tears, but tears of blood.”

“You’re making me cry right now. I’m not the type of person to cry easily, but you’re really amazing.”

“I am so happy that I was able to give Mr. Yoo Seong-un a new experience. Where in the world can you find such a great friend?”

“Of course you are a really good friend to me, but do you really think that’s the right thing to say right now…?”

“Of course I feel sorry. I was wrong.”

“You go home and see.”

“Now that I think about it, Joohyun probably won’t leave me alone either….”

Geo, who had briefly hoped that 'I didn't do anything special, so I guess they'll let this slide', clicked his tongue inside. He was aware that he could have escaped the arrest if he had decided to, but he didn't.

But I have no regrets because I was able to say a proper farewell to my disciples.

'That's me.'

Unfortunately, he was not the type of person to fundamentally regret the choices he made.

“I feel very sorry, so if Mr. Yoo Seong-un steps forward to help with the recovery, I will join him.”

“No? No need. Just go back to the collection point and get some rest. Please don’t come out, don’t go anywhere, don’t use force, don’t get involved with people….”

“What do you want to make of me? A social misfit?”

“I’m asking just in case, but do you ever think about disconnecting from society again?”

“Do you really want to turn me into canned food?”

“You were like that all along, so what difference does it make if you keep being canned for a few more years? I really wish you could just stay safe and peaceful in the collection store without being noticed by people.”

“People are looking at you strangely, Mr. Yoo Seong-un, so I think it would be better to stop here. We need to save face to survive, after all.”

What is this guy talking about when there is already a rumor going around that 'the collector kept Sergio Hunter locked up until he was 29 years old'?

He might have thought about making the setting more solid, but he was so out of his mind and tired that he couldn't even speak, so Geo tried to calm Yoo Seong-un down.

“I guess you were worried about me a lot. But it’s okay. Didn’t you come back alive and well? Since you didn’t get hurt as badly as last time, it seems like things have gotten better. Thanks to sucking up the mermaid’s power in return, you seem to be stronger than before.”

“I knew you’d do that, but you really have a positive mindset.”

“Oh, of course.”

Geo's ultimate positive mind was not swayed by the mere fact that he had been kidnapped.

'You'll be upset if I say this.'

Geo continued, gathering together the sociality that exists and the sociality that does not exist.

“I’m really sorry for making you worry. I’m so embarrassed.”

“Then next time, even if people are taken hostage, just ignore them….”

“I never promised anything like that.”

“You’re firm. Do you really want to see me shed tears of blood?”

“But shouldn’t we save those in danger?”

“I’m one of those people who really likes that kind of utopian, idealistic altruism, but you’re a bit too much.”

Yoo Seong-un spoke with great greed.

“I wish it was a little less, maybe 94%….”

“Just tell them to go back to the gallery.”

“It would be really nice if it was stuck in the gallery.”

“I don’t like it.”

"please."

“I don’t like it.”

Sanarae looked at the two of them with a resigned expression.

'I know it sounds strange, but I'm saying this.'

As this conversation continued, the ones who would become trash would be the collector's secretary and the meteor shower, but they were talking really well. Sanarae turned her head away as if she hadn't seen anything, and then her eyes met with those of Priest Kang Seodam.

“…….”

“…Haha, I’m glad it ended well. Right?”

“…Yes, I’m glad it ended well.”

There was a strange suspicion in Kang Seo-dam’s eyes as he answered like that.

‘… I’m sure it was awake.’

When dealing with the mermaid Isser, Kang Seodam, who thought he was the first to escape the Golden Tree's trick, thought of Hunter Sanarae who had jumped up without a sound as soon as the loud noise was heard. It was too quick of a reaction to say that he had just woken up.

'But I can't pursue it.'

He wasn't the kind of person who would answer obediently just because you asked him. He would just try to cover it up and run away.

Kang Seodam humbly gave up and decided to bear this burden entirely on his own. After all, the Goddess of the Sun was with him, so it was not a burden he alone knew.

“Geo, just for one year, okay? Just for one year…!”

“This is the truth, Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“If you just stay in the collection for a year, I’ll treat you better!”

“I don’t like it.”

“Just once!”

“I don’t like it.”

I found it funny how I felt secure in that childish conversation.

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam looked at the sea filled with floating ice chunks, then looked up at the sun in the sky.

The power that the 'Sea of Hatred' swallowed is vomited out

Dungeon; Completed the conquest of 'Deep Sea Country'

Please check your receipt of compensation

“…Is it finished?”

Now it was time for everything to fall into place.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (207)

207 Episode 207 The disappearance of the Palette residents has been confirmed. Confirmed Palette residents: Aria, Isser "……." Would you like to place them in the Palette again? [Yes/No] "Yes." Color: 'Aria' has been successfully placed [Gray] Color: 'Iser' has been successfully placed [Sky Blue] … … . … … . … I like it * * * The hunters all agreed that this disaster was really tricky. "A living, moving sea, it's really creepy." "Even if I freeze it, they keep pulling up water from the deep sea, and I'm exhausted." "Even the mermaids are getting less tired, but anyways…." Fortunately, there were a lot of skilled hunters gathered for this war. They did their best to block the deep sea water so that the plants they had worked so hard to grow wouldn't wither, and in the meantime, the plants grew luxuriantly according to their master's orders. "But honestly, it was pretty cool." "It wasn't a sight that humans could create." "It was really awesome…." The sea garden created by humans was a sight not easily seen. "If the dungeon raid team hadn't responded quickly, the suppression team would have had a hard time." Aria, the humanoid monster that had slowly taken away the power of the Earth's oceans. She showed signs of great pain a couple of times during the confrontation. "The first time, you said that Sergio Hunter was hit by the backlash from waking up from his restraints, right?" "The second time, you said that the raid team broke the heart of the dungeon..." "But didn't you say that Sergio Hunter broke it in the end?" "I heard that you were able to confirm the heart of the dungeon while you were bound in a dream." "You really are an amazing person to prepare for the raid even in that situation." "If it were me, I wouldn't have even woken up for the raid." "Hey, we didn't even get special treatment in the first place and died in one go.” Even the dungeon raid notification didn’t appear until quite some time after mermaid Aria’s form had melted into the sea. It seemed like it would take some time for the monster’s influence on the Earth’s oceans to disappear. And naturally, the rest of the cleanup was all up to humans. “…….” “…What the hell….” The hunters who were called in to cleanup couldn’t help but lament the mess the ocean had become. “Fuck, let’s hurry up and do this. We have to finish this before we can go home.” “Hasn’t the association contacted you? If it had gotten to this point, other countries would probably complain.” “Since they haven’t said anything yet, I guess they’re doing a good job of blocking it.” “Let’s hurry up and clean it up while the association is covering it up, that’s why.” The ocean is so huge that even the slightest distortion would make the whole world groan. Since they created glaciers like polar regions in the ocean off the coast of South Korea, climate problems were expected. The hunters had to suppress this ‘climate problem’ as quickly as possible. They worked hard to melt the enormous glaciers and artificially restore the ocean currents to their original state. “Hey, but this….” “Right? It’s a shame.” “Hey, Association staff. Can’t we leave this here?” “It must have been difficult.” “It’s a trace of a fight, but…” The hunters felt sorry when they saw the flower garden in the sea. “Isn’t it a rather historical trace to just clean up like this?” The association decided to preserve the flower clusters that bloomed in the sea, encouraged by the reactions of the hunters and the citizens who said, “It’s mysterious,” and “It’s a trace of a terrible war.” They were not just beautiful, but also a kind of teaching aid and a canary in a mine, warning us of the dangers of ocean fluctuations. “If there’s a problem with this flower garden, it means there’s a problem with the management of the sea.” “The citizens’ reactions are not bad, and it’s okay to leave some of these traces of war. There are many people who think, ‘Oh, we have to be careful’ after seeing traces of such a huge natural disaster.” “The area to manage will increase, but that can be done by forming a separate department...” The association has always been active in such matters. South Korea was a very small country, but it had an overflowing population, and it had put a lot of effort into creating an environment to control and manage that population. This time was no different. The association quickly created a new department and began managing the traces of the name 'Sea Flower Garden'. Staff members were also dispatched periodically to polish and refine this garden. "Well, this is a way to show off our country's capabilities." "If this recovery goes well, the number of immigrants will increase again. It also seems like a good place to use as a tourist destination." In an era where you never knew when or how you would die, people wanted to belong to a country that would keep them safe. In addition to simply recovering, the image of a 'country that can afford to make another profit by exploiting the aftermath of war' gave South Korea quite a bit of benefit. "There are quite a few dead hunters..." "We apologize and thank the bereaved families, and we will provide compensation that is so generous that it will be hard to even mention it. If we do well at times like this, our hunters will not spare their lives and will rush in again." “Manage it well so that citizens don’t complain. Aren’t you tired of hearing people say that you discriminate between the city and the countryside? Even if it doesn’t change much, it’s better to at least keep in mind that you’re a pillar for them so that they can feel comfortable later.” “The government and the association should always be the ones that the citizens can trust. You all know that when a big problem like this happens, it’s the time to win the hearts of the citizens.” “The guilds have already talked about it. When the time comes, they will participate in donations for citizens who lost their homes and those who have rendered distinguished services to the country. The three major guilds, in particular, have already spoken up…” When a huge war like this breaks out, the government and the association are the ones who get busy. Since the country has a small territory, they can grasp even the smallest places in detail and respond accordingly. However, there was one subject that became the subject of much talk in another sense. “Have you heard the story? Sergio Hunter…?” “I heard that he was kidnapped by monsters during this war.” “No, not that.” It was the ‘Black Cloak.’ “There’s a story about the Black Cloak’s Apostle.” “…Is Black Cloak a god? No, wasn’t he a monster?” Some people didn’t believe it, and some people immediately believed it, but fortunately, there was no great confusion among the citizens because of the identity of the Black Cloak. “Oh, that could be true.” In an era where individualism reached its peak, the citizens, always suffering from loneliness and desolation, were always kind to creatures who were friendly to them, even if they could be selfish. That didn’t change when dealing with a monster or something mysterious. “He’s not a bad god, considering he gives you food, right?” “So what if he’s an evil god? He gives you food and lets you tour around…” “How many people survived that damn winter thanks to the Black Cloak?” “Whether it’s a god or something, I wish he’d just give me snacks when I met him.” “I heard that some people made a fortune selling it. That’s the lottery.” “If you do a lot of good deeds, your chances of winning increase… A lottery where the odds can be manipulated…” To the citizens of today, the Black Cloak wasn’t a monster that needed to be subdued. He was a gentle and affectionate ghost story that had infiltrated Korea, and no one insisted on capturing or using him, even though he could receive practical help. “Is there a need to kill the goose that lays golden eggs?” “Hey, but he’s a divinity….” “…Oh, that’s right. No, that’s just what it says.” In particular, some unique enthusiasts who were looking forward to Black Cloak’s new work showed an even more active stance of support. “I knew it! There’s no way a monster could create such a noble world!” “Somehow I felt divinity in the uniqueness of the frame. Yes, I knew it. Now that it’s come to this, I can’t just sit back and do nothing.” “Shouldn’t we create an organization to protect Black Cloak? Where in the world is there a divinity that lets you see their own world of art? We have to make sure that no one exploits it.” “Since he likes good people so much, we have to prepare before the evil bugs get attached to him. He’s a divinity with a secretly innocent side….” The enthusiasts already had thick bean caps in their eyes, and that wouldn't come off if people around them criticized them. They were already immersed in the thrilling exchange with the ominous and affectionate ghost story called Black Cloak. Above all, the fact that 'Black Cloak is kind to good people' boosted their pride even more. They even felt a sense of duty, thinking that they were humans recognized by Black Cloak. It was even more so when they received direct help. "I, I would have lost my life that day if Black Cloak hadn't saved me. Just thinking about the One who punishes evil beings and bestows grace on weak creatures being exploited by evil humans makes me really…" "We understand that feeling too. We need to raise our voices especially at times like this." There were some movements like that, but they were only at the level of simple hobby clubs or salons, so people didn't pay much attention. In an era where there were many small groups that praised cute or useful monsters, it was impossible for a group that cherished a mystery like Black Cloak not to have emerged. This was accepted as a natural phenomenon, like a government being formed when a country is established. "Well, because they are all gentle people." "The fact that Black Cloak hates evil people probably played a big part." "They say they check each other's qualifications very carefully." "They say that people who live nearby gather to do good deeds..." "They say that among art lovers, they even hold charity events. Some even say that they volunteer themselves." "The rich are spending their money like this. This is amazing. Those nobles who see citizens below Grade 1 as separate creatures are actually volunteering." Some people participated simply for the fun of it, others because they seriously wanted to be invited to the work, and others because they had a lasting faith..." "This is truly a good influence. If this is the case, well, do we need to worry?" While everyone accepted Black Cloak's new identity, their eyes turned to 'Sergio Hunter.' "He must have been Black Cloak's disciple from the beginning. I wonder if it has something to do with the fact that the Collector kept him captive." "The humanoid monsters that started the war this time kidnapped the disciples of the Black Cloak. What was the exact reason? I heard that they made several statements that were in check with the Black Cloak." "They also said that they coveted Sergio Hunter himself. This is a story I heard from a hunter who participated in the raid team, but, well, something that looked exactly like Sergio Hunter was the heart of this dungeon..." "Huh? Why would they do that?" There were several opinions on this part. "In the 'Temple of the Deep Sea,' we were able to learn several stories about the mermaids and their master. The reason the mermaids became monsters was because they lost their masters to humans, and there is a story that Sergio Hunter and his master look quite similar." "So did they try to find a human who looked like their master and develop them into the same being?" "They said that Sergio Hunter looked sad after waking up from his restraints. Isn't that right? The mermaids were trying to synchronize with their dead master by tricking them." "If that's true, isn't it pretty disgusting? Seriously, trying to frame a perfectly good human for a dead person? That's the kind of thing that only evil monsters would do." There were also opinions like this. "Maybe they really were similar beings. The mysteries between dimensions haven't been fully revealed yet. For example, reincarnation… Isn't it possible that Sergio Hunter was that kind of mystery?" "The name of the master discovered in the 'Temple of the Deep Sea' was 'Batlan Giovanni.' I don't know if his usual name was 'Gio,' but since even the names are similar, I think there must have been some kind of fate involved." "They were monsters who had accumulated evil deeds while crossing dimensions. They must have had a strong hatred for humans, but if there really had been no connection at all, would they have reacted so purely with greed? Even if they had tried to use that body to resurrect their master…." "Yes, he must have shown hatred towards humans in the end. If Sergio Hunter was the only one who avoided that hatred, then there must be something. There must be at least some connection." There was also this opinion. "Isn't it just that he coveted a person with a great capacity?" "Yes, from what I heard, he was quite polite to another disciple of the Black Cloak, a prospective priest named Chaisol. If we go by that, then it's not like Sergio Hunter was the only one who avoided the hatred that is characteristic of monsters." "Well, the fact that Sergio Hunter and his human teacher were similar may have had some influence… Humanoid monsters are highly intelligent." "That's right, they're the type of monsters that don't hesitate to join hands with humans for their own plans. It's possible that they did that to get their hands on Sergio Hunter, the outstanding disciple of the Black Cloak." "He even disparaged Sergio Hunter by saying, 'He's just an ordinary human'… I think he had some basic antipathy towards humans. In the end, he was just a valuable tool for the mermaids." "At best, he was just a cherished subordinate. Maybe he wanted to turn Sergio Hunter into a monster and make him his comrade, but anyway, I don't think he would have had such emotional favor." "That's right. Sergio Hunter actually visited the 'Temple of the Deep Sea' before and came out in a state close to being a corpse. If he truly cared for him, he wouldn't have done something like that." There were also opinions like this. There were various other opinions, but the three most frequently mentioned guesses were the above. The only thing that was certain was that Black Cloak was a divine being, and his disciples were Sergio Hunter and the reserve priest Chaisol. "But he's a little strong." "Huh? What? Everything seems to have been sorted out well..." "Of course, the situation is being handled well, but I wonder why this happened." "Natural disasters like dungeons and monsters don't always have to happen to cause accidents." "I'm concerned that it was a highly intelligent humanoid monster." Some were worried about the mermaids' actions. "You specifically warned against Black Cloak." It was a world where the number of divinities and religions was as diverse as the stars in the sky. It wasn't just that they were hostile to all of Earth's divinities, but that they were only concerned about Black Cloak, which had recently begun to appear. "Uh… That's proof that Black Cloak is friendly to Earth's humans, so I don't think there will be a problem right now. It's also possible that Black Cloak was a nuisance because he cared so much for Earth’s people.” “Hmm, yes. That could be true.” “I hope Black Cloak will help when another strong enemy appears. I heard that he helped us move when our attack team’s submarine was damaged this time…” “Was that true? I thought it was just a rumor.” “Since he usually gives us small snacks, it seems like it’s true.” And Sergio Hunter disappeared. “Why?” “He’s not going to appear on TV?” “I thought he debuted at this level…” Sergio Hunter’s fan club couldn’t hold back their tears. With this much activity, I thought it would be time to show my face, but the only reply I got from the collector was, "Sergio Hunter is seriously injured in this kidnapping incident and needs to rest." "What kind of fruit is it? A vegetable?" "I've heard that he wears it around like it's his own child's work, but..." "He really deserves his nickname." The only one who got all the curses was Bisabal, who was rumored to be Sergio Hunter's father. * * * Argio clicked his tongue. "Isn't that something you'd hate?" "Isn't this situation fun?" "It is fun." "Then wouldn't you like to match the beat a little?" "Of course, if you want, I'll do it as much as you want, Father." "How can there be such sweet resonance in the world?" Bisabal smiled brightly. "One more time." "Father?" "It's thrilling." "What a cute family." "Should I give you some pocket money?" Bisabal was devoted to enjoying the current situation, whether it was a training session or a sleepover. The secretary who came to submit the documents went in and closed the door and left, but he was a person who could not help but enjoy life 200%. (Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (208)

208

Episode 208

A situation where the traces of war are being erased one by one.

“Are you okay?”

I don't know if Geunwon actually has a body, but it was a situation where he might have had a physical or mental problem.

“Does anything hurt?”

“Yes, it’s okay.”

“Hmm… how are you feeling?”

“That’s okay too.”

A pale portrait covered in black paint continued in a mechanical, blunt voice.

“Contrary to your concerns, I was able to sort things out on my own.”

“If you say so, that’s good.”

Although he said that forgiveness was not his lot, Geo eventually showed affection for the mermaids, calling them his 'cherished disciples'. I was a little worried because there were personalities called 'Geo', so they might not have completely no human feelings.

'... There's something eerie about this part. Usually, people in this situation would feel sad for a long time when someone they cared about dies, regardless of the sins committed by the other person... .'

I would say it was sorted out pretty quickly.

'It seems like you're not the type to be obsessed with death, so is this a reaction along the same lines?'

He might be dry not only at his own death but also at the death of others. That attitude of being indifferent at the beginning and the end of a relationship made Yoo Seong-un feel a chill inside.

Indeed, it must be the source of countless destinies. Yoo Seong-un thought as he changed the subject.

“Yeah, that’s fortunate.”

“Are there any other problems?”

“Are you sure you don’t want me to go outside?”

“Am I banned from my extracurricular activities?”

“Well… I just wanted to ask.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“You’re not the type of person who’ll stay out just because we stop you.”

“Oh, the trust between us is very shallow. No matter what you do, if you stop me, I won’t go out. I know you’re worried, so how dare you do that?”

“Do you think I would believe that? I guess you’ve adapted well to human society now and you seem to be pretty good at lying, but I absolutely won’t believe you. You are a free spirit recognized by me, by heaven, and by the universe.”

“Wow, how did you know?”

“I didn’t want it to be known that we had become so close. Anyway, what I meant was that I wanted to at least block the official activities of ‘Sergio Hunter’.”

At Yoo Seong-un's words, Geo in the frame tilted his head.

“Is this a wish?”

“I’m so glad you understood.”

I almost cried because I didn't even think about holding back on those precious steps.

“I’ve prepared myself mentally. Now what do you want to do, our portrait?”

“I didn’t really have any intention of doing anything….”

“No? Really? Can I really trust you this time?”

“I’m sorry, but it just happened.”

“This is driving me crazy.”

Laughing as if he was sighing, Yoo Seong-un soon showed his signature smile. It was the smile of capitalism that he often wore.

“So how can I help you?”

“I can just do it.”

“Whatever you do from now on, it is extremely beneficial for the human mind and body to go through me one step at a time, so I am asking you with both hands clasped together to pray for it, right now.”

“You’re so resolute. This is quite a different reaction from before. I wonder if you’ve grown in an unexpected way. This kind of behavior reminds me of Joo-hyun.”

“I learned from watching Joohyun that it’s okay to this extent.”

“That’s why people who learn quickly….”

By the way, Joo-hyun wasn't there. Only Yoo Seong-woon had visited the gallery for the first time in a long time to manage his work, and Joo-hyun was lying in bed in mental anguish, worried about the kidnapped Geo.

Geo tried to deliver the medicine, but was rejected by Joohyun's strong refusal. They say that humans grow while suffering. Geo knew that, but he respected her opinion anyway.

“Anyway, I’m not trying to do anything grand.”

“Like the Demon King Project.”

“I definitely have that in mind, but I know it’s a big deal.”

“That’s good. So what do you really want to do? It seems like you have something on your mind since you’re dragging the conversation on like this….”

“I would like to see therapist Jeong Yeong-won.”

"…ah."

Yoo Seong-un was convinced.

“Everything is fine, but don’t be too surprised if he suddenly starts crying.”

“Isn’t this a situation where you can’t help but be flustered?”

That's how Geo's destination was decided.

Resting is good, but aren't there things you need to finish before you can get some rest?

* * *

The garden is a noble being that dares to be compared to divinity.

When we look at that intricate form with mere human eyes, we realize what an utmost grace it is. It resembles the vast universe, but it is a living thing and also a sparkling destiny.

What an honor it is to be able to carry it in my body… .

“…….”

“Mr. Jeong Yeong-won.”

"…ah…."

“Would you like to talk to me?”

My vision was dark. I still couldn't see ahead, but the most compassionate voice was engraved in my mind.

“…Sergio, sir.”

He crawled in a lowly manner, groping with his hands.

“Mr. Geo, ah, I… I you….”

“I am in front of this.”

“What should I call you without being disrespectful?”

Could it be possible for a lowly human mouth to contain this great and beautiful mystery? Yes, the flower gardener had made beautiful flowers bloom and obstructed her view, clearly teaching her to be respectful to the source.

“Black Cloak? Portrait? No, your… there must be a much deeper and more appropriate definition….”

“Mr. Jeong Yeong-won, you can call me Geo.”

“Do you dare let me do that?”

“Of course, aren’t we friends who have been counting together?”

“I’m glad you call me that, weakling.”

He wasn't really that far away.

“May I kiss your feet…?”

“If we were friends, we wouldn’t do something like this.”

“It was an arrogant wish, and I apologize for saying something I didn’t want to do.”

“I would appreciate it if you could speak more comfortably.”

“Yes, Mr. Geo. I will do that.”

As I felt my hand, I felt the cold touch of her feet.

“…Did you like the flowers that the gardener made?”

The gardener could tell without even looking. Her room must be in full bloom right now. Even the floor of the room where Jeong Yeong-won was sitting was filled with soft, noble flowers, and the fragrance that enchanted the brain was filling it.

“Will the sight of me being punished please you…?”

It could be called a presumptuous worry. The eyes of the source could not possibly be offended by a mere human being who was being punished. However, I was aware that this appearance was far from human. Since a precious person had come to visit, I should have proper manners and behavior, but it was also foolish.

“If I could only receive a little mercy, just raise your hand… just once….”

“Would you like to shake my hand?”

“Oh, thank you. You are so generous with your love.”

I felt the shape of a smooth, cool hand, as if I was holding a well-cut, smoothly sanded piece of marble.

“It is a great honor….”

A stinging pain surged through my eyes that were soaked in emotion.

I felt warm blood flowing down my cheek. The flower garden was delighted. The flower petals were full of life and bloomed glossy, and the leaves were green and stretched out toward the sky.

A soft and fluffy feeling, like the dolls that make up a child's room, filled Jeong Yeong-won's insides.

“Oh my, there’s blood flowing.”

“I couldn’t help but shed tears at the grace that the flower garden bestowed upon me.”

“Instead of tears, flowers have bloomed in Jeong Yeong-won’s eyes. She is beautiful, but she does not look comfortable. She seems to be in pain. Am I mistaken?”

“Of course not. Whatever you see is correct. That is the truth and the rule.”

“They see me as a god.”

"sorry…."

“I understand that Mr. Jeong Yeong-won. The world is dark and painful, so it can’t be helped. The confusion of the senses really tires people out.”

His cold hand slipped out of Jeong Yeong-won's and gently swept over her eyes as if he were holding a bouquet of flowers.

“So I will take this flower.”

In a moment.

The pain has stopped.

“It’s a really beautiful flower.”

“…….”

“It smells good.”

"…thank you."

The view has opened up.

“Thank you, Mr. Geo.”

Deep, dark eyes appeared.

In the enchanting room where even the lights were covered with flowers, the huge eyes wrapped in a black cloak were in harmony with the darkness. All that could be seen were the elegant flowers that the flower garden had made bloom through me and the white hand holding them.

Yes, I saw the hand. I also saw the bare feet of the source bending down to meet my gaze. I couldn't see the face smelling the scent of the flower blooming in my eyes. However, those eyes were still staring at Jeong Yeong-won.

“…….”

Be ecstatic.

"I am."

It can be this beautiful.

“Living in destiny… in the arms of a flower garden, among the flowers….”

“I'm listening.”

“I will meet my humble end in the arms of the compassionate gardener.”

“Okay, what next?”

“Please bloom as another flower and stay in the source….”

In the splendid destiny contained in those eyes.

“…will become one.”

“Your ambitions are great.”

"thank you."

“Then I think it’s time to go to sleep now.”

“Would you please let me sleep?”

“If you don’t mind, I’ll do that.”

“There’s no way I would hate it.”

How could you do such an impious thing?

“You are merciful.”

“What a grand gesture of gratitude.”

A large, pale hand came up and landed like a butterfly on my blood-soaked eye.

Jeong Yeong-won felt the heartbeat and blood movement stabilizing as if being comforted and guided, and he closed his eyes and fell into sleep, feeling the happiness of a flower garden immersed in peace.

The even breath stayed in the room surrounded by flowers.

“…….”

And Geo.

"…hmm."

I saw Jeong Yeong-won lying down, filled with regret.

'Mr. Yoo Seong-woon told me not to be too surprised when Ms. Jeong Yeong-won cries.'

I was quite surprised because it wasn't just tears, it was tears of blood.

'He is a very sick person, so let me understand.'

It was natural for people's judgment to become clouded when they were sick and in pain.

Above all, Giovanni was once called the son of the living sun because of his unique divinity. He had been praised for just breathing, so this kind of treatment was something he had experienced all his life, so it was not unreasonable to not follow suit.

'Well, when you're sick, you need somewhere to lean on.'

He understood Jeong Yeong-won.

Geo quietly left Jeong Yeong-won's bedroom so as not to wake her up. Even if he hadn't, he wouldn't have made a sound since he was so light.

* * *

“…….”

“I also came here to treat Mr. Jeong Yeong-won.”

"…okay!"

Joo-Hyeon, who was lying in the hospital bed, asked.

“Does anyone know about the incident where Hunter Jeong Yeong-won was treated?”

“First of all, Mr. Yoo Seong-un knows.”

"also?"

“With Joohyun….”

"also."

“I guess Mr. Jeong Yeong-won knows.”

Joohyun's smile became stronger.

“Then, inside the Eunwol Guild where Hunter Jeong Yeong-won’s bedroom is located, we will find that Hunter Jeong Yeong-won, who has become overloaded for an unknown reason, has also suddenly recovered and fallen asleep for an unknown reason? Right?”

“You said that you don’t let other people into your room when you’re in that state, so I think it’ll be okay. Even if you were to be discovered like that, it would only be your coworkers who are close to Hunter Jeong Yeong-won. Don't you think Jeong Yeong-won would take care of covering it up?"

"It seems like he knew everything from start to finish and did it, so I can't say what to say… I can't say it was a wrong thing to do, but it was a really bold and extraordinary action."

It was a bit absurd.

"I know very well that Mr. Geo, although he is a bit unusual and has many great qualities, has a heart no different from that of an ordinary human being."

"I know this is a long explanation, but it's not. I'm just a human. I'm just more versatile than average, so you're just confused."

"We'll settle the pros and cons of that later. Anyway, even considering that, you know very well that Geo-ssi's appearance and abilities are not ordinary, right?"

"That is true, but."

"And then you say you are just an ordinary person and turn Mr. Jeong Yeong-won's long and eloquent praise into nothing more than the nonsense of a sick person? At this point, you might be able to accept it."

"I'm not Jeong Yeong-won's god…?"

"……."

Geo continued to state his argument to the speechless Joo-hyun.

"First of all, I am different from those gods who have such great and amazing history. While they are like artisan patisserie cakes with 300 years of tradition, I am like a home-made cake made by a single-person household with castella and whipped cream."

"…her…."

“So, it is true that there was a bit of a problem with the subject and method of Mr. Jeong Yeong-won’s long praise. It seems that Mr. Jeong Yeong-won reacted that way because he was very sick and tired.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been sitting quietly next to her, opened his mouth at the outrageous remark that he could not bear to listen to.

“Don’t disparage my portrait like that.”

“I’m sorry, but I was just being self-critical, not disparaging.”

“Who can call that self-objectification?”

How dare this stubborn portrait try to change the dictionary definition of Earth. It was even more absurd because it seemed like it was just a joke, even though it knew it was a stretch. It made me a little sad.

“I wish you would be humble in a different sense.”

“I will keep that in mind.”

“Are you just going to refer to it again?”

“I am very happy that we have become close friends.”

Joo-Hyeon asked while holding her head, which was shaking while the two were talking.

“Why did you go to Hunter Jeong Yeong-won in the first place?”

“I think I overdid it a lot because of this attack, so I came here to get compensation.”

“I certainly heard that Mr. Jeong Yeong-won played a major role in this war.”

Even tree-type hunters couldn't make life bloom in the wasteland. That's why they usually carried seeds, but even considering that, it was difficult to control life by force.

However, Jeong Yeong-won, a hunter with a healer position, was a tree type hunter with a license. She successfully created a flower garden in the sea with me and my colleagues while wearing a hood.

“Did Mr. Geo feel grateful for that?”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“Then I understand why you treated me, but….”

Basically, 'Portrait of Geo' followed the 1:1 rule. If he received something as a gift, Geo had to return it. It seems that the case of Jeong Yeong-won was similar.

“…….”

Even so, it wouldn't have been an easy task.

“…Therapist Jeong Yeong-won is a gardener like Mr. Yoo Seong-un. It’s impossible to treat the suffering of a gardener due to the influence of the garden he works in with general healing, right?”

“I guess so?”

“But Mr. Geo, you did it with just one touch.”

“It was.”

“At this point, wouldn’t it be a good idea to acknowledge your own extraordinary abilities?”

“I know that I am extraordinary. I don’t deny it.”

Geo felt wronged.

“I’m just saying that I’m not the one who deserves Jeong Yeong-won’s praise. I’m not a god that Jeong Yeong-won worships, we’ve never had a proper relationship, and I’ve never done anything great that could help the world.”

At first glance, what he said seemed to be correct.

“…….”

“…….”

If only 'Portrait of Geo' hadn't been the eyes of the origin.

“…? Wait a minute, Mr. Yoo Seong-woon.”

“Huh? Huh.”

“Have you ever explained to me what kind of being Mr. Geo is?”

“…I don’t think it was there, but do you think I should tell you?”

"aha."

“Really…?”

Finally, I found out why Geo was being so stubborn, but that didn't stop him. Even after listening to Yoo Seong-un's lengthy explanation, Geo remained steadfast.

“Is it that important?”

“I thought this would happen.”

It was clear from the beginning that he had no intention of giving in.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (209)

209

Episode 209

“So you came to see me?”

Sanarae asked with her signature smile.

“Are you worried that your way of thinking is so different from other people’s?”

“I’m not particularly worried.”

“Then why did you come?”

“I thought it would be a fun topic to talk about….”

“Wow, this is so much fun.”

“Don’t try to finish the story already.”

Geo was visiting the Haeryeong Guild.

“You’ve come all this way, so do you intend to send your comrades who fought in the same battlefield away like that?”

“Well, that can’t be true. I love Sergio Hunter so much. It’s a really shabby corner of the house, but if Sergio Hunter wants, I can give him one of my rooms.”

“Rather than that, wouldn’t you like to go shopping together?”

“…Shopping?”

Sanarae was the first to show interest.

“Hmm, clothes? Accessories? Gear?”

“All of them.”

"call."

So Sanarae ran away from Haeryeong, leaving behind only a note that said, 'Sergio Hunter kidnapped.' The guild was turned upside down by the note with such crazy content, but neither Geo nor Sanarae cared.

Sanarae rented a private shopping room.

“Voila, no matter what I say here, it won’t get out. And if I die, I’ll be the only one who dies, right?”

“I’ll ignore the gossip. Hmm, I guess it was a good idea to come find Hunter Sanarae.”

“If you want to go shopping, you should come to me. Of course. No one looks at clothes as well as I do.”

“I don’t have many clothes so I needed someone to help me, and luckily I did.”

“Huh? You don’t have any clothes?”

“After all, painting portraits is a jackpot….”

“Oh my.”

Sanarae, who had been taking out her fancy suit, hung up her clothes in their place.

“Even if you don’t have to worry about the conversation leaking out, isn’t this too comfortable?”

“Isn’t it useless to act coy when you already know everything?”

“The person’s face suddenly changes so much. I think that red hair I saw last time was this one.”

“As you live, don’t you meet people whose colors change quickly?”

“If I refute each and every one of them, I’ll just get tired, so I’ll just do this for now.”

If you keep your mouth shut, half the job is done.

“I thought he was pretty good at imitating humans, but I didn’t know that he wasn’t just imitating, he actually thought of himself as a human.”

“You really didn’t know?”

“Oh, oh, I kind of figured it out, but? I thought you were just obsessed with imitating humans. No, maybe you’re still like that now? Anyway, what are you trying to say in the end? I’m sad that my friends don’t understand my true feelings.”

“Now that we have a mouth, let’s say something. We already know each other’s true feelings, and we just came here to figure out a solution.”

“Are you asking me that when all my relationships have failed? Sergio Hunter is truly amazing. He has a unique way of thinking. I think we should learn from him.”

But it was interesting.

“Well, we don’t have any kids here.”

“I see, you were scared last time because of the Haeryeong Guild members.”

“If you say something so specific, I’m afraid that I might get revenge, so I’m scared again. Could you promise me, even if it’s just a little, that I won’t take out my grudge on my family even if I act a little cocky? Oh, right, you know that humans die if you touch them, right?”

“I have no intention of taking revenge on the Haeryung Guild, I am just human.”

“I really appreciate the first part, but the second part was the most amazing story I’ve heard this year.”

“It hasn’t been that long since the year started.”

“It’s already spring, why are you saying that?”

Sanarae put her hand on her chin.

“So, our Sergio Hunter doesn’t think his powers or divinity are a big deal? It’s just a kind of individuality, but you think people are too great because of that?”

“In summary, yes.”

“I’m sorry, but it’s too much.”

What on earth is the problem with this mysterious mystery?

“You don’t like great things?”

“I don’t hate the ordinary.”

“Oh, in that context….”

“It’s not my fault that I’m so great, is it?”

“If we really have to judge right and wrong, isn’t it Sergio Hunter’s fault?”

“Can’t you read the mood?”

“You promised not to harass our guild members, right? Well, no matter how much I think about it, I can’t help but conclude that Sergio Hunter is not very good at objectifying himself.”

Or maybe you're just not doing it.

“It’s true that Hunter-nim is truly incredibly great. And originally, human beings are made to show different reactions depending on their position and abilities. In my opinion, Sergio Hunter-nim is the one being unreasonable.”

“That is also true.”

"aha."

I understand.

“So you meant to just shut up and go with the beat?”

“Did you know that now?”

“Save me.”

“I won’t kill you.”

“Live nicely.”

He didn't want to be sent back for something that wasn't even a battle. However, since he had promised not to bother his family, Sanarae wasn't as scared as before. He assessed the situation objectively.

“But if you want to live among humans, you have to take their perspectives into account to some extent. If not, you have no choice but to change or brainwash people’s perceptions every time you go….”

“How can you be this barbaric?”

“Savage follow-up is Hae-ryung’s specialty. Anyway, I know that Sergio Hunter really cares about humans. I also understand the gist of the current situation.”

Sanarae winked.

“You really came here to play?”

“I understand you well.”

Geo smiled and clapped his hands as if to say, "Well done."

Yes, Geo didn't come here to ask for serious advice. He just happened to have an interesting topic to talk about with Sanarae, so he brought it up while he was bored.

“Since the conclusion has already been reached, there is no reason for me to think about it seriously.”

He would see his position and power as nothing more than a 'personality', but he could also understand why those around him would be in awe of or fear Sergio's power. He could just live his whole life with such different thoughts.

Isn't it absurd to think that all humans think the same way? There is no obligation to do so, and it couldn't be. That was the context.

“In other words, I didn’t think it was a big enough problem to need to be solved.”

“If that’s the case, then it must be like that.”

Sanarae thought.

'That meteor-cloud guy must be tired and about to fall asleep.'

There's also a manager named Joohyun.

This terrible mystery, despite understanding all its own singularities, believed itself to be human, something most humans never do, so it was obvious that errors would arise from this difference of opinion.

but….

“This is good and that is good too?”

“Because not only one view is right.”

“There must be more than one or two opinions that see Sergio Hunter as an incredible being.”

“I’m okay because I’m one against a hundred.”

“You bark, I’ll go my own way, is that it? Well, it’s the way that people gather who know how to dance to the beat of the first person to dance.”

“Something is very distorted? I don’t tell you to bark.”

“Hmm, you really are strangely stubborn.”

In short, it's like, 'I'm right and you're right, so let's just live like this.' It really couldn't be anything but a strangely broad capacity. It accepts everyone, whether they're dogs or cows, but in the end, it only does what it wants.

“Are you sure there won’t be any problems?”

“Isn’t that kind of ambiguity what makes it so interesting? Every story is more interesting when it includes hardship and adversity.”

“Strangely enough, his personality is bad….”

“Thank you for your kind words.”

“I understand why people say he’s the son of the leader of the Visabal Guild.”

“My father and I have quite a few things in common.”

“…….”

These days, Shinbi is also talented at lying.

'It's a scary world.'

Divinity, which is living nature and destiny itself, was originally bad at lying. It was because lies were the antithesis of their natural identity. Of course, if it were an evil spirit, it would be a different story.

‘Seeing how respectfully Priest Kang Seo-dam treats him, he doesn’t seem like an evil deity… .’

It couldn't help but be a unique mystery in many ways.

“Anyway, you’re really good at imitating people.”

“How many times have I told you that you are human?”

“Oh, yeah, I understand that you’re an ordinary person with a colorful personality.”

“I’ll let you see it if you just close your eyes and pretend not to notice.”

“I’m so happy I could die.”

“In the past, Yoo Seong-un also felt this way, but I don’t know if his feelings have changed since I last saw him, but he doesn’t keep up with the rhythm.”

"oh…."

Were you such a brave person?

'Grow tall.'

Sanarae, who was amazed, asked.

“How has it changed?”

“Compared to the past when no matter what I said, they’d say, ‘Yeah, if that’s how you are, then that must be it,’ these days, it’s more like, ‘But that’s not wrong.’”

“Hmm, isn’t the direction of respect different?”

“I think they treat me a little more comfortably.”

“You already know everything, so why are you asking?”

In Sanarae's eyes, it was the difference between a curator cherishing a work of art and a person cherishing a friend.

“I don’t think either of them look bad?”

“Me too.”

“Then what are you dissatisfied with?”

“There are also advantages to just saying yes and no….”

“You’re greedy.”

“Isn’t it natural to want to enjoy all the pleasures the world has to offer?”

“That’s because we usually don’t think about making it happen.”

Those who try to make their ridiculous utopia a reality are usually not in their right mind. If we consider it as a human being, that is, and since 'Sergio Hunter' is not a human being in the first place, it makes sense.

“So you’re complaining now?”

“It just finished.”

“Then do you want to look at some clothes? This house is fine.”

“I wish I had clothes as fancy as a crow.”

“You mean clothes with a lot of sparkle on them? Hmm, that would suit you well.”

“The parts that don’t match are replaced with the face.”

“I totally agree with that. That’s a great confidence.”

The two finished their enjoyable shopping while chatting away.

On the way back, there was an incident where Sanarae trampled and crippled a strange man who was running towards Sergio Hunter, and Geo healed him and left him in front of the police station, but anyway, that was how it was.

* * *

“I guess there’s a strange rumor going around.”

Joo-Hyeon reported the situation with a pale face.

“Sergio Hunter is a saint….”

“I believe that was a rumor that we started.”

“So I guess that’s why there’s a rumor going around that eating Geo-ssi will grant you eternal life.”

“Why on earth would that be?”

“The rumors were probably exaggerated because the mermaid herself was the one who kidnapped him. Fortunately, in the case of the prospective priest Chaisol, the church seemed to be doing a good job of blocking it….”

Geo wasn't that surprised since Chae Sol was okay too.

“There have been many similar incidents in the past.”

“I have a vague idea, but was it really Mr. Giovanni’s time?”

“No, when Argio was….”

“……?”

Joo-hyun looked at Geo with eyes that said, 'Did I hear something wrong?'

“Mr. Argio? Why?”

“What’s wrong with me that makes you do that?”

“When I hear the story, it seems like he wasn’t the type of person to be deified like that…?”

“Isn’t deification just another form of deification?”

Argio shrugged.

“It may sound terrifying to say that it is the Beast of the Black Forest, but in another way, it means that it is special. It is the most vicious and cruel beast in the Black Forest, which is full of rare jewels and medicinal herbs, so it is only natural that rumors spread that eating it would grant eternal life.”

“Ah, yes… something like that….”

It sounded more like hunting a beast that could be used as a rare medicine than purifying oneself with the blood of a holy saint. Juhyun became even more tired.

“I’m saying this because I’m really worried, so why don’t you take care of yourself a little?”

“I won’t get hurt.”

“That’s a separate issue.”

Joohyun was just upset about the whole thing.

“I wish Mr. Geo would not be involved in such a disgusting incident. Even if it is not a particularly visible blow, it is something that damages Mr. Geo’s dignity. It is true that it is difficult to just sit back and watch.”

Geo laughed.

“Aren’t you guys going to protect me?”

“…I don’t know if that would be a good topic to discuss.”

“I will comfort you when you are tired and in pain.”

“If that seems necessary…?”

“Then it seems to me that nothing will be a problem.”

“Mr. Geo is so positive.”

“So, it is convenient to eat and live.”

So Geo beat his friends again today.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (210)

210 Episode 210 Yoo Seong-woon's reaction to visiting the gallery at dawn was not much different from Joo-hyun's. "I cleaned them up myself." As a competent hunter, he showed a bit more direct action. "A crazy swindler who attacked Sergio Hunter while he was resting from physical and mental damage and enjoying an outing with an acquaintance. There's no way a collector would leave that guy alone, right?" "I didn't know that Mr. Yoo Seong-woon, who is busy, would step in himself." "I don't think you really didn't know, but as you know, my job is to manage the portrait of you. Because of that, I got scolded for neglecting my duty and even wrote a report." So it was natural that Yoo Seong-woon would be in charge of the follow-up to this incident. "It's true that my attitude toward you has become lax lately, so I've been properly punished. At times like this, if I don't follow the company's rules, problems called exceptions arise here and there." "It seems like group living is really hard." "Anyway, nothing happened, so don't worry too much." Yoo Seong-woon, who had a blank smile, continued to ask, "Did you enjoy shopping?" "Of course." Geo smiled brightly at Yoo Seong-woon's question. "I really like the clothes that are coming out these days. The quality of the fabric is also quite high, so it seems like you'll be comfortable wearing them and heading out to the battlefield right away, and there are a variety of unique weapons and accessories with special powers." "You're Argio." "Now you can guess even if the color isn't red." "I wondered why Hunter Sanarae and I got along so well, but we had this unexpected commonality… It's fortunate that nothing as scary as the Hae-ryung Guild was in an uproar." Among the members of the Hae-ryung Guild, Sanarae was one of those who used his face particularly well. I wondered why such a dirty and unpredictable thug hung out with Geo. ‘Looking at it this way, it seems like Argio also likes to decorate himself.’ You could tell just by looking at the dazzling images that occasionally appeared in the picture frames. That was the biggest difference between the other Geo and Argio. The other two were on the plain side. It’s because their faces were flashy. “I’m glad Hunter Sanarae stepped up for me this time.” “Yes, thank you for handling it so cleanly.” “I heard it wasn’t so clean.” Didn’t Geo personally treat the madman who was supposed to become paralyzed? “Do you know why Hunter Sanarae stepped up?” “I think it was to protect the world from the bomb that was me.” “That’s surprisingly similar to what I thought. Well, I heard that you also figured out your true identity.” “You’ve been quiet until now, so I guess you have no intention of opening your mouth.” “In the end, that must be a reaction to protect your comrades. Before I heard your story, I never imagined you would care so much about your guild…” “He’s a remarkable young man.” “If that’s the case, then so be it.” Yoo Seongwoon asked. “Since we’re talking about shopping, would you like to go with me next time? I think it wouldn’t be bad to invite Joohyun and have a suit made for us all. There’s a master I often visit who lives in the house.” “You must be busy, right?” “Time is a problem that can be solved if you make it.” Thanks to the situation where things are somewhat under control after the war with the monsters, Yoo Seong-woon’s workload was gradually decreasing. Above all, accompanying Geo on his schedule could be seen as a type of work… “…….” “Mr. Yoo Seong-woon?” “Um, I had a different thought for a moment.” “Can I ask what you were thinking?” “I thought you were human.” “Oh.” Fortunately, Geo didn’t tease him after hearing his dull worries. “Did you think that’s what you were thinking?” “I think it’s a perspective worth thinking about, so I’m trying it out. However, I’m not sure if this is really the right path or if it’s not a foolish idea. I think it’ll take a while until I come to a definite conclusion.” “No matter what the outcome is, I respect Yoo Seong-woon’s judgment.” “That’s a heavy word.” This mystery did not divide all paths into right and wrong. So even if Yoo Seong-un was dissatisfied or walked a path that was immoral, Geo would not tell him that it was wrong. ‘No, this guy doesn’t judge the world by right and wrong in the first place.’ Geo doesn’t distinguish between good and evil in random events. If we organize it like this, the proposition that ‘Gio’s portraits like good people’ would be contradictory, so to be more precise, he didn’t put selfishness into it. As evidence, Geo didn’t ‘punish’ evil people when he dealt with them. He simply ‘classified’ them. He affirmed the existence of all concepts, but he only made choices that suited his ideals and tastes. ‘It feels creepy to a mediocre person like me.’ So Yoo Seong-un couldn’t rely on Geo. At least this time. ‘The choice and responsibility are entirely his own.’ He had no choice but to think carefully. His soul and body would be tied to the snowy field until he died. ‘As a human. As a gardener and a curator. And as a person named Yoo Seong-un… .' How should I judge the existence before my eyes? Or what should I do to have the least regret? “…….” He needed time. “…….” “People really live hard lives. Do they enjoy suffering?” “I’m trying to set the mood and think seriously, but will this continue?” “I feel very sorry, but I wonder if this is something I should think seriously about, dear Yoo Seong-un.” “Not all beings are as clear-cut as you are about everything.” Of course, there must be people who make simple and clear judgments and decisions like Geo, but at least Yoo Seong-un couldn’t be that person. There were too many burdens hanging under his feet and on his shoulders for him to think and act easily. Anyway, this was just Yoo Seong-un’s personal circumstances. He wiped his neck and then smiled and asked. “…Then what are you going to do now?” “I’m going to take a break.” “Honestly, it’s nice to hear that.” “I’ve been too active so far.” He finished all the things he had to do. “I’ll see you later.” The introverted Sergio needed a break. * * * And so Geo was locked up in the house again. “It’s dangerous outside the blankets.” “Muaang...” “You agree.” The giant cat, which was overflowing with coolness just by touching it, was the perfect friend to hug. Geo rolled around on the bed while hugging Dana. Geo's figure was swallowed up in the cloud-like softness. "Hoo..." Geo's blunt face, which had been lying still, softened a little. "……." He stroked Dana's long, soft body. He caressed the cold jewel cat's belly. "How many people are in here?" "Meow." "Yes, I see. There are more than I thought..." "Meow." "They're all sleeping inside you." However, it was too bad to keep Dana locked up inside like this. 'I have to finish the gravestone for Joohyun.' I had covered it up for a while because I saw Joo-hyun trying to overcome the past and move forward, but now that the mermaids who were jealous of the new painting had quieted down, it was right to finish the work. When Geo got up from the bed, Dana, who had been staring at him, also slowly got off the bed. Dana, who had grown considerably larger, boasted a body almost as big as a wolf dog. Geo patted his daughter. "Shall we go to the studio?" "Meow." Honey flew over to the two and landed gently on Geo's head. "What did you do?" "Gururuuk!" "I see, I'm glad your brothers seem to be doing well." "Gurur." "I should visit soon. What should I bring to make it taste good…?" Geo entered the studio while having a light conversation. He sat in front of a blank white canvas. The small, round wooden chair that he had made to recall his memories as a student was well-finished, smooth, and warm as it caught the sunlight. Geo held a palette carved from wood. He said with a low laugh. "Not yet." A firm voice as if teaching. "It's not your turn." "■■…" "You have to wait." Geo stared at the clean white paper with a brush in his other hand. "……." He was not afraid of death. Not only was there no fear, but there was also no despair. There may be sadness, but the path after that was something that should be let go. Folly only belongs to those who were left behind, so it is right for the dead to continue their fate in unknown concepts and spaces. Geo's thoughts were slightly different from the religions he knew. This place was a narrow and biased world that only accepted those who liked it, not like heaven or hell, and it didn't even go around in a circle like reincarnation in Buddhism. 'It's just a state.' Just like catching a cold one day. Just like crying when you’re sad and smiling when you’re happy. To Geo, death was just that. ‘How is it different from falling asleep?’ Some call it a very long sleep, and Geo agreed. 'Everyone will experience it at least once.' Whether it's their own or someone else's. People encounter deaths big and small as they live. Even the death of a small bug that they step on and kill along the way, don't they bury it in that insincere land without knowing it? "It's okay." Geo stroked Dana's cheek, who was standing next to him, with the back of his hand holding a brush. He spoke as if he was soothing a whining child who didn't want to go to sleep. "You decide where you will be." It may have been intentional or unintentional. They may have liked it or not. There may have been happy memories, there may have been painful memories, or there may have been no memories at all and it just remained. It remains. This is their home, their traces, their daily lives. 'We have lived, occupying the volume of each other's worlds.' What should I call you? "....." Geo drew a picture frame with nothing drawn on it and named it. "...Let's call it a diary." Dana cried. "Meow." In the frame of the cats, the lovers were died in the war. It was a person who had a good time. In the early days, I would have been a closed house with him, and I had to live my life. I keep having dreams of that person being dragged beyond the wall into the sea. 'Would things have been different if I was with him?' 'At least if I was with him, he wouldn't have been scared. He's so timid, I need to be by his side...' 'What's the use of this, someone who's already dead?' Dozens of times a day, he'd blank out and suddenly come to mind, and after suffering for a while, he'd barely manage to escape. When he fell asleep like that, he'd have another nightmare. The longing and guilt would spread like ink and he'd have trouble breathing. Then one day, an acquaintance in an alley said this to me. "Do you know Black Cloak? I heard a new series came out..." "Is that what you were calling me to tell you?" "No, listen until the end. This is really valuable information, but I'm telling you because I feel so bad for you." "You don't feel bad at all." "Is this how I repay the debt I owed him last time?" "Who on earth could this punk draw..." "He said he drew heaven." "..." I asked back. "...What?" “Black Cloak drew Heaven this time. He said that all the young and kind people are in it.” “What nonsense are you talking about? You’re talking nonsense. Even if Black Cloak really is divine, that’s… that’s absolutely….” “But it’s not like you have to lose to find it, right?” He said that it wouldn’t be easy to find. He said that because so few people have seen it and the few people who have kept their mouths shut, the information didn’t spread. “…….” He drew Heaven? “…….” A Heaven filled with only the weak and kind? ‘… That’s nonsense.’ While thinking that, the woman went in search of the white frame that said Black Cloak’s new series. She knew it was nonsense, but she looked around carefully, being careful about her actions just in case. The rumor hadn’t spread yet, so there didn’t seem to be anyone who looked like her. However, since she couldn’t find anyone, she tried another method. She brought the frame over here. “…Black Cloak said he likes good people.” So she did something good. “Uh, over there.” “Huh?” “…Should I help you move your luggage?” “Oh my, all of a sudden? That’s fine.” “If you’re worried, I’ll just help you with these stairs.” “No, I’m just so sorry….” She helped the old man, who at first glance seemed to have no energy, carry his luggage. She felt impatient, but she didn’t act too harshly. In this world, who would easily believe someone offering help? But surprisingly, the old man smiled and expressed his gratitude. “I wasn’t worried. Are you one of those people, young lady? People who do good deeds?” “Huh? Good deeds…?” “Or not. There have been so many honest young men lately that I thought they were in the same club.” “What kind of people are they? Well, it’s not for me to say, but if you trust strange people in this world….” “People who make a fuss about the black cloak are not dangerous.” “…Ah.” The woman had heard that story too. “They say you have fans.” It’s funny to say it’s thanks to them, but it really was thanks to them that the woman could easily interfere. People who didn’t believe in good deeds and avoided them had let their guard down a little thanks to the black cloak enthusiasts. “You seem lost… Where are you going?” “Mom, no, that…” “I, that’s it. A black cloak enthusiast. I'm doing a good deed to see the black cloak." "Oh! I see, oh my. Then can you tell me where the grocery store is in this neighborhood? I moved here…." "That's on the main street. I'll show you." "Thank you." After giving directions, the woman received a zucchini from the new resident. "Um, this is…" "Do you have any eggs at home? Crack an egg and fry it. It's delicious." "I'm sorry… Take it back." "I'm so grateful." It had been a long time since she had seen such clean and fresh vegetables. Since she had received such a precious gift, it was a shame to throw it away. In the end, the woman went to the market that day and bought some eggs. Thinking about it, she didn't have any salt to put in the eggs, and she didn't have any cooking oil to keep them from sticking. Thinking about the empty house, the woman picked up a few more ingredients. It wasn't a very good life, and the eggs were monster eggs, but they tasted good. "……." It's been a while since I've had Jeon. "…Hey, I burned it a bit. Eat it yourself." "……." "You always cook… I tried my best." I made excuses for the empty seat. I thought I should make a better Jeon next time. Thinking of my lover who was much better at cooking than me, I cried again with the Jeon in my mouth. I felt like an idiot. Still wanting to see him, the woman continued to go out of the house. Thanks to the black cloak lovers, it was definitely easier to poke around here and there. The woman gradually got used to this routine. "Oh, here it is." "Who…" "I heard you helped my mother." "Who are you talking about?" "No, you don't have to be wary… I just wanted to say thank you." "Oh, yes…" "This is a side dish my mother made. She has such big hands…." The middle-aged man bowed his head and left. "You don't have to return the container!" "No, wait a minute…!" This kind of thing happened often. "……." When she came to her senses, she realized that there were quite a few more people who recognized her face. Unlike the faces in the back alleys when she was young, they were faces filled with affectionate interest, gratitude, and joy. Feeling ticklish, she cried in the middle of the street. "Huh? Hey, sis. Why are you crying? Did someone bother you?" "What's wrong? Don't do this here.

Come inside and have some tea.” “Oh my, something bad must have happened...” “It’ll be okay, okay? Why are you crying so sadly?” Ah. It was an instinctive intuition. ‘… If I keep doing this, I’ll forget you.’ And you probably want that too. ‘I don’t know how many times I’ll have to repeat this before I can see you..’ She thought that this kind of life wasn’t so bad. Not long after, the woman resumed her job as a hunter. * * * This is information that requires identity verification. Verification has been completed “…….” Identification Number 0S-000-B Correspondence Level F(-) Object Type Object Name White Frame(-) Power Diary(-) Another framed picture drawn inside a white wooden frame. It is understood to be the third work of Black Cloak (0S-328-D), following Breathing Sea and City of Void, but considering the importance of the concept, it is recorded as a separate mystery. It is rumored that one can see the deceased who lived a good life, but no witnesses have actually seen it. The probability of seeing it is extremely low compared to Black Cloak (0S-328-D)’s previous works. Some citizens who take this into consideration are starting social activities to summon Black Cloak, and this work has a high probability of existing near such specific objects. “Ah, I received a tip and will organize it into an audio file. Uh… This is the case of an 82-year-old man. His name is Lee Jeong-ha, and he lived in Yesan, South Chungcheong Province. Black Cloak has already reached the provinces… He is expanding his scope of activity faster than I thought, so shouldn’t we take action? No, anyway. This isn’t it.” “I heard that he lost his granddaughter during the recent ‘Sea Flower Garden’ incident. Her name is Seo Yoon-ha, she’s 19 years old. She’s a C-class hunter… and her position is a dealer. She’s a cold type, so she seems to have participated despite her relatively short career. She’s the kind of person who died and the living person that the temporary name ‘White Frame’ requires.” “Lee Jeong-ha passed away on the 15th, and it’s said that there was a pure white diary in her arms. People around her say that she said she saw the frame a while before she died… Since other people couldn’t see it, they probably thought it was a hallucination. I think they didn't immediately suspect this phenomenon because there wasn't much information in the area." "The research team checked the 'White Diary' with the consent of the bereaved family, but they couldn't read the contents. The letters can't be deciphered, and the form looks different depending on who's looking. However, Lee Jeong-ha's fingerprints were detected in the diary… Well, it seems that only certain people among those looking for the 'White Frame' can see the frame and read the diary." "What is the difference between Lee Jung-ha and the other witnesses? I think it lies in their attitude toward life. Like the extent to which they miss their dead loved ones… or their will to return to society… or their remaining lifespan. Lee Jung-ha was said to be calm even though she was close to the age of natural death and her granddaughter died." "I don't know what the white frame is trying to do. Even if they start their social activities to see the 'white frame,' there are those who see it and those who still can't. I also wonder why it exists only in the peripheral areas where those who are looking for it can't see it. And what's written in the diary created by the frame." "That's it. Ha, I wonder if anyone else has seen it properly…." "……." This is information that requires level 0 identity verification. Verification has been completed. Would you like to continue reading the content? [Yes/No] (Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (211)

211 Episode 211 Authentication is complete. Would you like to continue checking the contents?] [Yes/No] Identification number 0S-000-?? Response level ?? (-) Object type ?? Object name White frame (-) Authority diary (-) "… Additional report." "Before that, I'd like to tell you in advance that only 'Level 0' employees who can be authenticated can view this. To those employees who are not 'Level 0' among those listening to this file right now, yes, I want to make it clear that the association and I will in no way be held responsible for any disadvantages that arise after listening to this file. It would be best to get out of here on good terms." "Continuing my report. Ha, it's truly amazing. I made direct contact with the Black Cloak. The contact area was Anseong, Gyeonggi-do. Just like the previous file, I encountered the Black Cloak while investigating the Object name 'White Frame.' I saw his frame. A portrait." "That person really seemed perfect. The peaceful forest he lived in looked so beautiful. I could definitely see the ideal of Black Cloak. He seemed to prefer things that were peaceful and beautiful. I could tell by looking at his eyes, his eyes, his eyes…" (deleted content) "……." "…I will organize the information about the dangers of Black Cloak separately later. However, it is so that just looking at it can make you lose your mind that I wonder why there hasn't been a religion yet. I almost got disposed of too…" "Please refrain from sharing unnecessary information, sir." "Oh, right. Even after receiving treatment, this is still happening." "If the hospital bed is uncomfortable, should we move?" "Even so, it's just going to the interrogation room, right? Let's do it here. Then, I will continue the story about the 'white frame' from last time. To make it easier to organize… um… let's just cut out that part…" "There are conditions for being incorporated into the entity. They must have lived a good life that Black Cloak would like before they died, or they must be very young souls who have not yet learned good and evil. Judging from reports that no similar cases have been found overseas, it is presumed that souls are collected only in some areas of Korea." "Black Cloak said that this is not a work of art created for appreciation, but rather a concept close to home. Then, when asked how he could explain some of the unusual cases reported recently, he said that it is not a function of the work itself." "If it is not a function of the work itself, are there additional factors?" "That's right. He said that if the soul inside the 'White Frame' and the soul of the living being outside the work resonate, they can show arbitrary interactions. Well, as expected of a divine mystery, even this statement is very vague and fairytale-like… In summary, it is not much different." "The initiative always lies with the soul inside the frame. If the living being strongly desires it, the will can be recognized through resonance, but if the soul does not want it, the living being can never recognize the 'White Frame'." "In addition, in situations where there is a risk of destroying the balance of life and death, it is understood that they do not reveal themselves, regardless of the degree of their will resonance. It seems that there are limits to what is allowed for the residents in the frame… I have not heard a clear answer on this part." "I think you have a guess." "I will explain that later." "Thank you." "The black cloak said that this is not a prison, but a home, and that they can go wherever they want. So this seems different from the afterlife of the divinities that we commonly know. However, if they 'can go anywhere,' this could be heaven, the path of reincarnation, or perhaps… they could possess another person? Of course, this is a guess. There are no confirmed cases." "Now, I will answer the question you just asked. It is about the scope allowed for the residents in the frame." "I interpreted this as 'only helping the living continue their remaining lifespan.'" "Based on the cases identified so far, direct encounters with the 'White Frame' have been extremely rare. Such exceptions were usually when the being was stable enough that even if they directly perceived the soul's resonance, it would not upset their balance." "Can you give me an example?" "There were patients who had accepted their own deaths, or the elderly, or people with very strong mental powers who did not care about life or death." "It sounds like there are some similarities." "It seems that the more the living accept the death of the deceased with great significance, the more difficult it is to encounter." "Among these, if the living are accepted into the realm of the deceased, or the 'White Frame', while still alive, they will receive a 'diary.' The living cannot know exactly what is written in it. However, judging from the reactions of those who received and read the diary, it is presumed to be a kind of kaleidoscope." "What is certain is that this 'diary' helps the precarious life that will soon pass to the 'White Frame' to end its life in a stable and peaceful manner. Is it a reward or a gift for the life it has lived? In this case, it could be said that the living were pleased with the Black Cloak, and since the Black Cloak especially likes good people, it could be that it was a history worth receiving compensation for…." "There aren't many cases to begin with, but the above case is expected to be an extremely small number of cases. If the 'White Frame' were to spread overseas, it would probably be worth more, but it's a shame." "This 'White Frame' said that even the living can enter." "…Are you sure?" "He answered that those permitted by the Black Cloak can. He didn't say who exactly. If I were to guess, it could be Sergio Hunter, his apostle, or the acolyte of Chaisol. Since the Black Cloak especially values balance, he wouldn't do anything that would ruin the current Earth, but it's definitely something we need to be careful about." "That's all I can explain verbally. I'll report the rest in writing." "Thank you for your hard work." [Additional Report] In a later interview, Sergio Hunter, the Black Cloaked Apostle, stated that "visiting is difficult, although the door can be opened through the Contract Beast (presumably: Anticat 'Dana')." Another Apostle, the Pre-priest Chaisol, responded by saying that he didn't know about the existence of the ‘White Frame.’ Just as not all Apostles are given the same amount of information, there are differences in the powers that are granted. Some of the residents of the ‘White Frame’ have been revealed to be able to temporarily transform into something in exchange for good deeds. They are confirmed to be unable to communicate, but their forms can be found in places where there are few people. Their form, behavior, and ease vary greatly from individual to individual, but they all show no desire to interact with the living. Some gardeners have speculated that they are ‘Children of the Origin.’ There is ongoing discussion about whether or not to define them as monsters, so until further records are made, they will be referred to as ‘Residents of the White Frame.’ Strict control of this record is requested. * * * “…….” “Would you like to visit?” Juhyun blinked at the white frame that appeared in front of him. “…Is it heaven?” “As I said earlier, it’s just a house.” “It’s wonderful.” The house I’m in now is so lonely. Juhyun was very grateful for the spacious and luxurious house that the collector had kindly given her, but on the other hand, she thought back to the messy and noisy orphanage. Although she only lived there until she was 16, it was always Juhyun’s ‘home.’ ‘They say all the good, young people are in here.’ She carefully swept the frame with her hand. “…….” Juhyun received a letter from Geo today. “…That’s why you gave me an invitation.” It was still a letter that was hard to read, but Juhyun was able to find the word ‘invitation’ in the intricate patterns that were intertwined like the picture. Could it mean that ‘Geo’s portrait’ was becoming more and more human? Maybe so. She waited with a slightly excited and quite worried heart, and this pure white frame appeared. Geo was waiting for her not in the peaceful forest where she had always been, but in an empty frame with nothing drawn on it. “Do you want me to visit here, Geo?” “The choice is always yours.” “Come to think of it, Geo has always been like that. I’ve never forced anything on you.” “I didn’t feel the need.” “Even though it was a gravestone made for me.” That day, the day Geo called out Joo-hyun’s dead friends. “…Haha…” I wondered where my family that Dana had swallowed had gone. “…They were all here.” “Would you like to visit?” It was the same words as before. The same pitch, the same voice. “… No.” Joo-hyun felt a distant emotion, but at the same time, the whole situation was funny. “It’s okay.” “Is that so?” “It’s too big of a gift.” Geo had made this ‘for a friend’. What a naive person he was. What a simple and clear-headed person he was. Joo-hyun couldn’t help but laugh whenever Geo gave her a gift that she couldn’t handle. “You’re really amazing.” I felt childishly grateful for his easy-to-see favor. “When did you make this? I haven’t heard any news of a new Black Cloak piece.” “It’s been quite a while. However, Yoo Seong-woon said that important people in the government and the association are worried that it could cause problems in various aspects and are preventing the information from spreading.” “That’s true. Oh my, what are we going to do if we create an afterlife instead of something else…?” Geo crossed his arms, as if he wanted to express his dissatisfaction. “But I couldn’t keep Joo-hyun’s family in Dana’s body.” “Don’t be sincere in the strange parts, because every time Geo-ssi becomes sincere, difficult incidents break out.” “I’ll take note.” “Are you going to take note of my story too?” “Everyone is making fun of me for that.” “I was just joking.” Joo-hyun gained the strength to laugh anew every time he saw this great mystery’s human favor. This straightforward gift was twisted in its method, but its essence was simple. And Joo-hyun was always someone who looked at the inside rather than the outside. 'Geo's Portrait' was the same. Joo-hyun was embarrassed by the clean and pure gift that Geo gave her, but in the end, she was grateful. "Thank you, it's a really pretty house." If he was truly mysterious in nature, there would be no such gift. "You wouldn't cause trouble with this, right?" "Of course." "I trust you, Geo." "I'll repay your trust." "Yes..." There were so many things that made my head hurt, but now it felt a little better. "..." After all the opportunities given to me pass, I will also enter here someday. If Geo allows it. '... That's enough.' There was no need for heaven for someone who was alive and breathing. Because I could still walk a long way. * * * Meanwhile,

'Underground Four-legged Rainforest'. "...." Rustling. "...Uh..." Rattling rattling rattling!! "Uh..." Yoo Seong-woon blinked. "Yoo Seong-woon Hunter, what's wrong?" "No, I see a familiar new monster here for some reason...." “What are you talking about? Are you hot? How can it be new when it’s familiar?” “There is something like that.” Yoo Seong-un laughed in vain at the ‘water bird’s nest’ he came across in an unexpected place. ‘It’s nice to see you here.’ It seems like Geo is planning to swallow the Earth. (To be continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (212)

212

Episode 212

The familiar yet new monsters that Yoo Seong-un encountered were not only found in the 'Underground Four-legged Rainforest'.

Dalgrak.

“…What is that?”

"…bird…?"

At some point, a monster was captured randomly appearing in multiple dungeons.

“No, is it water?”

It was living water in the shape of a bird.

Although it does not have vocal cords and does not make sounds, it makes faint noises using plants and minerals it carries inside its transparent body. The main targets are ripe fruits, fallen leaves, and jewels.

“What? If it’s water, can’t I drink it?”

“You don’t even know exactly what kind of creature it is, so how can you treat it so rashly….”

“Hey, wait a minute. This could be some kind of living elixir.”

"no…."

Hot.

“…….”

"…uh?"

The hunter looked at his comrade trapped inside the transparent body. Their eyes met. His comrade, who had belatedly realized where he was, opened his mouth as if he wanted to scream, but not even the usual air bubbles came out.

And then it melts away in an instant.

“…Ugh, huhhhh!!!”

Information about this unusual monster has become another hot topic among hunters.

The victims are mostly humans with malicious intent. Even if the malicious intent is not directed at the monster, they will be attacked if they harbor impure thoughts. The hunters who heard information about this unique monster felt a sense of familiarity for some reason.

“…Isn’t that a black cloak?”

“Oh, right, you brought it up well. My awkwardness just got resolved.”

“I thought it looked familiar, but it was a black cloak….”

Among them, some hunters who participated in the recent dungeon raid called 'Underground Four-legged Rainforest' were able to make additional predictions.

“A bird made of water?”

“It looks similar to the contract beast that Sergio Hunter carries around.”

“Oh, I see. That… water bird… called Honey. Right?”

“It may look a little different, but even taking that into account, there are definitely a lot of similar parts.”

“I thought you had tamed it in some remote dungeon, but it turns out it was a completely separate group.”

It wasn't that rare for a trainer to tame an unidentified monster. There were definitely some dimensions in the dungeons that could never be visited again, and it was common for trainers to tame the monsters that lived there.

In particular, in a world where individualism is deepening, even if they are public figures, hunters do not easily reveal their personal information. Even though the number of contracts for the 'Sergio Hunter' was not well known due to his efforts in collecting, the hunters who directly participated in the strategy were a different story.

Although they had not actually witnessed it, they realized through information released to the Association community that the main character of this rumor was very similar to the contract holder of 'Sergio Hunter'.

“So, is this monster’s species name confirmed? I think Sergio Hunter just said it was a water bird….”

“The emotional response is just ‘water bird’.”

“What kind of name is that so insincere? I thought it was easy to call me a water bird since I’m a bird made of water.”

“It’s probably a bird that lives in water, so I guess that’s not such a wrong statement…?”

“Anyway, how did you tame this guy? Judging by its similar habits, is it a monster that lives in the Black Cloak’s dungeon?”

Even though we thought about it that way based on similar characteristics, different opinions did emerge.

“It could just be that they’re just hanging out together because their personalities match. You know, there are monsters like that. Their habitats are unknown, but they keep being found in places with similar characteristics…”

“Oh, that’s right. There are monsters like that.”

The gardener calls this mystery 'the child of the source', but the hunters also call it by another name.

“Is it a share monster?”

This was a term for a 'monster that borrows other dungeons', and strictly speaking, it was a slightly different type of mystery from the 'Child of Origin'. However, because they had similar characteristics, it was difficult to distinguish between the two unless you were a gardener.

“It’s not uncommon for monsters with similar characteristics to share a dungeon.”

“That’s true, it could be a newly appeared Share Monster.”

Dungeons are simply another dimension. Even if the gates on Earth don't open, new monsters will come in as they fight each other. It's not strange for unfamiliar monsters like this to suddenly appear.

And as is always the case with the introduction of new monsters, there were a few mishaps.

“…Uh, uh, right now. What is he doing?”

“Where is that kid going now? Hey! Hey!!”

“There… there’s a tree, a tree….”

“What’s wrong with you? Stop it, you’re going to fall down now!!”

This living water bewitched people.

"pretty."

They were mostly found in nature, with flowers and trees in full bloom.

We would huddle together and make puddles under trees, or sit on branches in the forest while it rained and look down on people.

If there were only a few water birds gathered together, it would be indistinguishable from a normal puddle of water, unless there were some miscellaneous jewels or fruits.

But at night, the story was different.

“Look, life is melting in it.”

It shone red and blue, but there were rare times when it shone with a dazzling golden light that was impossible to take one's eyes off. People were captivated by its light without realizing it.

But the situation was not serious enough to be called 'possessed'. Even if a few small water droplets gathered together, they would only form a puddle, and unless they were gathered in a deep place, they would be just a shallow stream.

but.

“There’s a lake over there right now…!!”

“Catch him!!”

Sometimes that wasn't the case.

-with a plop!!

In places where a large number of water birds cannot be simply counted in dozens, deep holes, or already-formed lakes or seas, the water birds that sparkle and shine like living water ghosts.

However, life and death depended on the good or evil of the victim. Those who lived good or ordinary lives were able to come to their senses, even if they were belatedly taken in by such a delusion and drowned in water.

Hot! Exactly!!

"ouch!!"

Knock knock knock knock!!!

It was because the water birds rushed in and pecked at me hard as if to say, 'Come on, you idiot.' It was clearly water I couldn't even catch with my hand, but strangely enough, I felt quite a stinging pain.

“Gah, what is this all of a sudden…!”

“You just tried to fall into the waterfowl lake!!”

“Me, me??”

On the other hand, the evil and wicked people just drowned themselves in the water. They did not directly chew and swallow them as they would when someone showed their malice, but they acted indifferently as if it did not matter to them that an evil person drowned.

People nodded their heads as they watched such behavior.

“I guess it’s true that you’re on the Black Cloak side.”

“They really do look alike….”

And of course, Yoo Seong-un was listening to all this gossip.

* * *

“I heard you’ve been seeing your kids a lot lately.”

Yoo Seong-woon smiled faintly during the hallway meeting that he had not held in a long time.

“There was even talk of him being an angel in a black cloak.”

“I have never painted an angel.”

“Well, in this day and age, angels are often compared to workers handled by the divine. I think that’s probably what it means. I don’t think you’re one of those children portrayed in that context….”

Where would the source have the intention to create children? Would a tree think and bloom?

Unlike the divinity called fate and nature, which has a will, Geo would have simply created life.

'That would be even scarier.'

It was such an easy thing to give birth to a single life.

“Do you like the work you created this time?”

“There is no reason to draw a picture you don’t like.”

“I see….”

Yoo Seong-un glanced at Joo-hyun, who had a calm expression, and Geo, whose face was covered.

‘… Did you guys figure out how to talk about this?’

Perhaps the 'white frame' that created deep and calm waves this time was a concept similar to the 'tombstone' that Geo had mentioned earlier. However, Joo-hyun looked no different than usual.

Their eyes met.

“Why do you look at me like that?”

“Um, nothing.”

Anyway, if there are no problems, it doesn't matter.

'Mr. Joo-Hyeon is not the kind of person who would cause an accident because he can't control his greed.'

Yoo Seong-un also wasn't that interested in the 'White Frame'. It's not that he wasn't interested at all since it was another child created by Geo, but it was just that much. Even if it was a visualized heaven, he wasn't that interested.

He was already a gardener who contained in his body a great mystery no different from purgatory.

“…It’s embarrassing that we’ve all gathered here but we don’t seem to have anything interesting to talk about. Right? Does everyone know what’s going on with Chae Sol? I just found out, so can I talk about it?”

“There is nothing that can’t be done.”

“First of all, I heard that you got scolded a lot by Iru Da students.”

“Ah, I see… I see….”

“It seems that he told his students that he was not kidnapped by the mermaid, but that he had fallen through the frame himself. How could he not be angry when his partner ran off to such a dangerous place without saying anything?”

Chae Sol was quick-witted and hid it well, pretending not to know anything. It is said that he even wrote a letter of reflection and submitted it, and that he told the truth only to Priest Kang Seo Dam, who knew Geo's true identity.

“They also said that there were achievements separate from that.”

"achievement?"

“I heard you did a pretty good job with this attack?”

Geo nodded at that.

“He was a great help in dealing with Isser. That’s why my father pushed student Chaisol into that dungeon. I think he wanted him to learn how to properly handle the power of the sun.”

Additionally, he would have wanted to gain 'experience in killing creatures that can communicate'. From the perspective of the divine, there was no better opportunity than this. Since the target of the killing had accepted the end of his own accord, the burden would be less.

“I am worried because I think you want student Chaisol to grow up to be an outstanding priest of the sun.”

“Oh, I’m worried….”

“Children are busy just being healthy.”

“Mr. Geo, you seem to know children surprisingly well.”

“Even though he looks like this, he was a high school teacher.”

“Isn’t it a bit too much to call someone over 17 a child…?”

They were modern people who had slightly different perspectives from Sergio, who was a modern man from an old era. Nowadays, even if you turn 15, you are considered 'all grown up'.

“It’s fortunate that student Chaisol didn’t seem to be greatly shocked.”

“Well, it wasn’t something that Chaisol did alone. I heard that Priest Kang Seodam was with him when he dealt with Isser. Since they did it together, it probably wasn’t such a difficult situation.”

“No, it was a tough situation.”

“That’s really decisive.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders.

“…I agree with what you said that it’s fortunate that Chaisol didn’t get too shocked. It seemed like he was quite friendly with the mermaid named Isser, calling her ‘Galaxy.’”

This was a situation where he had killed someone he considered a friend with his own hands. Although he might have been overwhelmed with self-reproach at a young age, Chae Sol looked as cheerful as usual.

Geo opened his mouth.

“I think he understood that this was a necessary process for Isser. Chaisol and I have a lot in common, so he doesn’t put too much weight on the state of death.”

“…That sounds a bit creepy.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled awkwardly.

“Will Chaisol grow up to be like you?”

“It’s probably very different from mine. It’s just that their way of thinking is similar, but it doesn’t mean that their attitude toward life and the surroundings is the same as mine. Chae Sol is a very sociable student.”

“It did seem that way.”

He asked, rubbing his chin.

“Is this the gift you gave to Iru Da Yang?”

“Yes, you mean the Basram flower tea?”

“Did you expect that to happen too?”

Yoo Seong-un and Joo-hyun share information with each other. Thanks to that, they also know that Geo gave Iru-da a car as a gift when he visited the Taeyanggyo the other day. It was quite a coincidence.

'Thanks to that, Iru Da Yang was able to play an active role in this strategy.'

She offered the gift she received from Geo to the Goddess of the Sun under the care of Priest Kang Seodam. I don’t know if it was the joy or happiness of the divine, but it was an offering that she liked, as she recently showed outstanding results in handling the power of the sun.

'And with that power, Ms. Iruda helped kill the mermaid Aria.'

Geo answered immediately.

“I just thought it might be useful in some way.”

"okay?"

I should say that it is surprisingly spicy.

'Will this be my reaction even if I die?'

I asked with a blank smile, feeling curious.

“As expected, the response was cleaner than I expected. Are you sure it’s okay? It might not be the other Geos, but it was a meaningful relationship for Giovanni alone.”

“That’s a tricky question.”

Geo answered in his usual, mechanical tone.

“But it’s really okay. As I told you last time, I’ve sorted things out in my own way.”

"…wait for a sec."

"yes."

“I think I answered like that before, but it’s a bit strong. You said it was your own way of organizing it, right?”

"yes."

"uh…."

Suddenly, the thought occurred to him that 'the tone of voice is similar to that of the black suit that lives in the empty city' occurred to him for a moment, but then Yoo Seong-un realized a hidden meaning that he had not noticed before.

“…Did you take any action? Like putting it in your white frame.”

“Those two are not the type of people who fit into the ‘Diary’.”

“Or maybe he resurrected it?”

“What’s dead is dead, and it can’t be undone. That’s why it can’t be done.”

“I’m surprised now that I got a more sensible answer than I expected.”

“We only collected the corpse that had melted and remained.”

“……?”

Yoo Seong-un looked back at Joo-hyun.

“Were there any mermaids’ bodies left?”

“…Oh, no? They both turned into water and melted….”

Geo nodded.

“Mermaids are born in the sea, and when they die they return to the sea. It must have been part of that.”

“Then how did they collect the body?”

“They were already residents I had taken in.”

"people?"

“It was a resident on my palette.”

“…Does this sound a bit ominous to me?”

“Mr. Joohyun, you don’t have to worry about anything.”

The portrait spoke, as always, without any euphemism.

“The mermaids are dead, and now they can’t hurt anyone.”

“…….”

Joohyun answered after a while.

"…okay!"

“Yes.”

“But could you please be more specific and precise?”

These mysterious guys should have gone to speech school.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (213)

213

Episode 213

What Geo did was simple.

“I brought them onto my palette.”

“I think I asked you to speak more clearly and specifically.”

“…….”

“Don’t make that look like you don’t know how to explain it any better.”

“I’ve never made that kind of expression.”

“You can see it just by looking at it, so don’t avoid it.”

“It’s unfair.”

It took quite some time for Geo to explain what he had done. He had now become a blond-haired priest.

“…You need paint to paint, right?”

“It’s hard to explain, so it became Giovanni. Yes, that’s true. But?”

“So, in other words, a picture is something painted with paint.”

“Right?”

“The same goes for me now. I am in a frame and I am made of paint, or you can define it as a concept similar to that. I think that is natural.”

It was in the same context.

“The mermaids, and the ‘breathing sea’ where their roots came from… or the ‘land of the deep sea’, were connected to my frame. In other words, you could say that they were both a frame and a painting.”

Geo said calmly.

“Then wouldn’t our mermaid friends be made of paint too?”

“…Is that how it is? Why? It’s so sudden.”

“But it goes without saying that a painting is actually a combination of paints.”

“…….”

Finally, Joohyun was speechless.

Joo-hyun was so shocked that she couldn't even respond with the usual '... I see!', but Yoo-seong-un, who was used to the novel incidents and accidents caused by the beings of the origin, was immediately convinced.

“I kind of understand.”

In the end, Geo is also a 'portrait'.

“But then, does that mean that all the beings drawn on your frame are residents on the palette? If that’s the case, then Nana and Joohyun have been there too. Even Chaisol.”

“You are not Palette residents.”

“I guess there are different standards?”

“The roots must be connected.”

“Roots, ra….”

As a gardener, I knew that roots played a very important role in the formation of existence. If we talk about the roots of the soul, which is the most fundamental concept, then that is all there is to it.

“Are you saying that simply using the same flower pot is not enough?”

“Yes, again, there has to be a ‘connection’. In terms of plants, this would be the situation where the roots and stems become attached to each other even if they are not in the same pot.”

“If we compare them to people, it would mean that they should be like conjoined twins, not just lovers, right?”

“I think it’s more like the relationship between organs in a person’s body. It’s similar to how the nutrients you chew and swallow are converted into fat that is stored in the body forever.”

“It really has to be completely ‘rooted’.”

It seemed like we had to go beyond just 'sharing' and become 'one'.

“Then what can we do? What will change?”

“You can call it.”

“What? They were already dead.”

“Aren’t the inhabitants on the palette paints?”

"…ah."

Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“Well, it’s not a matter of life or death.”

Even Geo, though dead, was stuffed to perfection.

There was already such a case right before my eyes, so there was no guarantee that others wouldn't be able to do it too. I guess I'll need a lot of help from Geo.

“So now, those mermaids… have become paint?”

“It became a color, to be exact.”

"color?"

"yes."

Mechanically, the portrait recited the truth.

“Aria turned gray, and Isser turned sky blue.”

“…….”

“You will find them in my shadow and in my works.”

“…That’s right….”

Yoo Seong-un hesitated and then continued.

“…That’s cool.”

I was sincere.

“That has nothing to do with death.”

“They are as indifferent as I am.”

“What do you mean by ‘color’?”

“It’s literally just a color.”

“Can you speak? Can you converse? Are you able to communicate?”

“If you mean it, it can be done.”

“Is Easy still there?”

“If you want it.”

“Are they already dead?”

“Yes, I became something that was far from life.”

“…Haha, that’s really romantic…!”

Laughter burst out naturally.

“I really want to see it. Where can I see it? If it doesn’t bother you, I want to see it with my own eyes. If I’m not being rude, can you tell me the way?”

“You can find it by going to the ‘Temple of the Deep Sea’ or the ‘City of the Void.’ You can also find it easily in the cabin I’m in.”

“Do I need to find the picture frame?”

“It doesn’t matter either way. After all, visible colors are everywhere.”

“That’s amazing….”

Joo-Hyeon made a flustered expression at the conversation between the two.

“…Am I the only one who doesn’t understand right now?”

“There is a world that our Joo-Hyeon cannot understand.”

“I feel like I need to understand the world that Geo-ssi is a part of, but I can’t help but feel a strange sense of rejection. Am I being narrow-minded… Am I being set in my ways…?”

“Because Joo-Hyeon is an honest person.”

It was natural to feel resistance.

“It can’t be helped since we’re looking at things from different directions.”

“…I will try to adapt little by little.”

Joo-hyun finally broke the smile of social life and let out a deep sigh. Since the person he was serving was considered to be the source of an incredible mystery, it was time for him to improve in various aspects.

'but….'

He saw a meteor shower with a happy smile.

“…….”

“Huh? Why?”

"no."

Joohyun smiled back.

“I thought you might have a headache.”

“I’m always like that.”

Still, Yoo Seong-un has not been able to define Geo.

* * *

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was in the 'City of Emptiness'.

“…There are water birds here too.”

“It’s one of the houses I built, so it’s natural.”

“The population has increased considerably since I last saw it.”

Looking around, I saw several figures covered in a blotchy black light, as if they were covered in ink. They were probably 'evil people' who had been caught making a fuss in front of the 'Empty City'.

'Still, it's not as much as I thought.'

I thought it might be full by now, since it was an era overflowing with evil people. No, maybe there were other places besides the space that Yoo Seong-un was looking at right now.

'It's a long road with no end in sight.'

The 'Empty City' took the form of a road in the middle of the walls of huge buildings standing on both sides. It seemed as if one could go through the alleys between the buildings, and continue on beyond the road, which may or may not end.

‘The sight seen through the frame is merely a fragment… .’

Water birds sat on the head and shoulders of the meteor cloud as it looked around.

“Wow, what is it? Why is it like this?”

“I think it’s the water bird that met Mr. Yoo Seong-un at the cabin last time.”

“Ah… ah, that time.”

It's been a while since that happened, but I thought you had a good memory.

'I saw some water birds sitting on the trees before I was first invited into the cabin.'

It seemed like they were those kids back then.

“…….”

When I stretched out my hand, it sat down on top of me.

“…It’s gray?”

“It’s natural, since this space is gray.”

“That’s true.”

Because water is so transparent, it was natural for it to absorb the colors around it.

'Here too, these guys are all paintings.'

The water bird that landed on Yoo Seong-un's hand poked his hand or tilted its head. It seemed to be responding as if to say, 'I don't know why you're here.'

'Is it because most of the people who come here are evil? Should I be thankful that they don't treat me like a bad person?'

At that time, a black figure was caught in the eye as it was being eaten by a water bird.

"oh."

That's how you handle it.

“Are your children going to burst their bellies?”

“That’s not necessarily true. It’s more of an activity focused on play than eating….”

“If you call something like this a game, the person listening will get a little creeped out.”

“That’s a joke.”

“You need to listen to people at face value.”

“Are you enjoying the view?”

“…I’m definitely less nervous than before.”

That doesn't mean it's comfortable, though.

'I'm not the target of hostility, yet I'm in this state.'

It was a place I had visited before, but it was still an eerie place.

Just the process of breathing in and out of it felt like my existence was being erased. It felt suffocating, as if my lungs were filled with plaster dust.

'I guess I can endure this thanks to Geo's favor.'

There was a reason why even the most skilled hunters could not respond to the 'City of Void'. Once they were captured by the work of the Black Cloak, they could not escape unless they personally showed mercy.

“Uhm….”

Yoo Seong-un tilted his head.

“…Where are the mermaids?”

“It’s hard to call you a mermaid anymore.”

“Then I can’t even call you by your name anymore?”

“No, because your name won’t disappear just because you die.”

“Should I say it’s merciful or terrible…?”

Then, a dark gray color entered Yoo Seong-un's eyes.

“…….”

ah.

"…eye…."

“Yes, it’s snow.”

“…Are you looking at me?”

“I am watching.”

It was an eye made of color.

'These are the eyes of a mermaid.'

A strange silver color, like the reflection of water scales. No, it resembles the color of pearls.

A sparkling pupil surrounded by an iris like the aurora of the polar regions. There were not two, not one, but dozens and hundreds.

A hand suddenly appeared. Buried in color, made of color, it had an unclear shape and was swaying within the set color. There were thousands of them, not just one or two.

I couldn't figure it out exactly.

'Are you alive?'

Or maybe it's stuffed.

‘This is too lifelike to be called a stuffed animal… .’

So life itself is not felt at all.

It was like a thin film of oil on oil painting. Even though there was no wind, it floated leisurely along with the strokes of the brush, and it seemed to resemble the tail of a mermaid in real life.

'Is it gross?'

It was beautiful.

'Should I say it's horrible? No matter how evil a person or monster they were, isn't it right to insult someone who is already dead?'

It was no different from a portrait.

Literally, it was a 'color'. Gray. Just as the sea during the day is different from the sea at night, the difference in light and dark that permeates everywhere is clear. I wondered why a mermaid born in the sea turned gray.

“…….”

It was a gray sea.

‘… color didn’t matter.’

It was flowing gently like the spring sea.

“…It doesn’t look like there is any, is that right?”

“No, that’s not true.”

“Then why don’t you show hostility towards me?”

“Because it is just a color. Paint cannot express or possess its own will.”

"I see."

Yoo Seong-un looked up.

“…I understand.”

A twilight that does not live up to its name of emptiness flows by, covering the 'sky'.

'This is the hell that the mermaids chose.'

They decided to remain by Geo's side as tools.

In the old days, there were two paths for mermaids.

Will he become an evil spirit and spend eternity with Geo, never to be forgiven, or will he remain as a tool and wait for the day when he will be forgiven?

The mermaids chose the latter.

“I was going to ask, ‘Now that you’ve created heaven, are you going to create hell too?’”

“I do not create heaven or hell.”

“I know, you just wanted to create a home for the things you like to live in.”

“I’m glad you seem to know.”

"…okay…."

But if this isn't hell, then what is?

“…I keep saying this, but it’s cool.”

Yoo Seong-un wanted to go to a hell like this when he died.

In this bizarre hell, resembling a fairy tale.

“…….”

… Will the day ever come when I see you as a human being?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (214)

214

Episode 214

“I think it might be the most beautiful form of death.”

“…….”

Joo-hyun, who had been listening to the story, nodded after drinking some coffee.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un sometimes feels a little bad.”

“To be honest, I do have that awareness.”

“What can I say, the feeling of your eyes sparkling as you look at something strange and incomprehensible… that kind of unpleasantness….”

“You’re being quite specific.”

It wasn't the first time he had seen such a reaction, so Yoo Seong-un just let it go.

“Mr. Joo-hyun, don’t you have that kind of romanticism?”

“Has there ever been a topic of conversation we’re having right now that could bring up the word romance?”

“If you could choose the afterlife, which one would you go to?

Something like that….”

“No matter how much I think about it, it’s not a topic that can be romantic.”

Even though he was groaning, Joo-Hyeon answered sincerely.

“Well, I’m not as strong as you guys or have any special powers. I’m so busy thinking about tomorrow that I wonder if I’ll have time to think about what happens after I die.”

“But you have Geo by your side.”

“That’s something to think about when the time comes. Isn’t it a waste to live just waiting for the day you die after being born? You can do so much more if you live.”

“Should I say it’s serious, or should I say it’s heavy…?”

“I think it’s normal.”

It was natural that only the living could dream of the future.

“Mr. Geo, that’s a little different story.”

That's really an exceptional case, and usually it's for ordinary people like Joo-hyun.

“I don’t know about people who have no will at all, but I have a lot of things I want to do. These are things I don’t want to hand over to someone who will likely live longer than me, so I have no choice but to rush to live my life.”

“I’m just making a hypothesis.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled brightly. He seemed to be in a good mood, perhaps because he had seen the masterpiece of the Black Cloak.

“Can we just have some small talk?”

“That’s not wrong either.”

If it's just a passing joke.

"…hmm…."

But, well.

“…I can’t think of anything specific. I think it will probably go the way Mr. Geo wants. Since he gave me a gift, if I’m lucky, it might end up going towards the ‘white picture frame’.”

“I guess it’s you.”

“Don’t take it too seriously. You never know what will happen to a person’s future. Which afterlife do you think Mr. Yoo Seong-un will go to?”

“The most likely outcome would be to fall asleep in my snowy field.”

“If you say snowy field….”

“I mean the garden I am tending.”

If Geo had helped, he might have been able to sleep in a warmer place, but considering the realistic possibilities and Yoo Seong-un's personal preferences, this was the right choice.

“Gardeners usually end their lives in their own gardens.”

“And you said you were going to live another life?”

“To be exact, it would be something like a sculpture, a tree, a flower, or something… an element that makes up a garden. But I think it’s a bit of a stretch to call that ‘life.’”

“So I’ve heard that gardeners consider ending their lives as human beings to be the ultimate luxury. Is that right?”

“I remember it well.”

Of course, there were exceptions, such as therapist Jeong Yeong-won, who wanted to belong to the garden of Mosin. But at least Yoo Seong-un wasn't like that. Since he was born a human, it was true that he wanted to remain a human when he died.

“In a world like this, even death cannot follow the natural order….”

“This is a world where even evil spirits rule.”

Joohyun laughed awkwardly.

“I almost got into trouble right away.”

“Oh, right. Is the topic of Sankalut now something you can talk about comfortably?”

“It wasn’t that uncomfortable before either.”

If it was a disaster sent down by the gods, it felt more like a disaster than an incident. They could imitate humans, but they were never humans, so it was ridiculous for Joo-hyun, who only knew how to endure, to complain.

“To put it simply, I was just unlucky.”

“I don’t usually think that way.”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

'This one isn't ordinary either.'

Not being concerned with life and death is usually a characteristic of a priest, but it is also a condition of a saint.

'If everyone lost their attachment to life just because they believed in God, the religious world wouldn't have become so complicated today. After all, humans are humans, and their vessels have limitations.'

No matter how much I thought about it, it felt strange that Joo-hyun was gradually becoming Geo's best friend. That is, the apostle named 'best friend'.

"……."

Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently.

"…Come to think of it, I don't know how that gentleman, Sankalut, has been doing lately. Surely he wasn't completely destroyed by Geo's ordeal or something in the past?"

"I haven't heard any such news…."

"so do i."

The evil spirit Sankalut was an important document stored in the association's research institute. If such a person had really been destroyed, the research institute would not have been this quiet. Even the news did not reach Yoo Seong-un, who was listening closely.

'Above all, something divine cannot die so easily.'

Even among the divine beings, it is not easy to kill each other, so there were many cases where they were forced to coexist. Even in the current Earth, why would the providence and imbalance that do not fit its nature remain together in this narrow dimension?

"Well, of course, if it were Geo, it would be possible…."

"I think it would be faster to ask Mr. Geo directly about that part."

"What if Sankalut still exists? Are you planning to take a step back without Geo's help this time?"

"no."

"huh…?"

When I looked back at Joohyun at the unexpected reaction, I saw him smiling brightly.

“I have already received help from Mr. Geo in that regard. It was the same when I first met him and he comforted me, and when I ate the porridge he made for me in the warm cabin. The new white gravestone he made for me was also in the same vein.”

I tried to refuse, decline, and pretend not to see his great favor, but eventually I did.

So that's what happened.

“So I wasn’t surprised. When Mr. Geo said he had done that grand piece for me, I was just grateful. I’ve received such miracles many times before.”

“It’s a miracle.”

“Yes, it’s a miracle. Who would want to reach out to a mere loser like me? And that too without any greed or jealousy, just out of pure desire to be friends.”

“…An opportunity like that won’t come again in your lifetime.”

“Mr. Geo is a very kind person.”

Joo-hyun didn't really like receiving help from others. Not only did he have no one around him to ask for help, but he never got what he wanted when he asked for help.

But the first one to help him was the evil deity known as Argio. He has been helping Juhyeon up until now, and the same goes for the matter of Sankalut.

“If Mr. Geo gives me a chance, I would like to talk to him.”

“Conversation…? I wonder if it’s okay, but Joohyun-ssi is not awakened.”

“I’m quite fond of the shield of being a non-awakened person, but I don’t want to hide behind it until this point. I have responsibilities that I have to shoulder, and Geo-ssi has helped me with a lot.”

“That’s quite a bold response.”

"are you okay."

Joo-hyun trusted his friend named Geo.

“Even if you can’t give back as much as you received, you should at least show a minimum level of courtesy. That’s what a relationship is.”

Perhaps, even until the day he died, Joo-hyun would not be able to repay all the favors he had received from Geo. But he had to know how much of an opportunity and help he had received. And he had to take the right stance.

“I don’t want to be an arrogant person. I’m not a fool who turns a blind eye to the favors I’ve received. The reason I refused Geo’s help was because I’m just an ordinary person who would eventually change if I were to receive a miracle easily.”

“I’m sorry, but this isn’t ordinary at all.”

Yoo Seong-un's words were lightly ignored.

“If I could speak to the evil deity named Sankalut, I would do so.”

“So what are you going to do?”

“We have to finish it.”

Like mermaids who were happy in the sweet reality but ultimately took on 'responsibility'.

“It’s no good if my story drags on too long. I keep saying this, but I’m just an ordinary person.”

“…….”

“Does Mr. Yoo Seong-un have a story to tell?”

“…There’s no way a gardener would have something like that.”

Yoo Seong-un gave a rare, awkward smile.

“I belong to the garden.”

If he had a story to finish, it would be the garden's, never the meteor's. For he was a gardener before he was a human, and a slave to the source.

“I guess I’ll live like this my whole life, buried in mystery….”

“Why did you become a gardener?”

“Because I want to live.”

"I see."

Joohyun nodded.

“I did that too.”

“Similar, then.”

Both of us couldn't survive without living like this, so we ended up here.

* * *

“Sankalute?”

Geo tilted his head.

“Do you want to talk to him?”

“Yes, of course, if it’s possible….”

“That’s possible. I’ll just call him, but if that’s enough for you.”

“Of course I am satisfied.”

How easy is it to summon a divinity? It might be relatively easy if it was an evil spirit, but it would require a price to be paid often. There were very few cases where one could safely interact with an evil spirit like this.

Geo rested his hand on his chin.

“Then it would be better to talk at my house.”

So Geo called Joohyun and Yoo Seongwoon.

“Wait a minute, why me?”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, since you’re here, why don’t you eat something before you go?”

“You’re not really going to turn me into a pig, are you?”

“You must have been physically and mentally exhausted during this attack, as you missed a lot….”

“Even if you look at me with such a sad face, it’s not convincing at all.”

I only lost 0.4kg.

“I’m a hunter for whom speed is important. If I keep feeding like this, no matter how much I eat, I’ll gain weight. And that’ll affect my career….”

“Aha, so you don’t have to gain weight?”

“That’s why the Mysteries can’t let their guard down even for a moment. Bring the contract, the contract. Let’s carefully organize our position from A to Z.”

“That’s why experienced curators.”

“It’s getting more and more evil?”

Well, I guess it's fine.

“Please give me a normal meal.”

“I think I’ve always had an ordinary table.”

“Even if you have no conscience, you can’t be this conscientious.”

“Tch….”

“Now you’re really tongue-licking.”

And Geo brought a blanket.

"blanket?"

“Yes, it’s sudden, but….”

“No, I was a bit surprised because it happened so suddenly.”

“You look cold.”

“How did you know that? No matter how you look at it, this isn’t a blanket. Whose leather is this? Why is it so soft and warm? How can it be this warm? Oh, it’s warm…?”

Joo-Hyeon smiled bitterly at the sight of Yoo Seong-Un slowly sinking into the soft golden fur.

“Are these the words of a man possessed by mystery?”

“Who can decide the ending as they please?”

“Even if you say that while you are completely obsessed with fur, it is not convincing.”

“Do you know the cold of the snowfield…?!”

Geo nodded at the sight of Yoo Seong-un hugging his fur tightly. His characteristic expressionless face was still there, but he could hear the voice saying, 'I knew you would like it that much.'

“I was worried because you looked cold.”

“Did I look that cold…?”

Joo-hyun shook his head at Yoo Seong-woon's question.

“…No. I’m sorry to say this, but I didn’t notice it at all until Mr. Geo told me. I thought it was no different than usual, but now that I look at it, it seems like you really were cold….”

“Don’t be sorry, it’s normal not to know.”

Geo, who suddenly became abnormal, pointed at himself with a questioning '??'

“Am I not normal?”

“If you take the average human as your standard, then yes, that’s probably true.”

“Well, it would be difficult to say that the portrait is of a normal human being. You may praise my specialness.”

Geo's understanding was quick.

“Guests who come to my house must always be peaceful.”

“Isn’t that scary in its own right?”

“You can use that blanket today.”

“This house treats its guests well.”

"thank you."

Geo was very satisfied.

“It’s nice to have friends over to visit after a long time.”

I knew this would happen, so I prepared a gourmet road trip.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (215)

215

Episode 215

After finishing the meal, Joo-Hyeon found a place to talk with Sankalut.

“…It smells delicious….”

“…Do evil spirits also feel hungry?”

Sankalut was summoned, possessed by the body of a water bird. The living water, which had no color or vocal cords, soon turned into an ecstatic red, but fortunately, Juhyun, who was protected by Geo, was not hit.

Sankalut, trapped in a tiny body, was depressed.

“I want to go home.”

"uh…."

Joohyun looked back at Geo at the unexpected reaction.

"help."

“Oh, can I join in?”

“I have a feeling that the conversation isn’t going well.”

“In that case, I have to step forward.”

By the way, Yoo Seong-un fell asleep in the guest room on the second floor, hugging the golden-step sheep fur blanket and the Basram flower tea that Geo had given him. Geo, who felt a sense of accomplishment from satisfying his friend, sat confidently between Joo-hyun and Sankalut.

Sankalut groaned as if he were a small judge. He was a water bird with no expression, but the divine communicated with his soul, not his appearance.

“It’s clear that he called me to scold me.”

“I’m sorry, but I’m here to ensure smooth communication.”

“You scolded me last time too.”

“That was a total mess.”

“I also chose a body that I had put a lot of thought into so as not to take what belongs to adults….”

“That’s why I said last time that that wasn’t the problem.”

“You only say difficult things.”

Joo-Hyeon looked back at Geo again, who was speaking in a childish manner.

“You’re a bit… younger than I thought.”

“Because it is tailored to the soul of the water bird that lent its body.”

“Oh, the spirit of the water bird?”

“I guess you could call it a wavelength, to be exact.”

That was the way Sankalut's ice was made.

“When you take over another being’s body, you take on the form of that being. That’s why you were able to handle that young body without any problems when you borrowed the body of student Iruda last time.”

“Such a secret…?”

If you think about it, it is certain that an evil divinity could not fit into the body of a young child. If it weren't for Sankalut's consideration in the first place, that is. Of course, it would have been for his own convenience and not Iruda's, but fortunately, it was a fortunate thing.

“Mr. Sankalut.”

"yes."

“The reason I called Mr. Sankalut today is because Mr. Joohyun here requested a conversation.”

"hello."

Although it was a rather innocent greeting for a demon, Joo-Hyeon accepted it calmly without being flustered any longer.

“Hello, my name is Joohyun.”

“Yes, Mr. An Ju-hyeon.”

"uh…."

“Aren’t you going to use the abandoned name?”

“…I didn’t know you would hit a sore spot from the start.”

“That’s more convenient.”

“……”

Joo-hyun abandoned the surname 'An' because that was the only way to be registered in the other orphanage. He was once obsessed with self-reproach over this issue, thinking, 'I gave up my memories of my family in order to live.'

'… Is it true that the evil god is an evil god?'

You're suddenly hitting on my weak point.

"……."

That's just for convenience.

"…I'm so glad it was you, Argio, who spoke to me that day."

"I cannot thank you enough for appreciating my excellent taste."

In an instant, Sankalut's eyes lit up as his hair turned red.

"What a great color! What a great color! I love that color!"

Sankalut was once a simple jewel that boasted an enchanting light, but through the process of humans who were bewitched by the color that resembled its blood offering it blood, it became an evil god. It was impossible for such a Sankalut not to like Geo's hair.

"What color is your blood? Show me the color, it'll be great."

"Really… I feel like we're not having a good conversation."

At Joohyun's embarrassment, Geo smiled and said.

"Because you're young."

"You're young? Divine?"

"It doesn't know how to talk, my friend. It knows human 'language' and it knows how to organize its 'thoughts', but it has no idea how to communicate."

“However, Sankalut was once an evil god of a religion worshipped by humans throughout the entire dimension.”

“Mr. Joo-hyun, when cute puppies come running towards you, barking and wagging their tails, do you know what that means?”

“You know… don’t you? When a tail wags, it seems to mean that it likes something.”

“Yeah, it’s one-way. Can you understand what a dog is saying when it barks?”

"iced coffee…."

There really was no communication.

“You don’t know anything about humans.”

“If you want to be specific, you will know ‘how to use it.’”

“Like a trainer taming a monster?”

“Not similar.”

“Then I understand.”

Joohyun became quite upset.

“…….”

It was just, a little bit disappointing.

‘… My family and friends were killed by an ignorant child.’

This was just a kid who really didn't know anything.

“Mr. Sankalut, can you talk to me?”

“Show me blood, blood. Deal with me.”

“They’re already proposing a deal in case anyone thinks they’re evil.”

Joohyun let out a sigh of relief.

“…Mr. Geo, I’m sorry, but can I have a fly?”

“It wouldn’t be a wise decision to just give in to the demands of this reckless kid.”

“I know, the more you give in to their demands, the more they want in return.”

“If you knew that.”

Argio held out a pin that had been stuck in his hair. It was a gold, jeweled pin with quite an ornate decoration, but it was harder and sharper than he had expected.

“You were walking around with something like this stuck in your head?”

“It’s hair, to be exact….”

“…I guess this was also some kind of weapon.”

“It was useful as a dagger.”

"aha."

Talk.

Joohyun lightly touched the tip of his finger.

“Okay, here you go.”

“Blood! It’s a big drop of blood.”

“Are you satisfied?”

“I am satisfied.”

The water bird, Sankalut, tilted its head.

“Can I try it?”

“We didn’t trade up to that point.”

“I feel sorry.”

Even as he said that, perhaps because Geo was watching, Sankalut did not forcefully propose a deal. Sankalut, who had become gloomy, continued to speak.

“Ms. An Ju-hyeon, you can talk to me. What would you like me to tell you?”

“I didn’t come here to make a wish.”

“Do you want paradise?”

“I can create my own paradise.”

“Humans cannot create paradise, unfortunately.”

“It doesn’t have to be paradise, that’s okay.”

“I liked you after all.”

The sankalut flapped its wings lightly. It seemed more like a water bird adjusting its posture, as it often does to maintain its watery body, rather than a particularly meaningful gesture.

“Couldn’t you have been my son?”

“If Mr. Sankalut had approached me with a favor, it might have been so.”

“‘Goodwill’ is not effective in moving people. People are the fastest and strongest when they feel anger, hatred, and fear. Don’t you want world peace?”

“The peace I want is one without anger, hatred, or fear.”

“I liked you after all.”

“Is that so?”

“I liked you, An Ju-hyeon. I want to go home.”

The little bird tilted its head.

“Do you blame me?”

"yes that's right."

“Do you want to kill me? If you do, will you become my son?”

“Ah… I absolutely hate that.”

“…Everyone hates me….”

Joohyun looked back at Geo again. Geo answered with a smile.

“I am imitating my child’s speech patterns.”

“… Mr. Geo’s water birds don’t have vocal cords, right?”

“Dad, you can’t hear anything.”

“Parents are truly great.”

Anyway, let's say that's the case.

“Phew.”

Joohyun looked up at the ceiling and then at Sankalut again.

“…There was a big war recently. It was a war started by two mermaids, and because of that, the entire sea off Korea was in chaos. There was even news that it had some effects overseas, and it almost became a global problem.”

“I know, strong mermaids. I think we could have been friends.”

“The reason they started the war was to ‘take responsibility.’ I don’t think that’s the right way to take responsibility. But the mermaids’ regret was not for the victims they had killed, but for themselves and Giovanni, so maybe it was for the best.”

“Don’t you like it?”

“Yes, but there was definitely something to learn. Regardless of the sin I committed, there was nothing to gain by dragging the story out. I also thought that my situation was no different.”

“So you saw me?”

“So I see you, Sankalut.”

Joo-Hyeon didn't think that he, a mere human, could do anything to Sankalut. He was weak, had no power, and had already failed many times.

But that is why he was a being that could become better.

“I know you were born that way from the beginning.”

Divinity was fate and nature. No one could criticize the cruelty of fate and nature. It was no different from the planets created by the universe, so even human resentment could not reach it.

“So I want to pull you away from fate and nature.”

“Can’t I go home?”

“I can’t go.”

“This is too much…! I want to go home! I want to be loved!”

“I will show you another home and love.”

After all, doesn't the divine survive even when one dimension dies?

“How about we think of it as a little bit of fun with a new game?”

“Do you want to die with me?”

“If you can.”

“It’s impossible.”

“In the universe, all kinds of impossible things happen in reality.”

“I don’t like it.”

“If you cooperate, I will send you home.”

Joohyun looked at Geo.

“Can you help me?”

“Oh, of course, buddy.”

Argio smiled with satisfaction.

“I respect your judgment.”

“…….”

Joohyun felt great trust and affection.

This was a kindness received because he had received only a few letters that he could not read. It was a relationship and time that would grow distant as the portrait was taken away. Nevertheless, Joo-hyun did not worry because he believed in his humanity.

This red and evil divinity will always make an unfair judgment. As long as he is a divinity destined for rebellion, it was inevitable that Juhyun would receive unfair support and praise.

In this huge favoritism, Joo-hyun always felt that Geo was human.

“…If it’s available, you should use it.”

“Of course.”

Argio shrugged.

“If it’s too straight, it’ll break.”

All beings were like that.

“This is especially true for those who call themselves heroes.”

“…Can you stop calling me that hero?”

“Am I having fun?”

“I’m not having fun.”

“Oh, I see. Then I guess I should keep my mouth shut.”

“You’re talking about being teased in strange places….”

Joo-hyun, who had been looking at Geo, looked at Sankalut again.

As if it had sensed something, it no longer moved busily or made much noise, but simply stared quietly at Ju-hyeon with its red eyes filled with a dazzlingly beautiful light.

“Are you going to make me human?”

"…that's right."

“It’s impossible.”

“That shouldn’t frustrate me.”

“It seems inefficient, Hyun.”

“For some reason, you’ve become more earnest and polite.”

I know, this was the authority that Joo-hyun enjoyed by carrying the divine power of Geo on his back. It was like a fox wielding the might of a tiger, but in the end, Joo-hyun was just an ordinary human.

If he couldn't use what was available to him, he would be the one to lose.

“I have already seen cases like yours, Mr. Geo. Even this immense mystery has humanity, so I am sure that you, Sankalut, can do the same. I will believe that.”

“I don’t like it… That path is bloodless and sparkly. I’ll become dull.”

“I see, that’s great.”

This was the most responsibility and revenge Joo-Hyeon could do.

“Mr. Geo.”

“Tell me anything.”

“Can you give Mr. Sankalut a body?”

“Hmm, body….”

Argio smiled brightly.

“I’ll make you a cute child.”

* * *

Yoo Seong-un woke up and blinked his eyes at the sight of a snake with bright red skin.

“…So this is Sankalut?”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“This is the first time I’ve seen a god enter a snake.”

The snake rose up in a straight line.

"hello."

“Oh, he says.”

“I have no legs, no arms. A body without wings is very inefficient.”

“Why does the way you speak seem so similar to Geo’s?”

“I follow my body’s memory.”

“You really look alike. I couldn’t tell because of your blunt speech, but were you complaining?”

“Would you like to take a look?”

“Of course, if you give me permission.”

As a gardener, Yoo Seong-un was highly immune to this new phenomenon, and Sankalut was caught in Yoo Seong-un's hands and trembled. Leaving the two alone, Geo went back up to the guest room on the second floor.

It was the room where Joohyun used to stay.

“Mr. Joohyun.”

“…….”

He was sitting on the bed, his head bowed.

“Mr. Joohyun, are you tired?”

“…I’m very tired.”

“Do you blame yourself?”

“Did I do something wrong?”

Joo-Hyeon opened his mouth as if confessing his sins to the priest.

“I didn’t know what the right choice would be. But Mr. Geo was always kind to me, and I didn’t want to miss the opportunity. I’m such a selfish person.”

“That’s what it means to be smart. It’s not that he didn’t want to miss the opportunity, he wanted to take responsibility, and Joo-hyun found the most effective and reasonable way.”

“I’m not sure if I did the right thing. But I pushed on, because I thought a miracle like this might never come to me again. I thought it was crazy….”

The hand covering his face trembles slightly and falls down.

“Will my family hate me?”

He was crying.

“Will my friends resent me?”

“Mr. Joo-Hyeon personally confirmed that this is not the case.”

“I can’t say anything harsh to Sankalut, who is clearly my enemy, and I can’t decide to cause him pain. All I can do is drag him down to the human world… That’s all I can do….”

“That’s all.”

Geo respected Joohyun.

“I thought Joohyun was really cool.”

“Don’t lie.”

“I thought it was great. Anyone can get angry and criticize, but not everyone can get back up and look forward after collapsing.”

“This is just me struggling, asking for Geo’s help because I don’t want to carry the heavy burden. It’s very… selfish… and arrogant.”

“You have to use what you have.”

“I don’t have Mr. Geo, and I don’t want to mistake what you give me for mine. That would be too ugly. Besides, I can’t even give you back what I’ve already received.”

“Does your friend need that?”

“…….”

Joohyun already knew the answer.

"…no."

The friend he knew, and the friend Geo knew, wasn't something like a business relationship. Joo-hyun also knew very well that the gift Geo gave was no different from a joke thrown out lightly.

Something makes me sad, and without me knowing, my feelings spill out through my lips.

“I fear that one day I will come to fear you.”

“We’ll still be friends then.”

“…….”

"look."

Geo declared.

“I respect you for being alert and clever in seizing opportunities. I am grateful to you, Joo-hyun, who fears me but respects my humanity. I am greatly helped by your consideration in holding the gift I gave you lightly, even though it feels burdensome.”

So we could be friends.

“I don’t think Joo-hyun can do that easily, but if you really want to, you can respect me. It’s not like it’s hurtful or disrespectful of me.”

“Then what hurts Mr. Geo?”

“I get hurt when I don’t get to do what I want.”

“…Isn’t that just a tantrum….”

“Similar.”

Geo declared.

“I am simpler than you can imagine, Mr. Joo-Hyeon.”

I wish you'd just play with me, that's what deep people are for.

“I am grateful to have the calculating and altruistic Joo-Hyeon as my friend.”

“…I’m so glad you don’t find it gross or annoying.”

Joohyun's voice gradually became calmer.

“Am I sure I’m not going down the wrong path?”

“Only Joohyun can decide that.”

“That’s right. Even if we go down the same path, right and wrong differ depending on the person.”

“Think hard and go the path you want.”

Joohyun was enough for that.

“And eat the food I give you.”

“…Why does the topic of food always come up every time we meet….”

It's not that I don't like it, though.

“…….”

He was special. He was a very special person.

He was a man of great character and compassion, easily bestowing favors and never sparing affection. He was also stronger than anything else, never regretting or breaking down. So anyone would want to rely on him.

'Just like I am doing now.'

So Joo-Hyeon dared to feel pity for this person.

‘… The time I spend in your long life will only be a moment.’

Even for that brief moment, I was afraid that I might not be able to treat this poor friend as a human being.

I was afraid that I would rely on his specialness and eventually forget that he was just a childish person who enjoyed simple pranks and exchanging letters. I was afraid that I would forget that I had such a friend and end up praising his omnipotence.

I am just an ordinary and insignificant human being… .

“…Don’t be so kind.”

“Why is that so?”

“I’m saying this because I think Geo might get lonely.”

“Everyone goes through times like that.”

His voice was flat.

“Eventually I will make friends again.”

“…….”

I feel sick to my stomach.

‘… If that sounds like resignation, that’s because I’m just an ordinary person.’

Still, he is truly a pitiful person.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (216)

216

Episode 216

Since that day, one thing has changed for Joohyun.

“Mr. Joohyun, that is…?”

“It’s a tame snake, so don’t worry too much.”

“Ah, yes. But I remember that Mr. Joo-Hyeon was a non-awakened person… No matter how I look at it, it doesn’t look like a normal snake.”

“He is a friend that Mr. Geo tamed and gave to me.”

"aha…."

The snake, which was a little thinner than a child's wrist, had a splendid red skin and its tail was swaying. The two round, sparkling eyes and the cat-like, curved mouth looked completely harmless and cute.

The collector's staff nodded.

“It’s a gorgeous snake, just like Sergio Hunter’s taste. It sparkles like a jewel, and looks like a monster that would be easy to charm. Did you make it yourself?”

“Hmm… I guess it’s similar.”

“There must be a reason you came today. If you tell me the general characteristics and habits of the water bird, I will register it with the association as an existing monster. It won’t be a hassle for you to work that way.”

“I would appreciate it if you could help me out like that. Mr. Geo gave me some snacks as a gift. Is there anyone who would like to share them? There’s so much….”

“In that case, I think the secretary’s office would be the best option.”

“I will send you a separate message when I have time. For now, please register this friend first.”

The red snake coiled around Juhyun's neck raised its head.

"hello."

“Oh my, that’s surprising. He’s talking?”

“I would appreciate it if you could call me a mountain.”

“Um… yes, nice to meet you, Mr. San.”

As expected of a collector who witnesses all sorts of strange sights, she wasn't particularly surprised. She just turned to Joo-hyun and asked him additional questions.

“What does this child know how to do? If Sergio Hunter has put him in charge of something, he must have something special, but is there anything that you would consider dangerous?”

“There are some dangerous parts, but it’s okay since Geo-ssi is controlling it. If I had to be specific, I would say it’s a mental monster. It has a great talent for charm and brainwashing.”

“Considering Mr. Ju-hyeon’s safety, I think a direct physical attack would be better than a mental attack, but of course, Sergio Hunter has his own thoughts. Okay, I understand."

The red snake became sullen at the conversation between the two.

"I am weak."

It wasn't that he was reproaching himself for being too weak for a contracted escort, but that he was dissatisfied with the red snake body Geo had given him because it was too weak. Ju-hyeon, who understood the gist of it, stroked the snake's head.

"I'll give you a snack when I get back."

"Oh, I like it. I like the bright red berries from last time."

"Be quiet for a moment, I'll ask Mr. Geo…."

"All right."

Joo-hyun, who registered Geo's new contract number 'San' with the help of the collector, returned home. Geo, who was waiting in the form of a picture frame inside his house, welcomed Joo-hyun when he returned home.

"Did it end well?"

"Yes, thanks."

From now on, Sankalut would be trapped inside the body of a harmless snake and spend time with Juhyun. Normally, he would stay by Juhyun's side and protect him, but if he eventually received Geo's permission, he would be sent back to his 'home'.

Sankalut was satisfied that he had not been captured and destroyed by the powerful divinity. It was said that divinities could not be easily killed, but it was different when facing the Portrait of Geo. Sankalut made a request as if he was now used to it.

“Give me some fruit, fruit.”

“I think you are talking about the goji berry.”

“Sweet and sour fruits suit my taste very well.”

“I’m glad there’s food I can enjoy.”

Yes, Sankalut was eventually turned into a pig by Geo.

“I wish I could gain more weight.”

“Uh… Then wouldn’t it be a bit heavy for me?”

“I know there is something called lightweight magic.”

“If it gets any bigger here, the attention will be drawn to it too much.”

“That would be difficult.”

Sergio, who was introverted, quickly understood the burden that Joo-hyun felt and gave up. In any case, Sankalut’s skinny body, which contained divinity, would not easily grow in size if he ate a lot.

“You can stop by often and get some snacks.”

“I will do that.”

A visit to the hut became essential, if only to maintain the Sankalut.

“While we’re on the subject, can I visit now? The mountain has eaten all the goby berries, so I’d like to pick some. Otherwise, they won’t listen to me….”

“One of the easiest things to find in my forest is the berries of the goby. Feel free to come in and pick them. The water birds will help you.”

As if hearing Geo's words, the transparent water birds, including

Honey, sat down on the frame one by one. He laughed in vain as they looked up at Joo-hyun as if to say, 'When are you coming in?', 'Now?', 'Come in now?'

“Excuse me for a moment.”

Joo-hyun visited 'Geo's Portrait' quite familiarly.

“…….”

“Are you okay?”

“…I feel a little bit motion sickness….”

“I think it’s because of Mr. Sankalute.”

The bright red snake raised its head as if it felt wronged.

“I am innocent.”

“Because just being there can have an impact, especially in a portrait.”

“…Ms. Joo-hyun is too weak, she needs to be reformed.”

“Joohyun will live her life on her own, don’t interfere.”

“It’s unfair.”

Joohyun looked a little tired of their conversation.

“Strangely, Geo’s way of speaking overlaps with mine.”

“There’s nothing I can do about it, since it’s a body that actually follows me to some extent.”

The two walked. The most common fruit in Geo's forest was the goby fruit. Water birds that had left their nests after a long time sat on Geo's body. Geo and Juhyun were absorbed in collecting goby fruits for a long time.

When the basket was almost full, the two went to the stream and lightly rinsed the berries.

“I never thought that evil spirits would like fruit.”

“I like red, give it to me. I’m waiting.”

“And then what are you going to do if you really turn into a pig…?”

“You can diet. Trust me, Joohyun.”

“Can snakes go on a diet too…?”

It wasn't that long ago, but within a few days, Joo-hyun and Sankalut had adapted to each other.

Of course, Joo-Hyeon is determined to cook this somehow, whether it be by roasting or boiling it, and Sankalut seems to be a good fit because he thinks, "If I keep doing this, I might be able to find a gap and exploit it one day."

Anyway, on the outside it looked very natural.

“Since you’re here, would you like to have a meal?”

“I was wondering when that would come out.”

“Did you expect it?”

“No, I’m prepared.”

Still, the meals Geo prepared for Joo-hyun brought up a strange sense of burden. It felt like he was consuming something that humans should not eat in an absurd and familiar way.

“What is this meat?”

“It’s rabbit meat. Doesn’t it have a unique flavor? The texture is chewy too.”

“As far as I know, the rabbits that live in Geo’s forest don’t have such large bodies….”

“Recently, animals have been creeping in through the picture frame.”

“Beyond the frame? Are you talking about the painting?”

“Yes, it’s called ‘Animal Kingdom.’”

“What an intuitive name.”

“First of all, I didn’t build it.”

It was intuitive.

“I tried to see if it was possible to raise them, but most of them went into a state of frenzy. I think I would have to visit the world beyond the frame to find out the exact cause, but I’ve been putting it off because it’s too much trouble.”

“It’s contradictory to say that you’ve been putting it off so hard.”

“I’m glad that the food suits Mr. Sankalut’s taste.”

“Are you changing the subject?”

The snake, which had been listening to their conversation with one ear and letting it out the other, raised its head. It tilted its head. It chewed and swallowed the rabbit meat in its mouth, bone included, and then opened its mouth.

“This is really delicious, it’s full of anger.”

Joohyun looked puzzled.

“Angry? Why are you angry about rabbit cooking?”

“It seems like the tingling sensation on the tongue is expressed as anger.”

“No, if you look at it that way, shouldn’t it have been expressed as pain…?”

“…….”

“…Mr. Geo?”

Geo didn't answer and just looked at the snake again.

“I thought Mr. Sankalut would enjoy fear more than anger, which is surprising.”

“I’m not a picky eater.”

Then he chewed and swallowed the bright red peppers on top of the dish.

“But red is good.”

“…If the people at the Institute found out that the evil spirit of pain and fear, Sankalut, actually liked anything that was red, they would definitely be shocked.”

Joo-hyun said that with a look of disappointment, but in fact, if it weren’t for the ‘red food’ that Geo had prepared, Sankalut wouldn’t have been this satisfied. Of course, Joo-hyun knew that too.

'It's just that I find it ridiculous to see an evil spirit enjoying a meal.'

Humans are animals with weak eyesight. Even if the things presented before our eyes are a mass of mystery, aren’t they ultimately in the form of food? It is true that it feels strange to see a deity with a long history replenishing its body with nutrients.

“Come to think of it… Mr. San liked the blood of children and the blood of the elderly.”

“Yes, I like it very much. I prefer it.”

“Looking at it now, it seems like everyone likes the color red, but was there a reason for distinguishing between age groups?”

“They are the children of Providence who stand at the beginning and the end.”

It meant a kind of delicacy.

“They are also worthy of entering my paradise.”

“I know very well about the paradise of the Sankalut religion. The sacrificial lambs who have offered up all their blood, pain, and fear are said to spend their entire lives in the most ideal paradise that no one can describe….”

“Yes.”

“…Is there really a paradise?”

“Of course.”

Sankalut was licking his lips as he enjoyed the rabbit dish with lots of peppers.

“It’s like Mr. Geo’s diary.”

“That’s a bit hard to believe….”

As Joo-Hyeon blushed, Argio's eyes sparkled with interest.

“An afterlife created by another divinity? That’s a story I’d really like to hear. Could you elaborate a little more?”

“…It’s not as great as Mr. Geo’s….”

“I just wanted to point out that I was just drawing a picture. I’m curious to see what kind of afterlife a proper divinity would create.”

“…Ugh….”

The snake, which had been curling up as if it was extremely burdened by Geo's interest, soon began to speak.

“…I gave them everything they valued. If they had a family they had lost, I gave them a family. If they had a mate they wanted, I gave them a mate. If they had a child they wanted, I gave them the seed they could conceive.”

Joohyun's eyebrows twitched.

“But they were all dead, right?”

“I am alive in my paradise.”

“I want to call it sophistry, but it’s hard to refute since I’ve never died….”

“Humans classify life and death and assign value based on the physical activity of the body. I think it is a very foolish and inefficient way. I treated their souls very well.”

“Where are those souls now?”

“It’s in my stomach.”

The snake spoke as if it were a given.

“It’s a part of me that I ate. It can’t be anywhere else. They are continuing their happy story while experiencing the feeling of happiness.”

“Using those souls to plot evil schemes….”

“That’s a difficult question, so I would appreciate it if you could explain it to me in simple terms.”

“Are you changing the subject?”

Geo waved his hand.

“It seems like you’re asking because you really don’t know.”

“Was what I said that difficult…?”

“If I had to use an analogy, it would be like someone asking Joo-hyun, ‘Can you plan an evil scheme with the rabbit meat you ate today?’ If you look at it this way, isn’t it a question that doesn’t even make sense?”

"uh…."

“Questions about such trivial and obvious things that don’t even need to be chewed over seem to be difficult for a young divinity to understand. As I keep saying, it seems that Mr. Sankalut was not a divinity who enjoyed communicating with humans.”

“…….”

Joohyun rubbed his chin.

“As expected… the more I hear about the world after death, the more difficult it seems.”

“There is no need for living people to worry about the afterlife, there would be various side effects.”

Argio nodded as if he understood.

“The reason why most divinities sell human life cheaply also makes sense when viewed from that perspective. The body is just a shell, and human life depends on the presence or absence of that shell.”

“Do you think so too, Mr. Geo?”

“Then would I be eating like this?”

“Oh, that’s true….”

Once again, Joohyun's mood became subtle.

‘… It really seems that the disasters caused by the divine are not malicious.’

Evil, good, all of those things were ultimately just standards created by humans. Divinity was truly nature with a will and destiny. It could never be distinguished as right or wrong.

Just like you can’t tell the difference between the top and bottom of a star floating in space… .

“…….”

Of course, it was definitely wrong for Sankalut to try to spread his cruel nature even on Earth, where such 'righteousness' was absolutely wrong. Even if it was divine, shouldn't he know how to read the situation and adapt?

After reaching a conclusion, Joo-hyun's interest turned back to Geo.

“What is the concept of this ‘diary’ that Mr. Geo created?”

“It’s literally a diary. It could be someone’s home, a travel destination, a transit point.”

It was like a villa where Geo's friends could come in and be friends with anyone he wanted. They could just sit there, rest for a while, and then move on to wherever they wanted.

Sankalut tilted his head at that.

“Aren’t you going to eat?”

“I am not so hungry that I should have to eat my precious guests.”

“It must be delicious….”

“Is that Mr. Sankalut’s opinion?”

It was indeed interesting.

“…It’s fun.”

He may have possessed divinity, but he cannot be called a proper god.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (217)

217

Episode 217

The cabin after all the guests have left.

“What is God?”

When Geo asked the 'sky', the sparkling night sky blinked. I could see its blind gaze directed at me from the way it swung its tail and tilted its ears, but still, there was no answer.

He didn't ask with the expectation of an answer either.

“Hmm, well….”

The stars that were dotted across the 'sky' sparkled with curiosity. The 'gray' stars that resembled pearls. Geo narrowed his eyes at the behavior of the Milky Way fluttering with determination.

I feel like I have something to say… .

'It could be my imagination.'

I still don't know.

“What does your father think?”

"dream?"

“This time, you didn’t ask me to take the form of a divinity.”

“Kyuu….”

The teddy bear furrowed its brows as if to say, 'I didn't expect you, a red-haired man, to take on the role of a deity,' but it sincerely agreed with its son's concerns. It gave an answer.

“Kku? Kkuu.”

“A bystander as nature?”

"dream."

“Was it really the sun?”

The sun never sets on earth unless it gives off light.

“That would be a disaster.”

Geo hugged the fluffy teddy bear. Then Dana, who had been quietly watching the two, came over and wrapped her arms around them, and at that movement, Honey, who was wondering 'what's going on?', briefly stepped out of the hood and then went back in.

The natural series of events was something that Geo liked, but he still had a concern. He really had a long life ahead of him.

“…….”

Something needed to be noted.

* * *

“Brother Geo!”

“How have you been?”

Ji-oh lightly hugged Cha-sol, who had come running. Then, as expected, Priest Kang Seo-dam and Cha-sol's partner, Priest Iru-da, who had come out to greet him, caught Ji-oh's eye.

Giovanni smiled gently and asked about the situation.

"Are there any other problems?"

"The mermaids' business has been resolved, so where could there be a problem? There was absolutely no problem to worry about, Sergio Hunter."

"You're still polite."

It was so formal that I felt embarrassed.

Geo, who had put down the tea, soon found his gaze on Iruda. Iruda met his gaze as if he had been waiting for his gaze to meet hers. She hesitated for a moment before opening her mouth.

"I feel like I haven't been able to thank you for the gift you gave me last time, so I came here to tell you, even if it's late. Do you feel uncomfortable with me coming to greet you?"

"You say it's inconvenient, but I feel very happy to have such a kind friend come to greet me. Would you allow me to enjoy this pleasure longer?"

"…Ah, that, yes. Thank you for saying so."

Iruda was a little embarrassed.

'Do you usually answer like this?'

Most adults would be embarrassed if a small child tried to talk to them as politely as possible.

Then, Iruda was able to find some leeway in that gap. It was a surefire strategy that Iruda had learned, even though he was at a disadvantage because he was young, and he did not want to lose to the adults.

'This person is a bit uncomfortable.'

It's not that I don't like it, but when I see that kind face that says, 'I know everything, but I forgive you,' my shoulders just slump.

For Iruda, who had always received only objective and cool evaluations from adults rather than respect and consideration, he was a very difficult person to deal with.

‘I won’t be able to properly express my gratitude like this…’

Kang Seo-dam swallowed a sigh at the sight of Iru Da struggling and said.

“It would be inconvenient to talk here, so I think it would be better to move to the reception room. I was wondering about the current status of the prospective priests, so I would like to move with you. Is there anything else you would like?”

“No, that’s enough.”

“I think the prospective priest Iruda also has something to say, but let’s talk about it at the appropriate place. There is a place and attitude that suits every conversation.”

Iruda blushed at the thought that her shallow trick had been discovered.

“…I was very rude.”

“I didn’t mean to be rude, so please raise your head.”

Geo was just amazed.

'Kids these days are really precocious.'

To be honest, he seemed to be more intelligent and socially adept than Sergio, a 29-year-old adult. He understood why Iruda had been talking to him with sparkling eyes.

'Do you think that if you don't have even a little bit of an instinctive advantage, you won't be able to even express your gratitude skillfully? I felt it last time, but Iruda is basically very wary of adults.'

It wasn't disgust or hatred, but it seemed like there was an ingrained perception that 'adults are dangerous'. Geo knew that if he pretended to know more, it would be seen as 'Just watch what you think' rather than 'It's okay', so he just moved on.

“I heard that student Chaisol wrote a 33-page reflection paper.”

“Ah… that’s….”

Iru nodded, understanding his consideration.

“Professor Kang Seo-dam suggested a one-page guideline, but as he wrote, it grew longer, so he insisted on bringing a wad of paper. The teacher sent it back, saying that it wasn’t necessary to go that far.”

Kang Seo-dam intervened in the conversation.

“I asked him to summarize it again in one page. Nothing is good in excess, and I needed to show that Chae Sol had reflected on it.”

“I understand why.”

Kang Seo-dam seemed to feel guilty about 'giving extra homework to a child who was already tired from writing 33 chapters', but his judgment was wise. In any case, shouldn't there be a reflection that will be recorded in the Taeyanggyo?

'It would have been difficult to record all 33 chapters as they were.'

Even though Chae Sol had been careful to hide the 'truth', she was still a child. In the process of writing 33 chapters, there must have been some content that was difficult to record, so it was right to go through some process.

“Father Kang Seo-dam, you work really hard to take care of your students. Thanks to you, Chae Sol and Iru Da are growing into even better priests, and I am very happy about that.”

“I am so embarrassed that you say that. It would be better if you didn’t say that. These are basic matters that I should have done as a teacher and senior priest.”

“I know it’s not easy to stick to those basics.”

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam closed his mouth.

'... I don't know what to say to the person who died after being killed by a religious order that didn't even follow the basics. I don't think he'd be angry, but it's not a good story to tell.'

They eventually went to the reception room, each lost in their own thoughts. The only one who was chatting away was 11-year-old Chae Sol, who was excited that the garden had become even more beautiful with the arrival of spring.

The reception room we arrived at was quiet and empty.

“It’s quiet.”

“I left it there because I thought it might be uncomfortable to talk about.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

“No, we have some for us too….”

Although Iruda couldn't tell him about the fact that he was a 'black cloak', there were plenty of topics of conversation that would be good even if there were few ears listening. Kang Seodam lightly grabbed Iruda's shoulder.

“Iruda, the prospective priest.”

"yes."

“Would you like to tell a story?”

"…thank you."

As expected, Iruda hesitated and nodded.

“I apologize for my previous poor behavior.”

“I think I told you before that it was nothing to apologize for.”

“Now that you mention it, I will shamelessly say what I originally wanted to say. The flower cart you gave me last time… was really a great help to me.”

It was the story of the flower cart that Geo gave as a gift without thinking much about it.

“I offered it to the Sun Goddess, and she blessed me. Thanks to the gift of that treasure that my limited knowledge could not recognize, I was able to make a contribution in this war, however small it may be.”

Hearing those words, Geo thought.

'I wish you would speak like a child.'

When I was young, I would never have dreamed of children talking like that in front of me. It was something I never dreamed of, let alone joked about, so Sergio, a modern man from an old world, found it absurd.

Of course, Giovanni's steadfast demeanor was radiating compassion and forgiveness with his entire body, and seeing that he showed no sign of displeasure, Iruda straightened his shoulders a little more and continued speaking.

“If Sergio Hunter hadn’t given me that gift in advance, I probably wouldn’t have been able to do anything even after Chaisol was captured. I wouldn’t have been allowed to go to war, and even if I had insisted on going, I would have only been a burden.”

“You can speak more comfortably.”

“…Open, relax?”

"yes."

Geo, who had not heard of it, made a suggestion quietly.

“Wouldn’t a simple thank you for your help be enough?”

“You gave me something, but you can’t use it however you want and then do something so rude….”

“What I gave to Sister Iruda was literally a gift. I gave it to her lightly because she enjoyed chewing on healthy herbal medicine, and if she was able to use it to save Brother Chaisol, it was Sister Iruda’s ability, not mine.”

“Ha, but… what I received was worth it….”

“I have heard of Sister Iruda’s exploits. Despite being a novice priest, she bravely went to the battlefield, protected the patients as much as her partner, and even made flowers bloom in the icy sea.”

“…I just tried to do as you told me.”

“What a diligent student this is.”

Geo, who had been having a hard time hearing Iruda's overly mature thanks, decided that this was the moment to start his tongue. Iruda wasn't the only one who could express praise and thanks to the point of making the other person embarrassed.

“I can’t tell you how grateful I am to hear the story of student Iru Da. Even if it was a partner’s work, it must have taken a lot of courage to stand on the battlefield where life could be taken in an instant. It must have also required strong friendship and trust.”

“…Ah, no… I….”

“Thanks to you, Chaisol was rescued safely. Although Iruda is not confident in what she did, it was a great help. As proof, isn’t Chaisol, who went through hardships and escaped, still smiling comfortably?”

"…that…."

"Thank you for your effort."

“…….”

It was achieved and then shrunk again.

"…thank you."

“It’s me.”

Okay, I made it into a cute little thing!

'It's me after all.'

Legally, there is no such thing as a 'child worthy of being called a child,' but I liked this better.

If there was any sign of displeasure, I would have stopped immediately, but even though she blushed, she didn't show any sign of displeasure. In fact, she pretended not to be, but it was clear that she wanted to be treated like a child.

Geo, who had hit the nail on the head with a calm demeanor like he was breathing, looked at Chae Sol.

“Is student Chaisol a little upset?”

“Yes, I did a lot! I won’t do it again!”

“Good posture.”

Although Chae Sol was still young and inexperienced, he was by no means stupid. He was a child with good judgment and intuition, so I believed that if a similar situation arose again, he would be able to control himself and make a wise decision.

'If I were to appear in the middle of a battlefield like last time, I think I'd go crazy.'

After organizing his thoughts, Geo looked at Kang Seo-dam.

“Was there anything else that happened?”

“…There is nothing more than the fact that voices within the church are gradually growing louder, following last time, to make Sergio Hunter a saint of the Church of the Sun.”

“Oh, that.”

■■■■■—….

“…….”

“…….”

“Excuse me.”

Pongdang!

Geo picked up the gray paint that had suddenly appeared from his shadow.

“This guy is inflexible.”

“…Excuse me, but could you tell me what I just saw?”

“If Father Kang Seo-dam is really curious, I can tell you more, but it might be a bit bothersome. Is that okay?”

“I made a slip of the tongue, it would be better if I didn’t know.”

As he said that, Kang Seo-dam instinctively felt the essence of the 'gray paint' he had just witnessed. The coolness that instantly lowered the temperature in the room, and the pearly white and fine texture that rippled like water scales...

It's definitely a characteristic of a creature I've seen somewhere before.

'Up to here.'

Kang Seo-dam consciously stopped thinking.

As Sergio Hunter had said, there was no point in delving any deeper. He cleared his throat once and asked cautiously, “Ahem.”

“…Are you the contract worker you’ve been training recently? I’m truly sorry if I’ve caused you any inconvenience. I absolutely did not intend to make you feel uncomfortable.”

“Even if you’re not so careful, this won’t attack Priest Kang Seo Dam. I wasn’t offended either. What you just saw… It’s like this guy’s spinal reflex, so to speak.”

“Spinal reflex….”

“Don’t the nerves of a living creature still move and live immediately after death? That’s right.”

'Spinal reflex' followed by 'immediate death'.

"…yes."

Anyway, it was fortunate that Kang Seo-dam seemed to agree with the excuse that he was a 'newly trained contract beast'. Kang Seo-dam and Geo's eyes, having finished organizing the settings, naturally fell on the children's surprised reactions.

Chaisol's face was filled with joy and excitement, while Iru's face turned pale as if he had seen something absurd. Geo smiled at the obvious contrast.

“Are you okay?”

"…yes."

“Excuse me, my companion whom I recently adopted as a family member is often disobedient. I have put him away properly, so I am sure he will not repeat the same rudeness again.”

“Well, that’s a relief.”

Iruda hesitated and then asked.

“I heard you’re a trainer. Do you also tame these monsters…?”

“It’s more of a single mysterious mass than a monster with a survival instinct, but of course, I’m always recruiting diverse families.”

“Oh, so you were a member of a collector’s association?”

I forgot about him because he didn't seem like that person.

'It wouldn't be strange for someone from that guild to be taming a few dangerous objects.'

Iruda decided that what he had just seen was not a living creature like a monster, but rather a dangerous item with the characteristics of a living creature. Like the monsters commonly found in collections.

'Is he really a Hunter that is rumored to be a hidden S-class?'

Iru looked at Sergio Hunter with admiration without realizing it.

'There are not many hunters like this in the world.'

It was a marked difference from his previous reaction, when he had been gripped by a bit of fear, but to Iruda, who admired strong and capable people, Sergio Hunter, who handled many dangerous and unique contracts, seemed that impressive.

"…me too…."

That's why stories that didn't need to be told leaked out.

“…When I was young, I wanted to be a trainer.”

“Aha, I see.”

Geo thought.

'Aren't you young now?'

He smiled and nodded.

“How is it like now that you are working as a priest?”

“I am grateful that I can do my part.”

“Are you having fun?”

“…….”

Iruda was speechless for a moment.

“…….”

Are you happy?

‘… That’s a strange type of question.’

Adults always wondered what she could do.

Adults mostly asked me if the work I was doing was suitable for my aptitude, if I was achieving the results I wanted, what I was learning recently and how I was going to use it. Even though I was still young, it was natural for me to do my part as a hunter.

I didn't have an immediate answer as to what to say.

'Are you happy? This? My situation right now…?'

I never once considered that aspect.

"…that…."

At that moment, Iru Da met Chae Sol's eyes.

"…? me?"

“…I’m happy.”

Only then did my mouth open.

'It was fun.'

It would be a lie if I said I didn't have a single regret or mistake, but now that I think about it, my current life has been quite enjoyable. Being here has allowed me to make unique friends like Chae Sol.

For some reason, I felt relieved. It was because I felt a little better sitting in a quiet and comfortable confessional with sunlight streaming in. I continued speaking with a slightly embarrassed feeling.

“I think I have been given many good opportunities because I became a priest.”

"okay."

“Even if I had awakened as a trainer, there would have been joy in that, but I am satisfied with the joy that only I have now. So I think it is probably enjoyable.”

“Really… this couldn’t be anything other than a great way of thinking.”

Giovanni loved these straight-hearted children.

“Do you like sheep?”

“Hey, sheep? What part exactly…?”

“Like hair.”

“I don’t like it or dislike it….”

“How about a scarf? It’s still a bit chilly outside, so it’ll keep you warm.”

“…Are you suggesting another gift right now?”

“I cannot back down without giving you a gift.”

"no…."

Iru looked at Chae Sol in confusion. It seemed like he was saying, 'What's wrong with this guy?' or 'You try to stop him.', but Chae Sol was just happy that his partner didn't seem to be calling for help.

“Then I’ll make you some flower tea! You said you like tea, right?”

"hey."

"huh?"

“…….”

Iru was speechless.

‘… Ah, right. The Apostles of the Black Cloak… .’

The phrase 'The Black Cloak gives gifts to good people' came to mind belatedly. Considering that many types of divinities cherish their followers who are well suited to them, it wasn't such a strange situation.

I don't know if I'm a good person, but whatever.

“Well, it’s spring now, but is a scarf too much?”

“Then let’s make tea together! Flower tea!”

“That sounds good too. I think it would be nice to put that tea in and bake some light cookies.”

“I want to grill it too! I’ll give it to Rudarang and the teacher.”

… But even so, isn’t it unnecessary to resemble each other to this extent?

'It's obviously a good thing, but why is it so ominous?'

Iru looked up at Gangseo Dam without realizing it.

“…….”

“…….”

ah.

Iruda read the familiar resignation on Kang Seodam’s face and shut his mouth tightly. He wanted to say something, but his mouth closed on its own and his tongue rolled back. It was as if he was his future.

“…Please be gentle.”

“Where is the softness in the gift?”

“Yes, thank you….”

Anyway, I really don’t hate it… .

'I feel strange.'

It was very frustrating to be pushed back by something like this.

* * *

The sun of the Earth was watching it.

Geo knew it too.

The two children were busy bickering.

Kang Seo-dam was so burdened that he wanted to die.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (218)

218

Episode 218

After a simple conversation, Geo requested a prayer at the Solar Church.

“Is it possible?”

“Are you asking me to find a private prayer room?”

“Yes, that’s right. I have something to tell the sun….”

The priest who had been called to Gangseodam at Sergio Hunter's words nodded with a smile.

“Is it okay, Father Kang Seo-dam?”

“I hope that you will grant all of Sergio Hunter’s requests, as long as it does not cause any harm to the church.”

"entire…."

“Sergio Hunter wouldn’t make such unreasonable demands either.”

“Understood. Now, let’s take you this way, Hunter.”

He was a priest who mainly helped guide visitors, so he was quite used to this kind of work. The Sun Church was a sect that aimed to create a benevolent and harmonious atmosphere where everyone could ask for forgiveness and mercy, so there were quite a few ordinary believers who came to confess their sins.

'But can Sergio Hunter also be considered a common believer…?'

The priest thought so to himself.

'It seems that Sergio Hunter himself considers himself to be half-priest. He doesn't seem like an ordinary believer either. There was also a story about him being an apostle of the black cloak.'

I didn't say anything, but I was curious. What would this kind-hearted person, who looked like he couldn't kill a bug, say in the prayer room?

"hmm…."

The elders also spoke, so the priest wanted to have a light conversation.

“This isn’t your first time visiting the Solar Church, is it?”

“Yes, last time I visited, I was offered the ‘Underground Four-legged Rainforest’. Thanks to that, I was able to have a unique experience.”

“I am very sorry that I had to make a hasty schedule for the church, but I am glad that you said that.”

Contrary to the image of being static, the Sun Church pursued a lively and friendly atmosphere. The path leading to the prayer room was filled with the sound of people laughing and talking to each other without bothering each other.

“I know you have awakened as a trainer, but I still want to call you ‘priest’. I am not consciously thinking otherwise, but if I am being rude, would you please forgive me?”

“In the warm sunshine and full of laughter, what could be unforgivable in the embrace of the sun? The part that the priest mentioned is something that other people also often get confused about, so you don’t have to worry about it too much.”

“Ah, I see… I’m not the only one who feels this way.”

“I understand that you may be confused, since even the clothes I am wearing have the appearance of a typical priest’s garment. It is also a fact that I serve another divinity.”

“It may be rude to think this way, but I can’t help but wonder what it would have been like if Sergio Hunter had awakened as a priest. He could have become one of the best high priests in Korea, no, in the world….”

“That’s too much praise.”

Sergio Hunter, whom I spoke to, was truly a believer of great character.

'So that's why there was a saying about him being a saint. He's so handsome that you'll naturally find yourself admiring him.'

Indeed, it seemed like an ideal that all priests should emulate.

‘I would be really happy if you would become a member of our Solar Church…’

It wasn't just me who thought this way. The revival of the sun was the joy of the priests. The initiation of a priest with good skills and kindness without any flaws in his character was something that any religious order would desire.

Yeah, I would definitely be happy if that happened… .

“……?”

The priest paused for a moment.

“What's going on?”

“…Oh, no. Sorry.”

He smiled sheepishly.

“I think my eyes were slightly irritated by the sunlight.”

Sergio Hunter's shadow seemed to ripple white, but when he looked again, there was no trace of such ripples. The priest felt embarrassed, even though it was natural.

“It was very rude of me to show myself like this in front of such an honored guest.”

“Excuse me, but this space is so full of sunlight that it’s hard to see. I wonder if this is also a blessing from the sun goddess.”

“I can’t express in words how happy I am to hear you say that.”

I thought this was exactly what a true believer looked like.

‘It’s really a shame, if only someone this talented had been a priest of the Solar Cult from the beginning…’

However, Sergio Hunter had not even awakened as a priest, and was a member of the Collector's Guild, which was known for its greed for talent. Furthermore, since he served a different deity, it seemed unlikely that he would easily convert.

'Even if he wants it, the collector won't stay still. I heard he's a son who's been hiding, so I guess he's already said everything. Anyway, that author of Bisabal is a really disgusting person.'

I also felt a little bit resentful.

‘… Didn’t you know from the beginning that he was a saint’s vessel and hide it so that it wouldn't be taken away by the religious order? If you hid the apostle of God because of your collecting desires, then this is no different from a sin that would make even the sun goddess displeased. How pathetic… .'

The priest, who tried hard to hide his discomfort, continued the conversation.

"What brings you here today?"

"I came to you because of a matter related to sponsorship for the children I cherish."

"Ah, you're talking about the pair Chaisol and Iruda. They have become a small topic of conversation in the Taeyang Church because they love their two children. They are both excellent vessels."

"They are cute kids."

Sergio Hunter smiled cheerfully.

"I have heard the story often, but I thought it might be of some help. I just had a conversation with Father Kang Seo-dam about this."

"As they are intelligent priests, they are also preparing for early graduation. If a great person like Sergio Hunter helps them, I am sure that the two cadet priests will soon become full-fledged priests."

"Even though I am not a priest, if I can help, I would like to do so."

"What more qualifications could one possibly need for someone as talented as Sergio Hunter to help?"

Even if I stop right now, I can't help but think that this person in front of me is not a priest.

"Well, we have arrived. This is the private prayer room assigned to Sergio Hunter."

“It’s amazing that sunlight comes in this deep inside.”

“It is one of the things we at the Solar Church are proud of, to be greatly loved by the Goddess.”

My shoulders shrugged. The prayer room of the Solar Church was designed in a way that was closest to nature in order to blend in with the sun, the nature of providence, and thanks to the blessings bestowed upon it, sunlight came in even in the closed space.

The buds and flowers blooming brightly in the prayer room, the soft sunlight shining down on them, and even the wooden chairs filled with cool air… .

“Whenever I see evidence like this that we are loved by the sun, I feel so grateful. I hope Sergio Hunter also has a good time in the sun’s arms.”

“Thank you for your warm words, as warm as the sun’s rays.”

“Then I will guard this place, so please talk.”

The priest quietly closed the door and stood guard in front of it.

“…….”

The quiet corridors of the prayer room brought peace to his mind.

It was a rule that the prayer room should always be silent so that the children of the sun could pray in peace at any time. Unlike the noisy outer districts, this space where shadows and sunlight mingle was also the place most preferred by men.

'I did well to become a guide priest. This is also thanks to the care of the sun goddess. I must always pray with a grateful heart…'

The Sun Bridge, always bathed in warm sunlight, was the first place in Korea to welcome spring. When I closed my eyes, I could hear the chirping of birds, the gentle breeze caressing my cheeks, and the scent of flowers announcing the birth of life.

Quite a bit of time passed like that.

"…hmm?"

Where there should be no light, there was light.

‘… Is that the light coming from the prayer room?’

Sunlight was streaming in through the crack in the door.

‘… This is impossible. How is this light…?’

The priest's heart pounded loudly.

As a priest of the Sun, there was no way he could not distinguish between ordinary light and sunlight. He could say with certainty that this was indeed the light of the Sun. He knew that this phenomenon occurred very rarely in the prayer room of the headquarters of the Sun Church.

‘When the bishop prayed…’

And that was when the sun answered.

“…….”

The hesitant priest moved closer to the door.

'... Just a little bit.'

If my guess was correct, I wanted to capture just a little bit of that glorious sight.

The door to the prayer room had a distribution area and a small window for communication by making eye contact. This was because it was common for priests to fast and pray for several days.

‘Just a little bit… .’

The priest peeked through the small window that resembled a mailbox.

“…….”

…ah.

The sun.

* * *

“It’s unfair.”

“Calm down, Sergio Hunter.”

Kang Seo-dam calmed Geo down while making a face that said he had a headache.

“This incident was clearly our fault. An unqualified person carelessly snooped around and eavesdropped on the believers’ prayers, and this incident occurred. Sergio Hunter did nothing wrong.”

Of course, it would have been better if the great mystery of the divine had not been revealed so carelessly in this world. Kang Seodam looked at the priests who were glancing at Sergio Hunter with heated eyes, feeling embarrassed.

'I want to gouge out all my eyes.'

Do you know who this person is and dare to do such a vulgar thing?

‘… Things got a little bit awkward.’

The guide priest who had stolen Sergio Hunter's 'Prayer' went mad.

“The sun saw me! The sun, aaah…! aaah…!!”

“Take him to the infirmary quickly, quickly!”

“Oh, please have mercy on me, a piece of me! That small, huge mercy, we…!”

“This situation is very serious.”

A respectable priest went half-mad just because he had caught a glimpse of a 'prayer'. It was a terrifying sight, but this was the house where the children of the sun gathered together in faith lived. The priests felt awe rather than fear when they saw the sight.

“…What on earth did you see….”

“…I keep calling out to the sun.”

They were always thirsty for miracles.

“…….”

Kang Seo-dam felt annoyed and angry for a moment and scattered all the onlookers.

“Everyone, please step aside. How long are you going to stand by and watch when the patient comes out? Don’t you know that it is truly wrong to show such rudeness in front of an important guest?”

“Ha, but… Priest Kang Seo-dam….”

“But there is nothing to it. We have been rude to our guests and are still doing so. Before you commit any more sins, it would be better for you to realize your own issues and return to your seats.”

Kang Seo-dam's authority within the church was by no means small. The priests, still glancing around with regret, left one by one at Kang Seo-dam's rebuke. The ordinary priests who had fallen into a frenzy were also taken to the hospital room.

Kang Seo-dam eventually led Sergio to his office.

“…I really have nothing to say.”

“It was a strange sight, so I think it could be true. I hope the priest who guided me recovers quickly.”

“That will be the case.”

It's just that I'm going crazy with all the blessings I've ever seen.

'You should know your place.'

The priest did such a thing without knowing the identity of 'Sergio Hunter', but if he had only known how to do his part, this would not have happened. What a truly unscrupulous author.

‘I trusted him because he was someone who never did anything like this before…’

That must mean that the light that 'Sergio Hunter' had shown was great. I understood, but I still felt dissatisfied.

“…Did your conversation with the sun end safely?”

“Yes, it was a good time.”

“That’s good. I will make sure to pass on the apology regarding this incident to Manager Joo-hyun. Is that okay?”

“You don’t have to apologize.”

“Please accept this, as it is a matter of the prestige of the church. If you commit a sin and do not reflect on it or make amends, it is the same as not being worthy of serving the divine providence.”

“If you say so, I understand. Thank you for caring for me until the end.”

"then…."

Kang Seo-dam called Chae Sol and Iru Da, who were waiting while sitting on the sofa.

“Would you like to give a brief greeting to the person who sponsored Brother Chaisol and Sister Iruda?”

“Yes! I want to do it!”

“I, I’ll be back for a bit too….”

The two approached quietly and nodded.

“I will graduate early and come back within 3 years!”

“Wouldn’t you like to see my face before that?”

“Thank you for your kindness.”

“What polar opposites.”

Anyway, I liked it.

“May the light of the sun reach you.”

Sergio, who had blessed their future, soon came face to face with Chaisol.

“Don’t you ever have nightmares?”

“Not at all.”

“Does the sun love you?”

“Yes, a lot!”

“The bowl has gotten bigger.”

It was a result of my father's sun.

“…….”

In the end, he was right.

* * *

Gallery on the 5th basement floor.

“What is the attitude that God should take?”

“What conversation did you have with the sun goddess that made you ask such a question?”

Yoo Seong-un, who visited ‘Portrait of Geo’ for the first time in a long time, was shocked.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (219)

219

Episode 219

The Earth's sun was very pleased with the visit of 'Portrait of Geo'.

“Were you looking forward to my visit?”

She answered yes. From the moment he first appeared under the sun of the earth, the sun admired his great vessel and smiled happily, wanting to interact with him.

“I came here today to think about the attitude God should take.”

What attitude should God take?

“My father replied that he was nature and an observer. He said that if the sun were to descend directly upon the earth, there would be no greater hell than that, so it would be mercy to observe from afar.”

The Earth's sun disagreed with him.

“For what reason?”

That's because the sun is always reaching out to life.

All life born under the sun was her child. The sun of the earth protected her children from the clutches of the tens of thousands of divinities that flowed into the great catastrophe. There were too many cases where she could not protect them without stepping in herself.

“Then what is your stance as a god?”

The birth of life and the love of mercy.

“Mother Sun.”

That's it, I think I understood it well.

“You are truly the mother of all life.”

Life on Earth comes from the belly of the Sun and soon returns to her embrace. It is like a piece of me, my alter ego, so it was right to create an environment where it could play to its fullest under the Sun.

“Is it a kind of parenting?”

Because he's my child.

“Then what do you think about my father, the Sun’s attitude? He just looked at my children with affection. And then he would let go of the frame of destiny.”

That too would be love.

“Do you think so?”

There were many times when I couldn't carelessly stroke it because I thought it would burn if I held it in my hand.

“But you are reaching out your hand.”

That's why she had to give up a lot as the sun.

I hid my body in case they were afraid of my huge body, held my breath in case they would turn to ash with one breath, and held my eyelids closed at all times, holding the Earth in my arms in case my brain would melt if I looked at it.

“I know this may be inconvenient.”

It was something that was bearable to love.

“Love, what a sweet word. Then, does that mean that my father, the Sun, did not want to hold his children, including ‘Giovanni’, in his arms?”

Love couldn't be just about wrapping around. The mere existence of my children was already overwhelming and dazzling, so I couldn't bear to touch them. I must have loved pure humans who were untouched by the sun's hands.

“I understand.”

The postures of the gods are as varied as the number of divinities.

Love so, great mystery.

* * *

“…Oh, we had a conversation.”

“I heard that one of the priests in the Solar Church went crazy.”

“It’s unfair.”

“It’s not your fault.”

It was just kind of interesting.

“Can I watch you two talking sometime?”

“No, I don’t like it. It’s very embarrassing.”

“That’s really too bad….”

Anyway, I understand what Geo is worried about.

“Hmm, how about this?”

“Can you help me with anything else?”

“You have another divine friend.”

"aha."

It was talking about the death of the Earth.

“Shall I give it to you?”

"thank you."

Geo didn't refuse.

* * *

“Have you visited?”

Geo recognized the priest of death who had come out to greet him.

“Didn’t you help me guide you last time?”

“I am honored that you remembered me.”

“This time, please lead me to your father.”

“That too is an honor.”

And then naturally he took out a small envelope.

“It is a gift of gratitude.”

“…What kind of gift would it be?”

“I’m glad you’re more comfortable with me than last time.”

“It may be more than I am capable of, but thanks to the advice you gave me, Bishop….”

“I see. There was one more person who would receive a gift.”

What Geo handed over was a Basram tea.

“This tea has a rich taste and aroma like grains. I brought it because I heard that the priests of death enjoy tea ceremonies. It is a tea that has retained its warmth under the warm sunlight, so it would be good to drink when you are tired.”

“May I share this with the believers?”

“I wonder what it will be used for.”

“This place is often visited by believers who are physically weak.”

“Is it because of the Cult of Death?”

“Yes, so….”

The priests of death regarded the end of life as a glorious blessing, but they did not deny the happiness of life. They also played a role in helping the mere life of a human being to end in a more valuable and splendid way.

“If you permit me, I would like to write to those who suffer in life.”

If life is not happy, there will only be more people who exploit death.

“Would you please allow me?”

“Of course, my kind friend.”

"…thank you."

“I will take that as agreement.”

“You are a cheerful person.”

Although the priest had a blunt face, he was definitely more comfortable with Geo than last time. He seemed quite pleased with Geo’s words, which immediately made him his friend. Geo felt grateful for that reaction.

It was something I really enjoyed.

“Doesn’t the priest of death enjoy playing?”

“There are as many deaths as there are lives, so there is bound to be a lot of work to do.”

“It would be difficult to hang out together.”

“If you want, I can make time for you….”

“I’m not forcing you.”

This time, the priest walked through the dark temple, holding a round lantern that resembled a bell and covering his eyes with a white cloth. He could sense the god of death forming a river in the shallow water on the floor.

Then a large door appeared, the priest stepped back, and the bishop, Eun-ryeong, came out.

“It is an honor to see you again.”

“Me too.”

“Okay, Father is waiting, so come here….”

Before we could go any deeper, death suddenly showed its head.

“My friend.”

"oh."

At that sight, Eun-ryeong gestured to the priest who had guided her.

“…You have worked hard, so you can go now. The two adults will talk.”

“…Yes, Bishop.”

The two moved steadily, although a little bewildered, as if they were unfamiliar with such an active form of death. The guide priest quietly withdrew, and Bishop Eun-ryeong closed the death room tightly and tried to disappear into the darkness.

Geo called her like that.

“Would you like to join us?”

“…Can I, a mere insignificant being, fit in there?”

“I came here today to have a conversation. I came here to ask for opinions, so the more mouths there are, the better.”

“In that case, I would be more than happy to take this place.”

Perhaps because she usually lived with the incarnation of death nearby, Eun-ryung looked calm even between the two divinities. Geo opened his mouth lightly, as if a suitable place had been prepared.

“It’s been a while.”

“You’ve been very classy lately, sir….”

“I came here to offer you a reward because I feel sorry for you.”

“It’s a prize.”

Death laughed heartily.

“Did you keep your promise?”

“I brought some grilled chicken.”

Geo showed us the lunch box he had wrapped in a black silk wrapper.

“Would you like to eat with us, Eun-ryeong?”

“…Did you make it yourself?”

“Yes, that’s right.”

"I am…."

Eun-ryeong mumbled.

“…I don’t know if I can eat this and still be able to face death.”

“Eating it won’t buy you eternal life, right?”

“…….”

“Why doesn’t anyone believe me?”

Joohyun and Yoo Sungwoon were the same. When Geo gave him food, the only people who accepted it were the passersby who saw it in the form of a portrait. If he gave it to them, wouldn't they just say, "Wow, that's delicious," and eat it?

“It must be delicious.”

“There is no doubt about that, Sergio Hunter.”

“It must be really delicious….”

“I have no doubt.”

“It’s not like it’s some kind of evil elixir or anything, it’s just food.”

“…….”

“Only in times like this does he have no answer, like a ghost.”

“…Ummm….”

Eun-ryeong nodded immediately.

“I will gladly join you if you guarantee my life as a human being.”

“I guarantee it.”

“You’re quite fast.”

“I have no intention of turning Eun-ryeong into something other than human.”

“And that doesn’t have any effect?”

“Of course.”

“If that’s the case….”

She looked up at her father.

“…Would you like to eat?”

“…….”

Death was very difficult.

“…It looks delicious.”

“…Oh, is that so?”

Eun-ryeong was also surprised.

“I didn’t know that even my father would feel an appetite.”

“I’m surprised too.”

It was almost impossible for a divinity to eat something. In the case of death with a physical body, the possibility would be higher, but even that would not be easy. There was no concept of appetite.

But Death stared intently at the neatly arranged rice cakes in the mother-of-pearl lunch box.

“…My daughter….”

“Yes, Father. I am listening.”

“…I don’t want to bother you, but I’m afraid I’ll ruin this elegant gift. Please, bring me that yellow thing.”

“…Ah, the yellow one. Are you talking about dongtaejeon?”

“Yeah, that kid. He smells good.”

Even though he was a divine being with a physical body, it was difficult for him to eat 'food' entirely with his huge body that was close to nature.

When the divine being, who had no experience with such simple joys, hesitated and asked his daughter for help, Eun-ryeong smiled lightly.

“This is the joy of being a child. I never thought I would ever be the one to feed my father, but it seems I have more to be thankful for Sergio Hunter.”

“You can speak comfortably.”

“Hmm, is that so?”

Eun-ryeong happily picked up a ripe frozen pollack.

“Well… Father, what would you like to eat?”

“…….”

Joo-wook.

Then a giant 'face' came down from the darkness.

Death, who usually resided in the darkness of the vast room, opened its 'mouth' thinly. As the gap, which was rough like the bark of a twisted tree, opened, Eun-ryung judged it to be a 'mouth' and placed an arrow inside.

The 'face' did not rise above the darkness again and remained in the same place.

“…….”

“…What do you think, Father?”

“It’s delicious.”

"oh my god…."

Eun-ryeong finally burst into laughter.

“This is truly amazing.”

She felt great joy. It is true that she had treated her father as her father and had shown him love and respect as a family, but she had not expected to feel such a simple and ordinary happiness of a 'family'.

“Would you like something else? We have vegetable pancakes, oyster pancakes, pumpkin pancakes….”

“Give me that bumpy thing.”

“You mean vegetable pancakes? Yes, here they are.”

Geo smiled happily at the sight of the innocent woman.

“It’s so nice to see this.”

“Haha… It’s all thanks to Sergio Hunter for bringing us this gift.”

“I’m glad you liked it.”

As expected, the people who enjoyed the food that was prepared were the prettiest.

“I should have grilled it a little bigger.”

“No, that’s enough.”

“You’re big….”

“Enough.”

What Geo brought was ultimately 'something' in the form of food. What was important was not the volume but the degree of mystery filled within, and Death was tasting the pleasure of gastronomy there.

After some time, Eun-ryung also received the two divine spirits' blessings and took a bite of the food.

“…….”

“How are you?”

“…It’s the most delicious thing I’ve ever eaten in my life.”

“I can’t believe I’m receiving such praise.”

“No, that’s not rave reviews, it’s just….”

Eun-ryeong blushed and her eyes sparkled, which was rare.

“…It’s really delicious.”

“I'm glad.”

Death also laughed at the joy of his daughter. His 'laughter' filled the room of death. Eun-ryeong felt embarrassed by her father's reaction, but carefully picked up another piece of rice.

“I think it could be dangerous….”

“It’s not dangerous. It’s unfair.”

“But I can’t put my chopsticks down.”

She was following the same path that Yoo Seong-un and Joo-hyun had once walked. She was afraid that this mysterious lump would change her, but she couldn't let go of its ecstatic delicacy.

Geo ended up bringing out alcohol here.

“You have to have alcohol before.”

"oh my god."

Eun-ryeong let out a cry of joy.

“It smells so good, what kind of alcohol is it?”

“Makgeolli made from fruits, rice, and flowers.”

“It’s ecstatic.”

After such a pleasant time.

“…….”

“…….”

Death and the Ghost realized something.

"…you…."

“Please speak.”

“Are you going to turn me… into a pig…?”

“How did you know…?”

"…oh…."

It was the same kind of realization that Sanarae had once had.

'… Hansel and Gretel… .'

Eun-ryeong had that thought without realizing it. The divinity in front of her wouldn’t really devour her like a witch, but it was just like that. It was so good, yet so excessive, that it almost felt a little wronged.

Only then did Geo get to the main point.

“What is God?”

“God… is he necessary?”

“I think I can prepare myself then.”

“What kind of preparation are you talking about?”

“Preparation for my existence.”

I wanted to define everything about myself.

“Can you help me?”

“Of course….”

Death readily granted the request.

The 'delicacy' I experienced for the first time was worth paying any price.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (220)

220

Episode 220

“Death is the end of life, not the beginning.”

The death of the Earth said so.

“Someone once said that death is just another beginning.”

“Isn’t that actually true?”

“My death is not like that. And it shouldn’t be like that. If there is another beginning after death, it shouldn’t be mine….”

“The sun of the Earth says that all living things that touch its rays are its children.”

“So, doesn’t it mean that the lives here are living with countless parents on their backs? However, I don’t consider them my children. My children… are those who live here with me… those who have accepted me as family…”

Divinity does not consider all life as its children.

“I am the gateway.”

“Gateway?”

“It is a process that all life must eventually go through. If the sun called itself mother… It is different from me. I do not ask life for a relationship or trust… It is just something that will come as it should… That is it.”

"okay."

I also had a few small questions.

“Then are you denying life?”

“Do you know and ask questions…?”

Death is not the answer.

“Death is an inevitable fate. It is not a process of providence or nature. I am just a world that accepts the life that is coming into my arms, and countless hands that tie up the end.”

That partly coincided with Geo's opinion.

“Because death is just a state.”

“Yeah… I’m glad, okay?”

Death showed 'laughter'.

“Even if they are the same life, the way they look at things according to their divinity… is different. Not just the sun and death, but all divinities are like that. Even if they look the same, their essence is different. Even if their essence is the same, their methods are different. The life I embrace is a wanderer whose light has gone out… I am the craftsman who announces their end.”

“Aren’t you going to give me a light?”

“It’s not my part.”

Death always belongs to those left behind, he said.

“The light of life is fading away, but the sadness of the living is an emotion. My existence is ultimately a process of comforting and making the survivors understand. It is my job to make them understand the separation."

"So where do the dead travelers go?"

"It's their part."

The light that is held in the hand, the treasure that is carried away, the love, the foolishness, the sorrow. All of these belong to the dead. Death accepts everything equally, but it is neither a loving parent nor a kind friend.

Just a knot-tying craftsman.

"To whom the knots will be sold, or where they will be decorated… It is not for me to teach, and I am not even a teacher. Don't you think so?"

"I agree."

"Thank you."

The divine being affirmed was delighted.

"I, I sincerely hope that you too will find your… way, your path, your love."

"thank you."

Fortunately, Geo came to a conclusion.

I guess that's why they say you have to make good friends.

* * *

Geo returned to the parking lot of the Temple of Death and was greeted by a meteor shower.

"Did the story end well?"

“Of course.”

Isn't that why they even bribed people?

“The bribe seemed to have worked.”

“You really did eat that.”

“You didn’t say anything when you were carrying it, but it seems like you were worried.”

“Well, it’s normal for a divinity to not have a concept of appetite. I know you’re not normal, but don’t you think I have some kind of common sense?”

It was only through the examples of the Sun God Bear and Sankalut that he could be less surprised. Yu Seong-un, who thought of those two for a moment, led Geo to the car. Geo followed suit and got into the car.

Yoo Seong-un asked while moving the car.

“Have you had any results?”

“Yes, I have decided.”

"…wait for a sec."

Yoo Seong-un, who felt a sense of foreboding, looked back at Geo with a strange look.

“You… You, what are you going to do? Like, something….”

“I don’t know what you’re talking about.”

“I remember what the Demon King said on the way back just now.”

“You guessed it right.”

“No, I didn’t get it right?”

It was definitely not a word I said to get the answer right.

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un asked with a slightly withered face.

“…What decision did you make?”

“I have been asking various deities about their attitude as gods.”

“Yes, that’s right. I asked about both traditional and evil divinities.”

“So that’s how we came to the conclusion.”

Geo answered clearly.

“I guess I have to live the way I want to live….”

“Your vocabulary has improved so much since Argio.”

“My vocabulary was like this originally.”

“Now you’re even good at lying.”

It was strange but creepy at the same time.

'You're growing to the point where it doesn't feel awkward to even call yourself human.'

If this was the case, it was obvious that Geo wouldn't notice right away if he caused an accident later. Well, of course, it wasn't something that Yoo Seong-un could stop Geo from the start. But it was true that his growth was remarkable.

Yoo Seong-un, who had cleared his throat, finally let out a hollow laugh.

“So? So I should just live however I want?”

“Right now, I feel like my opinions and thoughts have been largely ignored….”

“But what exactly do you want?”

“…….”

Geo, who had been staring at the meteor cloud because the natural change of topic was ridiculous, eventually gave up and answered.

“It will turn people into pigs.”

“…Ah, uh, pig. Um, oh, yeah….”

“If the granary is secure, the world will become peaceful.”

“Peace… So, is your ‘way’ similar to Joo-hyun’s? That damn world peace?”

“It’s a little different. Joo-hyun’s goal is world peace, but my goal is to turn people into pigs, so you could say that the process and the result are different.”

“That’s scary as it is.”

It's better than the end of the world, though.

“No, but rather, isn’t that not much different from what you’ve been doing so far? Isn’t it a unique ghost story where you hand out snacks to passersby without even intending to do anything special?”

“It would be hard to say that it is wrong, but I have a different mindset.”

“What is that?”

“I need to make more friends.”

“…More?”

"yes."

The common deity was that 'it exists everywhere and at all times, regardless of all currents.' Most deities existed somewhere, even if the dimensions were shattered. Whether in the form of religion or history.

That was the power of the eternal divinity, and Geo found it very appealing. There was something so appealing about a single cluster that continued like a living creature.

And since Geo had some divinity, he could reference those methods.

“Then I will live a life full of friends.”

I really liked it.

Yes, what Geo had been wondering about from the gods was not 'Is my identity human or god?', 'How should I treat and govern life?', or 'What should I do to be godly?', but 'How can I live as long as him and have many friends?'

“Isn’t that wise?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un was speechless for a moment.

‘… How can they say they are officially creating a religious group in such a childlike way?’

He pondered for a split second what consequences Geo's decision would have, but in the end, he realized that nothing was worth it and let out a sigh.

“Do whatever you want.”

“You look so cool.”

“Even if I tell you not to, you’ll still do it.”

“Hmm, you know me too well. I guess I should keep my mouth shut.”

“Don’t scare me because when you say it, it doesn’t sound like a joke at all….”

“Was it really a joke?”

“Please.”

“Good.”

Geo smiled as if he was happy.

“Now you know I was joking.”

“…I guess so.”

I don't know if I've become stupid or if I've adapted.

'Did you pass it on to Joohyun?'

It was truly a scary thing.

* * *

There was a woman.

The woman basically had no sympathy for others. She was born to first-class citizens and had everything in abundance, so she often saw the poor begging in the dark shadows between buildings and thought it was dirty.

“I don’t want to get involved.”

“Good posture, my daughter. You’ll get tired of being associated with those guys.”

Her parents accepted her as she was. However, she never took the initiative to abuse or insult those who had nothing. They simply treated them as if they had nothing because they literally did not fit in with her.

Growing up in an environment where there was no lack, the girl began to enjoy refined hobbies. She collected beautiful works one by one. She became a regular customer at a collection store, but one day, she encountered something called the 'Black Cloak'.

“This is….”

“This is the work of Black Cloak, Miss.”

“Black Cloak? This piece has a strange atmosphere. Is it a watercolor painting…?”

“It is dangerous if you come close.”

“But isn’t it really beautiful?”

There was a time when the Black Cloak was known as a monster. The woman who encountered the 'City of Void' was completely captivated by its work. Afterwards, it became known that the Black Cloak was a mystery that contained divinity, and its popularity skyrocketed.

“This is a work of art created by God.”

It was a work of art that suited her noble life so well.

It wasn't just women who had such thoughts, as strange groups formed among the first-class citizens. The Black Cloak Enthusiasts' Association, for example. It was only natural that women would try to join the most prestigious of these groups.

“……?”

But something was different from what I expected.

“…Volunteering?”

“Do you happen to not know much about the Black Cloak?”

“No, that’s not possible.”

The words of denial came out naturally at the sight of something very stupid and disgusting. And she wasn't lying. The woman was proud to know the black cloak quite well.

“Isn’t it a humanoid divinity that contains the divinity of providence?”

“What about the black cloak?”

“Uh… They say that when they meet a good person, they like them and give them a gift. On the other hand, when they meet a bad person, they drag them into a frame and make them meet a terrible end.”

“And yet you question our volunteer system?”

“No, but….”

It was difficult to understand.

“I can do as much as I want as long as it’s sponsorship.”

If it was just a matter of paying an activity fee, even women would be able to accept it. Many salons operated by collecting membership fees like that. However, the black cloak enthusiasts said that wasn't the case.

“Is it really necessary to step forward yourself?”

“Are you seriously asking?”

“It’s not that there aren’t many people who want to work, and if you really want to do good deeds, you can just hire people… Sponsorship is a good thing, right?"

"Then it's meaningless."

They argued that only those who directly engaged in service could be considered worthy of being included among them.

"Ha, that's obvious. You came to our club with such shallow greed. At best, you'd be able to show off with money, get the title of a good person, appreciate Black Cloak's work, and if you're lucky, receive a gift… That's what you expected, right?"

"…What's wrong with that? Is sponsorship the wrong way to do it?"

"I wouldn't say it's a wrong approach, but if that's what you were expecting, you probably wouldn't be a good fit for us. We're doing something honorable that money can't buy."

"Ha, I'm so speechless…."

"There are many groups that love the Black Cloak, but you don't seem to know why we are the ones who come into contact with the Black Cloak most often. We are not like those imitators. It is because we insist on doing genuine good deeds that the Black Cloak has recognized us."

The members even became very angry.

"I'm really sorry to say this, but we are a group that selects sincere and noble volunteers, not a group that was created to make a fuss and make a fuss with money like you. If we were to accept people like you one by one, the quality of our group would decline."

"You even say that the quality is poor?"

"If that happens, the Black Cloak will also take back his affection for us. We can't stand to see that happen. It's the trust we've worked so hard to earn. We can’t let outsiders eat away at that precious thing.”

“Is it really funny?”

The woman was very angry and shouted loudly.

“I can do it too, if I do it…! I just asked because I thought I had to do it myself, not because I said I wouldn’t do it. Do you think people don’t do it because they don’t know how to volunteer? I just didn’t do it because it was inefficient!”

I really thought so. There were plenty of people who wanted to work anyway, and there were plenty of back alley poor people who collapsed because they couldn't earn a penny.

If you hire such people, they can make money and the woman can do good deeds. What an efficient good deed it is.

But this damn club hurt a woman's pride.

“Did you think I couldn’t do it?!”

“Oh, that’s what you said.”

“…What, what is this?”

“Isn’t it written as a contract?”

“No, what kind of club contract is this….”

“If you’re not going to do it, then don’t do it. I’m so busy, you’re just wasting my time.”

“…Give it to me.”

The girl managed to secure a spot in the club.

“I’m the last one?”

“I can’t help it since I’m a newbie who hasn’t done anything.”

“If you pay more membership fees….”

“Are you going to keep talking about money?”

“…Ugh….”

And then I started doing volunteer work.

“…….”

To be honest, I was a bit dazed.

'Why am I here like this?'

I couldn't understand it.

The work done in the club was varied, and the higher the rank, the more burdensome and dangerous the service had to be.

The chairman even went so far as to visit third-class citizens who were living in hiding in unreconstructed areas and help them live.

'This is crazy.'

The higher your rank, the more work you have to do?

'You don't even hesitate to go outside the city.'

Why would so many people gather in a city? It was because the city guaranteed people's lives. The further out you went from the city, the more dangerous it became, and the higher the chance of death.

But the woman persevered, if only for the sake of her pride. She picked up trash on the side of the road, fed meals to the slum dwellers, and even provided support to the second-class citizens who were struggling to survive.

“Is the room a little cold…? I’m sorry, I wish I could give you something….”

“Oh, no. It’s okay. I guess I should at least cover myself with a blanket.”

“I’m sorry, but I don’t have a blanket… Can you give me a comforter?”

"…uh…."

One day, I went to be a conversation partner for an elderly person who lived alone, saying, "You've been doing really well lately. I'll trust you and leave it to you." I made a few slips of the tongue, but I tried to make up for it somehow.

“Ah, ahahaha…! I, I can buy it for you…!”

“Huh? No, then I’m so sorry….”

“Oh, what are you talking about? I can buy you as much as you want. How many sheets would be enough? No, I can change all the bedding. Right?”

Of course, it seemed that her method was a bit difficult to accept by the members.

“That’s why you shouldn’t solve everything with money. There are people who are genuinely happy to receive such gifts, but there are also people who feel deprived. In that case, it’s counterproductive and dangerous.”

“T, but… what should I say there…. I tried my best too! I already made a mistake, so what do you want me to do about it!”

"…hmm…."

However, it also received positive feedback.

“It does seem like you’re really doing your best.”

“…I, I see?”

“I guess it’s because you don’t have much experience yet. It’s really nice to see you participating in activities so consistently these days. The elderly person even sent me a thank you letter saying that they really liked the new bedding.”

“Oh, a letter…? Uh, to me? It’s for me? Show me!”

“Yes, I brought it here.”

"…ah…."

The woman felt a sense of accomplishment as she read the two pages of faded letter paper written in small and delicate handwriting. She had been envious of the members who had boasted, “I finally received a gift from Black Cloak!”, but at the moment she read the letter, she simply had no thoughts.

“…Ahem, can I take this?”

“Haha, of course. It came from you.”

“I will keep it well.”

When her parents found out about what their daughter was doing, they initially acted as if they were worried or did not understand, saying things like, "If you like it, we won't stop you, but it could be dangerous." However, after seeing the letter the girl brought, their reaction changed, albeit awkwardly.

“…That slum person gave this to me?”

“Not poor, but second-class citizens!”

“Oh, right. Okay….”

“…….”

"…I see."

Her father looked bewildered, somewhat bitter, and also had a faint smile on his face.

“There are still people like this.”

“What are you talking about? All the seniors I meet at my club are like this.”

“…Really? Dad didn’t know that. I’m sorry.”

He even seemed to have regrets.

“I thought only scary people were left.”

He laughed, saying, “I thought that was the only way I could survive without having my belongings stolen, and that there would be only people who would desperately try to steal what was mine.” Then he praised his daughter.

“You’re doing well. The members there all seem to be nice people.”

“Huh? Oh, that… right? I told you, I’m not doing anything weird.”

“Still, be careful. There are a lot of scary people in the world. You can open your eyes and cut off your nose.”

“Oh, I understand….”

Then one day, I got a call from the hospital.

“…Your mother woke up.”

"…what?"

“Rice, I got a call from the hospital… right now….”

“What? Uh, how?”

The news that my mother, who had barely managed to stay alive after spending all her money, has woken up. Even in the best hospital in South Korea, the best they could do was to keep her alive, but she has fully recovered.

The woman only found out the reason a few days later in a slum alley.

“I affirm your good deeds.”

“…….”

A frame painted in black paint.

“I see you. Your father has lived a truly tireless life.”

“…….”

“I lost my entire family in those chaotic times, and almost lost my wife to the citizens of the slums. It was a scary world. Hatred of humanity was growing, and individualism was becoming stronger.”

"…ah…."

“You too have lived such a life, but you have done good deeds. You started out as greedy, but now you feel happy. I see you. I affirm you.”

The portrait, whose face cannot be seen, spoke.

"thank you."

The frame whispered as it disappeared.

“Did you like the gift?”

“…….”

At that time, I was left alone.

“…….”

The woman wept for a long time, not so much because she had received the great mysterious praise she had longed for, but because the work she had done had been returned as a benevolent gift. She herself could not understand why she was crying.

I was just so, so embarrassed.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (221)

221

Episode 221

“Hey, Geo?”

Yoo Seong-un called Geo.

“What are you doing these days…?”

“I’m making friends.”

“I could hear those friends praising you from here?”

“It’s good to be loved, it’s only natural.”

“Religion will emerge soon.”

Geo tilted his head at him.

“I know it’s a club.”

“Oh, right. It’s a religion disguised as a club.”

“I know that religious groups don’t form that easily.”

“It can happen at any time if there is an opportunity, so….”

This is especially true if the divine has already been prepared.

“Even an ordinary person can create a religion if they just wag their tongue. Of course, in such cases, it would be classified as a cult, but you are good at deceiving people, and you are also a divinity, and you give good rewards.”

“Is something wrong?”

“You knew all this, didn’t you? Well, it would be strange to say it was wrong… but when I think about the direction in which the ripple effect your followers will create will spread, I feel ambiguous.”

“I have taken the form of religion for myself, but I do not wish to be a fanatic, only a family and friends. I am sure that it is not a bad direction.”

Geo asserted confidently.

“The world is so cruel these days.”

“This is natural to me.”

but.

“…I agree that they are nice to look at.”

I guess it's like watching a neighbor turn into a neighbor. It's not like all the cruelty in the world will disappear, but it's better to have something than nothing.

“Why are you suddenly doing this?”

“I repeat, I wish I had many friends.”

“Was it not enough for me and Joohyun? Oh, this is so disappointing.”

“But won’t you leave me someday? Of course, if you want to be my friend for life, I’d be grateful and try to write a contract, but I don’t think you’d want that.”

“I will die as a human.”

It would have been the same for Joohyun.

“So you created a religion because you didn’t want to be alone? How bold of you.”

“Additionally, another reason is that I wanted to give a proper reward to those who support and love me and do good deeds.”

“…Oh, that’s it.”

Yoo Seong-un recalled the one-on-one rule that Black Cloak had. Originally, Geo enjoyed rewarding humans who made him happy, so subjectively and objectively, it was bound to happen someday.

'It's just that the timing is tricky.'

As the truth about the Black Cloak's divinity was revealed, the number of groups that supported him increased.

Among them, Geo often paid attention to the group that focused on essential good deeds, and the club that received momentum from them was very medieval, with no knights in particular.

‘Everyone has a little taste…’

When you see something like that, do you call them clear-eyed madmen? They all look good and wholesome, but somewhere in them, you feel a strange sense of madness.

“…You could call it a kind of management. It’s not your style to just leave the results of your influence alone.”

“What Mr. Yoo Seong-un said is correct.”

Geo in the frame spoke in his usual blunt tone.

“Because there will never come a day when the fact that I have attained divinity will change.”

“…I guess so.”

“There is a saying, ‘If you can’t avoid it, enjoy it.’”

“That too.”

Yoo Seong-un laughed innocently.

“I see you’re having a good time, then.”

“Yes.”

“So now you’ve completely defined yourself as a god? You used to indirectly deny that you were a god. I was so frustrated when I saw that.”

“? I am not God.”

“Why are you doing this again?”

“Being divine and being God are different.”

Geo argued as usual.

“As you live, you can inherit divinity and become a portrait.”

“An ordinary human being?”

“I have a conscience, so I may not be able to say that I am ordinary, but let’s say that I am ordinary. I am just an ordinary person who has acquired various characteristics and abilities.”

“You really are stubborn….”

In fact, it would have been stranger if the source had changed its attitude based on a few human words. In the end, Yoo Seong-un nodded, accepting Geo's decision.

"So that's it in a nutshell? Are you going to eat it all by yourself?"

"You summarized it well."

I was going to do it as both a human and a god.

"Isn't it great?"

"You are truly amazing."

"I am a bit like that."

There is nothing you can't do.

* * *

God is defined in various concepts.

It was also a vast nature that could not be contained in the eyes, a destiny that could not be grasped with the hands but would come someday, and a parent who gave birth to all things in the world and raised them with love and providence.

Sometimes it was just a huge mystery.

"……."

They cannot distinguish between good and evil.

Since human good and evil ultimately came into being under their own standards, they have nothing to do with the lofty beings floating in the sky above them. Just as we cannot discuss human laws with the sky where clouds drift by…

That is why countless divinities destroy dimensions with a single breath or a single wink.

“…….”

He enjoyed making people suffer and playing with them as toys.

Do not call on the gods. Do not look into their eyes, do not call on their names, and do not listen to their voices, lest you go mad.

All men who know God have said so. They are such a great disaster that men cannot help but hold their breath.

I had to hide. I had to not see, not call, not listen. I had to.

“…….”

But even though humans know all that, they still cry out to God.

"…buy…."

Please save me.

“…Save me, Lord, save me….”

Please help me.

“Too, ah… ph….”

I'm so scared I can't stand it.

"…please…."

My whole body was pierced and I was groaning.

He was so sick that he couldn't come to his senses. Oh, he couldn't even tell how much time had passed. It was painful to even think about what he had become.

'it hurts.'

He was the only one here.

'It hurts so much.'

No, is he really alone here? He thought that he probably wasn't. Otherwise, it wouldn't be this quiet. The graves of these countless heroes couldn't have been this cold.

As the loneliness grew, it became fear. As the pain grew longer, it became dizziness. As the moans grew longer, it turned into thirst, which gnawed at the man. He couldn't even tell if he was rotting, burning, or being torn apart.

'Please save me.'

It really did take a long time.

'Please save me.'

I spent a very long time alone in this pain, in the darkness.

‘Please save me… .’

It was okay not to solve this pain. It was okay not to fix my obviously hideous appearance back to how it was. The man who had spent more than an eternity had only one wish.

I know this isn't right.

“…Ar, Geo.”

I didn't want to be alone anymore.

“Argio….”

That's why the old, worn-out hero of the past called upon the evil spirit.

“…I see you….”

I saw him, I called him, I heard him.

“Have mercy….”

If not that, then even greater pain.

Now even that would feel like mercy to me.

* * *

“……?”

Geo blinked as he picked up and ate his 41st dumpling in the cabin.

“…I think someone called me.”

“Huh?”

“If I had been called from the sea or the city, it wouldn’t have been this faint. If I had been called from Earth, it would have been clear, so there’s only one candidate left.”

"dream…."

“It’s been a while since I’ve left it.”

Geo took his hands off the dumplings without a word.

“You know that 23 of the remaining dumplings are Daddy’s, kids.”

“Gurrrr.”

“Mmmmm….”

“Why doesn’t anyone listen to me?”

Even if I looked away for a moment, I could clearly see his impure intention to eat it all up.

'Is this the power of the divine?'

No, it was a pig's intuition.

“Anyway, if you called my name, it means you want to be my friend.”

"dream…?"

“You called my name when we didn’t even know each other? That’s no different from a proposal. The moment you called my name, you should have been prepared to make a friend.”

"dream??"

“Then I’ll be off. Let’s go, kids. I have no doubt that you’ll choose Dad over Dumplings.”

The teddy bear seemed to have something to say, but soon waved its stuffed hand as if telling them to be careful and saw off his son and grandchildren. Geo went up to the second floor, encouraged by that warm love.

Then he lifted the black cloth covering one of the works that had been stored in the warehouse.

“…….”

A picture of the Hwangwon.

“…I always wondered why animals could come out of here?”

It's finally time to answer that question.

Geo reached into the painting and he melted into another painting.

* * *

“…….”

“…….”

And what Geo saw wasn't a person.

"…? deer?"

It was a deer.

“What a handsome deer.”

“Beep….”

“Even your crying sound is beautiful.”

I have heard a flower deer cry like this before, but this guy looked far from a flower deer. He was not small, and his horns stood out proudly.

It was an ordinary deer that you might see on Earth, except for the unique shape of its horns.

“There’s a deer like this in a place like this?”

I had a question.

“Come here.”

“Beep….”

“Right, he’s a good kid.”

Whether it understood the words, recognized the gestures, or simply wanted to come, the gentle-looking deer walked gracefully like a cherry blossom and stood in front of Argio, leaning its head against him.

“I will be a good friend.”

deer

It's a small, young deer.

It was an explanation that was so simple that it actually made me suspicious.

“I don’t know where you see them as being small and young.”

It was true that it was suspicious. All the animals that had been coming out of the 'Animal Kingdom' were all twisted and twisted, and on top of that, they were strong and had twisted tempers.

So, it wasn't all that surprising that this deer was actually pretending to be docile, but Geo didn't really care. If it was that smart, it was actually a welcome thing.

'They deserve to be loved more than those who go crazy and run wild because they can't even communicate.'

Geo gently stroked the deer's chin and cheek.

“Oh… it’s soft.”

“Beep….”

“Even the sound of crying is so cute.”

“Beep….”

“You’re cute.”

When I say cute, it seems like they're crying even more cutely, but it didn't matter if it was an illusion or not. The former was innocent and lovable, and the latter was smart and cute enough to make you want to bite him.

“…….”

But what is it really?

“There’s nothing.”

“Beep.”

“Yeah, buddy.”

Geo asked, petting the deer that was clinging to him and pretending to be friendly.

“Did someone call Argio here? Someone definitely called my name, but the voice stopped again. The voice was so faint that I couldn’t hear it very well, but this is embarrassing.”

No matter how much I looked, I couldn't see even a single blade of grass, only a barren wasteland, and I couldn't see any living things that could clearly be called 'Argio'. It was almost as if I was hallucinating.

“But even so, it can’t be an auditory hallucination, right? Hey, buddy.”

“Beep.”

“Have you seen anyone here?”

“…….”

The deer, which had stepped back slightly, tilted its head.

“Hmm, okay.”

Geo expanded his scope a little further.

“Then what about other creatures besides you?”

“Beep.”

The deer began to move as if it was trying to catch a break.

As expected, he couldn't find a single animal or even a single blade of grass. There was no life anywhere, but Geo decided to follow along, pretending to be fooled.

"…? aha."

And then Geo realized something.

“Were you underground?”

“Beep….”

“What a wonderful thing.”

An underground entrance that had been hidden by dirt and twisted weeds was revealed.

Geo offered the deer some jerky he had brought just in case, and the deer sniffed around for a bit before carefully putting it in his mouth. Leaving the deer happily enjoying the jerky, Geo went down to the deep water and looked around.

“…….”

There were names given to the animals he had eaten so far.

'The ruined Avilas Rainforest.'

It was the ‘black forest’ that Argio was also familiar with.

“…But why did you go underground?”

“Huh?”

“I didn’t say that to you, so keep eating.”

It was just a bit ridiculous.

'It would be difficult if there was just a minor accident, right?'

What kind of tectonic shifts have occurred while I was away?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (222)

222

Episode 222

“It strangely reminds me of a four-legged forest….”

Geo looked around.

“They really do look alike.”

“Bam.”

“You even hit the gong with me. You have the qualities of a friend.”

“Beep….”

“Yeah, yeah.”

As the two exchanged words, the honey inside the hood popped out.

“Gulp?”

“You are my child, honey.”

“Cur.”

Convinced, Honey went back into the hood.

'I had a lot of animals in my fortune.'

Even when I was living in a peaceful mountain village in Gangwon-do,

I often encountered wild boars and deer, but for some reason, I seemed to encounter animals more often after becoming a portrait artist.

“This too must be a natural cycle.”

Geo thought, talking nonsense.

'Could the four-legged rainforest have been derived from here? They really are similar.'

However, Argio himself knew best that it was a separate dimension from the four-legged forest. He was amazed at the sight of his long-awaited hometown, destroyed as if in a painting.

“…What really happened?”

The Black Forest was always dense, but the dense trees held a lot of rainwater and caused poisonous rain to fall all the time. That was a structure that would not have been possible if it had not been connected to the sky in the first place.

The questions just keep piling up.

“…….”

Geo looked at the ceiling.

'... The four-legged forest entered the cave during the process of being moved between dimensions, but in this case, it is difficult to guess. This place was simply destroyed, and it did not move to another dimension, nor did it receive the dimension it moved to... .'

I guess I have no choice but to look around a little more.

“Would you like to go together?”

“…….”

The deer tilted its head and then disappeared.

"hmm."

You're a very shy friend.

“You left without even saying goodbye.”

I can say a word, though.

“It’s just the two of us left again today, honey.”

“Gulp.”

Honey cried as if she was okay as long as she had her dad. Geo lightly stroked the small bird that had landed on his shoulder with one hand, then moved his feet again. The more you look, the more you will know.

At least the atmosphere was noticeably different from the lush green forest of the four-legged forest. As befitting its nickname of ‘black forest,’ all the plants were dyed black and deep green, and the dense leaves created terrible shadows.

“It’s the same as before.”

The Black Forest was basically indistinguishable from day and night.

“In the past, we could tell the time by the degree of cold and heat, but now that we’re underground, it’s hard to tell even that. Isn’t that right?”

“Curr….”

“Will it just be cold all the time? I guess we’ll have to wait a little longer to find out… but since we’re underground, I don’t know how we can create heat.”

Unlike the four-legged rainforest, which at least had a 'plant-like' appearance, the Black Forest was full of bizarre and metaphysically twisted creatures. They were quite familiar to Argio.

“Nice to meet you.”

If you eat that, your internal organs will be damaged and you will vomit blood.

If you touched that thing, you'd get hives all over your body and have to laugh for weeks.

If not removed in advance, it can spread spores and germinate in the respiratory tract.

Plants are supposed to grow in sunlight, but seeing them grow so tenaciously in the shadows, there were times when I thought they must be some kind of devil. It didn't seem to have changed much even now.

“…….”

Geo blinked.

“…But I can definitely see ahead better than before. There was a similar situation in the previous jewel vein, where even in the darkness where you couldn’t see ahead, you could see clearly…”

“Kung-kung?”

“Yes, I didn’t see it this well before. After gaining the evil divinity, I mixed with various personalities and held various powers, so I didn’t have to worry about darkness, but I thought I was closer to a human now… I guess I wasn’t?”

Hmm, I guess it's because it's a portrait.

“It’s good to see the future clearly!”

As always, Geo was clear-headed.

“It’s really hard to know how to deal with the world when it’s this dark and gloomy like before. Of course, I have you, Honey, but it’s not good for me as a parent to always rely on you for help.”

“Kung kung kung….”

Honey complained, saying, "Why didn't you try to use it when I had it?" but even Dad had his own sense of pride.

'There are also plants that are like bombs that explode when exposed to light.'

Argio welcomed the brighter world than when he once lived in the Black Forest.

“But there’s something strange.”

It was quite a walk.

“Why can’t I see any beasts anywhere?”

“Gurr?”

“Where have all the Black Forest families gone?”

They say it was destroyed, but did all life really disappear, leaving behind only these silent plants that don't even have an answer? I don't think so. If that were the case, there would be no way that beasts would have continuously come over from beyond the 'animal kingdom'.

'Then is it hiding somewhere?'

However, it was a reaction that did not suit the beasts of the Black Forest. This was an environment where one had to become stronger and more brutal as quickly as possible to survive, so hiding was an act that only hindered survival.

“…….”

The atmosphere seemed to have changed quite a bit since we last saw each other.

“It’s difficult.”

So I couldn't find out who had called Argio. I wondered if it was the black plants that had acquired a sense of self in the midst of destruction that had called him, but there was no response.

'It was clear that something with intelligence was calling me.'

I wonder why, but I even felt a sense of longing.

“First… I think it would be best to move to a deeper place. There’s a house where I used to stay with my family. It’s full of traps and poisons, and it’s not a very comfortable place to stay, but back then, there was no place better.”

“Kur?”

“Yes, it was a house. It was a ruin that had been old and broken for a long time….”

Anyway, once you make it your home, it's your home.

The road to the remains of the saints dedicated to the Black Forest was difficult, but with Argio, who had already lived here his entire life, and Honey, a small ray of sunshine who could purify anything, it wasn't that daunting.

“Okay, here you go.”

They soon arrived at the ruins.

“Surprisingly, this place is still intact. I thought there might have been a problem while it was being lowered underground, but it seems to be stronger than I thought. Well, that means it will be able to maintain this shape even after I die….”

By the way, Argio was hit by the fire. Even though the entire Black Forest was burned down, it was amazing to see the plants that were no different than before, if not even stronger, and the ruins that still held on.

“Surely heroes were invited after that and there were destructions here and there.”

“Gurrrr….”

“You seem to like this place too. Yes, it is a ruin that is worth seeing.”

Argio stood firm and swept away the standing pillar.

“…….”

There were traces of the childhood growth of many humans.

“…I wonder what happened to those guys.”

Sometimes, when he went out into the forest to enjoy plunder and entertainment, there were creatures who were dedicated to him. There were those who clasped their hands and begged him to take them. Or there were those who were kidnapped because they were liked by Argio.

This place was not only a haven for beasts, but also a prison for humans who had been abandoned by humans.

'I remember everyone running away.'

Those who had barged in were making a lot of noise about the plague and such, so it seemed likely that they were killed as soon as they left the forest. Or they may have died without being able to escape the burning forest.

'They were too weak to run away from the poison and beasts of the forest.'

Argio felt sad and had a tearful face.

“Since I’m here, I should at least make a tombstone.”

“Crunch?”

“Even if those I knew before had been lucky enough to escape the forest and the army, they would have eventually died trapped in the dimension of destruction. Whether it was due to time or illness, they would have passed away, so it is right for me to see to their end.”

He grabbed the hem of his cloak and called to his daughter from the shadows.

“Dana, are you awake?”

“Ugh.”

“Find the missing children who couldn’t go home.”

“…….”

The cat, whose eyes resembled the universe, blinked and cried clearly.

"meow."

Then it seeped into another shadow and spread across the black forest.

“Then Honey, why don’t you keep looking around until your brother finds all the missing children? Considering the animals that came in through the picture frames, I’m sure my beast family is still out there somewhere….”

“Gurrrr!”

Honey cried happily. It was fun to tour her father's old hometown, and of course, it was fun to make new friends. Argio laughed, embracing the excitement.

“Where are my friends?”

Then Geo and I met.

“…….”

“What are you? Are you a fox?”

“…….”

“…No, wait. It’s not a fox…?”

With a wolf as big as a house.

“…Ghost?!”

“No, you’re alive.”

“It’s a ghost!!”

Even the talking cowardly wolf was there.

'It wasn't like that in my time, but aren't animals these days worth their size?'

Argio found himself thinking like an old fart without realizing it.

* * *

I already knew that the beasts of my homeland had acquired 'language'. Even before the evil divine mass called 'Argio' was sealed away by the heroes, the beasts were laughing, talking, and telling stories.

'But I've never interacted with him directly before, so it feels strange.'

Would a god who was mad with anger and hatred talk to a talking beast? He didn't even have the presence of mind to converse in the first place.

If Argio, as a human, had ever had a 'conversation' with the evil spirit after his death, it would have been an accusation directed at the heroes who had come to visit him.

'I still think that was all there was to the exchange. How foolish.'

Should I call it a bargain?

"……."

"…This, this, this human…?"

"Yes, he's a human. Even if you look closely, he's not alive, is he?"

"I don't know…."

The wolf, as big as a truck on Earth, cowered and looked at Geo. He could have come closer to look, but he was so scared that he just tilted his head from a distance.

Argio looked at it and said incredulously.

"How can you know if I'm alive or dead when I'm so far away? Come closer, please. I'm not something you should be so afraid of."

"Why on earth are you deciding that…?"

The wolf approached slowly, with an equally bewildered expression on his face.

"…Can I smell it?"

"Please make it happen."

“Then just wait a minute….”

The big wolf slowly lowered its head and sniffed at Argio, who was much smaller than it. Then, perhaps feeling a little relieved, or perhaps smelling something delicious, it sniffed at him.

“Hey, are you going to eat me?”

“…?! Oh, no! That’s not it! I’m not going to eat it!!”

“Or else why are you jumping up and down like that? You’re in such good spirits.”

“Just because, I just like the smell….”

“Smells good?”

“That’s not it!!”

The wolf made excuses as if he was very wronged.

“It was because it was sweet and fragrant. Well, it had a soft and squishy… warm smell.”

“…Oh, are you talking about the smell of sunshine?”

“…Sunshine?”

The tone of voice rose.

The wolf came closer again, wagging its tail as if it was so happy. The sharp eyes of the wolf's nature opened wide in surprise and excitement. Argio thought that this thing might be quite young.

The hesitant wolf asked.

“Are you from the sun?”

“I’ve never heard that before.”

Geo pointed upward as if asking why.

“Isn’t the sun rising above here too?”

“That’s fake.”

"FALSE?"

“…You’re a ghost too!!”

“Can’t you hear my heartbeat? Are you really a wolf?”

“Then why are you the only one who doesn’t know something that everyone else knows?!”

The wolf looked very aggrieved.

“More than anything, humans are extinct!”

“Ah, as expected….”

It was as expected, but it was a little bitter.

“What a monstrous creature, the smarter you get, the dumber you become.”

As always, to everyone.

Surely it could have been better.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (223)

223

Episode 223

After that, Geo had to prove for a long time that he was human.

“Do I still look like a ghost to you? I don’t smell like a corpse, my heart is beating, and although you can’t see it now, if you prick me I’ll bleed. Do I really not look human?”

“It’s kind of like that.”

“How can you be so decisive?”

But he didn't believe me until the end.

“…Yeah, if you find it hard to believe.”

Geo was a decent adult who acknowledged all the diversity in the world. Judging from his reaction, it seems that the human race has been extinct for quite some time, so this kind of reaction was somewhat understandable.

Instead, I wanted to hear an explanation.

“I wonder what happened before this place was destroyed. Can you explain it to me? If you will be my companion, I will make sure to reward you. Just in case, do you like to eat?”

“What you’re saying is compensation… food?”

“I also know this black forest, once called Avilas Rainforest. It seems that some parts have changed since I last saw it, but if there is food, it will be of great help. What do you think?”

“I think there will be a slight difference in sincerity depending on what you give….”

“I thought you were young, but you know how to take care of yourself. How admirable.”

Argio held the wolf's large head with both hands and stroked it repeatedly. The wolf, which had flinched and froze when Geo first grabbed its face, became quiet as he admired Geo's dazzling hand movements.

“Oh, there. That’s nice. Oh, that’s cool.”

“This is the taste of human hands, wolf.”

“Why does it catch itchy spots so well? Is it magic?”

“I have another ability.”

Even though he looks like this, Argio has been living under the same roof with his beast family since he was a child. He is an expert on how and where to scratch animals to make them feel refreshed.

'This guy can't even speak, he's more intuitive.'

The wolf, who had been being petted for a while, slowly drifted away with a satisfied look on his face.

“I won’t pay you back for this, since you did it first.”

“Even if you speak so firmly with such a relaxed face, it’s not very convincing.”

“Ahem, well, it’s not like it’s not true.”

“Okay, let’s try eating it all the way to the bone.”

Argio was very fond of clever beasts.

“Then can I hear an explanation now?”

“You’re telling the story until extinction, right?”

As they talked and touched each other, the wolf's anxiety about whether he was a ghost seemed to have subsided somewhat, and he sat down in front of Geo with a more relaxed face. Despite his large body having slumped down, the black forest was quiet.

'It's not like this place is usually this polite.'

The wolf spoke, not knowing whether he knew Geo's question or not.

“For the sake of fair trade, I’ll just say this up front: I don’t really know when the world was destroyed, I just heard stories from my ancestors. Strictly speaking, I don’t even know when ‘destruction’ refers to exactly.”

“I guess there were frequent times of destruction?”

“The first destruction would have been around the time when the beast race like us was born.”

It seemed to be referring to the time when Argio, who was probably a human, died and the beasts gained intelligence and reason equal to humans.

'It seems like the heroes who visited often brought up similar topics… .'

But the memory of that time was a bit vague for Argio now. It was because he was so consumed by anger and hatred that he wasn't in his right mind. Maybe it was because he hadn't fully assimilated it.

'First of all, I don't know much about what happened after I was sealed.

Other than the fact that they fought among themselves and were destroyed...'

This time, I thought I could hear more details. I was curious about the history that my descendants would recite. Geo listened to the wolf's story with interest.

“They say that wolf-clan like me originated back then, but that doesn’t really make sense to me. Even in the days of my ancestors’ ancestors’ ancestors, we were wolf-clan, just like we are now.”

“Is there a distinction between regular wolves and wolf tribes?”

“That’s right. If we look at it from the perspective of humans, isn’t it the difference between humans and monkeys? Of course, there was a separate tribe of monkeys, but that’s only a tribe that was left behind in history. I heard that they went extinct after fighting frequent wars with humans.”

“Well, then how many races are left now?”

“What exists now is….”

The wolf, who had been silent for a moment, continued speaking.

“There are only three races.”

The wolf tribe, the crow tribe, and the fox tribe.

“My mother said that the wolf tribe valued family, the crow tribe was wise, and the fox tribe was good at trickery, so they were able to survive until now.”

“The ending is a bit strange.”

“If you meet the fox tribe, be careful, they are pure scammers.”

“You’re even showing your teeth, and your speech has become strangely harsh, hasn’t it?”

First of all, I know that the wolf tribe doesn't like the fox tribe very much. Judging from the tone of their conversation, the wolf tribe and the fox tribe often clash, while the crow tribe seems to maintain neutrality.

The wolf snorted.

“If those guys hadn’t been the first to make a fuss, we wouldn’t have had to show our teeth. Anyway, those unlucky guys, they think they’re the smartest in the world. They’re beasts who don’t know honor….”

“Isn’t your speech harsh?”

“Was the subsequent destruction also the birth of an evil god?”

“Hmm.”

“He is said to be the god of wrath and war, but there is little information left about him. It is said that the story of when the evil god caused chaos in the world was so horrible and cruel that it was not recorded.”

I remembered that the appearance of the evil god 'Argio' was quite well known. With his red braided hair and the jewels and bone ornaments that adorned his entire body. The fur of an animal. Even his facial features were so striking that I couldn't help but recognize him.

But somehow, whenever he saw me, Argio, he would say some completely absurd things like, "I'm a ghost."

'The records about me were erased.'

It's a wise decision. In fact, if the news spreads that humans have stepped forward and brought about a disaster, the world will be in even greater chaos than before. Well, apart from that, it seems like they've self-destructed...

“I know the story of the evil god. You know, the monster that spreads plagues, kidnaps innocent people, and eats people alive? You know, the one that gave the beasts the same level of power as humans and caused chaos in the world?”

“The last part is something to be thankful for, as it gave birth to our race. That’s why we didn’t have much aversion to the divinity called the evil god. He’s our parent god.”

“As a parent… that’s a unique perspective.”

Suddenly, paternal love surged.

'It may be a coincidence and fate that led to the birth of this new species, but it still feels good to hear them call me their parent. That's right, I'm also their father... .'

Argio smiled broadly.

“Do you still have no aversion to evil spirits?”

“It would be different if we were to encounter that disaster directly, but it’s just… like an old story.”

“I see.”

Now, the story about the evil god Argios seemed like a legend. It seemed like it was something that actually happened, but it felt completely unrealistic.

“But I heard that the evil spirit was sealed.”

“There was another destruction related to it.”

As the story got longer, the wolf slowly crouched down, perhaps because it was uncomfortable to stand up straight. Then it laid down with its large head on the floor. Argio also sat down next to it and stroked the wolf's head.

The wolf continued to explain, closing his eyes tightly as if the touch wasn't too bad.

“Even though the evil spirit was sealed, the wisdom and power granted to the beasts did not disappear, and the humans who thought that everything would return to how it was before once the seal was made were bewildered as they poured in their resources without thinking.”

“That was foolish.”

“Yeah, who said, ‘If we just seal the evil spirits, it’ll all be over.’”

The wolf also wrinkled its nose as if it was looking down on the extinct species of humans. It liked the feel of the shallow fur on its wrinkled nose, so it gently stroked it and it soon loosened up.

“It is said that the good and strong humans died in the process of sealing the evil spirits, and those who did not die were ostracized and branded as monsters by the weakened humans. It is said that the heroes who were scattered in this way were often found dead or simply disappeared.”

“Poor thing, isn’t it?”

“I think you’re stupid.”

Those heroes who sacrificed everything they had to seal the evil spirits and were then abandoned by the humans who were eliminated, and those who were unable to rally around such strong heroes and instead chased them out without understanding their purpose.

“Furthermore, even after the evil spirit died, the plague that flowed from the Black Forest did not disperse again, but was busy spreading. All living things gradually became poisoned, withered, and… well, it became a terrible wasteland with nothing to eat.”

The current environment is very familiar to wolves, but it must have been a great disaster for the creatures of that time. Inevitably, small conflicts piled up and humans and beasts began to fight a huge war.

“War?”

“They said it was to eat each other.”

“Hmm, even though we speak the same language?”

"okay."

“That’s… interesting.”

Isn't this the story of beasts that thought they were humans finally finding their true identities? I should have seen their cute appearance myself, but it's really a shame. It seems like there were a lot of fun things going on.

“What next?”

“They said that the war continued for a long time. After countless wars, large and small, that were too numerous to record in history, humans and beasts realized, ‘Ah, we can no longer live here.’”

“Is it because the environment has become so desolate? It could be because of the poison that flowed out of the Black Forest, and also because resources have been consumed during the war.”

“Yeah, so….”

The wolf lifted his eyelids and looked at the ceiling.

“They said I killed God.”

“…God? Are you talking about the evil god I mentioned earlier?”

“No, the Creator. The most primordial god who created this earth and sky.”

“I never thought that would be possible.”

“I don’t know much about it. I just heard that there was such a history.”

“Why did you say that I killed God? Even if I prayed for salvation, it wouldn’t be enough.”

“It seemed that he wanted to obtain salvation even by killing himself because he could not receive salvation no matter how much he begged. As a result, the earth and the sky were separated.”

Humans wanted to recreate the world with the power they gained by killing God.

“Because he was the god of life and creation.”

I believed that it was possible.

“So, the old, damaged, and dirty world was buried underground and a new world was created on top of it. If the existing dimension was completely erased, there would be no place for humans to stand while the new world was being created, so it was an inevitable decision.”

“So you couldn’t erase it completely and hid it underground?”

“That’s what happened.”

But it failed.

“As you can see, the world above is unfinished.”

Even the wolf did not know how humans had killed the gods, taken away their powers, and skillfully manipulated that great power to create the world.

I just know that it happened, it failed, and that's how it became what it is now.

“Since the Creator is dead, the real sun and moon have disappeared. Humans tried to create new ones with the power they had plundered, but failed. In the first place, the moon could not even be created in its shape, so only the sun remains.”

“So that’s what they meant when they said the sun was fake.”

“The sun above is not the same as the ‘sun’ before the destruction. Unlike the one that was said to have created life by just existing, it is just an empty shell that only imitates it. It seems like the sun is shining, but it is not warm. Sometimes it is cold, sometimes it is hot. It is not an environment where living things can live.”

“Somehow there wasn’t even a single blade of grass.”

“I would have frozen to death or burned to death long ago.”

The wolf snorted.

“The world began to shrink and fall apart as if it was a curse that those without qualifications had tampered with the power of God. Now, the only ‘earth’ left is this black forest.”

Geo knew what that meant.

'I think the dungeon battle has started.'

It was a process in which the world was transformed into one giant game board.

“Have all the other places disappeared except this forest?”

“Yes, now it has become so that only this place appears underground and the area above appears above ground.”

“Then, are there really no other creatures besides your three species?”

“There are some that originally lived in the Black Forest.”

The wolf closed his eyes again.

“I couldn’t help it.”

“…….”

Geo seemed to know why the creatures of the 'Dead Avilas Rainforest' had been invading beyond his frame all this time. It was because the three species here had driven out or killed all the animals that had previously inhabited the area in order to protect themselves.

'Does it happen that animals that have been driven out or run away come to my cabin once in a while? That would explain why they were so frenzied even for a beast from the Black Forest.'

It's not a good feeling to be kicked out and run away from your home, and there's a fake sun up there that makes living things look worn out and worn out. It would be strange if the animals that crawled around in such a place and came over to find the picture frame were in good condition.

"…hmm…."

But I guess it's okay since they sent me to the room in one go without any pain.

'That's the way of nature, poor beasts.'

For a moment, the gentle emotions of Sergio and Giovanni surged and the thought crossed my mind, 'Huh? So I ate those who lost their homes and wandered the dangerous streets only to finally find a peaceful place?' But what can I do? I've already eaten them.

'And I've already lived like that in the Black Forest, so what do I have to feel sorry about now?'

Besides, the beasts that invaded Geo's house at that time were all crazy and it didn't seem like they could recover. If Geo took good care of them, it might be possible, but I'm not sure.

'Why?'

They were neither Geo's family nor his friends.

"…haha."

“…Why are you laughing?”

“I’m making excuses.”

"suddenly…?"

It was because he felt so sorry and stung just talking like this. Argio thought, 'Is this my fault?' but at the same time, he ended up thinking, 'Oh, he's pitiful.'

'This gap will only get worse in the future.'

I sincerely hope that the 'Geos' we will be meeting in the future will come to an amicable agreement.

“…….”

but.

'Then who on earth called me?'

It was one of two things. Either one of the beasts, who now shared the power of language equally, had called him, or the human race had dwindled to the point where it could be called extinction, but only a very small number remained.

“…Well, okay. Aren’t you curious about me?”

“…….”

“Silence is also a wise answer.”

Geo nodded and looked back at the wolf, saying, “Ah.”

“I have another question.”

“What is it?”

“Have you ever seen a deer?”

"…deer?"

The wolf blinked.

“At least I haven’t seen it.”

“It was just an ordinary deer that made only the sounds of a beast.”

“Then I don’t know even more. I’ve heard of a deer tribe, but they’re long extinct. I’ve never even seen one, except for the deer in this black forest.”

“Are there any species other than yours that do not speak language?”

The wolf thought for a moment and then answered.

“…It’s not like there isn’t one, right? Language is ultimately a result of learning, so even if you’re a beast of a species, you won’t be able to learn the language, even if you have high intelligence, unless someone teaches you.”

“Young animals can’t speak.”

“Isn’t that the same for human babies?”

The wolf rose from his seat.

“Then give us something to eat. I am not in a position to ask for much, since I have only recited old tales. But our children will eat it too, so please pay generously.”

“Oh my god, you have a child?”

“I don’t know why you like it… but of course it is. If we can’t have offspring, we can’t sustain our species. Although protecting our offspring from poison is difficult in this environment, reproduction is an important duty for our species.”

“If that’s the case, then you don’t have to worry, my friend. Even looking at it this way, I can see that my hands are really big. You’re the boy who I never thought you’d be, and it really makes my heart race….”

“Who said that he was the head of the family?”

“So how old are you?”

“…….”

The wolf spoke softly.

“…7 years old….”

"oh my god!"

Geo was touched.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (224)

224

Episode 224

“Mr. Geo?”

Joo-hyun, who greeted Geo with a sankalut around his neck, tilted his head.

“Is something wrong? You said you wanted to rest for the time being, so I don’t have any plans, but are you perhaps bored of just staying in the cabin?”

“I don’t think I’ll ever get bored of staying in my cabin until I die.”

“Then why did you come to our house today? Usually you send a letter before coming here, but there’s nothing like that. Is there something you want to say?”

“Have you ever raised a dog?”

“Oh no…?”

A dog all of a sudden?

"outline?"

“What a cute puppy.”

"for a moment."

It was ominous.

“What do you want to say?”

“I found some cute puppies and I was wondering how I can help them.”

“If your parents are there, the dog will take care of raising them.”

“He said he was hungry.”

“This evil old woman insists on….”

“I’ll assume I misheard.”

“Thank you for listening.”

“I don’t like it.”

“No, Mr. Geo.”

Joohyun made an embarrassed expression.

“I know it’s really weird for me to say this to you, Geo, but… you shouldn’t mess with a young animal when its parents are around. Where on earth did you see a puppy that made you say that?”

“I saw it in the ruined Avilas Forest. It’s the hometown of Argio, as I mentioned before, and it’s a cave called the Black Forest. I had a good opportunity to visit.”

“You saw a puppy there? Is that a puppy? I’ve heard from Mr. Geo about the dangers and notoriety of that place, and no matter how much I think about it, I don’t think you’re talking about an ordinary puppy.”

“…….”

“Mr. Geo?”

The portrait, with its chin on its hand, spoke confidently.

“Isn’t it a sin to like cute things?”

“…I guess so?”

“Isn’t it a sin to feed a hungry beast?”

“…What if…?”

“Then I am innocent.”

“It would be better if you explain a little and then declare your innocence.”

“Oh my.”

The hair in the portrait was eventually dyed red.

“I came here to share a cute fact, but is it okay for you to be this cold? I’m going to get hurt.”

“How is it that as the days go by, you become more and more adept at lying without even wiping your mouth?”

It was impossible to tell what had happened to the line of sight due to the large black paint that had been added to the center of the frame, but the mere fact that he had transformed into Argio, who was suitable for pushing forward, was enough to show the forced nature of the current situation.

“What exactly do you want to do?”

“Dear Joohyun, you don’t have to worry about anything.”

“Don’t you think that he’s doing this because he wants to worry about you?”

Joohyun, who had been hesitating and groaning, asked further.

“…You’re not doing anything that would endanger the safety of the world, are you?”

“Oh my god. What are you talking about? That’s so scary.”

“Your reaction was so artificial that it made me even more anxious. What do you want me to do?”

“As I said before, I just came to share some very interesting information.”

“You found the puppy?”

“Yes, they are a cute family led by a boy who is now seven years old.”

Argio declared.

“They are my children too.”

“…Is it Honey’s case or Dana’s case?”

“If we really want to be specific, it would be different, but since they called me father first, isn’t our relationship even closer than that? Because we are a family proven by history.”

“What kind of scam are you trying to commit against an innocent 7-year-old boy?”

“This is all about blood and flesh.”

“Whose flesh and blood is this?”

Soon silence came.

“…….”

“…….”

Joo-Hyeon, who was staring at the portrait with narrowed eyes, asked.

“Is it related to that Demon King Project?”

"perhaps?"

“Take it easy.”

Even though he said this, Joo-hyun didn't think that Geo was an evil deity who would bring pain and anger to the world. She was just a devil woman with an evil name, but the most evil thing she did in her life was 'feeding food until she was full.'

“If you could introduce me to someone later, I would appreciate it if you could set up a seat for me.”

In the end, Joo-hyun meekly accepted this situation.

“If it’s burdensome to Mr. Geo or that… boy? You don’t have to do it. I just thought that if I became friends with someone who already receives a lot of affection from Mr. Geo, I could be of some help as a manager.”

“I’ll try to ask for your understanding once we become closer.”

"thank you."

This man may be crude and indifferent in his words and actions, but he has not stirred up any troubles. Even now, aren't people, rich or poor, calling out the name of the Black Cloak and doing good deeds?

'It won't be a bad thing in the end.'

Joo-hyun trusted her foolish friend, Geo.

“I’ve been learning how to cook recently, so come visit me when you have time. If you can also teach me the favorite dishes of that 7-year-old friend, the boy who makes the most of his food, I’ll make them. I feel bad for always just eating from his menu.”

“I’m really looking forward to the meal that Mr. Joo-hyun himself will be treating me to.”

Argio smiled slightly and his hair soon turned black.

“Then I will visit again when I have time.”

“Yes, thank you for your hard work.”

“Have a peaceful day.”

“…….”

The portrait disappears within a moment.

“…Hmm, it’s a puppy.”

What kind of food can dogs and animals eat?

* * *

“Hey, buddy! Here I come!”

"oh."

The wolf that had been waiting at the meeting place came over and shook me gently.

“Thank you for what you gave me last time. I couldn’t give the seasoned ham and jerky to the pups, but the chunks of meat you gave me specifically for the young ones were a huge help.”

“I was wondering what to do with the leftover meat, and you were a great help to me. As a cook, you always want your pantry to be neat and tidy.”

“You said it was the meat of the golden step sheep….”

The wolf was surprised.

“Everyone liked it because it wasn’t polluted.”

Although many races, including the wolf tribe, have survived until now by making efforts to avoid and neutralize the poison as much as possible, creatures other than them have not been able to escape the 'plague' that is said to have spread from the Black Forest.

The aftermath threatened to eat many creatures. Even if the wolf clan wanted to hunt and eat animals, the beasts of the Black Forest were extremely ferocious and their flesh was soaked in poison.

Even if adults who had developed some tolerance could endure it, young pups were still out of the question.

“There is nothing that is not dangerous while hunting….”

“Then how do you prepare the food you usually give to your children?”

“The part that is highly poisonous is usually the blood of the prey, so we would chew the meat and drain some of the blood, and give it to our young. It was much more effective than using tools or grass. We are not as intelligent as foxes or crows.”

“That must have been tiring.”

“If we hadn’t done this, our wolf clan wouldn’t have been able to survive until now. It’s been seven years since our mother, who was our chieftain, returned to nature, so we have no choice but to work even harder.”

“As expected, the boy is the best….”

“Don’t say it like that…! Wolf tribe members are recognized as adults when they turn two years old. Even though their lifespan is longer than that of regular wolves, their growth is incomparably faster than that of humans! I'm telling you, they're not children!"

"How can you be so dignified while leading your tribe at such a young age?"

"Kururur… Woof! Woof woof!!"

Only after the barking started did Argio stop teasing.

"Excuse me, your reaction makes me feel uneasy."

"I don't know if he has a good personality or a bad personality…."

"If I had to be picky, wouldn't it be on the bad side?"

Well, first of all, he is an evil spirit.

"Can I visit your village today too?"

"…As you can see from what I've seen, the wolves won't be too welcoming of you."

"I know, I understand."

"Yes, please understand. In this day and age, a creature in human form is approaching, so everyone is just surprised. After all, I grew up hearing so many bad stories about humans…."

"I fully acknowledge the pitifulness of humanity."

"If you say so."

"More than anything, don't the children love me very much? I promised the little ones that I would show up again after my last visit, so please don't make me into a mean and mean person."

"No, I already gave permission. Don't say anything embarrassing."

The wolf moved its large body towards the 'village'.

They dug huge tunnels to prepare for any possible danger and lived inside them. In order to survive with their young in this forest where everything was soaked in poison, they had no choice but to create an empty space as empty as possible.

“Digging the hole must have been really hard, it was amazing.”

“Well… Certainly, we are not as talented at digging holes as the Fox Tribe. Our bodies are also incomparably larger than the Fox Tribe, so it must have taken a considerable amount of effort. We should be grateful to our ancestors.”

“Come to think of it, how do crows make their nests? They can’t possibly dig underground, right?”

“As far as I know, they climbed as high as they could and built their nests. They wove together branches that had been detoxified as much as possible… Well, since they don’t live together like foxes or us, it might be more convenient.”

“Aren’t we going to stick together?”

“Isn’t that the case with most birds? I don’t think it’s been that long since the fox tribe started living together.”

Even if they had acquired wisdom equal to or greater than that of humans, it seemed that they would still have the basic animal habits and temperament. However, I never thought that they would live separately in this situation.

'I think it might be safer to stick together, but if we split up, the risk of being wiped out all at once is definitely reduced. Either way, there are pros and cons.'

As we were having a light conversation, we soon arrived at the wolf's den.

“Ahem.”

A wolf cleared its throat and howled in front of the entrance.

“Awwww—!!!”

“Awww…!”

“Awwww!!”

It was a signal that 'family' had arrived.

'It must be a signal to let you know that I am there at the same time.'

Wolves have amazing senses, and even though they know each other's identities, the fact that they go to such lengths to communicate was clearly to reassure their families, saying, 'It's okay, you're safe, I'll make sure of it.'

'Apart from that, there will also be beasts that try to approach you by hiding your family's identity… .'

Often, the fox tribe would pretend to be a member of the wolf tribe and approach them playfully, or steal food. In this black forest, there were also beasts that had the ability to imitate the shape and voice of anyone.

'Is there anything wrong with being thorough?'

It's a tough world out there.

“Okay, let’s go in.”

“Thank you.”

As we entered the giant cave guided by the chieftain, the wolves' gazes followed us as expected.

“…….”

“…Krrrr….”

“…Ugh….”

Some were wary, others were terrified.

‘If we are to find commonalities… .’

The wolves were all afraid of Argio.

“…….”

He smiled broadly and grabbed the end of the black cloak I was wearing, swinging it lightly. It was to show that he had no intention of harming me by offering me the bribe he had prepared for today.

In no time a huge mound of meat was piled up in the place.

“King! King King!”

“Kkiiing… Kkeung!”

“Ugh! Ugh!”

The first ones to greet us were the wolf cubs.

“Kids, just a moment….”

“I told you not to approach me like that!”

The young ones, who had not yet learned the language, did not know why their parents and relatives were afraid of Argio.

It was a form of animal they had never seen before, but they were children who had never seen a fox or a crow. The difference in appearance could not make them afraid.

“Kuuuung….”

“Oh my god, you’re so cute.”

Geo was touched by the innocent and cute appearance of the wolf cubs coming closer and wagging their tails to greet him. It felt like his heart, which had suffered from the terrifying obsession of mermaids and the harsh human nature of modern society, was being healed.

As the wolves hesitated at the sight, the chief opened his mouth.

“He is my guest. I will ensure his safety. Do not make him uncomfortable.”

The leader's firm voice. The mothers and fathers who had been holding their young by the scruff of their necks put their children down on the ground one by one.

In this world, it is very difficult to obtain healthy meat without poison, so they did not want to offend their 'guests' if possible.

“…….”

“…Ugh….”

Among the hesitating wolves, the chief's friend revealed himself.

“Welcome, sir. I apologize if this offended you.”

“Well, I guess not. I thought I was well-welcomed.”

“I’m glad you said that.”

The wolf, who was quite healthy even at the age of 35, seemed to be an elder who supported her young friend, the chief. She bowed her head respectfully, approached, and asked in a friendly tone, grinning with her teeth.

“Can you tell me your name today?”

“I think we already talked about this?”

The portrait smiled.

“Please call me Geo.”

Here, 'geo' meant 'beast'.

Arka let out a small sigh as if she was troubled. It almost seemed like she was being sarcastic. Of course, from her perspective, it was natural that she had a perfectly good name and was using a poorly written name.

“That’s not a name….”

“Why, that could be the case.”

Actually, he had no name.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (225)

225

Episode 225

Quite some time has passed.

The wolves quickly became alert, quickly let go, and quickly became afraid again.

“It’s because everyone has become a coward.”

The chief's friend, Arka, said so and expressed his apology.

“I’m sorry, my friend. Until ten years ago, wolves weren’t so cowardly, but as time went by, their bodies grew weaker and their minds grew old as well. It’s a shame.”

“How can things be the same as they were before in this environment? Even if everything is the same, it is living things that change, but the current world is so cruel to all living beings. It must be hard.”

“I'm glad you understand.”

As Arka sighed, the chieftain, Gargal, approached.

“Don’t say such bad things to your guests.”

“Since you won’t listen to my small talk, I guess I’ll have to grab a guest and start talking.”

“We, the wolf tribe, have to save face….”

“Gargal, face does not fill our hungry stomachs.”

“Ugh….”

Gargal's moaning sounded like something between 'Kkiyuung' and 'Keuung'. It is said that age is not a very valuable concept to the wolf tribe and that they do not consider age in relationships, but even so, it seemed difficult for a 7-year-old to overcome the experience of a 35-year-old.

Argio felt his heart warming.

“You two really get along well.”

“You often use that kind of… that kind of speech.”

“It didn’t suit you?”

“They suit each other so well it makes my hair stand on end.”

If you were to treat it as a human, it would be 'creepy'. Geo laughed.

“Your hair is still fine.”

“That's what they say.”

The wolf chief, who groaned once more, quietly lay down next to Geo, who was small compared to his size. It seemed like he was being considerate of his sleeping cubs.

Seeing that he was so big and silent, you could see why he became a chief at the age of seven.

“You are always silent.”

“That’s really a compliment.”

“That’s because no wolf is as quiet and fast as you.”

“Then why would I be the chieftain?”

“I knew it, but I said it anyway.”

“Saying something strange again….”

Gargal mumbled like that and closed his eyes tightly. Geo, although it had only been a short time, stroked Gargal’s forehead and scratched his chin as if he was used to it. Gargal’s face relaxed as if he was feeling quite refreshed.

“Hmm, good. Very good… Please do below the ear too. Ooh, that’s good there.”

“He is a very demanding customer.”

Argio continued to scratch him after teasing him for no reason. Arka looked at Gargal with a smile on his face and then knelt down next to Geo.

I didn't mean to scratch it, but the two guys looked quite amusing.

“They say humans scratch fur so well, and it really is.”

“Humans are the best form of being able to cool all beasts.”

“When you say things like that….”

Arka said in a whisper.

“You don’t seem human.”

“Okay, then what does it look like?”

“Something that imitates a human.”

“That could be the case.”

“You keep saying that.”

“Because I always accept all diversity.”

To put it positively, he was free of prejudice, and to put it negatively, he was spineless.

The title of 'ordinary human' has long since gone out the window since he evolved into a portrait, but at least Geo himself is open-minded enough to think otherwise.

“Anything is fine.”

All you had to do was look at it the way you wanted to.

“Aren’t we always living in our own world?”

“It’s not particularly human to like difficult and ambiguous words.”

“Then I guess you’re not human.”

It was good that it didn't fall into one category.

“…….”

“I respect you.”

Geo had no intention of defining himself as one thing. He had never done so before, and he never planned to do so again. Why should he, who was so multi-talented and capable of being anything, be confined to one image?

That wouldn't be very fun.

* * *

Hearing the rumor, the fox came.

“I wonder if you will not show mercy to us too!”

“No, this kind of reaction is surprising.”

Geo was impressed.

“Does the fox here know how to disguise itself as a human?”

“Ah, it’s not enough, but it’s the magic we’re best at. It’s a technique that our ancestors used a lot when they fought against humans in the past, so I guess it’s been passed down, haha!”

“But why did you come to me disguised as a human?”

“Of course it’s to win favor! Living things open their hearts the fastest when they take on the same form. There are often exceptions, but it’s a time-honored and universal characteristic of living things.”

“Aha, so that’s why.”

Contrary to the sinister image that came to mind when he was called a swindler, the fox tribe chief who came to see him was very cheerful and cool. Argio stared at him quietly.

‘… And yet, it’s amazing in a way that I can feel like a fraud like this.’

Was it because of his sharp, torn face? Or was it because of that shallow smile? His face may have played a part, but the overall atmosphere he gave off was a bit sinister and very suspicious.

That's what's interesting.

“So you came to me pretending to be a human?”

“It might be rude to say this at first, but we, the Fox Tribe, also have empty stomachs!”

The face of the fox tribe chieftain, disguised as a human woman, soon became clouded.

“And there are cubs that haven’t even reached adulthood, not only in the wolf clan but also among us. The adults who have developed immunity won’t die no matter what they eat, but the cubs still have very weak immune systems. They have a minimal resistance to poison in their mother’s body… but it’s just enough to keep them from dying right after they’re born.”

“Oh, that’s a sad story.”

“Yes, to be honest, I brought this up because I wanted to get your sympathy. But I’m not lying. First of all, the fox tribe is not as strong as the wolf tribe. They can’t study something and neutralize poison like the crows.”

The fox tribe chief laughed awkwardly.

“All the Fox Tribe can do is feed them the right poison at the right time to force them to build up their resistance. However, too many cubs die before the ‘right time’ comes. If things continue like this, the Fox Tribe… will likely be on the path to extinction… That’s why I came here.”

“Hmm, the baby foxes are really cute. I would like to see your cute children. Would you invite me? I think the foxes’ anxiety will be relieved if I visit in the name of the chief.”

“Oh, of course! If you allow me, I will do my best to serve you!”

The skill of rubbing palms was amazing.

“…….”

But I'm shaking.

“Look here, Gargal.”

“…I wonder if this is a situation where I should get involved.”

“I just want to ask for additional opinions.”

“Okay, I’ll listen.”

“Do you think I could make more friends here?”

"…that…."

Gargal, the chieftain of the wolf tribe, saw the bright red human smiling as usual, and the fox tribe chieftain who turned pale and trembled every moment his sight was out of reach. It was the first time he had seen such a reaction from his enemy.

'But I understand.'

Gargal nudged the red human's back with his nose.

“…Help me.”

“Oh, is that okay?”

“There was no future for us anyway. The only path we could take was to find a way to die as painlessly as possible… and a grave as warm and cozy as possible.”

At the age of seven, he was not that old, but Gargal was the strongest and most decisive of the wolves, and was able to become the leader. He was often clumsy, but he was not a 'coward'.

Even so, there were many times when he would wag his tail like a coward in front of 'Geo'. It was not that he did not know what it meant, but they could not help it. The future was dark, and the hand extended was kind even if it was red.

“We hope for the future.”

The wolf would do anything for his family.

“You have to have a future to be able to choose. You have to have at least a chance. I already know that if I just die like a coward, I won’t be able to do anything.”

"so."

Argio laughed.

“Will you hold the hand of the evil spirit?”

I didn't think they wouldn't know.

'It may have been like that at first, but it must have gotten stranger as time went on.'

It was absurd that a human, a creature thought to be extinct in history, appeared alone, surrounded by silk and gold and silver treasures.

Moreover, from the first time they met, he wanted to hear about the history of the world, and the only things he was interested in were those related to the 'evil gods'. Even if information about their appearance was lost in the process of transmission, there were still plenty of things that could frighten them.

'Just like student Cha Ara did before, everyone was scared of me because I was a portrait.'

Did you say that it felt like it was on a different level?

'You piled up a mountain of poisonless meat that could no longer exist in this dimension.'

At the very least, he can travel across different dimensions, is likely a being from a time in history, and is powerful enough to make even the strongest wolf tribe's tail curl with just one strike. An evil deity with the smell of blood flowing out of it.

“…….”

“…….”

The greatest 'evil god' in history, or at least a being comparable to it.

“You were really scared of me?”

“…That’s true.”

The fox tribe chief, Rami, was seen trying hard to hide the fear in his wolf eyes. He was weak, but he was more intelligent than any other tribe, and he came here as the chief.

'Is it that desperate?'

Conflicts between animals also almost disappeared within a decade, as they were too busy fighting among themselves to protect and raise their newborn offspring.

The fox tribe was especially anxious, not knowing when they would be wiped out.

In the midst of all this, a ‘human’ appeared.

“It’s still scary, but….”

"but?"

He made his decision as the chieftain, in a benevolent and soothing voice.

“You treated us as friends.”

A wolf never abandons his family, nor betrays his friends.

“So, can you help me out a little more?”

“Hmm….”

“It would be meaningless for the Wolf Clan to survive alone. The unfortunate Fox Clan and the noble Crow Clan must survive together to have any meaning in enduring this long period of time.”

“You speak quite nicely.”

“Well, if you don’t like it, then don’t say anything!!”

“Ahahaha!”

Geo stroked the wolf's face repeatedly. It was so cute and adorable that he couldn't help it.

“You really are a coward!”

What is this weak human being afraid of that he is acting like this?

“Chief of the Fox Tribe, what would you like me to call you?”

“You can call me Ra, Rami! It’s not a fake name, it’s my real name. If you give me a chance, I promise that we’ll all do our best to please you!”

“Don’t worry, I don’t break promises that easily.”

Geo was a pretty gentle devil.

'I'm a little glad that my notoriety has spread this far.'

He never denied himself as an evil god. On the contrary, he loved it. The river of blood, made up of his own blood and that of his enemies, was something that an evil divinity should and could not help but welcome.

Geo smiled happily, not knowing that the future would be a little difficult because of this.

“I thought I would be forgotten in the back alleys of history, but I feel good knowing that everyone knows me.”

“My tastes are a bit unusual….”

“Gargal, if you have something to say, speak louder.”

“Oh, I didn’t say anything.”

“If my friend does that, then it must be like that?”

Argio looked back at the fox tribe chieftain, Rami.

“Let me show you the way.”

"ah…."

“I will give you the help you want.”

There was only one thing Geo wanted from him.

“And be my friend.”

Let's live happily.

* * *

A crow, a food duck, flew towards Gargal, who was left alone.

“Is that your decision?”

“Elder Balf.”

It was the crow chieftain, Balf.

“There was a very strong smell of blood on him. He is a man who enjoys mercy and has no heart to spare towards his enemies. If he is truly ‘Erased Anger’… his feelings towards us will not be very good either.”

“…….”

“Even if it’s not ‘Erased Anger’, it’s the same. That’s not a human. It’s a giant nature imitating a human, and it’s anger and pain. And yet it lies so easily. It means it’s not an obedient being, but an evil traitor. Is that okay?”

“I chose the future.”

“I see….”

Balf felt sorry.

“Do you think he can tell the difference between a friend and a slave?”

Gargal blinked his eyes for a long time at the words of the adult who had helped him in every way since he was young. There was no way he wouldn't be afraid of something flashy and bloody that imitated humans.

'I would have felt better if you were a ghost.'

But he clearly had hot blood flowing from him, a beating heart, a tongue to taste, a stomach to fill. Gargal felt weak in the face of that living privilege.

Eventually, Gargal confirmed the existence of something bright red.

“He has bestowed protection on our children.”

“It might be an evil blessing.”

“More than anything, it smelled like sunshine.”

“…Sunshine?”

“It had a rich and sweet scent.”

Gargal closed his eyes tightly.

“Warm, soft, fluffy….”

I can still smell it vividly.

“…It was such a reassuring smell that I wanted to swallow it.”

“Wolves are so stupidly intuitive.”

The crow sighed deeply.

“I understand what you mean.”

“Are you going?”

“We need to look into it more, if we want to have our own future.”

“Take care.”

“You go and take a look too.”

Foodie!

The crow flew up.

“…….”

Gargal looked in the direction where the fox tribe was.

“…anything would be better than now.”

Of course, pain and anger were better than a world full of death.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (226)

226

Episode 226

"welcome!!"

Ppaang-!

Pollen burst and greeted Geo.

“We have cleaned and tidied the caves so that our valued guests can stay comfortably.”

“Are you tired from coming here? I have prepared some children to fan you.”

“If there’s anything you want, please let me know at any time!”

The fox tribe chieftain Rami looked at her people who were disguised as humans and welcoming their 'guests', then glanced at Geo's reaction. As expected, she rubbed her hands together and smiled with a sour face.

“We have already prepared our caves for your convenience. Please feel free to look around as much as you like. We cannot afford to treat you to a meal, but we are happy to provide you with this minimal service.”

“Oh, I see.”

Geo looked around.

“It’s a very different atmosphere from the wolf tribe?”

“Haha, wolf people aren’t really interested in making a den. Above all, wolves are strong both physically and mentally, so they can live without any problems if they just make a cave, but we fox people are really weak.”

Rami pretended to look sad.

“We get sick if we don’t have a soft bed, and we get depressed easily if our nest isn’t bright. That’s why we decorate our dens as much as possible.”

“Interesting story. What about the Crows?”

“Because they are the smallest of the species, their nests are also small. They build round nests like eggs using various branches, leaves, mud, and their own feathers that they have collected from nature.”

I would say this is the house with the best value for money.

“Of course, it collapses and breaks down easily, but that is why the crows make every tree in this forest their home and move frequently.”

“Is it okay to think of the entire forest as a home?”

“They also have the most ideal map of this forest, because we take advantage of the fact that we can fly to places that are too dangerous to go to.”

“I see….”

Certainly, the fox den felt completely different from the gloomy pupils of the wolf tribe. The world must have been destroyed, but it was full of all kinds of gold and silver treasures, and the area was neat and brightly organized.

“And growing plants.”

“Ah, that’s….”

Rami smiled as she looked at the plants placed here and there.

“These are purifying plants that help with breathing. Although they don’t make as great a device as the Crow Tribe, the Fox Tribe is not lacking in brainpower either.”

“You can’t breathe without this? I thought you crossed the Black Forest to meet me without any equipment, Rami.”

“I am the chieftain! This is the seat for the strongest and most intelligent fox. Of course, I am not the only one who can withstand the poison of the Black Forest. There are others who mainly work outside, hunting and gathering.”

“Hmm.”

Geo turned his gaze to the foxes who were watching him with smiling faces. They were still a little pale, as if they were scared, and their smiles were a little shaky, but I could tell they were doing their best.

“Are foxes really this good at disguising themselves?”

“Specializing in disguise is a great advantage for our fox tribe!”

“I see!”

Geo thought to himself in the forced, friendly atmosphere.

'So cute.'

And it was burdensome.

No matter how Argioa sees himself, he would cast 'My al-Banya', but his characteristics as Sergio or Giovanni shouted 'This doesn't seem to be it'. He stroked his chin, enjoying the contradictory emotions at the same time.

“Are all of these people adults?”

“Yes, that’s right. I put them aside because immature children might make mistakes.”

“Oh, you don’t have to be so afraid of me.”

“…….”

“How sweet.”

When I praised her for her uniqueness, Rami's face turned pale. It was clear that she had deliberately hidden her young children under the pretext that they were 'useless', fearing that the being in front of her might do something harmful to them.

Geo thought again.

'It's really cute.'

So what should I do about this?

'To be honest, I'm a bit… embarrassed.'

These Geo guys all had a strong sense of 'let's just do it and see'. Their specialty was assuming the worst and the best and then pushing forward at the right time.

The problem was their reaction. The wolf clan didn't show any fear, so at least they weren't sorry.

'But these kids are so scared of me.'

While doing so, he was begging with both hands and feet together to please. That desperate gesture of asking for mercy made Geo, who was not 100% pure Argio, feel awkward.

If he had shown even 5% of the sincerity he is showing now, he would have thought to push forward without a conscience, saying, "If we were breathing in the same space, are we now friends?"

"……."

In a situation like now, if he had said, "Hey, do you want to be my friend?", it was obvious that the reply he would get would have been, "Yes, I'll be your faithful scrubber, so just let me live!" Geo decided to bury the offer of pen pals deep in his heart for the time being.

This kind of inconvenient favor was a very ambiguous concept to Geo. The person who was doing the favor was in a pitiful position, and even if he wanted to repay it out of gratitude, there was a high probability that he would not welcome it.

'What should I usually do in this situation…?'

It was rare for Geo to stutter.

"……."

"……."

Look at this cold silence, so awkward for me and terrifying for them.

How should we deal with those who neither confront us head-on like wolves nor watch us stealthily like crows, but who assume an attitude of submission that we have never desired?

"Hmm."

Argio, who had done nothing but vent his anger as an evil spirit, was troubled.

“Okay, first of all….”

Geo decided to start by feeding him rice.

“You said you were hungry?”

“…Ah, yes! Could you please have mercy on us and show us mercy? We will do our best to grant you everything you wish…!”

“The wolves said that any meat that wasn’t poisonous would suffice.”

“! Same goes for us, it’s more than enough!”

All of the creatures that can be hunted or gathered in the Black Forest are poisonous, and these days even those are gradually decreasing in number. Or they are just monsters that the Fox Tribe would never be able to hunt.

“If you give me a chance…!”

“Don’t worry, I’ve already decided to give it to you.”

But just giving was not to his liking. Even though it seemed difficult at the time, Geo wanted to be friends with them, and more than anything, a one-sided 'given' relationship was not to his liking.

'Should I give it a try?'

It's a shame, but I don't think we'll be able to have a comfortable relationship right away.

Geo soon decided to propose a 'trade' to appease the foxes who were rolling around on the floor. It was a trick that took advantage of the fact that if there was something to give and receive, the other person would feel much more at ease.

'I just so happen to have someone I'm looking for.'

No matter how much time passes, I don't know why, but I can't hear the voice calling me anymore.

'How can you be so laid-back that you ask me to come?'

In the end, Geo had to find the person who had called him. He had no intention of letting go of a valuable talent who could become a new friend.

‘It could be a complicated matter, but with the help of the local residents, it could be easily resolved… .’

Geo smiled brightly and bent down to meet the gaze of the fox tribe chieftain, Rami.

"ruler."

“…….”

“What do you think?”

She had the form of a human woman, and was quite small compared to Geo. Geo tilted his head slightly as they made friendly eye contact. He spoke in a quiet voice so as not to sound threatening.

“But if you give a gift, there should be something in return….”

“…….”

“What do you think?”

“…He was also properly prepared.”

"hmm?"

You knew what I was going to say and prepared for it, right?

“Although most of the prepared foxes are old and waiting for the day to die… I, I am still seven years old and in the position of chief, but I am still young. I am tender and in the best condition among the foxes, so I am sure there will be no shortage of food.”

“Hey, wait a minute.”

"yes…!"

“…….”

Argio remembered it belatedly.

"…ah."

By the way, there was also a story about an 'evil spirit' eating people alive.

* * *

Geo eventually asked for help from Sankalut, an evil spirit like him.

“If you help me, I will throw a blood festival.”

“Mr. Geo?”

“Have you ever heard of Seonji Haejangguk?”

“…Why on earth is it called a blood festival?”

“I can also give you sausages with blood in them.”

“No, but I mean, your choice of words from earlier was a bit… Is it because you’re an evil spirit?”

“I want to hear your opinion.”

Joo-hyun, who had Sankalut as his bodyguard, came along and made several tackles, but Geo didn't hear about them right away. He was facing a difficult situation in his life.

The red snake tilted its head at Geo's appearance.

“What’s wrong? You seem uncomfortable.”

“My children are afraid of me.”

“Do you think it’s natural?”

“It’s a problem because it’s not something that comes naturally to me. Judging by your reaction, it’s obvious that you’re not going to be of any help to me.”

“The sudden persecution makes me feel wronged.”

“I feel wronged too.”

He was not immune to the awkward, broken atmosphere that the Fox Tribe had displayed.

Argio had been more accustomed to complete rejection, wariness, or anger. He had never experienced children being so kind to him and yet so sweet.

“They thought I would naturally eat them.”

“What on earth are you doing in the ‘Animal Kingdom’….”

“I feel really wronged, my friend.”

I knew there were rumors about it, but I never actually heard of Argio eating a person. When I heard the story from the wolf Gargal, he was just happy, thinking, 'My notoriety is like this.'

“Could it be that I was punished by heaven for sucking honey?”

“…….”

Joo-hyun smiled silently and put the Sankalut that was wrapped around his neck down on the table. After confirming where he was,

Sankalut straightened up and faced Joo-hyun with his eyes wide open.

“So you’re going to throw me away as a snack for the devil? I never imagined that our friendship would go this far. I’m sure my body won’t taste good.”

“It must taste good since it was made by Mr. Geo. Above all, I didn’t put Mr. Sankalut on the table to give Mr. Geo something to eat.”

Sankalut did not believe it.

“You think I’m a fool. Humans enjoy their meals at the table. And Mr. Geo is a divinity who enjoys eating. I’m going to be eaten. I’m going to be chewed and eaten. Please spare me. I’m useful.”

“I just put it there because that’s where we are at the table. I think the person that Geo-ssi wants to ask for advice from this time is Mr. Sankalut. I meant to ask him to leave it out.”

“You’re lying. I don’t want to be eaten. Please upload it again.”

“I wasn’t lying. No, I was just afraid of some evil spirit being placed on the table….”

“This is Geo’s stomach. This is the table. I’m going to be eaten. You liars, you promised to send me home if I kept my promise, but you lied to me. I feel betrayed.”

“My vocabulary is improving day by day.”

Geo pretended to sob at Joo-hyun's embarrassed expression while explaining his condition.

“To Sankalut, my table seems like a platform for offerings to the gods. The table has a history of what has been placed on it.”

“Is this something that will even make history? Besides, Mr. Sankalut has eaten at this table many times before, so it’s hard to understand why he’s scared now.”

“Because there was something else to eat back then. There were so many foods that were much tastier than his, he probably didn’t think it would be his turn. He even gave him a meal. He probably thought that since it was a sign of permission to attend, the chances of him being eaten were low.”

“I think that gods who enjoy having fun need to be re-educated about common sense if they want to live on Earth. Their way of thinking is so strange that I can’t keep up with it….”

But somehow I understood.

'So this is what Mr. Yoo Seong-un said.'

As a curator, he had repeatedly warned us how different the way humans and Mysteries think is. What might seem like meaningless behavior to humans could be a huge insult to Mysteries, so he told us to watch their 'rules' carefully so as not to make a mistake.

'If Mr. Geo hadn't helped me, I would have been in trouble a long time ago.'

Joo-hyun was a little embarrassed and stroked the snake's head. He had a duty to raise this evil spirit, who was ignorant of anything and had a bad temper, strong. He said soothingly.

“Try to get used to it this time. Mr. Geo will never eat the Sankalut seeds. If that’s the case, I’ll put them back on my neck.”

“Scary human… scary human….”

“I didn’t know it would be something to cry about.”

Geo intervened as he watched the snake shedding tears like beads.

“Crocodile tears.”

"aha."

He said that he was trying to provoke Joo-hyun's sympathy. I felt like that was the case, but I wasn't particularly angry. I was just curious about what kind of opinion Mr. Geo was trying to get.

“What have you been up to in the Animal Kingdom lately?”

“Mr. Joo-hyun, my honorable friend. Please listen to me.”

“It seems like your speech has become a lot more old-fashioned than usual… but, well, I’ll listen anyway.”

“So I went to my hometown….”

Joo-hyun's face became strangely crumpled as he listened to Geo's story.

“…….”

“Why are you angry?”

“Mr. Geo, aren’t you angry even though you’ve been accused of something like that?”

Joo-hyun also understood the fox tribe's position. What could they do when they were driven to a situation where death was the only thing left? Even if the opponent was an evil spirit, they would have to do their best in a desperate manner.

So what made Joo-Hyeon angry was the humans before the destruction who recorded 'Argio' as the worst monster. What kind of mean despicable act was that?

“Mr. Joohyun, don’t you know what I actually did in the past?”

“Even if you don’t know, there’s something you do know, we spent time together.”

He didn't know exactly what Argio had done, but he was sure that at least he hadn't done anything like cannibalism. Argio was a god of pure wrath, and he wouldn't have done something so wicked.

“If you think about it objectively, I don’t think they would eat humans who have nothing to eat. Livestock are raised on purpose to be able to eat a lot of meat, but I don’t think humans would be able to eat that much meat.”

“Yes, I am a gourmet.”

In the same vein, foxes that could disguise themselves as humans, communicate, and have nothing to eat were never intended to be eaten.

However, it was a difficult situation for Argio, who was enjoying the notoriety of the 'evil god' deeply engraved in history, to make excuses.

“It was obvious that you would be scared no matter what I said.”

It was too burdensome.

“He seemed quite scared, so I tried to offer him a deal in order to ease his tension, but he was so shocked that he suddenly became the sacrifice and ran away after giving him only food.”

“Even in that situation, I guess it’s very typical of Geo that he gave them food. But in that situation, was there anything Geo could trade with the Fox Tribe?”

“I was thinking of asking someone to find me. There was definitely someone calling me from the Animal Kingdom, but I couldn’t find them. So I tried to ask the locals for help.”

“It seems quite unusual for Mr. Geo to not be able to find the person who called him. People on Earth usually search for him easily, so is there a reason?”

“It’s literally hard to find the location. The voice that called me was too weak, and there were a lot of distorted specifications here and there because of the dungeon conversion… If you called me once more when I was in the ‘Animal Kingdom,’ I could recognize you right away, but it’s difficult for now.”

“By any chance… he’s not dead? I don’t want to think about it either, but the ‘Animal Kingdom’ that Mr. Geo mentioned is such a chaotic and dangerous place that I’m worried.”

“I don’t think he’s dead. But since it’s come to this, I feel like I have no choice but to go out and look for him myself.”

There was a limit to how much Geo could roam around the vast forest, and he couldn't leave Danawa Honey alone because he was worried that something might happen.

The reason he entrusted Dana with collecting Mia was because he knew that she would only pick out the souls and identify them.

'It's different from a full-scale exploration. It could be dangerous.'

It was the same for my children who had to navigate the Black Forest, and it was the same for the Black Forest that had to take care of my children. It was a matter of getting help from the residents who were familiar with the Black Forest without having to cause trouble for many people.

How great would it be if, in the process, we could also appease anxious beasts like the fox tribe?

“…….”

Thinking about that, Geo felt wronged once again.

“My children are afraid of me….”

“No, don’t cry.”

Joohyun was shocked.

'I have to see the evil spirit crying twice in one day.'

This absurd situation continued until Yoo Seong-un visited Joo-hyun's house.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (227)

227

Episode 227

“So what were you doing?”

Geo answered Yoo Seong-un's question.

“I was sharing my thoughts on how I could become wise.”

“It didn’t seem like he was doing any particularly healthy activities.”

Look, Joo-hyun was already completely exhausted and lying on the sofa. It seems like the time between the two evil spirits was very difficult for Joo-hyun, a man of upright life who had not yet adapted to the mysterious way of thinking.

Instead of Joo-hyun, Yoo Seong-woon took a seat at the table.

“So, to summarize….”

Argio, who has long been known as an 'evil spirit', was curious about how he would become friends with his friends in the 'Animal Kingdom'.

“Is that right?”

"you're right."

Geo nodded.

“Even up until the wolf tribe, I didn’t feel any sense of danger at all. I thought Gargal was afraid of me because he was quite a coward.”

“That guy must be really upset….”

“Yes, I was mistaken. It’s not that Gargal was a coward, it’s just that the wolf tribe was particularly tough. Because he accepted my existence so meekly, I ended up gaining arrogance about my social skills….”

“So the result was the fear of the fox tribe?”

“If I had known this would happen, I would have hidden it thoroughly from the beginning.”

Even if he said that, both Yoo Seong-un and Geo knew that Geo would not have made that choice. In reality, this situation was closer to a one-dimensional lament than regret.

"hmm…."

Yoo Seong-un rolled his eyes.

“How about feeding her your specialty, rice?”

“Oh, God of Heaven and Earth, I did not get through.”

“Your obsession with food has finally been shattered. I knew I would get in big trouble someday.”

“I don’t know if it was because my cooking skills were lacking, or if there was a problem with the menu selection. No matter how much I tried to coax and appease the fox tribe, it only became more terrified and could not put down its fear of me.”

“That’s normal….”

Most intelligent beings were afraid of the terrifying evil spirits of history, whether they were familiar meteors or strangely generous astronomical figures. Geo was deeply offended by those words.

“When I fed Cha Ara, a student who is part of Cha Sol’s family, her wariness toward me was definitely lowered. I trusted my cooking skills, but I was betrayed.”

“No, back then, we simply had no information about you. From the perspective of the fox tribe, they were encountering a living natural disaster that had eaten people long ago, formed rivers of blood, and done all sorts of bad things… Would you let your guard down if someone like that offered you delicious food?”

“It’s unfair.”

“Wouldn’t it be the wolf tribe that is most wronged in this situation?”

The parties involved were so tough that Geo decided, 'Ah, this much is okay, haha.'

Even those who were indifferent to Geo were probably unaware that Geo had never posed a single threat. Perhaps they thought it was a bit of mercy from the evil spirits, bestowed with interest.

“…….”

“…….”

In the midst of the silence that was almost a standoff, Sankalut opened his mouth.

“Give up.”

“As anyone may wish.”

“I think it would be quite unscrupulous to expect mere mortals not to fear the evil divinity recognized by dimensional time, even to someone like me who does not know much about how to interact with intelligent life forms.”

“It’s strange how your vocabulary improves every time you criticize someone. Is it because your interests and aptitudes match, Sankalut?”

“Yes, it’s fun.”

“Like an evil deity.”

“You too.”

Hahahoho.

It was really harmonious.

'It's scary.'

Although he was embarrassed by the conversation between the two gods, Yoo Seong-un took Sankalut's side.

“Even I think it’s too much. It’s the same with people, not to mention the divine. Unless you use brainwashing or charm skills, you can’t make someone who is deeply afraid of you comfortable in a short period of time. It would be even better if there was evidence proven by history.”

“Do you think so too, Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“If you get impatient and approach without being able to control your distance, you’ll only end up feeling more scared. I think about this every time, but Geo, you’re a bit… greedy.”

“Isn’t it obvious that it’s better to be able to enjoy anything?”

“You can do whatever you want, but the one thing that remains unchanged is that it won’t be easy unless you do something evil like control your mind.”

“…Is time really the only answer….”

“You look so urgent for no reason.”

Yoo Seong-un asked, crossing his arms.

“Is there a reason? You weren’t the type to force friendships. If you were scared, you left them alone, and if you became close, you accepted them as they were….”

“As Mr. Yoo Seong-un mentioned, it is just my greed.”

Argio let out a deep sigh.

“It’s because I thought of my family without thinking.”

“…Aha, so that’s why.”

I also knew the story of Yoo Seong-un and 'Argio'.

'You say you grew up in the Black Forest and had a fond time with your beast family.'

Even if it was a time when they couldn't communicate, there was no way they wouldn't love each other. Furthermore, the species in the 'animal kingdom' regard the 'evil god' as a kind of parental god, so to put it simply, the internal intimacy must have been immense.

'If we were to use a human analogy, it would be similar to an old man who thought he had lost all his blood relatives, only to find out that he had a distant blood relative. If you even think about it as a situation where that blood relative is a young boy, you can understand why he is so desperate to bite and suckle… .

That old man is a loan shark now. It was much more natural to think of his kindness as a simple whim rather than true love.

Strictly speaking, it was embarrassing to call them 'family', but it was a distant relationship that felt impossible, so it was natural to ask for mercy and good deeds. They would think of it as being treated more like pets than family or friends.

Still, he must be desperately trying to show off to his family who are starving to death. How pitiful must it be for a family that barely managed to survive in that harsh world?

“Uh… I guess it’s because their nature is animal. Even if they gain intelligence equivalent to humans, they’re still wolves and foxes, right? They seem to be much more intuitive in their reasoning and emotions than humans.”

“It certainly seems that way, seeing as the world was destroyed and all the humans died. It’s really strange, how the smarter you are at so many things, the more stupid your choices are… Really.”

Argio, who had been clicking his tongue, sat up from his chair.

“…I feel bad for continuing to make you scared, so I’ll stop being so greedy. If that scary old man who doesn’t even feel like family acts friendly, it’ll only be burdensome, and you’ll never be able to become close to him.”

“Did you read my mind?”

“Oh, our way of thinking is very similar. I’m glad about that.”

“Something feels uneasy.”

Anyway, Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“Try to be objective about yourself. I know what you’re trying to say, but ultimately, you’re a demon to those guys, not family or friends. You can get there someday, but it’ll be hard right now.”

“Let’s do that.”

Geo also admitted that he was hasty.

* * *

The crows were wise.

They remembered the longest history. They excelled in strategy, were most skilled in magic, and created various devices to protect their weak and light bodies.

There is no way that they would not know of the existence of the 'evil god'.

“…….”

I sat quietly on a tree branch and took in its presence with my eyes.

'If you are not human, why did you take on human form?'

The crow chieftain, Balf, was the first of the three to notice the existence of 'Geo'. He flew around the black forest tirelessly in an attempt to somehow maintain this world that was gradually falling apart.

Unfortunately, the crow did not have as good a sense of smell as the wolf or the fox. But he had excellent eyesight. He knew that the little black cloaked man, with its shadows and shadows, was not human.

‘They look no different from humans, but…’

Balf saw.

“…….”

A deep, bloody color.

I saw the great mystery within the noble skin that imitated the human body.

'Ah, he is a god.'

It was an unexpected guest who came to this ruined world.

The thick smell of blood that could be smelled even with the poor sense of smell, and the intense anger that filled the tips of her red hair. But a gentle voice. A kind gesture. A pretended light step… .

Balf, a 114-year-old crow who remembers countless histories, realized that he was 'Erased Fury'.

'It will be the end, or the beginning.'

It was either death or opportunity.

'What should I choose?'

No, will there ever be a chance to choose?

Balf knew the 'Erased Fury' in comparative detail. Not only did he devour living beings, he also consistently received living sacrifices from humans, and whenever he felt like it, he would go hunting and bring chaos to the world.

He is a cruel beast, and he enjoys taking the form of monsters and humans. And he creates battlefields that are as delicate and beautiful as they are. Balf felt fear.

'We are children born from his anger, but there is no guarantee that he will regard us in the same way. It is highly likely that he will not even recognize us. What kind of attachment would there be to a life that was born with just one step?'

If there was any silver lining, it was that 'Geo' had been interested in beast-like creatures for quite some time. What was so interesting about it? That beasts could speak?

"……."

But even that was worth it.

'… Even if we become slaves to the evil spirits, the lives of the present need mercy. Even if it means mortgaging the future, the important thing is to get a chance. Gargal seems to know that well.'

But that was not the best option, it was the lesser of two evils.

'If we are lucky, we will be guaranteed a good future, but we may end up being shackled by an evil deity and become his slaves. Even if it is inevitable for our generation, if we think of our descendants who will be born in the future, this too is one of the sins.'

Gargal, the chieftain of the wolf tribe, said that he would trust him since he treated him as a friend, but the crow tribe was not as honest as the wolf tribe. There was no need to cower and bow down like the fox tribe, but it was true that they had to be more cautious.

"……."

"Look here."

The evil spirit under the tree called me.

"Yes, you."

"Caw."

"You really have a lot on your mind."

"……."

"I don't know why everyone thinks so much."

"…What do you want?"

"I want you to be my friend."

Those words felt sincere, though.

'What can we see about God that we can be sure is true?'

That couldn't be done.

God was a great mystery that mortals could not resist. Even if they did not know, even if they knew, Balf was troubled by the fact that God's will would come true in the end. He thought and fell asleep.

After all, the evil spirit could put out their feeble lamps with a single gesture.

“The word friend is so empty.”

“So what are you waiting for me to say?”

“Your joy in everything frightens me. You took on a human form, but you were not human, which made us afraid. The words that come out of your mouth are like destiny, making the world tremble.”

“Yeah, what if you promise? Say you won’t hurt me.”

“I can’t even trust that, sorry.”

Those affectionate faces and hands could be made up as much as they wanted. They had no choice in the end. The fate that was set would come, so the remaining lives had to make proper preparations.

That's why the crow dared to make a suggestion.

“Please subjugate us.”

“What’s the difference between that and a slave?”

“Bind us to your soul. Treat us with your tongue, crush us with your hands. Bind us to a covenant so that we may be delighted and ecstatic at your one look.”

“You say scary things….”

“I earnestly ask for a deal, not mercy.”

“Oh, poor thing. You really think that’s a deal.”

The evil spirit laughed bitterly.

“I understand your concerns. Yes, incomprehensible favors tend to make others more fearful. When I speak of a price I can accept, those who are as fearful as you will feel relieved.”

He is a merciful anger.

“So I will decline.”

“…….”

“Don’t you have a lot of time, Balf?”

“…You are saying that we can rely on you completely.”

“I was born arrogant and do not know how to do something I don’t like. Why should I play the losing game when I know I will win in the end?”

“Oh, Divine, have you come to rule this place?”

“I came because I knew that this was a place where things could get better.”

The evil spirit narrowed his eyes.

“Yes, but if you are so anxious, I will ask you a favor. By doing this, I will be indebted to you, so that even if the disaster you are worried about strikes in the future, you will have something to say.”

“Please tell me, I will do as you wish.”

“Find the one who called me.”

It was the voice of the one who rules.

“Find out who brought me to this desolate and lonely homeland. It could be an animal, a human you have not seen, or something that is hiding and pretending to be dead.”

Who on earth brought this evil spirit back into the world?

‘… This means that there is someone who knows the true name of this evil spirit.’

The name of the cruel beast that even the old crow that lived for 114 years does not know. The one who knows it summoned the evil spirit of war and anger. And the evil spirit responded to the summoning and was now here in human form.

Is this the end or the beginning?

“…….”

Since God gave us a test, there was no room for choice.

“…I will find it.”

“I'll be looking forward to it.”

Balf flew up, sensing the beginning of a disaster.

* * *

“…….”

Geo rubbed his face.

'I guess I look a bit scary.'

What is this guy's impression?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (228)

228

Episode 228

Joo-hyun, who heard the story, said with a strange expression.

“…Wouldn’t it be better if you softened your speech a bit?”

“What can I do with my original speech like this?”

“So, I think we should try to do something about that.”

So isn't there something that Joohyun always says?

“These gods need to go to speech school.”

“I think I’m pretty good at speaking.”

“You know that’s not the problem. Whenever I hear Mr. Geo speak, there’s always something vague and ominous about it. Whether his intentions are good or bad, I have to say that I feel a little uneasy.”

“Hmm, what about Giovanni?”

“It’s a little better when it’s Giovanni, but it doesn’t seem that ordinary or clear. All three Geos have a tremendous sense of distance in their speech.”

When he was Sergio, he seemed like an ominous evil spirit imitating a human, but when he was Giovanni, he felt like a divine being born with a different nature. Argio in particular went without saying.

“No, why is there nothing to say?”

“I was afraid that if I told you, you would pretend to be hurt.”

Argio was truly like an evil spirit.

'I was also quite startled when I first met you.'

It felt completely different from Sergio's ominous voice that came out of the strange silence. The sweet voice that seemed to seep into my ears and brain was no different from that of a demon, and the golden eyes that held me were like those of a predator hunting for prey, and I hesitated back without realizing it.

‘This is the typical appearance of an evil spirit who seeks only his own pleasure…’

I also understood the feelings of the animal family beyond the frame.

“If you just keep talking like you are now, it seems like it’ll be halfway there. If you talk too much like an evil spirit, they won’t be able to shake off their fear easily. Just change the way you speak.”

“It’s not ‘like an evil god,’ it’s just an evil god.”

And this was inevitable.

“This is beyond my control.”

“I don’t understand, why?”

“I get filtered. I guess you could call it filtering.”

“……?”

Filtering?

“What… filtering? Are you saying that you are being forced to correct your speech and behavior, as Mr. Geo said just now? So you have no choice but to speak like that in front of those poor animal friends?”

“I understand.”

“Why on earth?”

“It’s in the same vein as the ‘Black Cloak’ that you can see in the picture frame, which is unusually blunt and ominous. It took me quite some time to be able to feel the difference in that gap.”

This was something I learned from meeting the collection staff in the past.

“I think it’s because I’m a portrait artist, but if I don’t go through some kind of management, there seem to be problems with the atmosphere, tone, and other aspects. It’s the same no matter what geo you go with.”

By organizing it through the framed 'Portrait of Geo', which can be said to be the most central door, not only the status of the guy but also the speech and atmosphere have been considerably purified.

Even taking that into account, there are still many parts that can be called 'horror story-like', but it's better than not doing it at all.

“But if you were to move straight from this cabin or be locked in a frame and greet each other, it would be different. You would become a more typical and stereotypical ‘Geo.’ I can’t even feel that sense of discomfort.”

“So that’s what filtering is….”

It was absurd.

“Why on earth does this happen?”

“Because I’m a portrait?”

“How can you not do that?”

“I don’t think it will be easy.”

"oh my god."

Joohyun felt a little sorry for Geo.

‘… It’s even more regrettable because it seems to be related to the identity of a portrait.’

Isn't that what a portrait is? It's basically a painting that captures someone's most ideal appearance.

In short, Joo-Hyeon thought that Geo was being 'filtered' in that way because he had been stuffed with the appearance or perception of a certain moment.

“…….”

At the same time, I felt embarrassed.

“Then it seems like it would be really difficult.”

“I guess so?”

“Well, wouldn’t you like to be a benevolent monarch?”

“The evil spirit?”

“At least, I don’t think Mr. Geo can be a compassionate friend to them. Mr. Geo wants an equal relationship, but no matter how much their fear is washed away, their awe will remain.”

“Let’s leave that as one of the joys of the future.”

Geo, who had been criticized by his friends for being impatient, decided to take his time after reflecting sufficiently.

It's just that Joo-hyun and Yoo-sung-un are particularly deep and thoughtful, so they feel pressured to 'define relationships and existence', but Geo has no intention of forcing that on his animal friends.

Anything was fun, and that was fine. For himself and those around him.

“Couldn’t it be possible for someone to be both a subject and a friend, and also a friend and family?”

“As expected, Mr. Geo is secretly very greedy.”

“It’s only natural that it’s better to have whatever you can have.”

This was especially true for Argio.

“…….”

“It looks like you have something to say.”

“That’s dopamine addiction.”

“Oh, quiet.”

How dare you degrade sacred social acts to something like chemical secretions?

* * *

There were once people who were called heroes.

All the beasts of the world became monsters and attacked everything human, and as a result, humans had to live in hunger and confusion. People groaned under the contagious disease that was eating away their life and soul, and prayed earnestly to the strongest among them.

“Please kill that cruel beast.”

“Ah, heroes sent down by God….”

“Please, I beg you. Please end this war.”

There were countless sacrifices.

They were called heroes, but in the end, they were just mere humans. They screamed in pain and had nightmares out of fear. It was not uncommon for heroes to have conflicts with each other and kill each other.

Above all, they learned the truth.

“…Is this real?”

“No, it must be the Demon King’s trick to deceive us. Don’t be fooled, everyone.”

“But… you know, this isn’t some kind of manipulation.”

The evil gods they regarded as evil spirits were actually monsters born of human ignorance and selfishness. Everything was brought about by humans. They burned the forest without knowing that the saint was a saint, and without knowing that the last opportunity was an opportunity, and that was the beginning of all these disasters.

“What should I do…?”

“…I, I. I really don’t think this is right.”

The heroes were confused.

“Then why are we heroes?”

It was because they were ordinary, good people who had come this far through hardship.

They came this far with the sole belief of saving the world, their families, and their friends. Although they were driven to the edge and could not become perfect 'heroes', they still had the reason to distinguish between right and wrong.

“That doesn’t make sense. It was our fault from the beginning. The fact that beasts began to speak human language was also due to the greed of humans in the past… and it’s the same now.”

“What on earth did we come all this way for? We shed so much blood, had so many nightmares, just to protect those pesky humans who left us to our deaths…? Why on earth?”

“It’s horrible, it’s really horrible. I don’t think I can fight anymore. If this is a world where we have to repeat such filthy sins to survive, then it would be better if it just collapsed like this!”

Also, there were those who bit the tooth.

“You call that talking? How did we get here? What does it have to do with us that some people in the past committed such great mistakes that things got to this point?”

“Have you forgotten our role? We have come this far, working hard to make the world a better place than it is now! It is true that humans in the past have sinned, but why can’t we see that the fallen saints are committing even greater sins?”

“Even if we have to repeat sins in order to survive, only a small number of people commit those sins. Only the perpetrators and us have to deal with it. It’s not right for innocent people to die!”

It was a long conflict, but in the end, there was only one conclusion.

“…….”

“…I sealed the evil spirit, and that’s the story for what happens next.”

First, the immediate disaster had to be stopped.

“We all came here because we wanted to protect something. Our families, our friends, our lovers. Even though we learned the dirty and vile truth, we were still here… in the end, it was for ourselves.”

In this way, the heroes finally succeeded in sealing the evil god.

“…Something feels strange.”

“The curse of the beasts never ends.”

“The epidemic is still the same…!”

Someone shouted.

“Of course, all these disasters were started by humans!!”

The most fundamental cause was in the primordial nature that constituted this world, the second cause was the arbitrarily burning of the saint who was blocking that terrible nature, and the last cause was the fault of humans who could not even distinguish between the beginning and the process and passed all causes and responsibilities onto the 'evil god'.

“But, but…! Even though it is true that it was our human sins that turned the saint into a fallen divinity, the evil god Argio also spread countless disasters! He incited the beasts and committed massacres! You all know that, don’t you!”

“That’s a useless story! Open your eyes wide and check the story of the ruins properly! Argio was just added to the process, not the original cause! Even if we seal him away, there’s no way we can pick up the disaster that humans have already caused!”

“Then why on earth did we have to die, get hurt, and suffer like that!!!”

Their cries of anguish consumed them with rage.

Argio, known as the evil spirit of pain and wrath, had already been sealed, but now, even among the heroes in front of the evil spirit's tomb, where everything was over, conflict was taking place.

Isn't this the most terrible disaster of all?

“…….”

“…….”

However, it is true that the evil spirit was sealed.

“…Let’s go back to the village.”

“I have to report to the palace.”

“At least the evil spirit has been sealed, so the resulting massacre will be prevented.”

“That’s all we did.”

Although there were many disasters that had not been resolved and there were mountains of daunting tasks, they still sealed Argio, who was committing massacres. With that alone, the world would become a much easier place to live.

But even that was different from what was expected.

“Argio appeared in Jibia Village!”

“What are you talking about, we clearly sealed the evil spirit…!”

“A tremendous massacre has occurred!”

“That’s ridiculous…!”

Those countless massacres.

“…….”

“You have to go right now, the seal might be broken!”

“I am the wizard who led the seal.”

"but…!"

“If it was released, there’s no way I wouldn’t know.”

The many massacres and wars that were thought to be the work of Argio were all the result of humans who were greedy and angry, using the cruel god as an excuse. Although not all of them, many of them were like that.

“It’s all meaningless now.”

The heroes were disillusioned.

“If I had known this would happen, I wouldn’t have sealed him. I wouldn’t have gone through all that sacrifice and suffering to seal the evil spirit. I would have just let this world burn down….”

“…Don’t say that. There were many problems that arose because of Argio, but there were also many villages that he personally led and ruined. We prevented bigger problems.”

“…I, I don’t know.”

Also, the people's anger due to the ongoing disaster was directed at the heroes.

“You said you sealed the evil spirit!”

“They must have lied, they must have been deceived by the evil spirit!”

“No, they could have become the minions of the evil spirit. Those shameless things…!”

“We have to burn them all!!”

Fear also turned against them.

“Now everything is ruined, they are coming to kill us.”

“I thought it was strange from the beginning. Look, how can those powers and abilities be human?”

“They are clearly monsters too, we should kill them first so as not to incur trouble!!”

There were heroes who resisted him, but they eventually died. No matter how strong their power and abilities were, in the end they were just ordinary people. I was shocked by the betrayal of the people I was trying to protect and collapsed.

And even more heroes chose to run away and evade. They tried to hide and pretend that they had never been a 'hero', and they moved from place to place, even though they were always being chased.

“…….”

But they were all caught.

"…under…."

Except for one person.

It was thanks to him hiding in the tomb of the evil god, but since he was a fairly famous 'hero', the man was eventually discovered as well. It was because those who assumed he was the evil god's subordinate formed a punitive force and visited the tomb of the evil god.

“So you’re here, you evil spirit’s follower…!”

“Kill the author! He will become the seed of evil spirits, kill the author!!”

“You are a subversive seed spreading nonsense!!”

That was the man's last chance to die.

“No, it’s a perfect location.”

“Senior Elder…! Are you going to let this guy live?”

“It’s useful. Bring all the materials you previously held onto.”

"no way…."

“We are writing new history here.”

The 'materials' including him ended up becoming the pillars of the 'new world'.

“If we use these monstrous creatures, it is not impossible to take away the power of the gods….”

So the man was locked in a coffin shaped like a goddess. Perhaps that was not the only thing that happened, but he was unable to make any proper judgments while being caught between tentacles and blades that tore at his veins and cut at his flesh.

“Kuaaaahhh…! Aaaaahhh!! Aaaaahhhh!!!”

“I guess you still have the strength to scream, that’s a really good response. This time, you can really make it.”

“Khaaaah…!!”

“Seal it tightly, so that it can never escape, no matter how long it takes.”

“Please, please stop…!!”

“We… will kill God from now on. And let us create a new paradise.”

“Ugh…! Ugh….”

The man thought, his mind clouded with pain and hatred.

'Everything will fail in the end.'

It was a world that was a mess from beginning to end, and even the life that made up that world was a mess. I don't know what they plan to do with the materials and 'heroes' including him, but it won't work.

And so darkness comes.

“…….”

As time goes by.

“…….”

Even if it flows again.

“…Ugh….”

… why can't I die?

The man was trapped in a crown of thorns and cried tears of blood.

* * *

He summoned the evil spirit at all costs.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (229)

229

Episode 229

“I found the place that seemed most likely.”

The crow brought good news.

“There is nothing in the forest that can call you, and the false world above is no longer inhabitable. We have looked around this narrow space… and concluded that your tomb is the only place that will do.”

“My grave?”

“It’s called the Tomb of the Evil Spirit. I believe it’s where you once stayed.”

"aha…."

Geo is getting a little flustered.

“Why on earth would it be there?”

At best, he thought he was hiding in the Black Forest, which he had not yet seen, or in the fake world above. Wherever he stayed, it would at least be much more comfortable and safe than the 'home' where Argio had stayed.

“Are you sure it’ll be there?”

“I decided that it would be impossible to summon you otherwise.”

“I understand.”

Then, it is highly likely that he did not stay there intentionally.

“Thank you for your kind reply, Balf.”

“…It is an honor.”

“Haven’t you been there yourself?”

Balf answered cautiously.

“It was not a space where we, the mere mortals, could dare to enter. If you wish, I will try, but it would be like turning the impossible into the possible, and as unpleasant as it may be, I had no choice but to put the safety of the crows first.”

“So you ran away?”

How wise.

'If it doesn't work out, you have to run away.'

Argio smiled faintly as he always did.

“Good job.”

“…I apologize for bringing you results you may not be entirely satisfied with.”

“That doesn’t mean I will eat you, so don’t be so afraid. Since you brought good results, I will also give you a gift. What do you wish for?”

“May I, relying on your mercy, dare to ask you a question?”

“By all means, my friend.”

“…….”

The crow, which had been silent as if gathering its thoughts, soon opened its mouth.

“Do you like this world?”

“That’s a peculiar question.”

Geo rubbed his chin.

“How could I not like it, since it is my hometown? I love this place, and I have loved it for a very long time, and I will continue to love it for eternity to come. Is that a sufficient answer?”

“Would you like to become the god of this place again?”

“Our beast friends are truly fearless.”

Even though they saw him as an 'evil god', they easily handed over their fate to him. The wolf tribe could do that because once they believed in him, they believed in him forever, and the fox tribe was pushed to the edge of a cliff and fell flat on their faces.

The crow's choice was unexpected.

“Why did you make that choice?”

“It’s the same answer as Gargal, the chieftain of the wolves.”

“Give me the future? I know how to handle it.”

"…you are…."

The crow that had been mumbling confessed his opinion.

“You have shown a very different side to the anger in history.”

“It could be made up.”

“All life is made up, in order to live.”

It didn't really matter to the crow whether the mercy and affection he had shown so far were genuine or fake. What mattered to him was 'whether that embrace was a lie or real.'

And the crows concluded that the evil spirit's mercy and affection must be real, because he was already so different from the wrath of history. They saw hope in the mere fact that such an 'imitation' could be made.

“I am the one who remembers the longest history of all the beasts left in the Black Forest. I also know the most about the ‘Erased Fury’. In history, you were a sinister demon mad with hatred, a monster with hundreds of arms, a scourge that devoured the world with tens of thousands of giant mouths.”

But the evil spirit I saw in person was completely different.

“You are not a demon, but a living being. You have hundreds of arms full of hatred that cannot be seen, and although you may express cruel interest with a mouth as small as a human, you do not cruelly eat anyone alive.”

“Look, I’m sorry, but you guys are not very tasty. What are you talking about with your thick fur and thin body?”

“Even making such jokes is not in line with the records of history. It may be a small mercy towards a small creature, but I think you want me to be friendly to you.”

“…….”

Geo thought to himself.

‘… Our beast friends are also quite good at hitting me… .’

This feeling of seeing Joo-hyun and Yoo-seong-un laughing as if he was talking nonsense. It was welcome, yet strange.

'It wasn't that the two were becoming similar, but that I was sculpting them into that form?'

The crow continued, separate from Geo's carefree thoughts.

“We dared to say with one voice that we were satisfied because you showed us that you are a being capable of mercy and affection and that it is real. We heard and saw for ourselves that it could be possible.”

If only he weren't a demon of endless death, pain, and wrath. That alone would have made their future much more hopeful than the one that lay before them.

“So please rule over us. Return to this barren, strangely twisted land of rebellion. Although the reason you came to our homeland was because of someone whose name I cannot even remember… Now we beg for mercy.”

“You guys are so brave. And smart.”

He was so cute that I wanted to stroke his fluffy fur. He was much bigger than the crows on Earth and had fuller feathers.

'But that won't do. Be patient, your opponent is a 114-year-old chieftain.'

Basically, perhaps because he had a strong sense of 'my child', Argio was filled with a desire to love her regardless of her age or position. He saved each other's face with miraculous patience.

“…The evil spirit that the dimension rejected and sealed now wishes to become the main character. This is also an interesting story. I have great love for my hometown, so you don’t have to be so afraid.”

“Will you become our god?”

“It has already been so. You were born because of my death.”

“…….”

Raven Chief Balf blinked.

“…were we born from death and not from your footsteps?”

"okay."

“You are truly human.”

“That’s right.”

“The sin is… great.”

Balf was truly wise and intelligent. He seemed to realize what the humans had done just from Geo's short words. Then he bowed his head.

“I see my father.”

“Yes, son.”

It can be so wonderful.

“You may think of me as whatever you want. If you want a friend, I will look like that. If you want a parent, I will look like that. If you want a god who will remake the world, I will look like that.”

That was because Geo was so talented. He was so multi-talented that Joo-hyun praised him and Yoo-sung-woon applauded him. Geo, who could do everything from A to Z, had a different image depending on who was looking.

So you too, right?

“See as you wish.”

“I will do that.”

The crow saw the greed that the evil spirit in front of him had behind his interest. How greedy he was. And how colorful he was. The crow chief Balf did not doubt the evil spirit's omniscience and power.

“What would you like me to call you?”

“I am Geoilse.”

“…Is it ‘Geo’?”

The crow tilted its head.

“You call yourself a beast.”

“You know what? I don’t have a name.”

He abandoned the name he was given at birth, and since then, no one has given Argio a 'name'. He lived his whole life as a cruel beast, and Geo was quite satisfied with that.

“So whatever you call me will become my name.”

This is the pinnacle of convenience. The uniqueness that cannot be found anywhere else in the world gave Geo a lot of pleasure. He loved his diversity, which allowed him to be anything.

“Isn’t it comfortable?”

“How can life not have a name?”

“No, everything in the world can have my name.”

“I see. That’s along the same lines as before.”

“You are truly a very clever crow.”

“Thank you, Father.”

“That’s fine too.”

Geo let his imagination run wild.

“Okay, if it goes like this….”

“…….”

“…Good.”

And then he laughed.

“I like it.”

Now I have an idea of what to do.

No, actually, I had been planning this for quite some time. It was just that my hometown changed unexpectedly, so it took a little more time to adapt and apply new variables.

“Is it okay for me to turn this world upside down as I please?”

“I believe things will get better than they are now.”

“You don’t believe, you know. And I affirm your reasoning.”

“Can I ask what you plan to do?”

“I will do what I do best.”

It was a simple task.

“I’ll draw a picture and feel angry.”

Geo was going to turn this place into a dungeon and become its demon lord.

“Do you like amusement parks?”

* * *

"meow."

Back at Argio's 'house', Dana was sitting at the entrance.

"meow."

“Yeah, good job.”

He held my daughter's cheek and stroked it gently.

“How many Mia’s have you met?”

“Mu ...

“There are certainly a lot of them, perhaps because the world is ending.”

It was now up to Geo to decide what to do with the missing children. Many of the creatures left in this narrow and barren land agreed to this, so Geo had to live up to their expectations.

'Before that, I need to see the face of the guy who called me.'

Even though I was standing on this land, I could no longer hear the voice of the person who had first called Geo. As Joo-hyun said, I thought that maybe he had died in the meantime, but well, it didn't seem like someone who knew the name 'Argio' would die that easily.

I guess I'll have to see for myself what that means.

“Dana, go back home. There are probably more Mia’s in here than you think. There are probably a lot of them that don’t suit your fancy, so there’s no need to get tired.”

“I’m so confused….”

“Okay, let’s have a nice meal when we get back.”

When Geo grabbed the hem of his black cloak and opened the shadow, Dana disappeared inside. She would probably go back to her father and act all cute until Geo prepared a meal for her.

'It's cute.'

It is true that cuteness and size are proportional, and Dana, who had grown as large as a wolf on Earth, was a joy to hug. The feeling of being buried in the fluffy fur that the sun god teddy bear had taken care of was indescribable.

Geo called Honey, feeling proud of his daughter's fur.

“Honey, I’m sure you’ll need something.”

“Gulp.”

Honey popped out of the hood as if it was nothing and sat back down on Geo's shoulder. Geo stepped into the 'house', impressed once again by her majestic appearance.

“…It’s been a really long time. It must have been unmanaged for a while, but it’s amazing that it still exists even after the world was destroyed. I don’t think there was any special management….”

Now called the Tomb of the Demon God, it was the most dangerous place in this dimension, with all sorts of curses, poisons, and traps remaining, but Geo still felt filled with longing.

It's because it's full of memories.

“Good.”

I was happy.

'When I was really mad with rage, my house didn't even feel like home.'

The evil deity of the century, created by the suffering of countless saints, along with the anger and cries of the people. That was the 'Argio' that the people of the world knew.

It sometimes took the form of a human being, but more often it was that of a monster or a demon. And like that sinister form, it had no reason, only anger and hatred.

So it was natural that Argio, who had regained everything he had and overcome what was not his, would be delighted with the newfound longing.

“…….”

The 'house' was quiet.

“……?”

And it was even more of a mess than I remembered.

“What is this, my house is like this.”

“Kung kung kung….”

“What kind of evil author would do such a thing? Has a tectonic shift occurred here as well?”

Why has My Sweet Home turned into a den?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (230)

230

Episode 230

“It’s so nice to see you like this!”

At the words of the fox tribe chieftain Rami, the wolf tribe chieftain, Gargal wrinkled the bridge of his nose.

“Why are you still in human form?”

“That’s to please the evil spirits. We, the fox tribe, are always ready to cling to the strong. If I can secure even a little mercy, I don’t mind continuing to disguise myself!”

“A calculating child….”

“Wolves must be stupid.”

The crow chieftain, Balf, sighed at the sight of the two young chieftains baring their teeth and growling.

“Stop it. We didn’t come here to talk nonsense. Do you think it’s okay for the chieftains who are responsible for a tribe to act like this?”

“…I’m sorry, sir.”

"sorry…."

The crow Balf nodded at the sight of the two guys crouching.

“Then let’s share our opinions.”

They had gathered together to discuss how to deal with the 'evil spirit'.

Considering that this had not happened for nearly 30 years because they had been busy managing and protecting their own race, I could see how much the existence of the evil spirit meant to them.

The first to speak was the crow Balf.

“I have decided to worship him as my parent god. It is a decision I made after discussing it with the other crows. He is certainly a dangerous being and will bring disaster… but there is always calm in the middle of a storm. I have decided that if I can stay within that, it will not be difficult to show loyalty.”

When the crow tribe's position was revealed, the wolf, who had been watching along with the fox, also opened his mouth.

“We wolves decided to trust him.”

“Is that what the wolves mean by ‘trust’? Treating him as a friend and family member?”

“I know how dangerous he is.”

I can't tell you how terrifying it was when I first saw him. A human being who was clearly extinct stood in the middle of a black forest like a stuffed animal. He also had a complex and strange body odor.

It didn't take long for Gargal to assume he was an evil spirit, but there were too many differences between the evil spirits he knew of in history and the 'Geo' before him. He offered kind hospitality.

“I at least judged that the kindness he showed us was not a lie. The other wolves were wary and fearful at first, but now they have developed trust. Geo treated us as friends and gave us more than that… so we will act accordingly.”

“How foolish.”

Fox Rami squinted her eyes as if she was displeased with the wolf's opinion.

“The devil is the devil, and to consider such a gigantic being as a friend is almost blasphemous. The honesty of wolves can be an advantage, but it can also be a disadvantage?”

“Krrrr…!! What a good choice you guys made to say that!! At best, you’re just imitating humans and wagging your tails…!!”

“I told you, he really is a very angry guy. He’s so unrefined.”

The fox tribe chieftain pretended to scold him.

“He is a god, a god who will rule over this world and us who live there after the creator disappeared. Don’t you think so, Mr. Balf?”

“I don’t think we need to bow down too much, but… I agree with that opinion. A minimum of reverence and distance towards God would be essential for us mere mortals.”

“As Mr. Balf says, Gargal. Of course, to wolves who love friendship and trust, our fox tribe’s attitude may seem too cowardly.”

But they prided themselves on having taken a wise stance.

“Do you know what I’m saying? The god who came to us now is in a situation where it’s hard to have affection for this world. That’s the history.”

They do not know how the 'evil spirit' came into being. Some of those who recorded said that he was a demon that existed from the beginning, while others said that he was a disaster caused by the selfishness of humans.

But the important thing is that he was a being who was rejected by all life in this dimension and was even sealed. We don't know why or how that seal was released, or what emotions he had for coming to us, but if he was in a good mood, it would be a strange situation.

Even though they are now considered the parents of their race, they were born only as a way to express their anger towards the world, and that was never their purpose.

“I thought he would be furious when he first appeared. Or he would make some evil suggestions or make this already broken world even worse.”

“But didn’t you do that?”

“That’s why I’m afraid. Because I don’t understand.”

Why did he show us mercy and affection?

“That’s ridiculous.”

The unconvincing favor only made them more anxious.

“I thought his favor was more likely to be capricious. Didn’t you feel it? His actions and attention were centered around interest. That meant that if we didn’t interest him, he might be abandoned in no time.”

“Ha, that’s why you wag your tail and rub your front paws like that? You don’t have any pride, do you?”

“Isn’t it because we’re not foolish wolves who can’t live without pride? I’m proud to say that it’s better than being a hunting dog that wags its tail to show its friend that it’s good without even considering the possible outcomes, like wolves.”

“You are a fox who does not know honor… The value and weight of the faith that we wolves have is worth risking our lives for. Even if Geo treats us horribly because he lost interest in us, it is only because we are responsible for our decisions.”

“So, the question is, does honor guarantee the safety of the race?”

So the fox tribe lay flat on its stomach and wagged its tail.

“I would show my stomach to protect my family and children. Fortunately, he has refused to eat intelligent creatures that can communicate with language for the time being. If you rely on his mercy and rub your front paws hard, you will be rewarded.”

“Reward? What reward? To become a pet fox?”

“If I could have a pet fox, that would be great. That’s my goal right now, Gargal!”

The foxes were cornered at the edge of a cliff.

“If I can get my life and at least a little mercy, what’s the big deal about having a pet fox? No, no. Keeping a pet means giving it basic affection. I need to get that affection.”

“Those disgusting guys….”

As the wolf crumpled his face as if he was very tired, the crow Balf stopped the two from getting excited.

“You two should calm down.”

“…….”

“…….”

“Yeah, like that.”

I understand that everyone was greatly shaken by the sudden arrival of hope or disaster while they were just waiting to meet death. However, in the current situation, if they were to be swept away by emotions like that, they would not be able to come to a proper conclusion.

“I think all of our opinions have value.”

Everyone was doing their best.

“But there is one thing in common.”

“What is that, sir?”

“That is, we must serve him.”

The crow Balf saw the wolf.

“I think you both agree with this.”

“…Yes.”

The fox snorted at the wolf's affirmation.

“Oh, you see. Even wolves end up waggling their tails and talking big like they’re friends.”

“The expression ‘friend’ was first used by Geo. In the end, what we want is a trustworthy ruler and his followers. Just like the wolves have been since the beginning.”

“Anyway, wolves are old-fashioned.”

“Don’t you know that these guys are like this?”

Unlike the fox tribe, which came together late in life to survive, the wolf tribe enjoyed living in a pack from birth. Following a strong leader and protecting and leading the weaker family was a tradition engraved in the wolves' souls.

That is why even now the wolves were ready to serve the new leader. It was a form of family and army, completely different from the vassal relationship that humans talk about. That is why they put trust in their mouths.

“If you serve them, they can be family, and if they can be family, they can be friends.”

Gargal didn't know, but it was similar to what Geo had said before. He continued with a stern face.

“Well, that would be a different story for foxes who would even sell their families if it was dangerous.”

“It’s not about selling out, it’s about strategy. The fox tribe has never actually committed such a huge scam against their own kind. It’s mostly just a ruse to fool humans.”

“Ouch, that’s gross.”

“What?”

When signs of fighting appeared again, Balf spoke to the fox Rami.

“Even so, I don’t think you need to bow down too much, Rami. If he truly becomes the new god of this world, he will surely receive gifts and mercy.”

“But how can we guarantee that? He is a cruel beast, and we, the little ones, can be swept away at any moment by his whim. The foxes are desperate, not even able to protect their cubs right now.”

It had to be desperate.

“It’s hard to find foxes that have successfully bred these days. Even when they are born, they die so easily. Do you know what on earth made those foxes dig deeper into their poisonous dens to bury the bodies of their young?”

Of the three races, the one that came closest to extinction was the fox tribe. While the wolves and crows were preparing for their imminent death, the fox tribe was in a position where they were waiting for immediate death.

“We are not as strong as wolves, so we have less ability to digest poison, and we do not have the skills to detoxify ourselves like crows. It is common for foxes to be caught up in the trap, as the only magic they can do is disguise themselves.”

"…ramie…."

“Do you know why we watch the weak cubs suffer and feed them poison to build up their tolerance? I have to do my best, and I can do anything for that.”

“…….”

Balf and Gargal were silent. Balf, as an adult who had once cared for the two young chieftains, and Gargal, as a fierce friend who had always fought with bared teeth, had no choice but to keep his mouth shut.

The end of the world was so miserable and tragic for the surviving creatures.

“…What we do best is to please the strong. Wolves can be the fangs of the evil god, crows can be the eyes, but foxes….”

“…I understand what you mean.”

In the end, her decision could not be said to be wrong.

“I was just saying this out of concern. If you were to try to please the evil spirits too much, you would be abandoned just as easily. However, if you thought everything through before making a decision, I will respect that as well.”

"…thank you."

“I hope that the coming new era will make us good subjects.”

The wolf chuckled.

“It’ll be better than it is now.”

“Yeah, of course.”

So the animals came together in agreement.

* * *

“Looking at it….”

Geo blinked a couple of times as he looked around the house.

“It looks like someone has been trespassing in my house.”

“Gurrrr….”

“Don’t be angry.”

In a dangerous world, it was natural for thieves to break into empty houses.

“I just don’t know who did this.”

It wasn't a very peaceful place to begin with, but isn't it becoming too ominous?

The ruins he remembers were ruins where beasts and nature lived together in harmony, although there were many inconveniences while he was alive, and when he became an evil spirit, it was a ghost house where poison and ominous energy permeated every corner.

'But this is not what I remember.'

A sight of blood and flesh flying around. Research materials scattered everywhere. And a gruesome scene that looked like something had been made into a mess. Geo suddenly felt as if this was the end of the most horrible group of fanatics he could imagine.

'There are also traces of them fighting each other and destroying themselves.'

He was able to define this look later.

“…I guess this was humanity’s last desperate attempt.”

“Gulp….”

“I feel bitter.”

You guys always walk a path that only brings pain to each other.

* * *

The man suddenly thought he heard a human voice.

“…….”

…human being?

Who else is left?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (231)

231

Episode 231

The wizards of this world had a wicked side.

They did anything to become perfect, to reach the end. They did things that would make others horrified. It was common for them to use innocent people as test subjects, making them worse than dying.

They abandoned the ruined world and sought out 'heroes' to explore a new world.

“These are definitely sturdy.”

“Elder, what should we do with this guy?”

“He’s the strongest of the monsters, so he’s perfect for the center. Hey, put it up there. I’ll take care of it myself.”

“Yes, Elder.”

The court magicians conducted experiments in Argio's tomb, where the evil spirit was sealed.

Even things that had been previously restricted due to ethical issues were easily accomplished by them, perhaps because the world was in chaos or because no one was coming to block the tomb of the evil spirit.

“It’s a place where the evil spirits are sealed, so it’s full of energy. Yes, good. It’s the perfect place for us to write a new history. If we use these monsters and the power of the evil spirits, it won’t be a dream to drag the god down to this chaotic land….”

That was nonsense.

'Drag God down to the ground?'

You want to kill the Creator, take away His power, and create a new world? Instead of trying to fix and cultivate this land where their souls have taken root, you want to throw it away and create something else?

'Stupid things.'

There's no way that can happen.

“What, what is this…!”

“Why on earth are you doing this! What was the problem!!”

“No, there was no problem! I definitely succeeded in drawing out the power of the Lord!”

“Then why on earth is it like this…!”

Naturally, their attempt ended in failure.

The man, locked in a narrow, dark thorny prison, did not know the exact circumstances.

However, the wizards failed to kill the god, and as a result, the god abandoned this world, and it was only guessed that they tried to create a 'new world' with the power of the creator that they had copied, but gave birth to a terrible hell.

'It should have been natural from the beginning.'

Never could a human harm a god.

'They call us monsters, so it seems they've forgotten what materials they used.'

Idiots, really fucking stupid kids.

‘Even though I was a human and not a monster…’

They were too strong to be called human, but they were human nonetheless. Even a three-year-old can understand that a being born from the Lord cannot harm him.

Above all, would the spirit of the evil god, which was used as the same material, have been cooperative with the magicians?

'That can't be true.'

Amidst the pain, screams, and cries, laughter rose towards the wizards. It wasn't just the men. All the 'materials' who were trapped in this thorny prison with me did their best to taunt the wizards.

“You failed, you idiots!!”

“Ugh… Eeheehee, keeheeheeheeheeheek!!”

“Losers who aren’t even worth their name…!!”

“Die! Die! Die!!!”

Amidst the blood, flesh, and remains of evil spirits, the wizards gradually lost their sanity.

“Wasn’t it you, Elder, who came up with this plan from the beginning!!”

“What?! Are you saying I’m wrong now?!”

“Yes, you’re wrong! You’re wrong! The world is ruined beyond repair!!”

“These guys don’t even know the topic and they dare…!!”

“It wouldn’t have been enough to pray to God, so why did you make him get kicked out!!”

“Come to me right now, I’ll rip your mouth off!!”

They killed and killed each other amid the laughter of the 'materials'. It was natural, since they were the only ones left in the world. It seemed that all the humans outside the Black Forest had long since died.

The losers of a ruined world. Losers. They carried out all sorts of terrible experiments, but ended up ruining the world even more than before. This miserable and shabby remark fit them very well.

“…….”

“…Ugh, ugh….”

“Ugh….”

Even some who survived the chaos died, unable to endure the poison of the Black Forest. How absurd must it have been for those noble wizards to vomit and groan?

So all the wizards die.

“Kuaaaah…! Aah, ugh, uh….”

“…Ughhhh….”

“Coolook, woof. Keuhuk…!”

The 'materials' trapped in the thorn prison then slowly began to die.

“… Next time, when I see you….”

“…in the arms of God….”

Those who should have died long ago finally died long after the wizards who had kept them alive had died, and only when even the life support devices had worn out and broken down. The smell of blood was thick.

“…….”

And only men remained.

“…Why, why?”

Please, no.

“Ahhh… Aaaah ...

Rattling, rattling rattling—!!!

“Kill me, please…!!! Kill me!!! It hurts, it hurts!!! Please!!!!”

What on earth could the reason be?

The words of the elder wizard who said he would use him as the 'center' as the strongest hero suddenly flashed through his mind, but even he was overcome by great anger, despair, and fear and could not continue his thoughts.

“Kuaaaah!! Aaaaahhhh!! Gulp, gulp, keuheuuuugh…! Ugh……!”

He writhe in pain, scream in fear at being left alone, and then faint from exhaustion. It had been a long time since he had embraced death, but in the end, the man could not die.

“…….”

And for a time that was close to eternity, the man was simply immersed in darkness. Not even thinking, occasionally squirming like a bug with all its limbs torn off, occasionally regaining his sense of reason, which was worse than not having it, and then falling back into emptiness.

“…….”

He no longer knew what he was saying, what he was thinking, or what his condition was.

One day, I counted the time that had passed because I was bored beyond the pain and fear. I stopped counting after 742 years and 9 months, 3 days, 2 hours, and 19 seconds.

“…….”

Sometimes I would suddenly become caught up in fantasy. I would think back to the days when I lived like a human being.

I felt resentment toward the 'materials' close to me who had all but me come to the mercy of death, and I also felt a loneliness that was worse than pain. Was I really the only one left in the world?

Is there no one left?

And then.

“……?”

I heard something, like footsteps.

“…Ah, uh, uh….”

I heard a voice that seemed to be soothing and comforting someone.

'Who is it?'

No, it didn't matter.

Anyone would be fine. A human who survived the disaster, an explorer from a new era reborn after countless years, or a descendant of beasts that could speak.

'Please, please me.'

If you could just look at me once.

“…….”

"…this."

“…….”

“Are you alive?”

"…eww…."

“Poor thing.”

A voice outside the prison cell continues, perhaps aware of the desperate gasp for breath.

“Hey, calm down. I’ll get it out soon.”

It was finally over.

* * *

"…ah…."

It was a long time before the man first came to his senses.

“Are you awake?”

“…All, you…?”

“Now you’re acting more human.”

“…….”

Eyes, ah, in the eyes.

Something appeared in my sight.

“…Ah, hug….”

“Do you need a hug? Or maybe I’m an illusion?”

“Please hug me. Just once… Please, please….”

“You still seem scared. It’s okay, I’m not delusional.”

It had been so long since I had seen anything that my eyes were sore. It was disgustingly strange to see that what was flowing from my eyes was not blood but ordinary tears. My breathing was suffocating and my hands and feet were shaking.

Something I dared not see with my eyes came to him gently and hugged him, unlike the rough and sharp voice. The body temperature was cold. However, the hand patting his back was warm and the soothing voice was gentle.

“Yeah, it must have been scary.”

“…….”

Feeling dazed.

Just like that, I lost consciousness again.

* * *

After that, the man opened his eyes and lost consciousness countless times.

It was only after a while, when he realized that this was the 182nd time he had come to his senses, that the man finally realized something.

During that time, the person in front of him continued to comfort him.

“…….”

“…….”

“Oh my god.”

A young man with bright red hair looked at him with a grin.

“You can see me now, can’t you?”

"…ah…."

The man nodded his head awkwardly.

“…I, I… How much I….”

“It must have been quite some time.”

“…….”

“Okay, let’s take a look.”

A young man approached and held out his hand.

“Can I hold your hand?”

"…yes."

“Okay, come here to me.”

The body temperature, which should have felt quite cold, was somehow familiar to the man. No, he had become accustomed to it. I was just blankly staring at him, not knowing how long he had been by my side, when the young man leisurely took my hand.

Then he gently swept and pressed hard. For a moment, my body trembled, but soon calmed down.

“Look, this is the palm of your hand.”

"…yes."

“This is a finger, and here is a nail. One, two, three, four, five. There are five of them in total.”

He spoke softly and slowly, as if he were teaching a newborn baby how to live.

“If you press and release this spot, do you see it turn yellow and then turn red again?”

"…yes."

“It means that your blood is flowing. Can you feel your bones, nerves, and veins reaching all the way to your fingertips?”

"…yes."

“Well done, great job.”

The young man repeated similar actions after that.

“This is your foot. Here is the sole, and these little ones are your toes. They’re much shorter than your fingers, right? Don’t worry, that’s just how it is. I have the same thing.”

“…….”

“Okay, my fingertips just touched the soles of your feet. How many do you think there are in total?”

"…three?"

“Hmm, good. Very good. Does it hurt when I press here?”

“No, it’s just… cool.”

“Where is this place?”

“There too.”

“Good. Now, take my hand. Hold me with this hand and the other hand. Then, plant your feet on the ground. You may not be able to put strength into your legs yet, so don't worry and just lean on me."

The young man grabbed his hand and lifted him up. He was staggering, so he naturally leaned on the young man. Although he was a little smaller than me, the young man supported him firmly like a tree rooted in the ground.

"Can you feel the cool, smooth texture of the ground through the skin on your soles? Okay, now apply pressure to those toes. Starting with the biggest one, then the one next to it, and the one next to it, and so on, all the way to the last one."

"……."

"That's really great."

After that process, when the man was standing alone, the young man took a step away.

"Good."

"……."

"Now, can you see me?"

"…I can see it."

It was a tall young man.

I thought it had been a long time since I had seen someone so tall that they were almost eye-to-eye with me. Well, in that situation, what could be a long time? It just felt that way.

Her pale skin, as if she had never seen the sun before, had visible veins.

Her voluminous hair was tied in a long knot and hung to one side, and her neck was adorned with a trinket of glittering gold and jewels.

Smooth fabrics that gently wrap around the body, and the thick fur of an animal. And bare feet like mine. A neck adorned with jewelry. Lips with a sharp smile. A nose. And… .

“…….”

Even the eyes are filled with melted gold.

“…Okay, I can see it.”

“Good job!”

The young man laughed.

“Congratulations on becoming human again!”

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (232)

232

Episode 232

It took a really long time just to get here.

“…Uh, how long did it take…?”

“Hmm, well. About 281 years?”

It was such a long time that I couldn't help but ask, 'What on earth are you talking about?', but it wasn't a lie.

It might have been unfamiliar to Sergio, who was an ordinary art teacher, or Giovanni, who was a short-lived priest, but Gio, who now has a strong ego as the evil god Argio, spent that not-so-long or short time with this man without any major problems.

But even for a demon who had been around for centuries, it was strange to take the time to help someone. Thanks to that, it was a refreshing and enjoyable experience.

“And then about two months and 21 days passed.”

"…yes?"

“I know it seems hard to believe, but it’s true.”

It took longer than expected to spend on the man's rehabilitation, but there were no major problems. The wizards who used Geo's house as a laboratory did something to make time pass quickly here.

'There was a reason my house stood strong during those difficult times.'

Considering that the man's condition was more serious than expected, Geo worked on it a little more.

In the 281 years, 2 months, and 21 days that have passed, the Black Forest outside of this ruins has only had about 94 years, while the Earth has only had about 3 days.

Geo became proud.

“It was me who woke you up so quickly. If someone else had helped you, it wouldn’t have taken this long. It probably took at least 1,000 years just to get here.”

“Go, thank you.”

“What about gratitude.”

Geo was very grateful to the man who had turned back into a 'human'.

'There were times when I thought I should give up because it was too delicious.'

Fortunately, the man, whether he had a strong will to live, or a belief associated with it, or was just born with a strong nature, followed Geo's teachings to the end and made it this far.

‘I even asked to be killed several times… .’

Well, I don't remember.

“…….”

If this is the case, I think you might have even forgotten that I called you, but I wonder what will happen.

'What a pity.'

If he had been in good condition, he would have immediately killed his friend, but even the most evil of the evil gods, Argio, would not have thought of committing such a terrible fraud on someone with such a weak mind and body.

Now that we've succeeded in making him into a human, it's time to make him into a pig.

And to turn a person into a pig, a minimal level of trust was required.

“Excuse me, can I talk to you about a few things?”

“…Oh, of course.”

“I wonder what your name is.”

"…name…."

“You don’t remember?”

“…No, I remember.”

Even though the conversation itself seemed a bit shaky, perhaps because it had been a while, the man continued his speech admirably. It was nothing short of a miracle.

“It’s Ater.”

“That’s a good name.”

It is a name that uses 'Ah', which means firmness, and 'Ter', which means right belief. I don't know who gave it the name, but it seems like a name full of sincerity. It seems like he received complete love and trust.

'We're not close enough to ask about each other's family circumstances.'

As I was thinking that way, the man asked a question.

“May I know your name?”

“Oh, right. You can call me Geo.”

"…yes?"

“Geo.”

“That’s, a bit… but.”

“Ahahaha!”

Man, the name 'Geo' seemed to sound strange to Ater too.

“Then you can call me whatever you want.”

“No, but doesn’t that seem a bit off?”

“Sorry, I don’t have a name.”

Ather kept his mouth shut.

“…….”

“Why do you have that look on your face?”

"sorry."

“You’ve never done anything to make me feel sorry. You look like you’ll say everything you want to say, but you’re surprisingly delicate. I guess you shouldn’t judge someone just by looking at their face, huh?”

“Then should I curse my benefactor and say I’m crazy…?”

“Oh, that’s really great. That’s really special.”

The first impression I got when Geo made Ater into something that looked like a human was that he seemed like a 'quite sarcastic person'.

Sharp eyes and firm lips. He had strong convictions and the impression that he was strong enough to shout out no even if a knife was put to his throat.

It seems that he may have twisted his own fate.

'I guess my impression was right.'

Maybe I had a talent for physiognomy.

'It's not ordinary to be able to respond like that even at this point.'

All Geo did was make the man human.

Ather must still have memories of being in that cramped prison for hundreds or even thousands of years. But it was all a man's ability that allowed him to have such an easy conversation.

When I thought about it that way, it was clear that he was not an ordinary person.

“…….”

And the evil deity vaguely knew this face.

‘…Was this person among the leading heroes…?’

A sincere person who took care of his comrades while shouting loudly and showing a sensitive nature. He was a hero that the evil god Argio had seen with his eyes and fought against directly.

Geo recalled it 31 years after he began helping the man with his rehab exercises.

'Anyway, leaving that aside.'

He stared at Ather.

“…….”

“…Well, if you look at it that way, it’s not wrong. How can you call a person a beast?”

“I guess I should have majored in physiognomy.”

"yes?"

“Let’s see.”

Geo checked the man's condition.

“I think you might be hungry.”

"…ah."

Ather blinked as if he had never thought of it.

“…Yes, that’s right. Eat….”

“You have to do it, if you’re human.”

“…….”

“Do you feel rejected?”

“…That’s not true.”

“That’s fortunate!”

This is a miracle.

It was good news. It must have been a long time since the food had entered the stomach, and it must have been moldy, but he didn't feel any aversion to eating. I couldn't help but admire his mental strength.

“If you really didn’t like it, I would have tried to find another way.”

I briefly considered an IV injection, but I doubted that the suffering human would be happy with needles being stuck in his body, so Geo could also inject some energy directly into his body, just as he had done for 281 years.

But even if you don't die from the nutritional injections, you're still hungry.

“I’ve been taking good care of you. Even though you’re on an empty stomach, you shouldn’t have any problems eating anything. If you think of something you want to eat, just tell me.”

“…Can you make food just by telling me what you want to eat? No, did the world get any better while I was in there? Those, those guys… said the world was ruined.”

“Oh, don’t worry. It really is a total mess.”

“…….”

Ater, who had been looking at Geo as if he was dumbfounded, groaned.

“…Before the wizards died, they said that the world was gradually becoming more and more corrupt and narrow. Could you tell me what the current state of the world is?”

“It’s not hard to tell.”

During her time in the 'Animal Kingdom', Geo didn't only take care of men.

“Do you know the world that the court magicians forcibly created?”

“…Oh, you mean that fake world? Another world above the earth?”

“I see you.”

“While I was locked in there, I kept hearing the wizards talking. I was so out of it that I don’t remember much, but when I was feeling better… I tried to memorize as much information as I could in case I could escape the prison.”

“What a great thing?”

Even though he was locked up in that horrible prison, he didn't give up, but instead, he was able to burn with determination, saying, "Let's just wait and see when I get out, you little bastards." There must have been a reason why he was able to recover so quickly despite being locked up for such a long time.

“Anyway, let’s talk about that fake world.”

"yes."

“A new civilization has emerged.”

"…ah…."

“Is this the face you expected?”

“…No, it’s not that I expected it, it’s just something I imagined.”

What could Ater have done while confined in that narrow prison for so long?

“All I could do with my spare time was dream, hallucinate, or think deeply. Among them, I imagined, ‘What must the outside of this ruins be like by now?’”

He laughed hollowly.

“I thought they might all be dead….”

“Are you resentful?”

“What do you mean?”

“Even though civilization has come, it hasn’t come to your rescue sooner.”

“…A little bit.”

The man hesitated and then continued.

“But that’s not their fault. If a new civilization had come up there, the world we originally lived in would have become fake and underground. Then, the history of that time would have been erased. The existence of these ruins would have been forgotten naturally.”

“Good reasoning, but I have something else to add.”

“Oh, I will listen.”

“The new civilization that we have today was created not as long ago as you think. Maybe 19 years?”

While staying at the ruins, Geo went outside and helped the beasts survive in various ways.

The beasts managed to build the world with the help of Geo, who appeared from time to time, and it wasn't long before they were able to build a civilization on the level of previous humans.

“And until then, they had been living in the Black Forest.”

“…How do people live in the Black Forest? Even the great court magicians couldn’t endure it and died…?”

“I’m sorry, but these residents are closer to beasts than the humans

you know.”

“Ah, ah, ahhh….”

Ather shook his head as if he was convinced.

“…Eww….”

“Oh, is this okay? Am I supposed to be comforting you again?”

“…It’s not a seizure, so don’t worry….”

“Poor thing.”

It seemed painful for the old-timers to accept the fact that the beasts had become the new humans, pushing out the humans at all costs. Sergio could sympathize with that feeling, knowing it well enough.

'There was a time when I was so delusional.'

When I first went outside the portrait studio, I was shocked to see a fire-breathing office worker. I also thought that this must be how the elderly who couldn't keep up with the times felt.

'This person is probably worse than me.'

At least Sergio was similar in appearance. On the other hand, Ather, a race that fought against humanity as mortal enemies, became a new human race, so how absurd and disappointing would it be? I don't know for sure, but it would be incredibly confusing.

Ater, who had been delirious for a long time under Geo's tacit consent, asked.

“Well, then. How much civilization is it? Is it similar to the civilization I remember?”

“Uh… I think it’s a little better than that.”

Creating a fake world into another real world would have been impossible without Argio's help from the beginning.

Argio's tastes were reflected quite a bit, and it seemed like it would be better than when the hero Ater was alive.

'Because at that time, the war had been going on for a long time.'

Wasn't it a time when they fought by stripping away everything they had, including resources? It seemed unfamiliar to Ather, since it was brought up to the time before the war, which could be called the golden age of this dimension.

“Well, so if there’s something you want to eat, you can say whatever it is.”

“…How could such a civilization be established in just 19 years?”

“No, the reconstruction itself started 94 years ago. What they did was not to build everything from scratch, but to truly ‘reconstruct’, so the time it took for a civilization to be created was bound to be short. The 19 years I mentioned refers to the period during which the current civilization was stabilized.”

“Then it would be following the civilization of the pre-war era. I don’t know if it would fit the standards of the beasts, but they would have adapted or changed on their own, so….”

“What about food?”

“…Why are you so obsessed with eating?”

“People need to eat.”

“That’s not wrong, but….”

“…….”

“…….”

Geo laughed lightly as usual at the sudden silence.

“You have a face that seems to have something to say. So tell me, I will listen to you personally.”

“…No, I….”

“What are you so afraid of?”

"…jeon…."

Ather hesitated and said.

“…Geo.”

"okay."

“…….”

I moved my lips because I couldn't find the words. My tongue was stiff with hesitation.

Should I really put this in my mouth? Ater thought absentmindedly as he raised his gaze and stared at the young man’s face, analyzing it.

He had the appearance of a noble bloodline. He was adorned with all kinds of jewels, and his clothes, made of cloth and leather, were free and beautiful, though their origins were unknown. At the same time, he seemed to be a very strong man.

but.

“…….”

How can such a person exist in this world, in this situation, in this space?

'However, is it really possible to take care of just me for nearly 300 years?'

That is not the case. Even if the opponent is a new human race that emerged from a new era, there is a limit to what a human can endure, and this person has gone far beyond that line.

When I lowered my head, I saw light clothing covering my body. I also saw lumps of minerals that would be disadvantageous in battle. I also saw bare feet standing smoothly as if nothing had happened in this rough, cursed, and trap-filled labyrinth.

“…….”

In the first place, would there be any more humans left? Beings of that type, of the same type as me. Thinking back to what he had said, I thought it was probably not true.

'This man explained to me the history of the present age from a human perspective. Without the slightest embarrassment, as if it were a given, very naturally… .'

Ather knew what kind of concept and nature of existence this was.

Finally, he called out the name of the being that took the form of a polite young man before his eyes.

“…Ar, Geo.”

“That’s great.”

"…ah…."

It really was.

Ather, who had been staring blankly at the evil spirit for a long time, bit his twisted lips and cried.

“…….”

It was a face that didn't even seem to know why she was crying.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (233)

233

Episode 233

My mind was filled with thoughts and distracting ideas to the point where I felt suffocated.

“…I, you….”

At first I thought it was human.

But as time went by, I realized that wasn't the case. The average lifespan of a human was 50 years, and no matter how well they lived, it was difficult to live past 100. I thought that the new species might have a long lifespan, but it was impossible.

What human being could have created a horrible flesh-eating human being for 281 years?

“…I remember calling you.”

It just occurred to me so late.

“I, I… definitely… in that narrow prison cell….”

“You called me.”

“I was scared. I was so lonely being alone, and the pain had lasted so long that I was dizzy. I didn’t want to be like this anymore. I couldn’t stand it anymore….”

“I think you’ve held out long enough.”

“…….”

“Do you regret it?”

“…….”

“It looks a little like that.”

It felt quite horrible that I had brought back into the world the evil spirit that I had sealed with so much blood and flesh. But at the same time, I was grateful. In the end, it was only this evil spirit that reached out to his screams and calls.

I felt conflicting emotions at the same time.

“…….”

Ather bit his lips and took a deep breath as he asked.

“…Why are you in human form?”

“Because I was human.”

“…That’s right, that’s right. That’s right….”

“There are other reasons, too.”

Argio wasn't perfect.

“I, hmm. What should I say?”

“……?”

“It’s not a complete piece.”

“…a complete piece?”

“Only 99 out of 100 are gathered together.”

It's less of a fairy tale.

“As time went by, many pieces came together, but there are still many things missing. To be honest, this isn’t my true form. I’ve always been in the form of a beast since I was born, but I was able to imitate humans….”

So, Argio's current appearance was a kind of imitation. It was the appearance of 'Argio' that the people of 'that time' remembered the most. In the end, the current Geo was a portrait, so there was nothing he could do about it.

“So don’t worry. I can’t be the threat you need to worry about, because I haven’t gotten back the most essential and important piece.”

“…where is that piece?”

“It’s under this grave.”

“There was something down there…?”

“It seems like the wizards created a fake world and arranged it in such a way that they could use my power. To be exact, it would be closer to the power of the ‘evil god Argio’ than ‘my’ power….”

“Are the two very different?”

“It would be difficult to see them as the same.”

The evil spirit was a monster created by the accumulation of hatred and resentment of countless saints. Argio's personality may be present in it, but it cannot be said that he is himself. Even though he suppressed his endlessly burning anger by becoming a portrait, it was only suppression, not disappearance.

“So to speak, my heart and hands and feet are divided into tens of thousands of pieces and stored separately.”

“…Why didn’t you give it back?”

“You can’t get it back.”

He looked at Ater as if to say something so obvious.

“Didn’t you seal me?”

"…ah."

Ather stood there blankly for a while.

“…….”

He asked late.

“…Is that still there? The effects of the seal?”

“How many precious lives have been sacrificed, so it should remain. The wizards only touched the location and management, not the seal itself.”

“Then what are you, who is in front of me now?”

“The last beast of the Black Forest.”

"…no."

Ather's hand tightened.

“You were a saint.”

“Oh, please. I don’t really like that word.”

Saint was a word that suited only those who, like Giovanni, were obedient and led the lamb. For Argio, the words evil spirit, monster, and beast were perfect. It symbolized free anger and worthy suffering.

But Ather didn't seem to hear it that way, and his expression was not good.

“…….”

“Oh my god, are you blaming yourself right now?”

It's so special.

“Because what you did didn’t seem right?”

“…Why, why are you… saying such things… You, the one in charge?”

“I can say that because it’s me.”

“You hated us, so you killed so many people.”

“It’s true that I killed him, but I didn’t hate him. At least, ‘I’ did.”

I was sincere.

“I just wanted to be angry.”

“Then please be angry.”

“But the anger I harbor is not directed at you. It is directed at the cowards who insulted me as a dirty beast and burned my family in the Black Forest. You should not force your vile anger on me.”

“…….”

Ather's face, which had been moving its mouth several times, was terribly crumpled.

“It looks complicated.”

It was the moment when Geo was about to get up from his seat, as if he needed some time.

“…Just a moment, Argio.”

“What's going on?”

“To me, to me….”

He hesitated, but then he asked for a favor. I could sense determination in his frowning eyes.

“Tell me your story.”

Through the records of the relics, we learned many hidden truths, but they were only fragments. They were insufficient data to know, remember, and ponder the stories of the countless saints.

He wanted to hear Argio's story.

“Tell me what kind of being you were.”

“It’s not difficult.”

Geo tilted his head.

“Can you believe it?”

“…I will judge with all my might.”

"…then…."

I liked it.

“You are human.”

It has heavy value.

* * *

“I was the child of a noble family.”

The evil spirit's story continued in a gentle tone, unlike his oppressive voice.

“They served as a shield to prevent the monsters of the Black Forest, where disaster was rampant, from bursting out. They were a family that was respected by the people and carried out honorable missions.”

"…you are…."

“He was the youngest son. He was very talented and had an ideal appearance, so he was very popular. He was particularly talented in the arts. He was good at dancing, painting, music….”

“…It doesn’t seem to fit with the evil spirits I know.”

“Now that you’re joking around quite a bit, I’m really happy.”

He says he was once loved.

“But this family has had monsters born from generation to generation. These monsters gradually take on the form of beasts, and eventually grow into unspeakable demons. When the fetuses begin to hatch, the family imprisons the young beasts in the black forest to prevent disaster.”

“Why? Simply because of disgust?”

“You can’t say there’s no reason for that… Otherwise, the young beast would bring disaster from the Black Forest and spread it across the world. The people of the family who judged that the Black Forest and the beast that resembled humans were one body continued that tradition.”

“But you are clearly saints….”

“Nobody just remembered it.”

It wasn't because a monster was born that disasters came out of the Black Forest, but because a saint was born that the disasters of the Black Forest could be stopped. As time went by, people forgot about that and only remembered that 'the monsters had to be abandoned in the Black Forest.'

“I grew up in the dark forest like that. And I found a new meaning to my existence.”

“You must have felt wronged.”

“It was more amusing than that. I wondered what on earth humans believed in to be like that, and on the other hand, they were so insignificant that they were cute. That’s just how fragile beings are, they break down and crumble when I stir them.”

“…….”

“Well, then….”

The face of the man who called himself a monster softened.

“I made a lot of friends and families.”

“…You mean the beasts of the Black Forest?”

“That too.”

“Was there more?”

“These are the ones I caught.”

“…….”

He hesitated and then said.

“This is what is meant by the living sacrifices offered to you.”

“Yes, thanks to that, there was a rumor that I was a cannibal.”

“Why that….”

“The more people fear me, the easier it is for me to do what I want. And above all, wouldn’t it be pointless to refute me?”

Argio knew best the stubbornness and stubbornness of humans. It was because of that stubbornness that he became a monster in the Black Forest. Although the direction was quite pleasant to Argio, his anger at being despised did not disappear.

There was just no reason to persuade him.

“Why?”

So Argio lived like a beast.

“After some time, I was living my life as I pleased, and people were scared… I guess I should do something about it, so the family took action. They ended up releasing a part of the Black Forest.”

“…I don’t quite understand.”

“You said that the family that gave birth to me has been blocking the disaster that has been sealed in the Black Forest for generations? They took out the water that is the essence of the disaster that makes up the deepest part of the Black Forest.”

“Water… is it?”

“I just called it black water.”

People also call it differently.

“People of the world call it an epidemic?”

"…wait for a sec."

Ather was embarrassed.

“That wasn’t even your doing?”

Are you saying that the terrible poison that rotted people's minds, ruined their bodies, and eventually brought the world to ruin was not something that belonged to the evil god? And that even that was the result of human stupidity?

“I thought it came from the Black Forest at least… Ha, but why… Shouldn’t something like that be kept in the Black Forest? Why was it kept in your family?”

“If we think back to the past that the most primitive saint remembered, it seems that it was probably intended to divide the tasks. One disaster that would overturn the world was placed in the forest, and the other was placed in the family to divide the roles.”

“Why did your family spread that to the world?”

“They didn’t think it would be a disaster. They just thought it was a very dangerous, but historic and sacred weapon that had been passed down through their family for generations. They wanted to use it as a weapon to subjugate me.”

“…….”

“They must have really hated seeing me.”

It was a closely guarded secret that such a beast-like demon could be born in a noble family.

But the young monster did not die even after entering the Black Forest, but rather wandered the world alive, so they were afraid that he would open his mouth and insult their family and come back for revenge.

“Isn’t that stupid?”

In the end, they opened their 'weapon' with the purpose of subduing the cruel beast Argio, and the result was a plague that covered the world. The family did not even take responsibility for it, and quietly fell with their mouths shut until the demise of the family.

“As a result, I became a demon who eats people alive, causes countless accidents, and even spreads an infectious disease that causes everyone from children to the elderly to rot and decay.”

"…so…."

“The Black Forest was burned. I think you know this, but eventually the palace sent troops to attack me from all sides. In the end, I was burned along with the Black Forest, and I was badly injured and died in the arms of my family.”

“…Is that what was created as ‘Evil God Argio’? A cruel beast?”

“I think you understand.”

He smiled as if he found it peculiar.

“Are you curious as to why I didn’t run away from the chemical industry?”

“…You didn’t have that much ability? But, according to the records… You were capable of that much….”

“I might have been able to run away.”

But that wasn't the case.

“Actually, I don’t remember the reason.”

"…yes?"

“Perhaps it’s deep asleep within the remaining fragments of me. Perhaps there was a treasure I didn’t want to leave behind in the Black Forest? Or perhaps it was my longing to leave my hometown behind and run away, or perhaps I couldn’t escape because the military was really closing in.”

“…Aren’t you just tired?”

“That makes sense. Maybe he thought this was the ending that suited me best.”

Monsters are monsters.

“…Well, that’s what I thought….”

“The evil god Argios could not hide his hatred towards humans.”

“That evil divinity wasn’t created just by me.”

“Yes, I guess so.”

From then on, Ater also knew well.

“…You really didn’t hate us.”

“At least I had no reason to do that.”

"…under…."

I felt empty.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (234)

234

Episode 234

And then mealtime came.

“Huh? Suddenly?”

“I think I asked you ten times if you were hungry.”

“…I’m sorry, I’ve been thinking too much….”

“I can assure you that eating will help you think better.”

“…….”

Ather sighed.

"…thank you."

“No problem.”

Geo smiled brightly.

Now I can finally turn this skinny thing into a pig.

* * *

“Oh.”

Yoo Seong-un blinked as he looked at the picture frame that had appeared after a long time.

“Why are you out in the hallway?”

“It seems like Yoo Seong-un is passing by.”

“Me? I’m back after a long time.”

I was barely able to return home after a long night's work.

“Are you also resting well at the cabin these days?”

“No, these days it’s in the ‘Animal Kingdom’.”

“Oh, by the way, I think Joo-hyun said that you have a friend there.”

“Yes. I’m currently building a dungeon.”

“…Aha, dungeon.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had been silent, soon nodded.

'There was a reason I was out in the hallway.'

It was time for a hallway meeting.

* * *

As usual, the members of the hallway meeting gathered, and Yoo Seong-un was the first to ask.

“So what do you mean you’re building a dungeon? If you’re planning on causing an accident that has a guaranteed future that you’ll have to deal with, you need to tell me so I can prepare.”

“It looks really desperate….”

At Juhyun's muttering, the Sankalut hanging around his neck tilted its head.

“Is it a dungeon?”

“Yes, it’s a dungeon.”

“I had that once too.”

“I believe it still hasn’t been destroyed.”

“I was kicked out of that house and am here now. Humans are evil. I want to go home. Do you feel the same, Geo?”

“Hometown is such a wonderful thing.”

Joohyun asked him

“So what kind of dungeon are you making? Mr. Geo, you’ve already drawn dungeons… similar ones before. ‘Breathing Sea’, ‘Empty City’, ‘Diary’ and so on.”

“It will be very different from that.”

“What exactly is the difference?”

“I built the Demon King’s castle there.”

As Argio smiled with a face full of happiness, Yoo Seong-un fell silent.

“…….”

Yeah, I knew this day would come someday.

“…I’m prepared.”

“Are you crying?”

“Is this your first time seeing a crying curator?”

“I remember seeing Mr. Yoo Seong-un crying last time.”

“I think you were the cause back then too, but you don’t remember?”

“I remember.”

“I guess so….”

Yoo Seong-un asked, letting out a deep sigh from his dantian.

“So that’s what you’re talking about? The Demon King’s Castle?”

“I’m glad you understood.”

Geo gave a double thumbs up.

“I once thought.”

“Can I think about it less?”

“I want notoriety. But I think it’s safe to say that Argios did little wrong, at least in your opinion. Isn’t that right?”

“Oh please….”

“So I tried to create a new notoriety so that I could live more comfortably as ‘Argio’, but Mr. Joo-Hyeon strongly opposed it. He said that it would be a path for both of us to commit a sin.”

"nice."

Yoo Seong-un and Joo-hyun exchanged fists.

“I trusted you, Joohyun.”

“I don’t think it’s time to feel at ease yet, but it’s definitely one of the top five things I’ve done since I was born.”

“Isn’t it surprising that I’m not number one?”

Geo told him.

“There are still more amazing things to come.”

“Yes, you clearly said you would refrain from doing so, but now that you’ve built the Demon King’s Castle, my heart has already dropped to the Earth’s core. Please tell me.”

“I will become the Demon King.”

"…okay!"

Joohyun smiled with a straight face.

“Would you like to come here and talk to me again?”

“Calm down, Mr. Joo-hyun. I never ignored what you said last time. I think what you said back then was very valid.”

“So?”

“I decided to bring the evil god Argio.”

“…….”

Joohyun immediately realized what Geo was trying to say.

“…Are you saying that you are not trying to forcibly build up a new notoriety… but are using the notoriety that you already have? It is true that Geo-ssi was active as an evil spirit in another dimension?”

To be exact, it seemed as if he was going to use the evil deeds of 'Argio', who had been falsely accused of all sorts of things, rather than the evil deeds of 'Argio', who had a real history of causing trouble.

Geo agreed.

“It’s good that I can communicate well with Joohyun.”

“I didn’t want things to be this easy.”

Yoo Seong-un looked at Joo-hyun with a faint smile.

“I won’t go far.”

“I’m not going anywhere.”

“If we can already communicate this well, it means that it is time for you to step out of the human realm. When you become a bishop, be sure to greet me.”

“It’s not that bad and I don’t intend to let it get to that point, but if it does, I will definitely not leave Yoo Seong-un alone. Let’s see how well he lives by abandoning his colleagues.”

“Even though I look like this, I have to take care of Seolwon, so it’s hard for me to live in two houses.”

“You don’t know that you can’t just talk like that with a pierced mouth, do you?”

Joohyun looked back at Geo with a bright smile again.

“I understand that the notoriety of the evil god Argio is greatly exaggerated. Even if his deeds were far worse than those of the human Argio, you said that many things were forcibly added to the process of the evil god’s notoriety spreading.”

“…I didn’t do nothing either.”

“Why is your reaction a beat late? Isn’t it because you yourself are not hurt by something?”

“Anyway, the fact remains that this evil deity has turned the world into a mess.”

“So you’re saying that the process is very questionable?”

“It’s true that our evil spirits also did wrong.”

It is true that humans were largely to blame, but why would an evil god be an evil god? The pure wrath of the holy spirits that came together, 'Argio' cursed the world and committed massacre.

“Of course, the epidemic, the Demon King’s army, cannibalism, and so on, were not my doing.”

“Look at that.”

“But even if you leave out the fact that he made excuses and said that it was a misfortune or a disaster, ‘the evil god Argio’ was still a great murderer. That alone should not change.”

Although the Argio before them now was closer to an individual who had shaken off the vengeful spirits of all the saints who were consumed by hatred, it was impossible to deny the fact that they had once shared the same body.

“It is true that it is a sin I committed, and it is true that it is evil karma.”

So this wasn't false advertising.

“It may not be 100%, but it is about 81% full.”

“Isn’t it a bit too full?”

“In today’s world, an 81% discount is a great deal.”

“No, well, that’s true, but….”

Yoo Seong-un's expression became strange, as he was not sure whether he should be happy about the evil spirit content of 81%. It may be a happy thing for Argio, who is known as the infamous Demon King, but it was a very strange feeling.

Joo-hyun was also thinking the same thing, wiping his face. Sankalut asked.

“Are you afraid?”

"yes."

“It’s a little different.”

“I feel like I’ve put a child out to sea….”

“…….”

“This is not horror.”

Sankalut hung around Juhyun's neck again, like a normal python without saying a word. He couldn't understand what this solid vessel was saying. It seemed like he would have to ask for an interpretation later.

Joo-Hyeon, who had no idea about Sankalut’s reaction, took his hand away and raised his head.

“…You understood and accepted what I said, right?”

“Oh, of course.”

As Joo-Hyeon said before, things that once happened in the 'Animal Kingdom' certainly didn't seem desirable.

If it had been truly right to frame innocent people and turn them into monsters more vicious than the truth, then so many saints would not have been reborn as evil spirits of wrath, despised despite their innocence.

“It would be too evil to make the Earth follow the same path.”

“I’m really glad you think so.”

Sankalut stared into space with round eyes, unable to understand the conversation between the two. He couldn't figure out what was so evil and what was so fortunate. It seemed like he needed to ask for an interpretation of this as well.

Regardless, Geo continued to explain.

“But I still want to enjoy a good fight. You could call it a so-called irresponsible pleasure, but to take that minimum responsibility, I brought a solid history instead of a fake listing.”

“Yeah, you’re making dungeons too?”

Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently as he always did.

“What exactly do you want to do by creating that dungeon?”

“Religious war….”

“Wait a minute, here.”

He crossed his arms and closed his eyes.

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un?”

“…….”

“…….”

“…Okay, I’ve sorted it out.”

Yoo Seong-un gave a clear answer with a look of resignation on his face.

“Are you really going to destroy this Earth?”

“Oh my, why are you saying that?”

Argio chuckled.

“You don’t have to worry.”

“What on earth?”

“There is a reliable pillar on Earth today.”

“Are you talking about you right now?”

“You guessed it right. The black cloak will do exactly that.”

“It’s really nice to see you so narcissistic.”

“I am a bit like that.”

Argio was the evil spirit of wrath, war, and pain. It was absurd for him to become dull in peace. He ultimately wanted war with me and those who held precious value.

But Geo knew that it was a rather tame act. He also did not want to act like the small-minded people he despised. So Geo had to compromise.

“An act that can cause minor damage to the Earth, me, and my surroundings. Even if the accident itself is shallow, the damage can be greatly exaggerated and become notorious. And yet, it can create an environment where one can fight with the same talent as a warrior….”

“No matter how much you think about it, there is nothing but religion?”

“Can’t you do something from beginning to end?”

Even if he tried, it would be so clumsy that he would be discovered halfway through, or rather, it was obvious that he would fail. Even the god of death said that Argio was born as an evil god, but he did not have the potential to become evil.

“So I thought.”

“Oh, I get it, I get it. You’re going to bring back your old notoriety and start a fight on Earth."

"I have decided that there is no problem. I am a god, so I know that blasphemy is nothing. I already know many religions on Earth that would never tolerate an evil god of anger and greed like mine."

"When you're happy, you always talk like a human, but when you're like this, you're a god? Well, I understand what you're saying. Right now, there's the Sun Church, and the Moon Church…."

"That's why we're bringing in the notoriety of 'Evil God Argio' to wage a punitive expedition. This is a legitimate expedition. The battle will take place in another dimension, the 'Animal Kingdom,' so there won't be any harm to Earth."

"…Since it's known to be a dangerous dungeon, it's common for hunters to be assigned there."

"But if we leave it at that, there is a high possibility that the idiots will come. I don't want that. What I want is a fight with a 'hero'."

"hero…."

Yoo Seong-un looked at Joo-hyun. Joo-hyun smiled resolutely.

"Why are you looking at me?"

"There's a hero here that our Geo and the guild leader acknowledge?"

"Excuse me, but can't you see that I'm not an awakened person? I'll die if you breathe wrong right now. You should think about protecting vulnerable civilians first."

"Judging from the way you speak, you don't seem that weak. Ju-Hyeon, you're quite brave for a non-awakened person."

Anyway, Yoo Seong-un nodded.

“So you’re trying to give it a religious twist?”

“Yes, they are blind.”

I thought you would be just plain angry.

“I want that blind blindness.”

A battle of true rage.

“Because that is the reason for my existence.”

“…Is it hard for you to be satisfied with simply using the dungeon you’ve created to fight? Surely you’re not saying that you’ll end up like the mermaids. The divine won’t die like that.”

Even in the case of Sankalut, humans tried their best, but all they could do was seal it. A mortal could not kill an immortal. That was the natural order and providence.

“I don’t know what kind of ending you want.”

“I have never seen the end, what I see now is just the process. As Mr. Yoo Seong-un said, am I not an immortal being?”

“…Then what are you going to do after the war you want is over?”

“I think I’ll be taking a break for a while.”

The current Geo was not just 'Argio'. There was Sergio, who was completely exhausted by extroverted activities, and Giovanni, who was extremely reluctant to see blood.

“So if there’s a purpose, then I see.”

There was only one end he had to see through this process.

“I want a complete assimilation with 'Argio'.”

“What? Are you becoming a Buddha?”

“Ahaha…! I guess that’s pretty similar to that.”

He hoped that he could end the war of the 'Evil God' as the current Argio.

* * *

Argio's Quest

Control of the Evil Spirit (1/1)

Rain in the dry forest (1/2)

Today's Status_'Animal Kingdom'

“All come at meo(` ꘎´)o”

Today's Status_'Diary'

“Have a peaceful day today!✧⁺ヽ(•ᴗ•)ノ⁺✧”

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (235)

235

Episode 235

“Kkiyuung.”

"cute."

“Keep keep keep keep keep.”

Geo was now surrounded by fox cubs.

“Guys, please…! You can’t do that!”

“I’m sorry, master…!”

And soon their parents, the foxes, came running.

“Because the kids haven’t learned the language yet…!”

“It’s okay because it was cute.”

“Go, thank you.”

“It seems like you’ve gotten a lot more used to the work.”

“Oh, of course!”

Among the foxes that came running was the fox tribe chieftain, Rami.

“I have polished my skills so that I can serve you comfortably at any time!”

Geo had once remodeled what was once called a fake world into an environment where life could live. And over the course of 94 years, each race took on its own role and established a small country.

That was just like Geo's Demon King's Castle.

'If a battle starts, I'll drag you underground.'

This one, well.

'Let's try using it as something like a trick trap.'

All the beasts had learned to transform into humans. Geo didn't think it mattered, but he seemed to feel some sense of duty because the beings they were serving were in human form.

Among them, the fox tribe mainly played the role of servants who decorated and cleaned various parts of the castle, the wolf tribe became guards who removed danger from the land they lived in, and the crow tribe became managers who handled various facilities and administration.

“I’m glad everyone is doing well.”

“We are also happy to see you visiting us often these days. Should we bring in Gargal or Balf? If you want to find out what happened while you were away….”

“I don’t necessarily need to know that.”

This was not a place that Argio had created to reside. It was the beasts who had created this small country, and Geo had merely fixed the hot sun and made the buds bloom so that they could live there.

‘Because the dungeon battle has progressed considerably, the dimension itself has become narrower… .’

Well, that's a problem we'll have to think about as the population grows.

“If we invite guests, will you be able to welcome them well?”

“…Of course.”

Chief Ramy smiled like a fox.

“I am confident that I can make any guest fall in love with me.”

“Okay, let’s believe it.”

“I will repay your trust.”

“You don’t have to work so hard.”

Geo also smiled.

“Everything is meant to be fun.”

He was running a pleasure park.

* * *

One day, news reached the collector that the saint of Dalnim Church had gone mad.

“…Hmm….”

Geo tilted his head slightly while holding the invitation.

“…I think Aria mentioned it once before, but if it’s gotten this far, it seems like things have gotten pretty serious.”

“I heard something similar from the guild leader, but… I didn’t think they would come out so openly that the entire company would know. It seems like even the noble Dalnim Church has decided that they have no choice but to receive help from outside.”

“I was curious when I first heard about it, but do adults actually go crazy? Or is it inevitable that they go crazy?”

“Either way, in the end, we’re all human, so there’s nothing we can do.”

Yoo Seong-un shrugged his shoulders in response to Geo's question.

“First of all, the saint of Dalnim Church was not a person with great capacity from the beginning, but rather grew through learning and training, so there will be side effects. Cases like yours are rare.”

“You mean me as Giovanni?”

“Yes, humans are generally unable to communicate with gods. However, the Dalnim Church seems to have found a way to communicate with their own divinity….”

Even if he had to ask for help from a collector, it seemed that there was a limit to that.

“But really, religious issues aren’t my specialty. I’ve studied a lot since I was put in charge of you, but I’m not good enough to figure out the internal issues.”

“I think there is no choice because there may be information that only those involved can find out. I heard that Dalnim Church in particular has a very closed atmosphere. It would be difficult for an outsider like Yoo Seong-un to know the details.”

“But I thought you might be interested so I tried to check it out, but unfortunately….”

"it's okay."

“What a great opportunity!” said Geo, smiling as he waved the silver invitation with a hint of blue.

“Because they called me from Dalnim Church.”

“…That’s why I’m sorry. I wish I could have given you the information in advance. It’s common for religions to be closed….”

“I will go with a happy heart.”

“I didn’t know that your first activity after the Little Mermaid incident would be a visit to Dalnim Church.”

“It’s an unofficial activity, so it’s okay, right?”

It seemed like there wouldn't be any problem.

* * *

“Sergio Hunter?”

“Yes, I will.”

“I will take you this way.”

"please."

The atmosphere at Dalnimgyo Bridge was extremely quiet.

'There was a reason it was said to be a religion that contrasted with the Solar Church.'

The Sun Bridge was bustling even inside. It wasn't loud enough to hurt your ears or make you feel noisy, but it had a bright and cheerful atmosphere, like people gathered in a pleasant garden.

'But Dalnimgyo... a little more... .'

It's a little different from the Temple of Death.

‘…Should I say it’s cold?’

There was a cool atmosphere.

If you look at human nature, it feels like reason is prioritized over emotion. It seems like results are prioritized over process, and the group is prioritized over the individual. That's all I've seen so far.

'It's not a bad thing, but it might be a little tough for kids to live in.'

In that sense, it seems that the method of selecting prospective priests was to select those who were qualified to become a saint, and those who did not have the capacity to expand as much as a saint became believers of the Dalnim Church.

"……."

The temple of Dalnimgyo, decorated with silver and marble, had cold colors.

'Even though it's the same color, it's definitely different from the Solar System.'

The strangely blue-tinged walls and pillars really reminded me of the moon. The moon floating in space. The lights were brightly lit, but somehow it felt cold. The air was also a little chilly, perhaps because of my mood.

'I like this kind of atmosphere too.'

The quiet temple calmed my mind. My head felt refreshed.

"This is it."

He was taken straight to the bishop's room.

The person who appeared to be the bishop of the Dalnim Church was an old man with white hair as blue as the temple. She greeted Geo without even offering a polite smile to a guest.

“Nice to meet you, Sergio Hunter. I am Bae Seo-kyung, bishop of the Dalnim Church.”

“I am honored to be invited, Your Excellency.”

“We should be the ones to thank you for accepting our invitation.”

The old man was so skinny that his joints were visible. I shouldn’t say this in this day and age when diversity is accepted like crazy, but judging from his dark skin and slightly different bone structure, he didn’t seem to be completely Korean by old-time standards.

'Is it the Middle East?'

I don't know if they immigrated or if they just had the same blood, but either way, I was happy. Thinking about Kang Seo-dam, who is of a similar lineage, it seemed like the blood of the nation was often mixed in the religious world.

Only after all the priests had been bitten did the bishop open his mouth.

“I believe I informed the manager before inviting you.”

“I came quietly, so you don’t have to worry.”

“I see, thank you. This incident is very related to the prestige of our Dalnim Church, so all the priests are on edge.”

The atmosphere was such that even a brief sigh could have been taken, but the bishop maintained her composure until the very end. She then once again explained why the Dalnim Church had invited Sergio Hunter.

“Your Majesty is in a difficult situation.”

“Can you tell me about your symptoms?”

“…It is a common symptom in worshipping God.”

“Have there been cases like this before?”

“It has been quite a while since we have been able to serve the saint, but if we remember that the saints of the Dalnim Church have all died young, we can understand why. The vessel cannot hold it.”

The bishop looked at Geo as if something suddenly occurred to him.

“So you awakened as a trainer. You worship the divinity called Black Cloak, but since you are not an officially registered priest in Korea, I think it would be difficult for you to know the internal affairs of the religious community.”

“Yes, there are many things I don’t know.”

“Then I should tell you about the Dalnim Church. You may have heard that the Dalnim Church gathers excellent priests every year and educates them to become saints.”

“Yes, I thought it was unique.”

“… Certainly, the Sun Church has negative feelings toward the Moon Church’s educational methods. However, it is an undeniable fact that having an adult is of great help in worshipping the divine.”

“Even when you say that, it doesn’t seem like you’re in a very good mood.”

“Because there are definitely problems.”

Honestly, there was no problem until we created the adults.

“The problem starts when one of the catechumens is promoted to adulthood. If he had been well-suited from the beginning, it would be fine, but a priest who is unable to keep his distance from the secular world… gradually feels a greater burden.”

“What do you think is the reason?”

“Because they think of themselves as human.”

If you were an adult, you shouldn't have done that. No, even if you were, if you had been a person with a large vessel from the beginning, it wouldn't have mattered. However, if your vessel was lacking from the beginning, it would have been even more difficult if your posture was also lacking.

“You can’t let go of the human heart.”

Adults were adults. They were children and friends of the divine, and they were supposed to be the channels through which they could communicate.

This meant giving up all the pleasures and pains that humans can enjoy. That was the kind of saint that Dalnimgyo created.

“This saint is doing exceptionally well in our history. She communicates well with the moon, has excellent interpretation skills, and even gives gifts to the gods… She does it without difficulty.”

“But there is still a problem.”

“There are two ways for a saint: one is to die as a human being, and the other is to become another divine being. The saint of this generation has the qualities of the latter.”

Moreover, even the moon they serve wanted it.

“However… it is unfortunate that the limitations of the mind are so obvious compared to the size of the vessel.”

“It’s the limit of the mind.”

Geo nodded.

“I guess you want to remain human.”

“I, too, have never met a saint of this caliber before, so I had no idea how to deal with her. There were saints with even greater talents during the height of the Great Calamity, but there were no records of how to deal with a saint with such an… unclear attitude.”

“What would you like me to do for you?”

“Please help him walk in one direction.”

“Didn’t you say that you are at a crossroads where you can either become human or divine? That would be too much of a task to entrust to an outsider like me.”

“The Dalnim Church sees results.”

If the results were visible and the effects were felt with all one's body, there was no reason to deny it. History and tradition are for the future, not for hesitation or regret.

“We decided to find hope in Sergio Hunter.”

“Is that so?”

“This may be an exaggeration, but I heard that you are the Saint of the Black Cloak….”

“…….”

“…Of course, I have no intention of leaving everything up to you. We at Dalnim Church have decided that we need to take charge, but we need opinions from a new perspective. If things continue this way, we have concluded that Dalnim Church will not be able to solve the problem on its own even after a year passes.”

“I understand what you mean.”

"i look forward to."

It would have been nice if Sergio Hunter had helped the saint in some way.

If the saint were to be confirmed as a human, it would be a regrettable and unfortunate thing for the Dalnim Church, but it would be better than having a precious talent that would not easily emerge die in a situation where they could neither do this nor that.

And Geo was moved to the saint's room and realized the seriousness of the situation.

“Ugh, ugh… ahh… ahhh… ahhh… ah….”

“…….”

“Ahhh… ha… haaaak….”

“…….”

“Kuahahahahahahaha…! Haa, ha, haha! Ha!”

The girl lying in the middle of the room, making an unknown sound, was covered in blood.

"…this."

Did you summon Cthulhu?

It seems like our genre suddenly changed from healing to cosmic horror.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (236)

236

Episode 236

For your reference.

“…….”

Giovanni had seen quite a few scenes similar to this.

'Isn't the appearance of people possessed by the devil similar to this sight?'

Geo looked up at the ceiling. The marble that had once shone like silver was nowhere to be seen, and in its place were only clumps of blood and squirming flesh.

And through the vast pit that had formed inside, something huge was visible.

"…hmm…."

“Don't look.”

The bishop who came with him stopped him with his eyes downcast.

“You may become mentally unstable.”

"aha."

I guess it really was Cthulhu.

'The detailed feel is a little different, but the large stems are quite similar.'

Geo's tastes were extremely broad, so he enjoyed a variety of media genres.

Among them, there was a genre called 'cosmic horror', which, simply put, was a subject that dealt with stories of humans being overwhelmed by something so huge that they break down in bizarre ways.

'I guess the very existence of divinity can only be felt that way by those who lack the qualities… .'

Sergio had never had that kind of experience in the first place, Arzio was a villain himself and had difficulty being objective, and Giovanni was a big-hearted person from the beginning and could put anything in it without any problems, so it didn't really hit home.

Only Giovanni, who was able to see many mysteries as a human, vaguely recognized the seriousness of the situation.

'The Dalnim Church was raising a small disaster that would later consume the world.'

It's cute.

"it's okay."

“…Would you like to do that?”

“You may leave.”

“I didn’t bring Sergio Hunter here because I wanted him to solve something right away.”

For some reason, the bishop said as if telling me not to push myself too hard.

“If you have a problem, you don’t have the face to see the collector, so why don’t you just check the condition?”

“It’s okay, Bishop.”

It would be hard to find someone on earth who is as expert as he is.

“I think I can help you, so let me look into it a little more.”

“…Then I’ll be near the door.”

“Don’t go out.”

“Because it’s impossible to leave an outsider alone.”

“I understand.”

The tone of the words was that they could not leave an outsider alone inside the temple, but in reality, they were probably worried about the safety of the precious guest of the collector. These priests really make things difficult.

'It's a peculiar thing, considering that it's a common trait that can be found in many dimensions. Perhaps it's in keeping with the fact that the language of the divine sounds vague to humans. Just as parents and children have some similarities... .'

Geo, who had finished his brief moment of distraction, looked around again.

The space where the saint resided was quite twisted. Blood that was so black it felt like ink had drawn quite a realistic pattern on the floor, and the pattern occasionally moved like a living creature.

“……?”

Oh, by the way, is that the symbol of Dalnimgyo?

'It was so disgusting that I only remembered it so late.'

The border of the pattern contained fingers that resembled those of a saint, but Geo decided to stop describing it here so as not to cause any further mental damage to those listening to his story.

‘But if you look at it as a whole…’

If you look at this whole room.

‘…Does it resemble the universe?’

It felt like I was inside a moon floating in empty space.

Why aren't there stories like that? Interesting conspiracy theories like there are aliens living on the moon and carrying out all sorts of cruel experiments.

'Or maybe the moon itself is actually a giant living creature.'

That's how I felt.

'I guess that's not a wrong impression.'

In the end, it all started with the 'Dalnim' they served.

It seemed to have been used as a bedroom, with muscles and veins stretching out like spider webs or arched legs centered around the bed.

The marble pillars that once decorated the room were spiraling out as if they were a symbol of genes. They had turned red as if soaked in blood, and had become quite transparent, emitting a beautiful light like crystal.

Even things like paintings and candle holders that were decorated in ordinary forms were wriggling as if they had come to life.

‘The universe where blood flows… .’

It felt like I was seeing a universe with flesh and blood. It seemed like a being that didn't understand humans well wanted to decorate the room of a small child.

'It's a bit excessive.'

The intentions didn't seem bad.

“…….”

If it were Joo-hyun, he would have tackled this thought. Geo unconsciously thought of his friend.

'In some sense, I think Joo-Hyeon is right.'

The divine beings had to attend speech school or receive basic training to survive on Earth. Geo was an exception, of course. He seemed to be doing well on his own.

“…….”

“Huh, ha, haha. Hahahaha… ha….”

“You look tired.”

Her bleached white hair was so long that it almost filled the room. It was a length that would be difficult for a human to grow naturally.

It seems that this was also due to the influence of the 'Dalnim', as the saint of the Dalnim Church must have never cut her hair since she was born.

The fingernails were long, too. I touched them carefully so that they wouldn't be startled if a stranger grabbed them, and they fell off like plaster. Then they grew again.

“You’re weak….”

The girl's whole body was covered in blood.

'It doesn't really look like he harmed himself.'

Blood was seeping out of every orifice in his body. Even his pores were seeping out mucus-like blood, making his hands sticky. At this point, it seemed as if he was bleeding excessively, but there was no sign of it.

'hmm.'

Where did all the age tags go?

'It's difficult.'

I thought it would be better to sort things out before my healing material attempted a full-blown genre change. Today, Geo also called out the honey that had been hiding under his hood.

"honey."

“Gulp.”

“Let me help you.”

“Cur.”

Mr. Joohyun always said.

'Stop abusing miracles alone.'

He told them to borrow the power of the children known as the Contractors and the tools that looked dazzling to anyone. That way, no matter what Geo did, he could at least prepare an excuse.

Today, Geo faithfully followed his words and accompanied Honey, Dana, and the Golden Branch staff that Isser had returned. With this lineup, it would be difficult to doubt Geo himself.

"excuse me."

Geo looked at the bishop.

“Can I start treatment?”

“…Is treatment possible?”

No, isn't that why you called me?

“…….”

Then he wanted to ask, “What on earth did you invite me to do?” But soon Geo realized that the situation at Dalnim Church had gotten to this point, so they had probably entrusted the task to an outsider like him, hoping to grab onto even a straw.

'No matter how much I expected, I wonder if I could give you some advice as a senior adult. When it comes to mysteries, miracles happen and they are solved with just a single word...'

Anyway, Geo read her reaction as 'Is that really possible? It would be impossible?' and quietly changed his words.

“I think we can try a few things. As you know, Your Excellency, this is not an evil mystery, but something related to your teacher, Dalnim, and therefore cannot be purified.”

“Yes, that’s why we ended up just watching without being able to do anything. It would have been better if it had something to do with the unclean mystery….”

“However, I think I can help you at least a little thanks to my children and good tools. It seems like this problem arose because I was caught between humans and mystics, but I can bring you back to the human side.”

“Is that… really possible?”

Oh, my.

'This won't work either?'

Geo read 'contradiction' in the other person's reaction. But then, how far should he tolerate it?

Geo, who was looking very embarrassed under his calm face, thought to himself again, 'Ah, you called me hoping for a miracle whose probability is unclear.' It seemed that the expectations placed on him were lower than Geo had imagined.

Of course, it is not usually possible to turn around a situation that has reached this point in an instant.

'But if we don't do something about this right now, this child's life will really be in danger...?'

What was more important, hiding my identity or the safety of the poor saint? Without a doubt, it was the latter. It seemed that there was nothing I couldn't handle with my divinity and acting skills, so Geo decided to give it a try.

He showed his unchanging smile as always.

“Let me help you.”

“…….”

“Can you give me a chance?”

“…I don’t know much about Sergio Hunter.”

“You lack faith, don’t you?”

“But right now we couldn’t do anything.”

The Dalnim Church, with its strong closed culture, was unusually willing to ask for help from the collectors. They had tried everything they could internally, and the best option they could find was Sergio Hunter.

The bishop stared at the man who smiled as if he were drawing a picture.

'He is also known as the Saint of the Black Cloak.'

If he really is a saint… .

'There is no one more reliable than this, at least in South Korea.'

The situation was urgent. The mystery was so entangled that the saint’s entire body was twisted and even the space was being eroded. If nothing was done, this disastrous mystery would spread to the other priests.

After dozens or hundreds of thoughts, the bishop nodded.

“I will trust you. If anything goes wrong, it will be my fault. However, if I succeed, I will accept Sergio Hunter as a benefactor of the Dalnim Church and as one of our disciples.”

“Is that so?”

“If your heart is moved by this future, please do so.”

“Thank you for your considerate words.”

Sergio Hunter said, looking around as if he was looking at something.

“Would you please close your eyes?”

“…Okay, then.”

"thank you."

With this I try to cover up.

'There's nothing good to see.'

Giovanni was a very large man, so there wouldn't be any problems, but for a bishop who was not even as strong as the fallen saint, it might be a difficult sight to bear. Geo tapped the shadow of his cloak.

"meow."

"yes."

Dana burst out, her soul spit out and her body shrunk to the size of a teenage cat.

“I have work to do.”

"meow."

“I think you understand.”

These guys were camouflaged for training.

Geo met the girl's eyes, which were completely dyed crimson and contained a bright red universe. Although his eyes were no longer distinguishable from the pupils and irises, he was able to catch her gaze without difficulty.

He smiled softly as he looked at it.

“Can you see me?”

“…….”

“Then first….”

He slowly closed his eyes.

“Should we start by practicing sleeping?”

It seems like I've been helping strangers with their rehabilitation exercises a lot lately.

* * *

In this way, Geo succeeded in reclaiming the genre.

"…thank you."

"you're welcome."

The bishop's voice trembled as if he was still in a daze. He had let them fall asleep for the time being, even though he thought that if he dealt with them all at once, they would be suspicious.

'I guess I should show that I'm progressing step by step from now on.'

It would be easier than turning Ather, who had been in a state of meat porridge for thousands of years, into a human, but it wouldn't be visible to those around him.

The body, which had been as grotesquely twisted as Mr. Ba crawling out of hell, was returned to normal, but the saint was still asleep.

It was a good thing, because through sleep I would recover from the fatigue I had been experiencing and gradually return to the path of humanity.

“I think it would be best to move rooms. The space where the saintess was staying is already twisted by mystery… If you stay as is, you will probably hastily enter the path of mystery again.”

“I will have the Holy Lady prepare a separate space for her to sleep. I originally wanted to do that, but I was worried that the mystery would spread or cause other abnormalities. Is there anything else I should be careful about?”

“You don’t have to worry about food. Until all the accumulated mysteries in your body are drained, eating anything will likely be poisonous, so you won’t need any procedures like IVs.”

“Ah, food….”

The hesitating bishop then spoke.

“You didn’t eat well before either.”

“…….”

Geo, who had been silent for a while, asked.

“…Is there a reason?”

“As you said, it is because you have become closer to the mystical. Before, you were not so much intoxicated by food as by something, but you did not feel any appetite or desire to eat anything either.”

"aha."

‘Starving…?’

I couldn't forgive him.

'And thus another pig is multiplied... O sun, forgive this greedy priest.'

I really wanted to respect your lifestyle and way of thinking. If you continue to be so provocative and careless, he will inevitably become a witch hag.

Geo smiled, feeling bitter towards an unavoidable fate.

“If you skip meals, you will walk the mysterious path again.”

“I wish you had just taken that path, but does that seem difficult?”

“For now, yes.”

He was a truly ambiguous talent.

“As you said, His vessel is wide, but His spirit remains human.”

But if you look at it that way, Geo was no different from her senior. This one was also quite formidable, with a mysterious body and a human mind. In that regard, it seemed like he could be of help.

Geo laughed.

“You probably won’t wake up for a while. This is a process where your body and mind are adjusting their waves and your mind and body are becoming more stable, so don’t worry too much.”

“Yes, thank you.”

"and…."

“…….”

“Ahem.”

Cool.

“Ugh, ugh…!”

“Sergio Hunter.”

“Coolook!!”

Geo vomited blood.

The bishop was so frightened by the sight of the guest coughing up blood that he dismissed most of the priests in the reception room. The few priests who remained seemed to be trusted by the bishop, but before they could come forward to offer help, Geo stopped them.

“Okay, it’s okay.”

“But now….”

“I think it’s because I overdid it for a moment.”

"…ah…."

“It’s not as big a deal as you might think.”

Geo forced a smile, sweating profusely.

“If you don’t mind… Could you please find a place to rest for a moment?”

“Of course. You will need treatment, so go straight to the infirmary….”

“I’m sorry, but I’d rather be alone.”

“…….”

The bishop, who was silent for a moment as if thinking about something, nodded.

“…I will do that.”

"thank you."

In this way, Geo was able to find a place to rest under the utmost care of the priests of the Dalnim Church. The bishop asked for treatment several times, but Geo continued to refuse, and eventually all the priests left the room.

“…….”

Geo, left alone, thought.

'The scam was successful.'

With this, he was able to block most of the opportunities for Joo-Hyeon to be persecuted.

One of the great things about being a portrait artist is that you can do anything.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (237)

237

Episode 237

It's not like Geo has been sitting still all this time.

'I know a little about Dalnim Church.'

If the Sun Church was a religious sect that valued compassion and life, the Dalnim Church was a religious sect that valued knowledge and wisdom. It was said to be a single, large Buddhist sect that worshipped the great mystery of the Moon as its teacher.

'Even if the priests of the Dalnim Church have a high level of enthusiasm for learning, they will not try to spy on the mysteries of a stranger like me… They probably still think that I requested solitary confinement in order to learn the mysteries.'

Geo chuckled.

“Well, I don’t need it.”

It's not like I was really hit and vomited blood.

“Son, I think even Joo-Hyeon will acknowledge your efforts. How admirable of you to follow the advice you gave me to this extent.”

“Kung….”

“What? No, why? I really did my best. If I’ve gotten this far, I’m sure even the Dalnim Church won't have any major doubts about the existence of 'Sergio Hunter'."

"Kung, kung, kung."

"No, I'm a portrait…."

"Kung."

"Cute and decisive."

Arzio grumbled. I don't know about life acting, but Arzio was better at this kind of dramatic acting than Giovanni, so his personality was stronger.

Geo blinked his eyes, gently sweeping the round honey.

"……."

Soon his face fell. Geo tilted his head with a blank expression.

"…Yes, I know Joo-hyun will be worried since the information about what I did and its side effects will probably be passed on to the collector. I think it would be better to contact him in advance to ease the burden."

In fact, if it weren't for him, there would be no one else in the collection who would worry about Geo's condition. The red liquid may have been blood, but to Geo, it was just paint, and the people in the collection knew it clearly.

And then a meteor came rushing towards us.

"You said you were sick!!"

"……."

"Are you okay? Did you feel any strain on your body? No, clearly, you didn’t say anything like that before you went to Dalnim Church. I wondered what was wrong because the Bishop of Dalnim Church was acting so humble, but I really…!!”

“…Mr. Yoo Seong-un.”

“What should I buy you? I heard you took care of it on your own, but do you really not need any medicine?”

“I just realized something.”

"suddenly?"

"yes."

Geo rubbed his chin as he watched Yoo Seong-un come all the way to the solitary cell where he was lying.

“You are as greedy as I am.”

This guy is really not easy.

“Of course I respect that kind of Yoo Seong-un.”

“…I’m grateful, but it’s really sudden and embarrassing….”

“But didn’t I handle it better than you expected? No one will doubt my identity because of this incident. At best, it will only confirm the theory that Sergio Hunter, the Black Cloak Saint, is a true saint.”

“That’s true.”

Yoo Seong-un took a deep breath and nodded his head as if he had never run in with such a flustered expression.

“That part was really well done.”

"grabber."

"uh…?"

“From now on, Mr. Yoo Seong-un, you must not say anything to me.”

“I don’t know what I did, but isn’t it serious to be compared to you?”

“It just is.”

Because he is a person who is as changeable as I am.

* * *

He was faced with an unexpected situation that was contrary to his expectations, but everything else was as Geo had thought.

The collector responded calmly to the words of the Dalnim Church informing him that 'Sergio Hunter' had been overdoing it in helping the saintess.

“Oh, I see.”

“…….”

Rather, the priest of Dalnim Church who came to deliver the news was embarrassed.

“…I don’t intend to avoid responsibility for this incident, but you seem more indifferent to the news of Sergio Hunter’s injury than I expected. Do you have this kind of thing happen often?”

“I can’t tell you much about that part. Sergio Hunter might react well, but we have to protect our Hunter’s identity.”

“Is that so?”

The priest of Dalnim Church had a strange feeling.

'I heard that the collector is a doting son.'

At this point, the value of the Hunter named Sergio was extremely high. He was a Hunter who adhered to mysticism to the point that even in the Dalnim Church, there were whispers asking, "Why did you accept the request so easily?"

Above all, isn't that the person who was hanging around like that and was even said to be 'locked up in the gallery'? I thought that there would be at least a little bit of commotion since that person was helping the saintess of Dalnim Church and ended up vomiting blood.

'I know full well that the members of the Collector's Guild don't care much about each other's injuries, but… .'

Something felt uneasy.

“Ahem.”

The priest coughed and bowed his head again.

“I am ashamed to see our precious guest in a sickbed. As priests who serve the moon, we, the disciples, will do our best to repay this debt. As for the detailed compensation… I would like to speak with Sergio Hunter first, but I came here to see if I could delay the repayment for a little while.”

“We will accept such a problem. Sergio Hunter’s thoughts are more important to us than anything else. The manager who communicates most closely with Sergio Hunter is not a member of our guild, so you can take a stance in whatever direction you need.”

Again, something felt off.

‘What kind of attitude is this?’

It wasn't the dry form of 'trust' that was commonly seen among the members of the Collector's Guild, but rather, it seemed like Sergio Hunter was just 'neglecting' no matter what happened. The priest's mood became increasingly strange.

'I thought you were someone who was treated with respect?'

Even in a business setting, the collector could easily get angry. In order to maximize the damage Sergio Hunter had suffered, it was right to show anger, even if it was intentional.

"……."

The priest expressed his gratitude, although he felt uneasy. It was not something he, a member of the Dalnim Church, could say.

"I see that Sergio Hunter is very considerate of the guild he belongs to. However, I am afraid that we may be even more rude to Sergio Hunter."

"You don't have to worry. I would appreciate it if you would give top priority to Sergio Hunter's opinion. I came here because I heard the guild leader say the same thing."

"Thank you for understanding. Then…."

After that, the two discussed a few more additional matters and parted ways as casually as when they first met. The priest of the Dalnim Church frowned slightly as he returned to the church.

"Did you get really angry at the collector?"

"…No, it's okay."

The situation has finally come to a point where the huge problem that has been quietly rotting away within the Dalnim Church can be resolved. The man shook his head at the sight of the young priest worrying that the collector might get angry and take Sergio Hunter away.

"The collector has decided to leave everything up to Sergio Hunter's discretion. Whether it’s future treatment, the debt owed to the Dalnim Church, or anything else.”

“The conditions are more extreme than I imagined. Sergio Hunter’s position in the collection is said to be so high… Anyway, that’s fortunate. The saintess will finally be able to regain her stability.”

“It’s certainly a good thing….”

Suddenly the priest realized something.

“…Oh, this is it.”

The collector did not consider Sergio Hunter to be human.

'The hospitality itself was very generous, but I wondered what part of it was so uncomfortable.'

The very act of 'extreme treatment' was a considerable contradiction. The collectors did not see Sergio Hunter as a human being, so even though he was being carried around from all sides, the people watching him felt uncomfortable for no reason.

'I understand, since you're a collector.'

In any case, it is not a situation where Dalnimgyo can be criticized.

“Let’s go straight to the classroom.”

“I hope your Majesty will get better soon?”

“Haha, of course. Sergio Hunter performed a miracle.”

“It would have been better if it could have been resolved within the Dalnim Church… but I am still very grateful. If another saint like Sergio Hunter can help, surely, our saintess will also one day….”

“This isn’t the place to discuss this.”

“…I did something stupid.”

“I understand how you feel, so it’s okay.”

They too have difficulty seeing our saint as a human being.

'Should we also say that this is the path of destiny that adults inevitably have to walk?'

I wish I could collect more diverse data, but even if you look at the whole world, adults are not that common. I thought I would like to write a paper related to their noble mystery, but it didn't seem easy.

The priests returned to Dalnim Church with some regret.

* * *

As Yoo Seong-un left, Joo-hyun came in.

“Mr. Geo.”

“I was wrong.”

“You said it was okay to go alone, so I trusted you and sent you there.”

“I think that matters related to the saint are not something that will suit Joo-Hyeon’s tastes….”

“I heard that last time too.”

Geo wasn't particularly worried about the safety of the non-Awakened Joohyun, but he was worried about his mental health.

For Joo-hyun, who always looks at Geo and Yoo Seong-woon's conversation with a 'what the heck are you talking about' look, the situation at Dalnim Church must feel quite awkward.

So I came alone.

“If I had known you would be this worried, I would have come with you from the beginning.”

“I’m glad that it didn’t actually cause any health problems… but I can’t help but feel absurd and wronged, knowing that this was the best disguise Geo could do.”

Joo-Hyeon said that her lifespan seemed to have been shortened by 10 years.

“Well, it’s a portrait… It’s a painting… I can do whatever I want….”

“I realized after the incident that Joo-hyun would be so surprised. I think I was very careless. I apologize.”

“Uh… This might sound a bit random, but your speech is quite stiff, just like Mr. San.”

“It’s been a while since I’ve been like this, but it’s true that my speech has become awkward. The fairy tale is almost over….”

"aha."

Joo Hyun also found out how 'Portrait of Geo' imitates humans.

Through the story of the human 'Geo', he followed the status and attitude of the time, but eventually, when his status as a human was consumed by mystery, he went back to finding a new 'Geo'.

So, Geo's stiff speech now meant that he was more of a portrait than a human.

“So, are you looking for ‘Geo’ again?”

“You really think so?”

Giovanni looked dumbfounded.

“I haven’t even started the Demon King Project yet, Joohyun….”

“I believe you blocked out the sound, but I really don’t know what to do when you say such things so boldly within the Dalnim Church.”

“It seems like you’re doing well now.”

“…Ahem, then what do you plan to do now?”

“We must take care of the saint.”

Joohyun nodded.

“You don’t plan on coming back right away?”

“My father takes good care of the hut.”

“Then there will be no hallway meetings for the time being.”

“First, I’d like to try to become friendly with the saintess.”

“I don’t know if I’m an introvert or an extrovert….”

“Maybe both?”

He had a good home and good friends.

“I think I could become good friends with the saint.”

“I heard you’re quite young….”

“Age is no barrier to friendship.”

“It generally becomes a barrier.”

“Oh my.”

Argio finally popped out.

“Why do you keep nagging me so much when I say I want to make friends?”

“You see, in the end, we become close because of the Demon King and all.”

“My social behavior is not that vulgar and worldly, is it? Above all, Mr. Joo-hyun is misunderstanding me greatly right now.”

“Let me hear it.”

“The order has changed.”

Geo declared proudly.

“You don’t make friends to become the Demon King, you make friends to become the Demon King!”

“…….”

There weren't many reactions that Joo-hyun could show here.

"…okay!"

That's what we always do.

* * *

“…….”

Color— color—… .

Steady breathing.

“…….”

The bishop of Dalnim Church looked at the sleeping saint.

“…Poor thing.”

You survived again.

The bishop wiped his cold face with his cold hands and left the room.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (238)

238

Episode 238

Sergio Hunter has not indicated any intention to return.

“I don’t know what will happen to the saint, so I think it would be best to just watch from the side. If it’s okay with Dalnim Church, I would like to stay in the church and take care of the saint until she recovers at the very least….”

“If you would do so, we, Dalnim Church, would be honored. If Sergio Hunter is here, the saintess will surely regain stability soon. In fact, it is something I wanted to ask you first.”

The bishop came to see Geo, who was lying in bed, and asked.

“More than that… how are you feeling?”

"it's okay."

“I hear stories like that a lot.”

“Aha, you listen to it a lot.”

“The Dalnim Church is full of foolish people.”

She skillfully held back her sighs.

“Even though it’s not okay at all, they keep talking back and saying it’s okay. Even if they're not being that annoying, there are many brothers who try to sneakily get away with it."

"I was just saying that because I was really okay…."

"I'm sure Sergio Hunter would have been able to adapt well even if he had enemies in the Dalnim Church."

"That's too much to ask of a trainer."

"No, I was being serious."

He was born with the temperament of a priest.

"……."

That's also a foolish thing.

'… It is impossible that such a mystery could have been quelled without causing trouble.'

Sergio Hunter appeared to be a saint with an unusually large vessel, but he was still human before he entered the path of divinity. The blood he coughed up during the conversation was proof of this.

'If it hadn't been a problem from the beginning, then it wouldn't have mattered, but since it showed that kind of appearance, it is an undeniable fact that it was very difficult. Even though he knows that, he can't express it as anything other than foolishness for him to act like this.'

Above all, Sergio Hunter seemed quite skilled. Not only in dealing with mysteries, but also in dealing with people as a priest and as a human being.

'So, is that why you're still pushing yourself too hard?'

I couldn't be sure.

'Because you didn't allow treatment.'

And the Dalnim Church has always been a sect that respects the opinions of individuals. Only by respecting the greatest diversity possible, with the minimum amount of intelligence, can they, as insignificant creatures, reach the highest realm.

'Even if it harms the priest himself… it is right to respect it.'

At least here.

He recalled reports of the collector's reaction to the news of Sergio Hunter's injury, but ultimately decided not to delve too deeply into it.

“Please accept this.”

“What is this…?”

“This is your ID card.”

He did a great job for the Dalnim Church.

“We will welcome Sergio Hunter as our benefactor.”

“Benefactor? That doesn’t seem like a word that suits me, an outsider who has only been at the church for a few days.”

“You showed me something in that short time.”

Dalnim Church has always seen results.

“I don’t mean to disparage the value of the process, but the most important thing is ‘what is accomplished.’ And Sergio Hunter has done a lot. The Dalnim Church has solved for the first time… something that has not been solved for years.”

“…How many years has it been?”

“Because the existence of the saint had such great significance, the Dalnim Church also did its best to hide the information from leaking out. Now, no matter how much we try to hide it, it is impossible to conceal it, but it has been four years since the saint encountered problems."

"……."

Sergio Hunter asked, seeming to be troubled.

"How old is the saint?"

"You're 17 this year, but…."

The bishop chuckled.

"You don't seem to think so."

The saint stopped growing at the age of 14.

"As I mentioned earlier, the problem started four years ago, when she was 13 years old. The saint was a saint at the relatively young age of eight, thanks to her excellent character and character."

"It definitely sounds young to me."

"An adult's position is not determined by age. However, even considering that, it is true that he was young. This is even more true when you consider that adults are usually established in their early teens…."

There was no choice.

"The moon has chosen him."

His teacher chose my son.

"Do you know the characteristics of the Dalnim Church? We are basically disciples of the Dalnim, not children of the Dalnim. The Dalnim gives us a lot of help in our pursuit of knowledge and wisdom."

"Your Majesty, you are not my disciple but my child?"

"On the surface, yes, that is, so…."

Can I say this?

"……."

I've already finished my worries and come here. Hesitating was pointless.

"…Sergio Hunter, what I am about to tell you is a top secret of the Dalnim Church."

"…I feel like we're getting close too quickly and I'm having a hard time adjusting…."

"That goes for me too."

The bishop was also a priest of the Dalnim Church who had become accustomed to the closed tradition and culture. It was not easy for her to open up such deep feelings to someone who had been a complete stranger and an outsider just a few days before.

But she decided that this was right.

"It is no exaggeration to say that I invited Sergio Hunter, the benefactor of our Dalnim Church, to tell him this secret. There were many who opposed it, but… I persuaded them."

The position of 'Benefactor' of Dalnim Church was not easy to obtain. It meant accepting an outsider as another disciple, a fellow community member, and also as a distribution from above.

"Sergio Hunter will never understand why we have to do this. But when I saw how Sergio Hunter led our saint back here that day, I knew it had to be you.”

“It’s burdensome.”

“Please bear with me.”

In the end, it was Sergio Hunter who took all the damage and performed the miracle, despite the bishop's dissuasion. This meant that Sergio Hunter was also willing to provide deep help.

“…I wouldn’t have been so greedy if you hadn’t performed such a miracle.”

“Oh, am I being tricked right now? I remember there being a few similar requests from the Solar Church.”

“Rather than that… I am forcing it.”

Certainly, the miracles that Sergio Hunter had displayed were feats befitting his position as a 'benefactor', but even taking that into account, he was quite quick to reveal his true feelings. This was because he had seen his foolishness.

“The saint is pitiful.”

“…….”

“…That’s why I’m like this.”

“Do you want to take advantage of my sympathy?”

"yes."

This might be the way to catch her. But the saint needed another saint, a guide. And Sergio was a perfect fit, as he was compassionate, generous, and easy to please.

'That doesn't mean you're stupid, but... That's why it's better to volunteer to talk. It would be much more efficient to get to the point first and leave the rest up to your judgment.'

She finally got back to the main point after gathering her thoughts again.

“If the saint of Dalnim Church is lucky, he will become the next Dalnim.”

“I think I’ve heard that story before.”

“You probably know that it’s another moon. So, it’s a separate deity.”

“Then I guess that’s not it.”

“The saint of the Dalnim Church who has become divine… will be eaten.”

That was the truth about 'Dalnim'.

“It’s essentially a sacrifice.”

The bishop finally burst into laughter. There was only one old man left, not the upright bishop. There was no reason to hide his face any longer, since Sergio Hunter had decided to pique his compassion and make him a worthless shackle.

“The ‘Dalnim’ we serve is a collection of innumerable pieces of information. The Master is a divinity who contains knowledge and wisdom of all dimensions, and he absorbs even the information he does not have or already has. So….”

“You have also learned ‘how to communicate with humans.’ That is why you have the Moon as your teacher. He will give you the knowledge and wisdom you desire.”

“Also, how on earth did that great divinity learn to communicate with humans?”

“By catching and eating it.”

“Yes.”

Of course, he could not eat all humans. If that were the case, then 'Dalnim' would not have been recognized as a divine providence in the first place. He was a traditional god who only gathered information.

So in the end, it was humans who were evil.

“In the time of great disaster….”

“I'm listening.”

“…At that time, there was the first saint who became divine.”

“I heard that too.”

“Through him, people came to realize.”

ah.

“If an adult becomes divine, he can be eaten by the moon.”

It was a great blessing to those who knew of or worshipped the existence of 'Dalnim'. Didn't that great being, which was considered to be close to a disaster, become more gentle and affectionate?

The cold moon held warmth.

“Of course, the Moon absorbs all the information of the saint who has become divine. That means it absorbs how the saint once treated humans, what he thought, and what stance he took.”

“So, is this why the Dalnim Church keeps creating saints in order to make the Dalnim as affectionate as possible and to gain the wisdom they want a little more easily? The more saints he absorbs, the closer he becomes to human?”

“In summary, that’s how it is. But please do not misunderstand, Master has no ill intentions. All these evil deeds are brought upon by us, the disciples.”

The divine is destiny and nature. The moon was like that. It was a completely human act to raise a saint who did not need to be created and offer him up as a sacrifice, when he simply existed as such.

“Let me make an excuse in advance. All of this is part of the information we provide before you enlist. Those who cannot accept this will have their memories erased and be allowed to leave.”

“Then, all the priests of the Dalnim Church agreed to their own deaths and joined the order.”

“Yes. Among the brothers, there are those who entered the organization with a relaxed mind, thinking that they would never become adults anyway, but most of them… desperately try to become adults.”

“I wonder why.”

“Because when you become an adult, you can become a god and become a ‘Dalnim.’ In fact, many brothers see it as another beginning rather than death.”

A vast storehouse of noble knowledge from all dimensions.

“We are all gathered here to get into it.”

There were various reasons for this.

“To become more perfect.”

“It’s a scary story to hear.”

“You look quite indifferent when you say that.”

“Because there are stories I hear often.”

“Is that so….”

I guess this guy hasn't been through anything ordinary.

“…the first saint of the Dalnim Church, hoping that the Master would give him information that would save the Earth from devastation… made the choice to become a mystery that could be absorbed by himself.”

And Dalnim learned that kind of adult mindset.

“Since then, it seems that the Moon Lord has decided that it is okay to absorb the ‘child’ that has become divine. If the Moon Lord had tried its best to cling to it, it could have changed its structure, but it did not.”

“For supreme knowledge and wisdom?”

“Yes.”

“You are confessing to me.”

“…….”

A beat later the bishop opened his mouth.

“…Forgive me. I was sitting here with no one to listen to my pathetic excuses….”

“Do you care about that child?”

“I treated her like a daughter.”

“So that’s why you reacted that way.”

“How did I react?”

“It seemed as if she didn’t care whether the saint lived or died, and that she would either like it or not. She seemed to have mixed feelings.”

“That is also true.”

Even when I thought about why it had to be that child, I couldn't even think of any other adult besides that child. Even so, the reason I gave my affection was probably because she, too, was not 'perfect'.

“That is why I am holding Sergio Hunter like this.”

“What do you want me to do for you?”

“Please make the saint perfect.”

“Nothing can be like that.”

Sergio Hunter laughed as he said that.

“But I will help you.”

"…thank you."

That alone exceeded my expectations.

“The end of Sergio Hunter won’t be so… smooth.”

I guess all adults are like that.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (239)

239

Episode 239

Eyes appeared in the void.

“Okay, you’re still watching me.”

Soon after, ears also appeared.

“Are you sleeping?”

“…….”

“You are doing very well.”

The brain was created.

“It’s very warm today. This room is said to be one of the most sunny rooms in Dalnimgyo. I thought they were all blocked up since I couldn’t see any windows except the entrance… but it seems like this room was prepared for you.”

I felt a soft weight.

“Won’t the blanket be hot?”

Oh, this is a blanket.

He covered me with a blanket. Him? Oh, yes. Judging from the low voice, the other person seemed to be an adult male. What I heard was someone else's voice. I heard the sound of my heartbeat.

“Now that I think about it, I only taught you how to fall asleep.”

“…….”

“Okay, good.”

Something large and soft was placed on the corner of the eye.

“Wake up now.”

"…ah…."

I opened my eyes, regretting seeing that hand fall.

“…….”

“Good morning.”

“…Good morning.”

One day, when spring was in full swing.

The saint of the Dalnim Church has finally awakened.

* * *

In the meantime, Geo became friendly with the priests of the Dalnim Church.

“Oh, saint.”

"no."

“I heard that the saint has awakened.”

“Am I being ignored?”

“I think it was thanks to the saint being with me that I didn’t have any troubles.”

“Why on earth are the Dalnim Church people like this?”

We became quite close.

“I think it would be okay to take away our trust and friendship.”

“It would be quicker to erase the memory. But I know that the Saint will not do that.”

“I think we’ve become too close. Should we try becoming a little less close?”

It was a feeling somewhere between good and bad.

'You won't even listen to what I say.'

When there was a sense of distance between them, they would at least pretend to listen, but once they got a little closer, their true colors started to show. The Dalnim Church members had a fatal charm in that they only said what they wanted to say and only listened to what they wanted to hear.

“Just know that if I become known as a saint in this small Republic of Korea, it will all be your fault.”

“Wasn’t it already me?”

“That’s true.”

But officially acknowledging it is a separate matter. The priest of the Dalnim Church nodded in understanding.

“We’re not that thoughtless.”

“I will believe it.”

“Are you going to the saint now?”

“Yes, I made a light snack.”

“As expected, you are very sincere.”

“Don’t you think that you are being indifferent?”

After living at Dalnim Church for a little over a month, Geo came to know that the people here are indifferent to others without any ill intentions.

At first, I thought, 'Maybe the saint was being bullied?' But soon that thought completely disappeared.

They only talk about death penalty, but these people just treat each other like dogs and chickens. When there is something to research, people who get along well get together and then fall apart, and even if they grab each other by the collar as if they are going to kill each other, they fall apart again once the work is done.

'It's a scary world.'

There really isn't any truth to it.

“I know the harshness of modern society, but you are very individualistic in a different context. Do you think that the death penalty, which is also yours, is like a stone to you?”

“It will be soft and warm rather than wet.”

"haha."

Are you saying that?

'I wonder if just asking about the safety of the saint would be considered a matter of great interest.'

Aren't they priests who don't even blink an eye when someone is dying? Giovanni nodded, understanding the charm of the Dalnim Church.

“Then I guess I’ll be going now.”

“If you lose your hair later, just get one….”

“Pick it up yourself.”

"thank you."

“There are no stalkers.”

Geo walked over with a tray of rice cakes. The priests of the Dalnim Church were very quiet, perhaps because they were often focused on their own work. They all seemed to be introverts like Sergio, so he felt a sense of kinship with them.

He soon arrived at the room where the saint was.

“Aram.”

"ah…."

The girl who was reading a book blinked.

“…Sergio Hunter.”

“You were reading a book.”

“I was wondering if there were any new theories out there.”

“You are sincere.”

“I’m not lazy.”

Saint Aram recovered faster than expected.

'Mentally as well.'

And just like the priests of the Dalnim Church, Aram had little wariness toward Geo. He seemed to have been convinced that 'if the bishop approved, there must be a reason for it'. He had even treated her.

Aram hesitated for a moment and then asked.

“…Is that a meal?”

“It’s a joke.”

“I wish I had the power of veto.”

“You always have the right to choose.”

“Then I don’t want to eat it.”

"okay?"

Geo placed the tray he had brought on the table and approached Aram, who was sitting on the bed. He then picked up a chair and sat down nearby.

“I’m curious as to why that is. Can you tell me?”

“I can’t taste anything.”

“That’s a pretty big deal.”

“It’s been like this for two years.”

"aha."

This is the time when the saint's 'madness' is said to have intensified.

“But you’ve been emptying your stomach for a very long time.”

“Didn’t you say I had a choice?”

“The choice is yours, it’s mine to tell you.”

“It’s lethal.”

“I'm kind of like that.”

“…….”

Could it be handmade? The girl who had been looking around furtively reached out her hand.

“…Please, I can eat some seaweed soup.”

“I’m sorry for being a burden to you, but I’m more than happy that you were considerate.”

“Sergio Hunter, you often say some strange things….”

“Once you get used to it, it will be like that.”

Just like Joo Hyun and Yoo Seong Woon do.

“Okay, here you are.”

“Thank you….”

Aram blinked.

“…It smells.”

“It’s not like it will smell much since it’s a cold drink.”

“No, that’s not it….”

“…….”

“…….”

Aram licked his lips as he put the soup in his mouth with a light spoon.

“…It tastes good.”

“That’s fortunate.”

“And it’s delicious.”

“That’s fortunate too.”

Soon after, Aram started shedding tears with the spoon in his mouth.

"how is it."

Geo leaned back on the bed, resting his chin on his hand and smiling.

“Is it edible?”

"…yes."

After that, the saint began to follow Geo quite a bit.

After all, there is nothing that can win people's hearts as easily as something delicious.

* * *

Saint Aram had a strong desire to explore.

She was a child from the slums, but thanks to the current bishop who recognized her talents, she was able to enter the Dalnim Church. It was a precious opportunity that was not easily obtained even by those who had awakened as priests.

“I am always grateful to the bishop.”

“I was sad because you were sick.”

“Please take good care of me, Your Majesty.”

Although the bishop had a blunt and cold personality, Aram did not give in to such ruthlessness. Rather, it could be said that the fact that he accepted and guided him despite his personality was a great affection.

“You even gave me a name.”

Originally, she had no name.

“Aram, you say.”

“That’s a good name.”

“It refers to a fruit that is fully ripe and hanging on a tree.”

In the Dalnim Church, there was no name that cheered for the future more than he did. He was a monk who pursued knowledge and wisdom. The name Fruit, which meant achievement, was the maximum affection that the blunt bishop could give.

“I would be lying if I said I didn’t want to repay that affection and expectation, but I was more curious. There was so much I didn’t know about the world.”

“How are you now?”

“It’s not enough.”

I felt like I could gain more knowledge.

“There is so much to delve into, especially when it comes to mystery. The Earth has only a basic understanding of the new world, and we don’t know the detailed components and structure. I want to know that.”

“So what do you want to do?”

“Knowing is important, because it makes me a more complete being.”

“People of Dalnim Church love the word perfection.”

“It’s only natural because we all came here wanting to become better beings. We may not be perfect while we’re alive, but if that’s the case, we want to be perfect even after we die.”

Aram, who was fiddling with the blanket, glanced around.

“Are you feeling bad?”

"very."

"thank god."

She made excuses.

“I’m not saying this to just anyone. When other priests go out, they take on the appearance of priests that people expect them to be. It’s just a unique house filled with unique people… so they can be comfortable when they’re inside.”

And then he laughed.

“I also become an elegant saint when I go outside.”

“You must be tired.”

“…….”

The smile faded vaguely.

“…That is true.”

“You don’t seem like the type of person who enjoys luxury and pretense.”

“It’s not that I don’t like it. I like having someone look up to me, and I like wearing pretty, soft clothes. But more than that, I want to become perfect faster… The priorities of my greed are different.”

"I see."

“Thank you for not telling me I was upset.”

“People have the right to go their own way as long as they don’t cross the line.”

“Not everyone in the world thinks that way.”

The true nature of Dalnimism is not something that people would welcome. It is far removed from universal morality and ethics. Therefore, outside of Dalnimism, they take on the appearance of pious priests rather than scholars.

That is why Dalnim Church has become an even more closed culture. Because there are very few people who understand them. It was a miracle that a saint with a great capacity who did not criticize Dalnim Church helped them this time.

“I, that….”

“Call me whatever you want.”

“I’m glad that the teacher doesn’t think badly of us.”

Everyone in this house was from Aram's family.

“I guess the bishop readily gave him the position of benefactor because he is such a person. He really has a good eye for people.”

“Yeah, so you brought her too?”

“Um… yeah, of course. I’m so smart.”

“That’s amazing.”

“…….”

Aram, who had been hesitating, asked.

“…How long will you be staying here?”

“Until you get better.”

“I feel a lot more comfortable.”

“You can’t lie.”

Geo laughed.

“Then why don’t you just ask?”

“…Can I do that?”

“You called me teacher.”

He looked happy.

“Should I stay by your side?”

“Yes, but….”

I don't like being alone.

“…Do I have to go?”

“Even if you leave it.”

“I know you are busy.”

“You asked me that, knowing full well that I would leave.”

“It would be more regrettable if I didn’t try to catch it.”

Geo let out a pretended sigh.

“These days, kids mature too early….”

“Isn’t that a really old man-like thing to say?”

“Compared to you, I’m an old man.”

“How old are you?”

“Hmm, 29 years old?”

"uh…."

There was more than I thought.

“…I thought you were in your early to mid 20s.”

“You’re the first person to see me like that.”

“Why? You don’t look old.”

“Did you say the atmosphere was heavy?”

“Oh, I think I know what you mean.”

I felt a little happy.

“I hear stories like that too.”

This is a chronic problem for those who have a mysterious body in their human form. People look up to them even though they have done nothing. It was the same even for her, who stopped growing at the age of 14 and is now petite.

“Isn’t that a little tiring? Thanks to that, I was able to go out into the world as a mature and elegant saint, but it also felt a little strange. To be honest, I sometimes felt like the world was deceiving me.”

“There was a time when I was like that too. I didn’t do anything special, but people were so scared of me.”

“It doesn’t look particularly scary….”

“In the past, my impression was much more stiff.”

“Wow, I can’t even imagine.”

It made me laugh.

‘… Yeah, you said this guy was a saint too.’

Whenever such talk came up, Geo denied it, but the priests of the Dalnim Church did not listen. Aram was also completely influenced by it. The servants who changed his bedding and clothes told him about it.

The story deeply touched Aram.

‘This person is just like me… .’

equal.

It was such a precious thing.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (240)

240

Episode 240

Aram liked studying.

It was so good. Knowledge is necessary even when eating, listening to music, or even walking down the street. And the more you know about the world, the clearer it becomes.

In the end, the poor beggar who had nothing was lucky enough to become a priest.

“Will you go together?”

“Can I go?”

“Yeah, I see some potential.”

“Then… I want to go.”

I held your hand.

I was informed in advance of the dangers of joining the Dalnim Church. But it didn't matter. It wasn't just about escaping from my humble beggar status. It was good that I would be able to enjoy abundant knowledge.

“How does the moon give wisdom?”

“If priests gather their strength and pray for an average of one month, they can obtain information from the Master. If you are looking for an easier way, it would be to receive help from a saint and communicate directly with God.”

“But the saint who is here now seems like he will pass away soon. He is still lying in his sickbed, so he cannot have a Q&A with the Master.”

“Another adult will come out, that’s what we gathered here for.”

"ah…."

From that moment on, Aram's fate may have been decided. From the moment he heard the bishop's and his adoptive mother's words, he had a vague goal of 'I will fulfill that role.'

But he didn't necessarily think it would be like that. Aram liked studying. He enjoyed learning. He welcomed the world becoming brighter and clearer. He wanted to become a more perfect being.

'If I change myself like this every day, I will be able to accomplish more. I will become a better person, and that will make me live a happy life. I can do it.'

And Aram became a saint.

“……?”

The day I heard the voice of the moon.

“…I heard the Master’s voice.”

“Yes, you have certainly answered my question.”

“If what you say is true, then verification is necessary. Let’s prepare.”

“I will wait.”

I know what it means to become a saint of the Dalnim Church. Aram was fine with that. He was fine with dying as a human like the saints of the previous generation, or becoming a piece of divinity.

This was the perfect home for her. She had a family to rely on and love. She wanted to repay the favor she received and become a better person for herself. She had nothing to fear.

“When I become a saint, I will ask the Master about the things you are curious about. I can ask you especially about the things you are curious about.”

“…It’s a blessing.”

“I'm okay.”

“…….”

The bishop did not answer.

The test was given. Deep and colorful questions that she should not know were asked. Aram responded without stopping, following the voice of the moon. The priests were amazed, and a new saint was born.

“Are you glad I’m here?”

“Of course, Your Majesty.”

“…I’m not the bishop’s daughter anymore?”

“…….”

This time the bishop did not answer.

“…That’s a little bit not okay….”

"I'm sorry."

“I hate apologizing more.”

“I’m sorry, Saintess.”

“…….”

This time Aram shut her mouth. She realized.

'It's not that you didn't answer, it's that you couldn't answer.'

No matter what I say, nothing will change. I don’t know what to say to get the right answer. Even if I have something to say, I’m afraid that if I say it out loud, the hurt will get worse. That’s why the bishop hasn’t responded to Aram’s words.

But this was also the path that Aram had decided on.

“…….”

"are you okay."

She still enjoyed learning.

“I can make this world a better place. The research institute of the association also receives the most advice from our Dalnim Church. If I can become a divine being someday and make Dalnim warmer, I will be satisfied with that.”

therefore.

“…So don’t look at me like that.”

“Excuse me.”

How coolly that perfectly fitting tone approaches.

“…….”

I have no regrets.

'I chose it.'

This is the path I walk because I want to.

She was still young and had much to learn. Her family was indifferent but solid. The depth of the mystery had not yet been fully discovered. There was still much to enjoy.

Still, Aram felt fear at the loneliness that suddenly came to him.

“…Is the moon’s embrace this scary?”

“It’s going to be cold and dark. So we need to make the moon warmer.”

“He must be providence, but he makes people afraid.”

“That is foolish talk. It is not as if providence cannot kill a mere creature.”

“I still have a lot to learn, Bishop.”

The earth is in chaos. The inside of the moon is full of wisdom that cannot be learned even if one wants to learn it. The moon religion was working for the world. Aram respected and loved such a moon religion.

I felt proud that I was part of it.

“We will get closer to perfection.”

“That’s great.”

So my fear is that it can never be number one.

Aram tried his best to learn and practice. With the support of the Dalnim Church, his vessel had barely expanded, so he didn’t know when he would die. It was because it wasn’t a vessel big enough and strong enough to completely contain Dalnim.

'If I were destined to live a short life, I would enjoy more pleasure.'

And I will leave more here.

'Knowledge remains in a permanent form and spreads to various beings.'

Knowledge is an immortal concept. If I can become a part of that knowledge and remain in the world, that is enough. Aram studied as hard as she could, and eventually, when the time came, she collapsed. She was dizzy, wondering if the moon was trying to take her away.

And then I met a guy named Sergio.

“Today is French toast.”

“French toast…?”

“I thought this wasn’t your first time trying it, is there a problem?”

“I thought it was originally this thick.”

“If it’s thick, it tastes good.”

“That’s true.”

He often gave Aram delicious snacks.

‘… It’s delicious, as expected.’

A soft texture like a cloud on the tongue. A fluffy texture. A rich egg liquid that soaks in without being greasy. And the taste of butter and milk. Honey and cinnamon.

'I can taste it.'

Even though he was an imperfect vessel, he felt as if his qualities were not completely lacking, and as time passed, he felt as if a mysteriousness was accumulating in his body. Aram was moving away from humanity. Even when he ate food, it didn't feel like he had eaten anything. He could taste it, but somehow it was becoming dull.

It was because they were all becoming divine. There was no way a divine being could be satisfied with the food of a mere creature. Aram felt less and less satisfaction through her five senses. Only knowledge pleased her, and she eventually ended up digging into the arms of the moon… .

"What is this? I'm trying it for the first time, but it's really delicious."

"It's just water that has been fermented with sugar from fruit found in a dungeon."

"You've been saying the word 'fruit juice' for such a long time…."

"I wanted to try to make it seem like I had something to say."

"It's pointless."

Before she knew it, she was enjoying a delicious meal.

'… Oh, I see.'

I had forgotten how to eat.

'Forgetting what you have learned is a stupid thing that even the catechumens of the Dalnim Church don't do.'

I remembered the first time the bishop taught me table manners. He taught me how to hold a spoon in my hand. He taught me how to savor food. He taught me how to eat most happily.

"…I will remember everything."

“What are you talking about?”

“The taste of this toast, the texture, the color… even if it wasn’t this, all the dishes you made before. I won’t forget them now.”

“Is there a reason?”

“Then, when I become a moon, I will remember this.”

I couldn't forget that a meal prepared by a mere creature could taste so good. I shouldn't have. The adult was a small stone that warmed up the moon so that it could become warmer. I wanted to be faithful to that role.

Sergio Hunter asked.

“Is that what you want?”

“Of course.”

It is my pride that I have chosen.

“I will become a moon god someday and make the world more perfect. Right now, everyone is having a hard time and is confused because the great disaster has not been over for long, but as more knowledge becomes available and people become smarter, the world will become a much better place.”

More perfectly.

“So I won’t forget.”

“I hope you haven’t forgotten your mother either.”

“…….”

I started crying again.

“…I don’t want to cry, but why do I keep crying….”

“If you want to make the moon warmer and more perfect, you must also remember sadness.”

“…Teacher, what you said is right.”

“Now, look. I’m not going to make you a weird kid.”

The teacher was a very kind person.

“You have to live a life without regrets.”

“I have never regretted it, not even once….”

“How adult-like.”

He even let out a pretend sigh.

“I guess I became mature too early.”

“It’s because I’m special.”

“So remember the emotions you can get from the ordinary.”

“I will do that.”

“You can be anything.”

“…Teacher….”

I became curious.

“How are you, teacher?”

"me?"

“…Don’t you want to remain human?”

“Hmm, my father doesn’t absorb me.”

“But I feel it.”

It was an instinctive feeling. I had never felt anything like it before, but I knew it naturally. The man in front of me was an adult. And perhaps he had already transcended human nature.

“Teacher too… already, a mystery….”

“Isn’t it full?”

“…….”

“And yet, what makes me special is that I am an ordinary person.”

“It sounds like a ridiculous story….”

“I have always been human.”

“Did you choose that path?”

“The length doesn’t matter to me.”

It was an unfamiliar story to Aram, who had chosen one path his entire life.

“But if a mystery like us doesn’t choose the path, wouldn’t it be a disaster?”

“A disaster is a disaster. The important thing is not to cross the line, Aram.”

The teacher did not have any expectations or disappointments for her. He just looked at her with gentle eyes. He corrected her if she was wrong and told her where she could improve.

It felt very sweet to Aram. It was a comfortable sense of stability that he hadn't felt in a long time. It felt like his feet were on the ground.

“I wish you were here all the time, teacher. I wish you could talk to me every single day, and always make me delicious food like this.”

Someone equal to me. Someone who doesn't pity me or expect anything of me, but just stays by my side.

“But that would be difficult.”

“You never get greedy until the end.”

“…But I’ll be greedy just this once.”

“What is that?”

“Can I become your disciple, Master?”

“…….”

He didn't answer at first.

Could not answer.

“…Did I cause trouble for you, teacher?”

“…That’s not true.”

He also looked sad.

“I just never thought I would be able to have a disciple.”

“I will learn… how to live from you, sir, just as I learned from you, bishop.”

“No, Aram. You will learn to rely on me and let go.”

“…Wouldn’t it be a shame to put it down?”

“You have to learn that too.”

The teacher laughed.

“If you want to be perfect.”

“…I will do that.”

“I look forward to seeing you smile like a little kid.”

“Can I do that?”

“Then, you are a talented child.”

The words of encouragement were truly warm.

“You can do anything.”

The fear went away there, and I wanted to cry a little.

I was scared that I would regret it one day if I continued like this.

* * *

“The saintess looks very comfortable.”

The bishop still felt ambivalent.

I wanted the saint to walk the path of divinity and open a new horizon for the Dalnim Church. But I also wanted the child I loved like a daughter to live a comfortable and happy life.

“Ultimately, the choice is yours.”

“I am sure you will be able to choose the path you want.”

Geo laughed.

“You can do anything.”

Now it was time for the evil demon lord to appear.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (241)

241

Episode 241

Square, square—.

Numerous quills float in the air and write on paper.

“…….”

Bishop Bae Seo-kyung, the owner of the quill, let out a sigh.

“Phew….”

In response, the quills floating in the air came down one by one and sat on the desk. The desk, as long and large as the dining table, easily accommodated all those objects.

'The answer doesn't come easily.'

The softly laid paper was densely written. It depicted the relationship between humans and divinity. There was also a description of human limitations. There was also a story about when humans become divinity and divinity becomes human.

“…….”

Baek Seo-kyung stood still and watched it.

'The saint's condition has stabilized considerably.'

Sergio Hunter said that he had brought balance to her mind and body, meaning that the fate of the saint was determined when the weight was tilted towards human or mystical.

‘… But still, a little more… There are many things the saint has not learned… .’

No, it's not.

‘… These are all excuses.’

The saint is the scholar with the most knowledge in the Dalnim Church. I know the efforts she has made and the results she has shown. We should not ignore that. That would be the same as ignoring the saint herself.

“…It’s not a topic I should dare to worry about.”

Ultimately, it is the saint who makes all the choices.

'You have to trust her judgment.'

Either she would hone her skills once more and become a divine runner, or she would be content with her current peaceful life and pursue learning. Or, any other path would have to flow as the saint wished.

‘But why on earth am I hesitating like this?’

I don't even know what I'm hesitating for.

'Why? What? What are you going to do?'

Are you saying that you still can't sleep even though the moon is about to set?

“…….”

In the end, it's all in vain.

“A mere sliver….”

No matter how much she flies and crawls, she cannot compare to her master's knowledge. She cannot be wiser than Dalnim. She cannot accomplish as many things as an adult. Knowing this, the fact that she still acts so foolishly shows her shortcomings.

Still, it makes me think.

‘…if only it could be a little more perfect.’

then.

'Can I be by that child's side?'

One day, when the saint sat on the saint's seat, the bishop asked the saint a question. When she asked if the inside of the moon was also this scary, the bishop only urged the saint. She was foolish. She had to become more perfect.

So he said that he had to make the moon warm.

“…Ugh.”

The hands that were resting on the desk were trembling.

“Ugh, ugh, keuhk….”

She sat down, clutching the desk.

'How many times do I have to repeat this?'

I was breathless with disgust.

She has already sent away three adults in Korea alone. Some of them became divine beings, while others remained human. Some were announced, while others were hidden.

Through them, Bae Seo-kyung learned that even 'providence' can be terrible, if providence and humans inevitably meet.

'How many times does it have to happen before the world gets better?'

It was so horrible, but I never even thought that I could break this cycle. I just desperately hoped that since I had just started, there would be an end somewhere.

The bishop was born before the catastrophe. The worst she knew was now the best. If only she could turn things back to how they were before the catastrophe. If only she could do that, she would do it even if it meant giving everything she had.

'I wish I had been an adult.'

She wasn't the only one who thought like that. And Dalnim Church was a group of people who thought like that. Let's fix the world with the vast knowledge of the universe. Let's make it better. Just a little bit faster.

'It wasn't them, it was me… I… .'

Only then could we avoid passing this horror on to our descendants. The sacrifices we make today are for the future.

"……."

She took a deep breath and returned to her cold face.

'… it's all in vain.'

Bae Seo-kyung got up from her seat.

He straightened out the wrinkled clothes, cleaned up the dirt, and fixed the poor appearance. The bishop was the one who consoled and appeased the death row inmates. Among humans, he was the one who had to be the most perfect.

'It's all meaningless research.'

Baek Seo-gyeong, who is not even a vessel, cannot become a saint. He cannot become a divinity. He cannot contain even a certain amount of mystery. No matter how much he flies and crawls, he is still a human in the end. He cannot become a star that remains by the side of the saint who became the moon.

'The saint is doing very well. She is confident and proud of her path. It would only be unpleasant to reveal human folly now. What good would it do if a forcibly created, clumsy star were left next to that noble moon?'

If they couldn't provide proper help, they should have just stayed still. This is Dalnim Church. All knowledge and emotions are affirmed. They had a duty to have more diverse knowledge and wisdom.

'Above all, this is ultimately for my own satisfaction, not an act of respect for the saint. I cannot ruin things with my pitiful selfishness.'

Bae Seo-kyung looked at the research materials spread out on the table.

"……."

The surrounding area was filled with the filth of her blood and flesh.

"…I guess I have to clean it up."

This doesn't help at all.

As he finally reached a conclusion, fatigue set in. He thought he would not be able to see the saint tomorrow because he would be recuperating. The bishop waved his hand and lightly cleaned the study. He decided to sort out the materials that needed to be burned tomorrow.

'I guess I should rest right after praying.'

I foolishly overdid it because I was anxious.

'The path of a saint is determined by fate, but how foolish it is.'

The Dalnim Church respects the freedom of the dead. They even allow them to step down from their priesthood if their memories are erased. One of the few rules they follow is to report their daily activities to Dalnim before going to sleep.

The bishop stepped into the prayer room.

"……."

The prayer room, which resembled a giant pupil, seemed like looking at the night sky. The dark ceiling had no end, and on the floor, where it was difficult to even confirm its existence, there was a transparent lake.

A pitch-black night without moon, stars, or clouds. This was a mystical space created for communication with the moon. If you were lucky, you could occasionally encounter the Master floating on the lake.

'You're not here today, either.'

The saint's recent poor condition may have also played a part. Without the saint's help as a medium, they would have difficulty seeing their Master's face.

The bishop knelt in a space that seemed to resemble a terrace.

'I hope that this little knowledge I have gained today will also be contained within the moon… .'

It was after a long time that

"……."

“…….”

“……?”

The bishop opened his eyes to the light seeping through his eyelids.

"…ah."

A pure white, round moon.

And then I saw 'something'.

* * *

It was half a head.

There was no brain, no eyes, no ears. It was like the bottom of a broken porcelain bottle. Inside, a dazzling golden liquid flowed out. It flowed like a thin river, brushing past smiling lips.

Its hands and arms were in three pairs.

The uppermost one held a geometric horned sheep skull on its half-head. The middle one held the sacred moon as a child. The lowest one was spread out on both sides, looking down at the world through golden eyes embedded in its palms.

Its legs had a tail wrapped around them.

The soft fur fluttered like a silk curtain. The red tail looked like that of an animal, or like a made-up decoration or an aurora in the sky. It seemed like something you could touch, but it also seemed like an illusion. It was wrapped around the left leg of the tree-like pose and swayed.

“…….”

The radiance it encircled was that of bright red wings.

Blood-covered, dripping, they soon fall into the lake. Or they seep in. They are countless and rough in cross-section, as if they were mercilessly torn from birds. They are countless, trembling in pain, and perhaps convulsing or shaking as if laughing.

“…….”

Its voice… could not distinguish between numbers and times.

“Little beast.”

Who, how many, in the past, present and future are speaking?

“I speak from my sleep in the last coffin.”

“Poor thing.” “Whose beliefs are yours?” “You don’t even know your own feelings.” “Are you angry?” “It’s a pity.” “You’re tamed.” “Have you never learned?” “Ask me!” “Is what you thought was your belief really so?” “You’re afraid.” “Weren’t you born human?” “What are you doing?” “If you’re happy, that’s enough!” “Have you never learned?” “How can you be human if you can’t be angry?” “It’s not foolishness, nor is it a belief.” “You can’t have malice.” “Look at the world.” “Be happy!” “Be angry.” “If not that, you little beast.” “What can you do?” “You little thing.”

“…the dream was long.”

“I will talk to your teacher a little more.”

“Now wake up.”

“The moon has set.”

* * *

“—Bishop.”

“…….”

“Bishop?”

The bishop opened his eyes to the call of the death penalty.

“…….”

“Why are you sweating so much?”

“…Just now, I….”

“Have you seen the teacher by any chance?”

"I…."

My breath was trembling.

“…….”

The world came into view.

A pitch-black prayer room where nothing was floating. A brother who came to check on me because I hadn't come back until late. A clock hanging on the terrace. Perhaps she had dreamed while praying.

But is that really a dream?

“…What did I see?”

And what did you hear?

* * *

“I understand.”

“What did you understand?”

“I understand everything that Dalnim Church has done.”

"that…."

Joo-Hyeon tilted his head while looking at the portrait.

“Isn’t this a terrible human sacrifice?”

“I affirm your words.”

“I didn’t think Mr. Geo would like that kind of thing.”

“I don’t even agree with that.”

"aha."

“It’s about understanding the reason for its existence beyond my personal interests.”

There was no such thing as right or wrong in the fate of the world. Did those countless branches extend out to examine human ethics and morals?

“People are diverse. The limits of their limits are also very diverse. Beings that can think constantly create variables. Everyone calls it fate, but I think it is just a natural flow.”

Fate wasn't something grand.

“If a child who loves cake grows up in an environment where he cannot eat it, he is more likely to become obsessed with cake. What do you think about this, Joo-hyun?”

“Mr. Geo is right.”

“All the currents in the world are like this.”

“I understand that as well.”

“That’s also the case with Dalnim Church.”

Geo characterized it as a regret.

“You don’t even know that sin is sin.”

It is natural. The great disaster has taken away all the ethics and morals that existed before. Now, it is only an imitation of them. People have been giving up many things for the survival of themselves and their precious things.

People had no real knowledge of personal pride, good and evil of beliefs, or any other concepts that existed in the world. They were like newborns. This is not only the case with Dalnimgyo.

“During that great disaster, the Dalnim Church found a way to end these numerous tragedies as quickly as possible. The Dalnim Church’s saint became a deity and transformed Dalnim into something warm. What do you think about this, Ju-Hyeon?”

“…I too want to end the many tragedies of our time as quickly as possible. But that doesn’t mean I want to sacrifice innocent people like Dalnim-gyo. That would be too disgusting.”

Joohyun laughed in vain.

“Peace achieved that way is meaningless.”

“No one told Dalnimgyo that fact.”

“Shouldn’t you know that at that age?”

“They didn’t tell us, so we had to realize it, but many people didn’t, and that’s how the world turned out.”

“…Yes, the same goes for the association’s research institute.”

“Many more people live without knowing that sin is sin.”

Even though it was the path to destruction, people were busy looking only an inch ahead. And those who could see far ahead were looking so far ahead that they couldn't even see their surroundings.

“The sinner is obvious, but the source of the sin is obscure.”

Who was the first to do something wrong?

“A catastrophe that was nothing more than a natural disaster?”

Or perhaps the first saint of the Dalnim Church who wanted to save the future even at the cost of sacrificing himself?

“Adults who recognize sin in a closed culture but mistake it for sacrifice? Priests of the Dalnim Church who are tainted by immorality hidden behind noble sacrifice and affirm both their own and others’ sacrifice?”

“…I don’t know.”

“That’s right, all of the Dalnim Church members are victims and sinners. They have sinned in all their fates. People always commit big and small sins in their lives.”

“Isn’t the sin of the Dalnim Church too great?”

“Sin can only be eradicated by uprooting its origin. What do you think about this, Mr. Joo-Hyeon?”

“But… this is a situation where you can’t find the root.”

The priests of the Dalnim Church who join each year are diverse. They join the Dalnim Church to get a home and food. They don’t want to be alone. They join for honor. They want more wisdom. They want to become perfect beings.

Most of them are children. All the priests of Dalnim Church grew up there from childhood. And the children who aspired for supreme wisdom and honor grew up to become adults of Dalnim Church. The beginning and the end. Whose fault is it?

“So now there are two fates left for Dalnim Church.”

“What is that?”

“Learn or punish.”

“I guess Mr. Geo can give you both?”

“I can’t give you both.”

But Argio opened the floodgates.

“First of all… the head.”

If the upper stream is shaken, the lower stream will also be shaken.

“I think the story of the ‘priest of the sect falling for the whispers of the devil’ is a pretty interesting cliché.”

“I don’t know the exact details, but I will bid farewell to Bishop Dalnim….”

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (242)

242

Episode 242

“…….”

The bishop, who had been pacing around the library for a while, licked his lips.

"…doesn't exist."

No matter how much I searched, I couldn't find any information.

'Who on earth was that being I saw that morning?'

I wanted to believe that it was just a normal dream. But I could never say that it was normal.

'It was a strange and ominous feeling, as if I had encountered the Master possessed by a saint, no, even more so… .'

I still vividly remember the time when the language of that strange being came crashing down on me like a wave. It was definitely not a dream.

'It said the moon had set.'

It was clearly a story aimed at the Dalnim Church.

‘No matter how much I thought about it, what was in the second hand was also the Master's image… .'

The appearance of the moon described by the four celestial beings is slightly different. Some say it is a round mirror, others say it is a transparent bead, and still others say it is a sphere made up of many overlapping rings.

The only thing they had in common was the shape of a sphere. That was all, but the bishop knew. What she saw that day was the moon. Something beautiful, shining coldly and pure white.

'… So the bright red thing I saw wasn't just an illusion… .'

There was no information anywhere.

"…There is no way that a being of that magnitude would not have a history."

The divinity becomes stronger as fate. It has a greater presence as the story progresses. It was a powerful mystery to the point of holding the moon in its hand while saying, "The moon has set."

'But there is no information about him in Dalnimgyo.'

I searched for everything from traditional gods to the greatest evil gods. I also searched for other mysteries besides divinity just in case. But there was nothing. Even in the library of the Dalnim Church where all knowledge and wisdom were gathered.

'Half a head, deep golden blood, three pairs of arms and… a radiance made up of broken wings… .'

Even though I thought maybe his appearance had changed, it didn't seem right.

'I tried contacting the association, but I haven't received an answer.'

There was only one most likely possibility.

“…….”

A new evil spirit has come to Earth.

'It caught the moon in the eye.'

The Hunter Associations around the world keep many secrets behind the scenes that the citizens are unaware of. The same goes for secrets related to mysteries. The fact that even the Associations have responded that they do not know anything means a new disaster.

“…This is getting difficult….”

The secret archive was empty and quiet. It was only natural, since only bishops and saints were allowed to enter. She flopped down on a comfortable chair.

“What is the world going to become?”

Even as he said that, his head was spinning furiously.

'... That being was clearly an evil spirit. What was its purpose? Amusement? A scheme? Either way, it would certainly pose a great threat to the already precarious Earth.'

It was complicated.

'But there must be a reason for the divine footsteps, and even if there are none, they will appear someday. Why did you first grab the moon? For pleasure? Or did you have another plan…?'

I wish there was more information, but it was something I've only seen once.

'During the war with the mermaids, there was a case where the Sun Church also confirmed the invasion of the evil god Sankalut. South Korea is one of the few countries on Earth that maintains human civilization. There are two major religions located in the capital of such a country. One of them was already invaded but recovered. Could it be that the evil gods are plotting together?'

The war with the mermaids who were said to have accumulated evil deeds close to divinity. The evil god Sankalut who violated the Sun Cult. The red divinity who invaded the Moon Cult. Perhaps something is happening that should make the religious world nervous.

'But the problem with the mermaids was resolved well. They did a great job for the collectors. The Sun Church was also invaded by the evil god of blood and pain, Sankalut… All it did was steal a young priestess. There was another case of contact before that, but… I heard that it was overcome by a priestess named Chaisol who made a contract with the Black Cloak.'

then.

"…Was the being I saw behind the mermaid and the sankalut?"

It might be hasty to call it a judgment, but if you call it an assumption, it could be true.

The war with the mermaids could have lasted for several more years. Sankalut's tricks could have been more vicious. Nevertheless, things were resolved without much trouble. The Dalnim Church thought that the Black Cloak had helped them a lot.

'But there's one more thing.'

What if the red demon was behind all the evil?

'What if we were just briefly confusing the Earth for a greater good?'

It's just an assumption. It's not certain.

'But the disciples who were dispatched clearly said that.'

It is said that the mermaids often showed their words and actions to restrain Black Cloak and steal his children. It is clear that the mermaids and Black Cloak were at odds. And what if the mermaids and Sankalut, the red evil spirits, were on the same side?

'The impatient evil spirit Sankalut ended the invasion of the Sun Cult by simply stealing away a prospective priest. I have to assume that he was forced by someone. And if the one who forced him was the red evil spirit I saw, the situation becomes even more complicated.'

Coming here makes me wonder again.

'What is your purpose?'

Why did you show yourself to me?

"……."

Then I realize it again and feel ashamed.

'… Did you think I would become a traitor to the Master?'

The day he saw the moon falling into the clutches of the red devil, the bishop felt more bewilderment than anger. And beyond that bewilderment, he felt secretly relieved.

'I was wondering if the child would be able to live as a human if Dalnim were to lose…'

I had never imagined a world where the moon had set. But after seeing that scene, I couldn't help but think of the saint. The image of her suffering, caught between the paths of humanity and mystery, was still vivid.

'… Because I, because I had such an impious thought… was I chosen?'

I felt terrible.

No matter how much I looked, no one else besides her had encountered the red demon. There was no information on Earth about it either. And of all the people, I alone had seen its existence.

Divinity may not have meant much, but for humans it meant choice.

'I, a traditional bishop of the gods, was chosen by the evil god. I, who had sent away so many moon gods without even becoming a saint, I, who was always left behind in this temple… The evil god's… .'

But then again, this thought occurred to me.

"……."

Wouldn't it be better if things turned out well?

'… If I betray the Master like this and erase Dalnim, no, Dalnim's religion, from the Earth.'

Then, rather… .

"…I thought about it for a long time."

I felt like I was having strange thoughts because I had been working too hard for the past few days.

The bishop gestured and placed the documents in the library back where they were. He was afraid that if the saint came in, she would notice something strange. The fact that he had heard the voice of the evil spirit had to be kept a strict secret.

'I don't know what will happen, so I have to tell my close associates.'

It is not known whether the Red Evil Spirit really wanted a bishop who would betray the Moon. However, the Moon Church was still needed on Earth. In order to leave a much better world to future generations in the near future.

So, even if the bishop was crazy about love and obsession, someone was needed to subdue him. The bishop, having organized his thoughts and thoughts, went outside.

I walk down a long hallway for a long time.

"……."

"Your Majesty…?!"

Then I came across a saint holding a basket.

"…Saint? Why are you out in the hallway?"

As I approached, the gathered disciples made way for me.

"What is this crowd?"

"That, that. I, uh, it wasn't anything special. It really shouldn't have come to this…!"

"You seem very flustered. Please calm down."

Sergio, the saint, entered, smiling at the bishop's gaze.

"Does Sergio Hunter know about this situation?"

"I brought this on myself, so how could I not know?"

"Oh, I see. What on earth is going on…?"

"I baked a bunch of cookies in the kitchen."

"Cookies?"

If you look closely, everything in the saint's basket is cookies.

"…I knew that you sometimes come out to cook and make snacks."

It was common knowledge that Sergio Hunter was serious about food. Unlike the priests of the Dalnim Church, who would often skip meals unless it was for research purposes, he would often visit the empty kitchen.

“That may be true for Sergio the Hunter, but why the Saintess?”

“Because you cooked with me.”

"ah…."

I felt a little unfamiliar.

“I never thought I would be interested in something like this.”

“It was closer to studying than to being interested….”

Was it because she had made a fuss at the always quiet Dalnimgyo? The saintess's face turned red. It was easy to see her embarrassment. The saintess tried to keep her composure and continued her explanation.

“Ahem. After I was on the verge of turning into a god without any preparation last time, I realized belatedly that I still had a lot to learn. All I knew was miscellaneous theories.”

“It is not knowledge that can be looked down upon as miscellaneous.”

“Of course, I am proud of the knowledge and wisdom I have accumulated. However, in order to teach you more, I think I also need practical knowledge about things I have not tried before….”

“Did you cook it yourself?”

“Yes, the teacher said she would help, so we went to the kitchen together.”

“I thought there was a lot of commotion within the church recently.”

A faint smile emerged from between my tired mind.

“You have been doing these kinds of things.”

Perhaps it was because I was more physically and mentally tired than usual. It was a laugh that came out of curiosity and cuteness without me even realizing it.

“I also heard that you planted a new flower bed in your bedroom, which gets a lot of sunlight. I also heard that you made Gyeongbokgung Palace using origami. I guess this cookie sharing is part of that experience.”

“I’m sorry for bothering you, Your Excellency, as I thought you were very busy recently….”

“It’s just nice to look at.”

It felt like my heart had become lighter for the first time in a long time.

“I would also like to thank Sergio Hunter. As you know, we disciples are only good at studying, but have no experience in this kind of activity. If it weren’t for Hunter, the saint would never have thought of learning this kind of knowledge.”

“I just helped hand out cookies.”

One of the bystanders who was watching said:

“Just a little bit, this is a golden opportunity to get cookies made by two adults.”

“Is that really all you can say in this heartwarming situation, brother? Is that all you have to say as a grown man who received cookies made by the saint’s own hands?”

“The cookies you shared with us will serve as samples for our research…!”

“It’s a research specimen and if you’re not going to put it in a stomach, give it back.”

Another priest asked him.

“Can I study just by eating?”

“Just give it to me.”

“Ah, no…! My precious research specimen…!!”

“Oh, that’s gross.”

The saint approached the bishop who was watching the grumbling adults.

“Yes, Bishop.”

“…….”

“Bishop…?”

“Oh, yes, it was such a rare sight that I was momentarily distracted. What is it?”

“This is a snack made for the bishop.”

It was a slightly bumpy, rabbit-shaped cookie wrapped in clear plastic.

“I guess you’ve been keeping quiet lately, perhaps because you’ve found some interesting research. I made some sweet cookies so that you can enjoy them comfortably, even though they’re not much. Well, please… it would be better if you didn’t skip meals….”

The saint's face turns red as she speaks.

“…….”

This is the face of a child who has been deprived of the opportunity to grow.

“…Thank you, I’ll try to eat better from now on.”

“! If that’s the case, then I have nothing more to wish for.”

“This priest is deeply moved that a saint who refused to eat even a spoonful of rice would give him such advice.”

“That, that, that’s…! Back then, I had a lot of shortcomings…!”

"no."

Even as I try to brush away the bleached white hair, my hands start to tremble and I stop. My hands, hidden by the sleeves of my baggy priest's robes, are clenched so hard that they bleed.

“The saint has done nothing wrong.”

“I was too stubborn….”

“No way.”

This child's number one priority was not his own fear.

“I will gratefully accept the gift.”

The research so far has been nothing but failure.

'The star next to the moon.'

With divine help, it might be possible… .

* * *

Argio said.

“No, I told you so, but you still didn’t come to your senses.”

Giovanni said.

“How easy would it be for a frog trapped in a well to imagine the world outside?”

“But still, does it make sense that there has been no progress at all, my friend?”

“That kid is doing his best. He’s shaking his head faithfully as Mr. Argio tells him to, so I think it’s admirable. He’s following along better than I could have imagined.”

“If I shake it a little more, it seems like it’ll go the right way….”

Sergio said.

“Then can we just go eat?”

“Okay.”

“Yeah.”

So, 'Geo' decided to take the bishop and the saint out for a meal.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (243)

243

Episode 243

These days, Geo has been giving the saint a variety of experiences.

“So this…?”

"yes."

Geo smiled brightly.

“Isn’t it good, tteokbokki?”

“I heard that they were sold frequently in Korea before the great disaster.”

“I feel bad because it doesn’t seem to be selling well lately.”

“Recently…? How old is Sergio Hunter?”

“That doesn’t matter, what matters is the tteokbokki in front of us.”

“Oh, yes.”

The bishop looked at the tteokbokki placed on a white plate.

“I guess there wasn’t any rice cake in our church?”

“I made and procured it myself. I was worried because it had been a while since I made rice cakes, but fortunately, they turned out well.”

Saint Aram's eyes sparkled at him.

“It’s my first time eating tteokbokki.”

Geo became serious.

“Is this your first time eating it?”

“Yes, rice cakes are a food that is hard to find.”

Above all, the Dalnim Church was not a people who put much effort into gourmet food. It was not a subject of study in itself. For the Dalnim Church priests, food was nothing more than fuel. Luxury items like rice cakes did not come in often.

“I could have ordered it if I wanted to, but there are many people who want me to put more effort into collecting research materials rather than spending money on ingredients….”

If even one person had said, "Oh, I want to eat this," I would have sent it. Dalnim Church was definitely not a poor church with no money. But not a single person had ever said anything like that.

Geo's expression became very pitiful.

“Somehow the warehouse always seems to be empty….”

“Was it that poor?”

The bishop was embarrassed. It seemed appropriate for her, who was in charge of the entire church. The brothers and sisters in charge of cleaning and cooking also said nothing. Sergio Hunter's reaction was rather unfamiliar.

But Geo already felt a sense of mission.

“Then, would you like to eat the tteokbokki before it gets cold?”

We had to turn the blind bones into pigs for this study. That would be the shortcut to world peace.

“I’m embarrassed to say this, but it’s been a while since I’ve made it, so I’m not sure if I captured the market atmosphere well.”

“The market atmosphere…?”

“Since the saint was interested in the food culture before the great disaster, I chose some snacks that were commonly eaten at that time. Things like sweet tteokbokki, fried food, sundae, and liver.”

“You seem to know the food culture before the great disaster very well.”

These were foods that were hard to find recently.

“Did you study separately?”

“In a way, you could say that.”

Geo thought with a smile.

'I guess these Dalnim Church people can't even think of anything other than studying.'

It's just good to eat.

If it had been before the great disaster, they would have all gone to Harvard. There must have been a sense of duty unique to the Dalnim Church, which is to 'benefit the world with knowledge and wisdom.' However, no matter how I looked at it, it seemed like they were just doing it because studying was fun.

'It wasn't a closed culture for nothing.'

Geniuses were a bit like that. People in the world were so stupid that they had a hard time communicating. How frustrating it must have been to see them groping around with their two hands and feet to confirm something that was obvious at a glance.

Such geniuses gather together and live locked up in one neighborhood for their entire lives. So these Dalnim Church members apply their own way of thinking to others. Thinking, 'If we are like this, you must be like this too, right?'

'Lack of social skills.'

You frogs in the well.

'The well was so big that it might have been poisonous.'

But don't worry. Geo was already ready to grab them by the hair and drag them out into the world. Whether it's right or not, you have to fight with the people of the world to know that it's not wrong.

“Does it suit your taste? I made it as sweet as possible because I thought you might not be used to spicy spices….”

“It’s spicy!!!”

“Oh my god.”

Aram kicked the seat and poured water into his mouth. Geo, who was about to pour the sweet juice, hesitated. Then, he quickly placed the juice he had poured in a simple manner in front of the trembling bishop.

“It was all made to make it sweet….”

"…thank you…."

“I didn’t know I could be this immune to spiciness.”

“I think it’s because we don’t put a lot of spices in our diet.”

“Why on earth?”

“Strong tastes and smells interfere with my thinking….”

“Really why?”

Look at these poor lambs. They really don't know the joy of gastronomy. I used to think, 'Oh, this is serious,' when I checked the pantry, but this was too much.

‘… Has the average Korean threshold for spiciness lowered?’

If you think about it, it takes a lot of time and effort to make red pepper powder. In an era when everything was homemade, the process of growing red peppers, picking them, drying them, removing the stems, and removing the seeds all cost money.

'The demand and supply for spicy spices have certainly decreased… .'

The collector was particularly wealthy, so if you listen to Joo-hyun's story, the food he usually ate was almost like a Buddhist meal. It means that the opportunities to enjoy such intense delicacies have decreased overall.

“…Ughhhh….”

But the running was severe.

“I should have made it a little sweeter.”

“No, it was delicious enough.”

The bishop, who had been calmly dealing with the pain in her tongue from the beginning, completely recovered with a glass of juice. She spoke, holding the glass of juice carefully in both hands.

“If it had been any sweeter, the balance of flavors would have been disturbed.”

“Thank you for understanding my intentions.”

Aram returned to the table and received the juice, his face turning pale.

“…Now that I think about it, I think it was almost the first time I ate something spicy.”

“What kind of atrocity is this in the Dalnim Church that values knowledge?”

“No, I knew the taste itself. When you are a catechumen, you first learn about your own body. Of course, you also have experience with the sense of taste.”

“So you want to learn how to govern yourself better?”

“So I’ve felt the spicy sensation before, but when I eat it as food….”

“Is that where the phrase ‘almost the first time’ comes from?”

It's at the level of a newborn.

“If it’s too spicy for you, you can try fried food. I like to dip the fried food in tteokbokki sauce and eat it. It’s much less spicy. It also makes the texture more interesting.”

“Oh, the sweet potato fries are delicious. They taste much less spicy because they’re sweet. The batter is really crispy. The sweet potatoes inside are moist and crumbly….”

“Isn’t that so?”

To be able to describe it to this extent, Aram really has the qualities of a pig.

'I've discovered the true taste of sweet potato fries.'

By the way, Geo's favorite famine relief crop was sweet potatoes.

“…….”

The bishop, who was watching the scene, asked.

“Saint, does it suit your taste?”

“It’s addictive once you start eating it.”

“I’m glad you look happy.”

“…Maybe I was too greedy?”

“Of course, it wouldn’t be to the extent of being called a glutton.”

But suddenly, the bishop had this thought.

“…Let’s try eating out next time.”

I'm saying that I need to experience more.

‘So I don’t really know what you want to do… .’

When I see a saint living like a human, my brain turns white.

I don't know if this is a good or bad thing. But if all the choices are made by the saint, then this isn't a bad thing. Sergio Hunter, who is also a saint, experiences what he wants.

'Yeah, it'll be okay.'

Still, my heart feels heavy.

“…….”

I think I should pray to the moon.

* * *

"…oh my god."

Yoo Seong-un covered his mouth tightly.

"what's this?"

“It’s the moon.”

“Why are you holding that?”

“I’m a hostage.”

“Why…?”

“If I had a teacher who could impart knowledge to me, I wouldn’t do anything foolish.”

“…….”

When Yoo Seong-un heard that, he muttered.

“…He certainly has some villainous qualities….”

“Good job, my friend.”

Argio smiled brightly beyond the portrait.

“Hello, this is my new friend Dalnim.”

A moon as big as a crystal ball sparkled in Geo’s hand. It seemed as if it was greeting Yoo Seong-un. Yoo Seong-un’s eyes narrowed as he looked at the moon drawn in the portrait.

“Geo, I’m telling you this because I think you’re misunderstanding something. A friend is a relationship built on trust and mutual consent.”

“I didn’t kidnap you, threaten you, or brainwash you. I know exactly what you think of me, but I’ll tell you up front that it wasn’t as scary as you think.”

Geo was just talking to Dalnim.

“Isn’t it the original way to become close with others by talking?”

“So you are the new divine friend?”

“Yes, it felt like a giant AI born in space… It was very interesting because it was based on a lot of data and decided how much knowledge to share and how to act.”

“In that respect, I think we have something in common.”

“Similar to me?”

“You too are eventually developing and merging with the ‘Geo’ that suits you.”

Yoo Seong-un thought.

'Thanks to that, human imitation has become much more natural than before.'

I'm now quite adept at telling lies, even if it's the divine providence that makes me unable to do so.

“If you think about it that way, will this moon also eventually become a divinity that can lie?”

“Hmm, people call it the devil.”

“It is the easiest and fastest way to distinguish between traditional gods and evil gods.”

“Isn’t it impossible to know what will happen to this guy in the future?”

Geo smiled brightly.

“I was surprised that it wasn’t as surprising as I thought.”

“I just gave up because I thought, ‘It’s come to this point anyway.’”

I am telling you not to kidnap divinity from other religions that even have their own religious sects.

'You're not the kind of person who'll listen to what I say.'

Ever since you mentioned religious wars and such, I had a gut feeling that something big was going to happen. And at least it wouldn't be harmful to the Earth. So let's prepare ourselves mentally for a small cleanup.

“At least it’s not something that would cause rumors.”

“Is there anyone else who could be the subject of rumors?”

“The Dalnim Church isn’t a divinity with a physical body. Direct communication would be difficult without a saint, and the only person who has the ability, a saint, has been focusing on recovery recently, so she probably doesn’t have the energy to notice the divinity….”

“You brought me here to spread rumors?”

“…….”

Yoo Seong-un dug into his chest. Then he took out a piece of candy and chewed it.

“Okay, so what are you going to do now?”

“Oh, dear. Did you just eat candy in one second? You’re going to get diabetes? You have to watch out for adult diseases.”

“Don’t worry, you’ll burn off all the calories before you get diabetes. So what are you going to do?”

“Rumors will start to spread that something is wrong with the moon.”

"and?"

“It’s time for my new friends to appear.”

Argio looked really happy.

“Do you like amusement parks?”

“…What….”

It was a nice sight, so Yoo Seong-un smiled brightly.

“I don’t hate it.”

* * *

“……?”

A man asked with a bewildered look on his face.

“…What is this?”

“It’s publicity!”

“No, that’s not it….”

“I’m sure you won’t regret it.”

“Uh, uh uh… uh….”

A man looked at a woman dressed as a fox with a trembling expression. Two ears perked up, a full tail, and a long, neat maid outfit that didn't reveal any skin.

'You're a maniac.'

The man looked at the flyer again.

We invite you to the amusement park of your dreams!

Aren't you tired of this tough world?

Do you have a dream you want to achieve, but have given up because of reality?

Do you want to get some rest but are putting it off because you are busy with work?

Then come to us!

Everything you want is here!

Imagine yourself spending money like crazy.

Imagine yourself surrounded by cute animals.

Imagine yourself with a healthy body, with wings and flying in the sky.

Any other wild and absurd dreams you want are fine.

We will give you a dream of freedom from the boring daily life!

What you need to do is very simple.

First, write down your desired dream and put it under your pillow before you go to sleep.

Second, no matter what happens, enjoy your dreams as much as possible!

That's all there is to it!

There is a world for those who dream!

“…Hey, so what is this really….”

When the man raised his head, the strange fox maid was nowhere to be found.

"…uh?"

What? Was it a hunter?

'Or a monster…?'

But there was no way a monster would be handing out leaflets to humans. The man calmed his surprised heart as he thought that it was a hunter who had chosen a somewhat unusual form of advertising.

You could often come across such ridiculous flyers in any alleyway.

'Conditions and such are so strange that it seems like it's some kind of service using one's skills. The world has really become a better place, hunters are using their skills to do all sorts of businesses...'

There were plenty of hunters who used their intangible skills to make a living. So the man didn't have much doubt. He wouldn't try it himself because it was suspicious, but it wasn't uncommon to receive such offers.

And a few days later, at the suggestion of a colleague, the man finally did what was in the flyer.

"……."

The man's eyes bulged with excitement.

"…Really… Really."

My mouth was torn open.

"This is crazy."

A few days later, the government sent out a safety notice to citizens. It was a notice telling them not to make hasty contact and to keep their distance, as the dungeon "Dream Park" was becoming popular.

The citizens didn't hear that story.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (244)

244

Episode 244

“You finally popped the balloon!”

Visabal smiled brightly.

“It was bound to happen someday.”

“Did you expect that?”

“Then, it would have been harder not to know.”

These are people who have lived almost their entire lives without being able to do what they want. There was a high probability that they didn't even know what they wanted. To such citizens, 'a happy dream without any side effects' is given.

It was enough to ignore the government's words and turn a blind eye.

“You are more positive than I imagined.”

“Oh, I’m always watching over our son. I’ll be able to see it with my own two eyes, no matter when, where, or what performance you do.”

“So, how do you like this performance, Father?”

"of course!"

He seemed pretty happy.

Argio was sprawled out on the long sofa in the guild master's office, looking up at him. Bisabal was leaning on his cane, looking down at Argio. His bright yellow eyes were shining with a persistent light.

"Hmm."

These are the eyes I like.

Sergio and Giovanni reacted negatively to Arzio's idea, but Arzio ignored it. He liked such crazy and passionate people. Such people always cause more than one incident.

"Okay, I feel better. Let me give you a chance to talk to this expensive body."

"Oh my, thank you."

The visa versa did not necessarily move to the opposite side.

"I was impressed."

Those were the first words.

"Yes, this world is really boring. Everyone wants to survive somehow, so they don't know what is truly important to them, and they are busy trying to gather something similar to happiness, but they are having a hard time."

"Because I don't know any other way to live."

"That's right. Everyone knows nothing but to endure. It's a really absurd world. We live our lives stuck in a rut, not knowing what we like, what we don't like, what we want to do, what we don't want to do."

"Were you bored?"

“Oh, it was so boring. It would have been more fun to watch if it had turned into a complete mess, but it wasn’t like that. The soldiers were crawling around, struggling to suppress their discontent….”

“A tamed person cannot rebel.”

“Yes, because you can’t get compensation.”

The visage thinned his lips.

“But now you have rewarded me.”

The black cloak gives gifts to good people.

“Look at the world that Black Cloak created! Those hapless, empty-headed moneybags began to think. Those slum vagrants who were trembling in fear of being broken began to show courage.”

“I will give you a gift.”

“That’s where it started.”

The citizens who had no choice but to live oppressed learned how to be brave. They started to come forward instead of hiding. They were trying to put one foot in at least once. The current situation was also related to that.

“After learning good, I find myself learning evil.”

Argio laughed at Visabal's words.

“Are you trying to say that you had an accident?”

“What an accident, didn’t I just say that? This is a performance.”

It's all just a planned play.

“Those who have accepted goodness because of the Black Cloak will find a better path even if they learn evil. Those who were not interested in or had an aversion to the Black Cloak will learn evil first through this opportunity.”

However, Geo was not going to let this performance turn him into a bad person.

“After all, Argio, you too know that you are a mystery that loves heroes and affirms good.”

“I am an evil spirit, yet you think like that?”

“Yes! Don’t you just love pleasure too much? Argio, the cruel beast who loves righteous anger more than anything in the world. You don’t reject weakness.”

“You know quite a bit.”

“Because I like your eyes.”

It was an eye that even a god could be proud of.

“Everything will get better in the end. Yes, this is how the world should be fun! What fun is there in living like a machine, with all good and evil suppressed? It really makes me sick to see myself being swept away like a pack of rats in a dirty alley, without a sense of self.”

“Are you ultimately seeking your own pleasure?”

“A collection of people who do not change at all is just something that is constantly being used and discarded. Where is the value in that process? If there is no good or evil, there is no change, no resistance, no conflict. If you could explain it well this time… Sergio.”

At the sight of Black Cloak returning to his black hair, Bisabal's eyes widened into crescent moons.

“How much more fun would the world be?”

“…….”

Geo looked up at him and said, “Hmm.”

“I was wondering where that expression came from.”

“Are you talking about the expression?”

“The face you are smiling at right now.”

“Oh, right.”

The straight-backed Visabal laughed loudly.

“My curators would probably laugh like this.”

That smile that sometimes makes outsiders cringe. The original was Bisabal. It wasn't intentional, but at some point, the curators began to resemble that expression. I liked it so much that I just kept it and admired it.

“By the way, you don’t deny the word teacher, do you?”

“I am a teacher.”

“Even now that your school has been reduced to ruins?”

“I think you know something about me.”

“I knew his name and face, so how could I not have investigated him? It was hard to confirm his identity before the Great Disaster, but I was able to hear some small stories.”

“Who told you this?”

“To those who were your disciples?”

Geo said a moment later.

“You’re alive.”

“Of course. But I don’t think you’ve ever gone looking for it.”

“I was thinking about it.”

“Is it okay if I ask what your concerns are?”

“What should I do?”

Should I be treated as a dead person or a living person? If I suddenly appear, will you not be afraid of me? Is it right to show myself, or is it better not to?

“There is no answer yet.”

So I left it aside for a while.

“Guild Leader Bisabal, I don’t know about you, but there are times when I feel this way, too.”

“I was impressed by your thoughtfulness.”

“You often say and do things that are burdensome.”

“And yet, it was you who came to my room, wasn’t it? Wasn’t it, son?”

“That too.”

As Geo ran his hand through his hair, it instantly turned red.

“I quite enjoy teaching things, Dad.”

“So, you want to try teaching South Korea? That sounds like a lot of fun, I like it.”

“There’s something I felt while experiencing Dalnimgyo this time.”

“Is it okay if I listen to it?”

“People in this day and age really don’t have newborns.”

He stroked his chin.

“They don’t even know the most basic things. It’s common for them to not know what they want. How to get angry, how to cry, how to laugh, how to sing, how to eat, how to sleep, how to walk, how to see, how to hear… There are so many people who have forgotten even how to breathe.”

It wasn't like that in my time.

“That’s why I’m teaching them step by step. I don’t think there’s anything to worry about, but you don’t have to worry. Those who realized the value of human interaction from Black Cloak will be able to withstand the appearance of the evil god Argio.”

“You seem to know a lot, but I wasn’t worried at all.”

“I thought you meant to at least pretend to do it?”

“Isn’t that meaningless?”

Finally, Visabal sat down on the sofa opposite me.

“So why did you come to me?”

“I want to see those eyes again.”

“Aha, eyes?”

"okay."

Geo's golden eyes stared at Bisabal's.

“How did you get that?”

“Okay, I’ll leave no comment.”

“Are you getting along well with those eyes?”

“Of course! We became incredibly affectionate.”

“How do I look there?”

“Um, well. Let’s see….”

Bisabal, who had been pretending to think carefully, answered.

“Aha, this can’t be happening.”

“How is it?”

“You look like a winged beast.”

“You saw it exactly.”

Argio laughed.

“I’m glad both my eyes are fine.”

I tried to help him when he was sick, but he seemed to be doing well on his own.

* * *

“The ‘Dream Park’ is a dungeon.”

The bishop of Dalnim Church explained.

“According to the information I’ve gathered so far, there really is a huge space in the shape of an amusement park. Judging from the condition that says ‘after receiving a flyer, write down what you want, put it under your pillow, and go to sleep to enter,’… I’ve figured out that it’s a virtual dungeon.”

The format was that participants would be dragged into the dungeon when certain conditions were met.

“These conditions cannot be met unless you satisfy them yourself, so there is no compulsion, but if you think about how great the merit of ‘being able to safely do whatever you want in your dreams’ will be to citizens who are tired of reality… it is not something to be very reassured about.”

“Do you find that it takes longer to wake up?”

“There’s no specific news about that.”

The Dalnim Church is a religious group that has a close relationship with the association. In cases like this, they have become allies who can share information and think together. The bishop who came back after receiving a brief briefing from the association spoke to the Dalnim Church members.

“It’s too big to be considered an individual or group skill. There are also standardized spaces. Please check the information I provided for more details. What we need to do is figure out the structure of this dungeon, ‘Dream Park.’”

You could say they're laboratory rats.

“Any method is fine. As long as it satisfies you and doesn’t cause any major problems. As with the previous ‘Deep Sea Country,’ I will wait for the brothers’ active research and results report.”

“So, can I just use the method in this leaflet? The easiest and fastest way would be to actually try it out. It also says that there have been no special side effects so far….”

“If it is something that could be dangerous to your health or life, please report it in advance before attempting it. Otherwise, please proceed as you normally would. Please conduct the research in secret so that it does not become a social issue.”

“I understand.”

The Dalnim Church was generally excited. To them, dungeons and monsters were just interesting research topics. And a virtual dungeon with such friendly conditions was worth studying.

Sergio Hunter, the benefactor who had been stuck between them, smiled awkwardly.

“I hope everyone won’t do anything too dangerous.”

“Saint, don’t worry. If I really feel like I’m going to die, I’ll pray to you….”

“If I pray, will the moon save me?”

“I hope you will hear about my remarkable achievements before I die.”

“I really don’t usually say things like this, so please refrain from saying them.”

“This is all for the future of humanity….”

"a little."

"yep."

The bishop coughed and awkwardly interjected.

“This situation must be difficult for you, Sergio Hunter.”

“The collectors also have a similar atmosphere of not caring about their own bodies, but they don’t do anything too dangerous, perhaps out of consideration for the guild leader. I’m not used to it, since they’re all such smart people.”

“It’s not a church where people who are that smart gather, but their brains are working well. But if you set a condition, they will definitely follow it, so you don’t have to worry too much.”

“I think the bishop is more worried than I am.”

“…….”

She asked a beat later.

“…Oh, me?”

“You don’t look so good lately.”

“I think it’s because I couldn’t sleep.”

“Are you having nightmares?”

“No, rather than that….”

The hesitant bishop answered.

“I feel like I’m taking a light nap.”

She has been having nightmares lately.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (245)

245

Episode 245

“The bishop has been acting strangely lately.”

“Oh, can you tell me that?”

“It’s okay, teacher, because you are a teacher.”

“I feel like something is missing.”

Geo sat on the bed of Aram, the saint of the Dalnim Church.

“If you want to ask this teacher for advice, feel free to do so. One of my roles is to listen to my students’ concerns and help them find ways to grow.”

“Then I won’t decline. I’m just so flustered that it’s hard for me to objectively assess the situation. But it’s also hard for me to carelessly talk about the bishop, who is the pillar of Dalnim Church….”

“Be honest too.”

Aram made an expression as if he was trying to hold back a sigh.

“That’s my point, the bishop has changed.”

“For example?”

“For now, I am excluded from major events.”

“What do you mean by major event?”

“I was also absent from the meeting to come up with countermeasures for the newly introduced dungeon. I was often called to such meetings, but the bishop strangely didn’t say a word.”

“I think he wanted to get some rest since he wasn’t fully recovered.”

“I think so too, but….”

Geo spoke on Aram's behalf, who was hesitating.

“You must be feeling a little uneasy, right?”

“…Yes, you’ve often talked about the importance of taking care of your health, but this time it seems to have gone on for a while. Haven’t I become a lot healthier now?”

“If a child I think of as my daughter has suffered for years with a figure that is neither human nor divine, I would take a long break. And I’m not the only one.”

“Even if that’s true, you’ve been looking at me a lot lately. You put strength into your hand as if you were going to pat my head, and then you let go. What should I call this…?”

“Hmm.”

Geo asked, pretending to be worried.

“Is it not stable?”

“Maybe.”

The bishop always had a calm and peaceful appearance. In other words, she was very good at self-management. But her expression has not been very good lately.

“You look very tired, as if you haven’t had any sleep, and you wander around the various libraries of Dalnimgyo as if you’ve almost completely explored them. Then, one day, you go into your bedroom and don’t come out… Even when you see me, you seem to be uncomfortable about something.”

That was frustrating.

“You must have lacked training to be upset over something like this.”

“It’s natural to feel upset when a close friend you were on good terms with starts to make your relationship uncomfortable.”

“I want to ask you what’s going on, but I feel like you’re avoiding conversation because of your mood. I’m really worried because your condition seems to be getting worse….”

“It’s definitely something to be concerned about.”

Geo thought about that.

'I see.'

Aram couldn't understand at all why the bishop was behaving that way.

'I don't think I ever guessed that it was because I started to show human concern for the child I thought of as my daughter. Well, it seems like the bishop himself didn't seem to be aware of it and acted on it, so in a way, it's only natural... .'

If the Dalnim Church system collapsed, there was no need for Aram to become the next Dalnim. The assumption that started from there made the bishop anxious and nervous. The evil spirit Argio induced it.

Even though I thought about it that way, it was still absurd.

'But no matter what, it's quite serious that showing a little bit of love can actually look like an act of distancing. It's true that the priests of the Dalnim Church lack social skills. That's definitely true.'

Geo patted Aram on the back.

“I never got the impression that the bishop wanted to keep his distance. Maybe he was worried about Aram, but he was not good at expressing it, so it seemed unfamiliar.”

“Then I would be grateful and fortunate, but….”

“The bishop’s condition hasn’t seemed very good lately.”

“I told you so.”

“Are you doing any separate research?”

“…….”

Aram made a sullen expression.

“…I feel uneasy.”

“What made you anxious?”

“I feel like a lot of things are changing. I feel like I’m standing on the floor of a high-rise building that’s about to collapse, or sitting on a branch that might snap.”

“It’s quite specific.”

Is this what it means to be an adult?

'You're so oblivious.'

How did you know that they were trying to overthrow Dalnim Church from the roots?

“Do you have any idea?”

“There’s nothing like that in particular.”

"then?"

“…I feel more anxious lately because I feel the absence of the teacher so strongly. When the teacher was away, it was often, but at least I could have small talk with him, but lately, there has been no news….”

“It’s like you’re talking to your parents who are away on a business trip.”

“It’s not that different for me. We’ve been together since we were very young.”

“That may be true.”

You hit the nail on the head.

'Although she is young, she is a saint chosen by Dalnim herself, so it may be natural, but Dalnim's Church may notice the abnormality sooner than expected. If that's the case, then if I just put in a little effort, there won't be any problems in the future... .'

Geo smiled brightly.

“Still, I really like the way Aram looks lately.”

“…Me?”

“You are an adult, Bishop. I was more worried about your condition than the Bishop. You were quite the sight when we first met, so how shocked I must have been.”

“At that time… I didn’t know it would turn out like that….”

“I’m glad you’re doing what you want now. Of course, you were going the way you wanted to be, but your perspective then and your perspective now are probably a little different than what you think.”

“…That’s right.”

Aram, who had been hesitating, nodded.

“I didn’t realize then that there was so much more I had to learn than I could have imagined.”

“I know you’re doing your best, but sometimes it’s not a bad idea to look outside yourself.”

Geo said, taking his hand off Aram's back.

“It would be good to have more conversations with the disciples of the Dalnim Church.”

“I don’t want to bother you unnecessarily, since everyone is busy.”

“This is another place where I share knowledge and wisdom with my disciples. Didn’t Aram realize the joy of eating and the wisdom associated with it only after he first ate the rice cake I made for him?”

“Is that along the same lines?”

“Yes, the knowledge and wisdom that humans can accumulate are not limited to complex theories and undiscovered mysteries. In my view, the priests of the Dalnim Church are missing the most basic learning.”

“…I think what the teacher said is right.”

“Aram.”

Geo asked affectionately.

“Do you want to be the moon?”

“Yes, I….”

Although he answered in one breath, the rest of his speech came a beat late. Aram continued.

“…will make the world a more peaceful place.”

“That is your dream.”

"that's right."

My pride, chosen by myself.

“I can do it.”

"of course."

Geo confirmed it.

“You can do anything.”

* * *

Ater often felt like her current daily life was a lie.

“…….”

“What? Are you hungry?”

“…You ask such questions when you are just a little absent-minded. I believe you don’t think that the only reason humans break down is because they run out of fuel.”

“You must be hungry, judging by the length of your words.”

“It seems like it’s meal time, but no, it’s not because I’m hungry… Ha….”

The current situation where I am exchanging nonsense with the evil god Argio.

“This is bread I made before. Would you like to eat it?”

“…It’s fluffy and sweet, but don’t you usually eat this as dessert?”

“It’s not like I can’t eat because I have something sweet on my tongue. So what’s the problem?”

“I don’t think it’s a problem….”

The bread he makes himself is also so delicious.

“Do you like the room you’re staying in now?”

“Oh, yes, thanks to you, I’m doing well.”

“If you wish, I can give you a place to live in the Black Forest or the Beast Village instead of these ruins….”

“As I said before, the Black Forest is too humid, and I don’t have the courage to approach this new world. This room you have prepared for me is the best for me right now.”

“Be brave too.”

It is also said that the evil spirit himself gave him a piece of his tomb.

“I thought you wouldn’t like this place so much. Don’t you remember seeing it in such a good light? I worked hard to fix it, build it up, and fix it, but you don’t have much guts.”

“This is also where all my comrades died.”

Of course, even now, I get goosebumps when I think about the days when I was locked in the narrow thorny crown. But that was a past that had to be overcome, not something to be avoided. It would take quite some time to completely reunite my comrades.

Above all, my feelings toward this relic were not entirely bad.

“…To be honest, the time when we were treated most decently was when we were exploring these ruins and trying to subdue you, the Demon King. I guess you can’t say that the memories of chatting and eating with my comrades back then were bad.”

“I’m so happy that you’re so positive.”

“I never thought you would do this, but you are very generous with your compliments.”

It's completely different from what it looks like.

One side of the tomb that the evil spirit gave me was comfortable. Even though it was deep underground, sunlight was shining in. When I asked how he did it, he said he used the power of the sun.

What happened while it was sealed?

'It's also the case that it took on a human form.'

The evil god Argio that Ater remembered was closer to an evil and mysterious beast than a human. The being was so large that it could not be contained at a glance, and it seemed like a mixture of human and beast. It was a completely different appearance from back then.

'They say that the current personality belongs to the last saint who was sacrificed. If that's the case, then that body also belongs to the last saint. I don't really understand why they're bending over backwards to human perspectives.'

But the bedding he gave me was soft. The food was warm and delicious, and the conversation was quite amusing. Argio was a good conversationalist. I wondered how he had gone from being a demon to taking on a form close to human.

“…….”

Not right now.

“…Thank you for helping me bury my colleagues here.”

“They seemed not in their right minds when I buried them, but it seems like they’ve sorted out a lot of their thoughts and feelings while they’re alone.”

“I apologize again for the rudeness I showed back then….”

By the power of God, Ather was transformed from a meat porridge into a human. However, even the spirit of a strong hero sometimes crumbled in front of the afterimages of the past. He thought and acted normally as he did now, but when he was stabbed with a dagger, he repeatedly struggled like an animal.

'So that's why you gave me time alone.'

Argio returned to the ruins after a long time. Ater had been busy collecting his comrades one by one. Fortunately, the evil spirit returned the corpses of his comrades to a nice place, making his work easier.

'If it weren't for that, I probably would have been out of my mind for a lot longer.'

I felt sorry and embarrassed.

“…We ‘warriors’ are people of the old era. Since a new era has opened, it is right for us to be buried in the old era. That is why I wanted to bury their bodies with my own hands… and in the land of the old era.”

“I wonder if it is right to bury it in the tomb of an evil spirit.”

“I thought it would be better than the Black Forest.”

The damp and filthy ground would quickly bury the corpses. These were the bodies of my comrades who had been returned by a miracle from God. I didn't want to ruin them in such a short time.

“So, will you be staying here for the time being?”

“Maybe so.”

Geo nodded.

'Aram's condition has definitely stabilized.'

In fact, it was a long time ago that she was fixed.

However, it was only Geo's greed that kept her by his side. However, because he had recently become busy with the 'Dream Park' project, it was difficult for Geo to stay, so he packed his bags and left again.

“Is there anything you want to eat today?”

"…hmm…."

After thinking for a while, Ater said.

“…I want to eat beef jerky soup.”

“I’m really good at making that.”

“You don’t look like that at all.”

“Isn’t that something a wanderer who has lived in the Black Forest for most of his life can do? More importantly, beef jerky soup, it seems like it reminds me of my comrades.”

“It’s a bit awkward, but… yes, I remember it.”

“A dish filled with memories is special.”

At the sight of him often responding with a nod, Ater kept his mouth shut.

“…….”

It makes me think so much.

‘… Is that appearance fake or real?’

Such meaningless thoughts.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (246)

246

Episode 246

People who grew up in times of epidemic disease always heard stories about 'brutal beasts'.

“If you don’t come home until late at night, the evil spirit will catch you.”

“Who is making such a noise! The evil spirit will come and take us away soon!”

“Live selfishly your whole life and you will be caught by the evil spirit!”

If Sergio had heard this, he would have been shocked and said, 'I'm not a tiger.'

Anyway, people used to be like that. Ater was one of those kids. It was a time when the existence of evil spirits had become too closely related to everyday life. Deep in their hearts and minds, they were filled with wariness and fear of Argio.

But Argio, whom I saw in person, was different.

“Have you eaten?”

“Did you exercise today?”

“I could cry so hard I could collapse.”

He would suddenly appear, ask how I was doing, and then disappear again.

“…….”

Perhaps he knew that Ather was afraid of him.

'But the evil spirit?'

That terrifying Demon King is being considerate?

'I can't get used to it at all.'

At first, I thought so. It was true that Ather had been resurrected as a normal human thanks to his help. I felt grateful for that. However, that did not mean that my fear of the evil spirits could be washed away all at once.

‘I don’t know why they decorate their appearance like that…’

But as time went by, things changed. Ater, who had never been crazy, gradually regained his composure. He felt his mind, which had been unstable, adjusting to his healthy body.

“Are you finally finding some free time now?”

“…You’re right. It’s gotten pretty good.”

“You look quite human.”

“I’m glad you see it that way.”

“How wonderful.”

Naturally, my anxiety about my partner began to subside.

'I had no choice.'

He freed Ather from eternal suffering. He was the first god to save her by name. He also had human form. They ate together, talked together, and asked about her well-being.

When he was going crazy over the afterimages of the past, he gave him time. That was exactly what Ather needed. Time to think. Time to sort things out. Argio helped him to cultivate himself.

'It would be strange if my mind was not at ease there.'

Just today, look.

“I think it was something like this.”

“…Well, that’s right. It’s so well-made that it feels out of place considering it’s food mostly eaten by wanderers.”

“Anyway, if it tastes good, isn’t that all that matters? However, I feel very proud that I couldn’t recreate the dish you imagined, so next time I’ll try to make a more proper jerky soup.”

“I think that if I put any more effort into it, the soup will just taste better.”

Argio cooked it himself at his one request, "I want to eat beef jerky soup."

“I keep feeling this way, but I’m amazed that you’re… good at cooking.”

It was more like a strange thing. Cooking was something for the workers. The nobility regarded cooking as a lowly job.

Argio was once a nobleman, and before he could even think about it, he had a strong perception of the 'Demon King'. That kind of being was cooking himself.

'That too for commoners like me.'

Well, I guess we live in a world where all that kind of thing has disappeared now.

'Still, I can't help but feel awkward.'

Even Ather was one of the 'heroes' who sealed him. It still felt strange to me that the evil spirit did not show any regret towards him. It was because I would not have done so.

“…It’s not that strange, considering that when you were human, you lived as a wanderer like us. It seems that your brilliant relics are still deeply engraved in my memory.”

“My house was very flashy back then.”

Argio readily agreed to talk.

“There were a lot of treasures donated here and there.”

“Did you receive any wealth? I’ve heard many stories of people being sacrificed and eaten.”

“After attaining divinity, it seems that there were unusually many human sacrifices, but while alive, I received more gold and silver treasures. Isn’t it natural that life is more important than wealth?”

“Ah, that’s how it got distorted….”

“I really enjoyed decorating the house. Do you know that? I am the only one of the many saints dedicated to the Black Forest who has passed the age of twenty. That means I am the first saint to have ever been in or out of the forest.”

His story was quite interesting.

“I brought all the goods I had plundered and received as gifts back to my home. To this ruin. Perhaps it was because my ego remained so strong that I was able to maintain that environment even after becoming an evil spirit and losing most of my reasoning….”

“Is it true that your memories from that time aren’t complete?”

“It used to be like that. But not anymore. Fortunately, I’ve had a good opportunity to sort myself out. However, it takes a little effort to recall the memories of the various saints before ‘me.’”

“Aren’t you uncomfortable with multiple selves being combined?”

“I’ve never really thought about it that way. I don’t feel uncomfortable with the hands, feet, and eyes that I was born with. It’s just that I need to make an effort to recognize their existence and handle them.”

The evil spirit asked.

“Are you fit to stay here?”

“In the current situation, there is no place more comfortable to live than this.”

“That’s what you think, haven’t you been inside the ruins the whole time?”

“…You must know how large the ruins are, right?”

The ruins were almost as large as a castle, meaning that they were as large as the large, magnificent building where the landowner resided and the villages surrounding the castle.

“This place is almost downtown. When I visited as a warrior or when I ran away from people, I didn’t have time to explore, so I’ve only recently been able to look around, but it’s much bigger than I imagined.”

“I’m glad you’re having fun watching it.”

“It’s less splendid than before when it was filled with all sorts of wealth, but in a way… it's more comfortable because it seems to hurt my eyes a little less. To be honest, the ruins from when you were the Demon King weren't a very good tourist attraction."

"From what I hear you say, were you originally interested in studying relics?"

"I am the one who discovered the truth about the Black Forest when the warriors visited this place."

He was a librarian in the royal library.

"It is nearly impossible to rise to the position of a commoner. In short, my abilities were so outstanding that I could overcome my humble origins and put pressure on the noses of many nobles."

The evil spirit pretended to look surprised.

"With that physical condition, you were a librarian?"

"…Why are you surprised by that part?"

"I've never seen anyone taller than me."

"I'm a little taller than average, but… there must have been a lot of warriors. Even though my memory is vague, there were definitely people taller than me."

"It was fortunate that we met when I was the Demon King."

"We weren't particularly lucky, so why are you saying that?"

"Because I can look down on you? You are the Demon King, so wouldn't it hurt your pride to look up at you?"

"Aha, so that's why… I understand…."

I felt empty and laughed for no reason.

“Did I say that? I was surprised at how much more outgoing you were than I had imagined.”

“I am grateful that I, the last saint, have the initiative.”

“I couldn’t be more grateful.”

But the more I became accustomed to this peace, the more a deeply ingrained sense of anxiety began to creep up on me.

“…….”

Ather was grateful to this evil spirit.

'You saved me.'

The only one who responded to my call and saved me. The favor I received from him was indescribable. Perhaps even if I were to offer myself up, I would not be able to repay it.

'But at the same time, I'm feeling more and more intimate with you…'

I was anxious.

* * *

It's something I've been thinking about since I first came to my senses.

'Can this existence be said to be true?'

An evil spirit created from the combined efforts of countless victims of anger and hatred. And the one who saved Ather and treated him kindly until now called himself 'Argio', the last saint.

But what is God? Their truth and lies cannot be distinguished by human standards. It is possible that his true nature is not the merciful and easygoing 'Argio' of today, but an evil god of wrath.

'If that's the case, then I have to do my part.'

There were many false accusations against the cruel beast, but he also committed many things himself. If the fate of that century's end-of-century war was to be repeated, it had to be prevented.

'Even if I have to repeat the eternal suffering for the sin of repaying kindness with enmity.'

That was Ather's role.

'… but I can't be sure of anything.'

How can we know the truth of God?

"Do you have time to talk today?"

"Why are you asking to talk first? Is something wrong?"

"There's something I've been wondering about."

"I am always waiting for you with a happy heart."

"Thank you for saying so."

Eventually, Ather decided to ask directly.

"I want to trust you, but can you tell me how to make this certain?"

"……."

To him.

"……?"

Argio was dumbfounded.

"Oh… I thought you were thinking hard about something. Was this the problem?"

"yes."

“And you’re asking me that directly?”

"yes."

“What on earth is wrong with you? I can’t help but be perplexed. In the first place, if I said, ‘This evil spirit is very safe and harmless, so trust me without any more worries,’ would you believe me?”

“Probably not.”

“What a strange person.”

At Geo's reaction, Ater gritted his teeth as if he was embarrassed or felt wronged.

“…Zurg mu eujjus s ikksseuneukku….”

“Please speak in human language.”

“What can I do, when the opponent is an evil spirit?”

“Should I call this giving up or being wise…?”

Geo, who had been thinking while rubbing his chin, raised his head.

“Can’t we just live like this?”

“I can’t do it because I’m anxious.”

“I don’t understand why those who know me can’t define my existence. Whether I’m human, an evil spirit, a ghost, or a creature, I just want to have fun and eat, isn’t that all?”

“It’s not easy to just play and eat so carelessly.”

“Do you make friends by analyzing and defining each one of them like that? I feel bad for you. Being too smart isn’t always a good thing.”

“The people you meet in everyday life and the evil spirits of the past that are really entangled with each other are probably not the same. You can’t be reassured just because a bomb that could explode at any moment looks round and harmless.”

“How picky.”

He's secretly prickly.

“Hmm….”

I guess you want a trust that won't break.

“There is something you don’t know.”

“What is that?”

“All trust in the world is not perfect.”

We humans naturally grow into adults from the shocking betrayal of finding out that Santa Claus was actually our parents.

“There is no trust that lasts a lifetime. Everyone trusts, beats, and grabs others by the collar, and the gap in trust is filled with friendship and love. This is because living things cannot live in perfect order.”

“…I understand what you’re saying. But more than trust in a relationship, I need to trust that you won’t go back to being the evil god you were back then. Anything else is up to me.”

“Then why do you think I would go back there?”

“You said your heart was missing.”

Ather exhaled and continued.

“The most important thing is the heart.”

Argio once said that he was not whole. He said that it was because the seal of the warriors still had its effect. The current evil spirit could not be said to be whole.

“I want to know what your complete form would look like.”

“Oh, I see.”

He was a truly brave friend.

“Then why don’t you open it and take a look?”

“…Seal?”

“I’m talking about the coffin of the evil spirit.”

“Is that okay?”

“There’s no way it won’t work.”

In the end, even that is maintained only because Geo remains trapped.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (247)

247

Episode 247

The evil spirit urged.

“Remember, it’s the last coffin.”

You must not open any other tubes.

* * *

Ather walked through the ruins alone.

“…….”

It seemed like the sound of my footsteps echoed especially loudly in the ruins.

In the meantime, Ather had become familiar with the structure of this ruin. It contained more knowledge and depth than what he had seen when he was called a warrior. Faded paintings and jewels were scattered about.

Old memories come back to me.

‘… Definitely here… .’

There must be a way.

"…ah."

The stairs leading to the basement opened.

Ather, who had clasped his hands, walked down the stairs. The stairs were extremely dark. If he hadn't brought a torch, he wouldn't have been able to see anything. Oddly enough, there was no dust.

'It's been a while since I've been here, so it feels quite unfamiliar.'

Even after coming to my senses, I had only checked this place and had never actually been there. This was where he and his colleagues had once sacrificed everything to seal the Demon King. I didn't even approach it in the first place because I was afraid that if I went in rashly, I might cause trouble.

But now the time has come.

'It's quite deep… .'

There was no end in sight.

There was also a blocking device at the entrance of the stairs. He and his colleagues had installed it in case of an unexpected situation. Since he knew the answer, he could solve it easily.

It was when I went down to the point where I felt a little out of breath.

"…Is this the place?"

A very large door greeted him.

'The main gate of the castle wouldn't be like this, but I can feel how desperate we were back then.'

In fact, it didn't even look like a door.

There was no way around it. It couldn't be permanently closed with just magical devices. It had to be a door that was too difficult to open physically. That's why I made this door imitating a wall.

“It’s open.”

The door that should have been tightly closed was open and there was a small gap.

“Is this the work of wizards…?”

The impious men who said they would kill the Creator by borrowing the power of the evil spirit. No one but them could open this door. The door was open just a little bit, barely enough for one person to pass through.

'Could this be the reason he was able to come out of the world, even in human form? Because the door of the seal was slightly open? If so, perhaps I should be a little grateful to those wizards. Thanks to them, I was able to escape from the thorn prison… .'

Ather went into it.

“…….”

Candles were burning everywhere at the tombs of the saints.

“…This is, still….”

It was amazing. It was probably a magical tool installed by wizards.

'If not that, then it must be the effect of the seal.'

But even after countless years had passed, the flickering flames of the candles still made his insides tremble.

Perhaps thanks to that, even though it was still a dark underground tomb, the sight of the tomb was clearly visible.

"ah."

It was a neatly arranged row of coffins.

'We didn't do this?'

The battle with the Demon King was fierce. The warriors were greatly exhausted just from sealing him. There were many dead people. There was no energy to create such a neat tomb for the Demon King who had caused so many victims.

'Even wizards have no reason to do this.'

These are the people who wanted to become godslayers. There was no way they could treat an evil god who was not even the creator like this.

'then….'

Did you do it yourself?

'Argio, that guy?'

Or is it some kind of mystical miracle?

'I don't know.'

But he spoke of the 'last coffin', indicating that he knew the sights there.

'There must be at least some connection to this sight.'

Even though I was holding a torch, the air in the underground tomb was cold.

"……."

He started walking again.

The coffins were all the same size. They were carved from pitch-black marble and were quite large. They were larger than Ather. They smelled of poison and blood, like something from the Black Forest.

'The atmosphere is ominous.'

It was completely different from when I first saw Argio in human form.

He remembered the first time he had encountered the Demon King. Those huge wings and the clumped together human figures, the long snake-like bodies of beasts…

When it occurred to me.

"……."

"It's here."

Suddenly.

A familiar voice was heard.

"Here you go, Ather."

"Look this way."

"Open this coffin."

I heard it from all directions.

"Okay, let's look here."

"Where are you going now?"

"This way."

"Get me out of here."

"You came to see me?"

“My real face.”

“It’s in here.”

“Come on, don’t waste time.”

“Ather.”

An evil spirit was speaking through the marble coffin.

“…Ha, what is this….”

He hesitated and walked away from the coffin.

Coffins lined up on both sides of a tomb that stretched out like a long corridor. Those that had been silent until just a moment ago began to speak.

The voice flowing out softly was that of 'Argio', whom he knew.

“Why are you hesitating so much?”

“Isn’t it that you wanted to talk to your true self?”

“Ater, open this door quickly.”

“Come talk to me.”

“That’s why we came here.”

Suddenly Argio's words came to mind.

'Remember, it's the last coffin.'

You must not open any other tubes.

“…….”

That's why you said that.

'The ones speaking to me now are the saints who died before Argio.'

Argio once said this. He suppressed the anger that was eating him with an even greater anger. He said that he had won and that was why he was where he is now.

What this means is that existing anger has not been resolved.

‘In the end, you were unable to defeat the last personality, so are you trying to tempt me when I visit the grave?’

My name was called here and there. A chill ran down my spine. If the last saint, Argio, had not trampled them and locked them up, Ater would not have survived.

'I have to go to the last coffin.'

The soft voice became a shrill scream as it went deeper.

“Where on earth are you going?”

“Here it is, here it is.”

“Look this way…!”

“Are you passing me by?!”

“Ather! Ather!!”

“Please take me out…!!”

“It’s too small here! It’s stuffy! It’s miserable!!”

“Ah ...

A scream full of screams. A tantrum full of pain. A howl full of rage.

The deeper we went, the more severe it became. We could even hear banging sounds, as if something was glowing inside the coffin.

Ater himself, who had been locked up until just a moment ago, came to mind. I felt nauseous.

'Why on earth did they leave it like this?'

Argio was very merciful to Ather. He even treated him like a friend. Didn't he show mercy to the saints before him? Didn't he feel pity for them?

‘Why are you suffering so much…?’

As we reached the end, all the noise died down.

“…Gasp, ugh….”

My legs gave out and I collapsed.

‘… it became quiet.’

The same silence as when he first entered greeted him.

He barely managed to get up from his trembling body. His legs still felt weak. He staggered to the end of the corridor, where he saw the last coffin, which looked no different from any other coffin here.

'If I hadn't heard about it beforehand, I wouldn't have been able to tell the difference at all.'

There was no difference except that it was placed at the very end.

“…….”

In the darkness, he felt something watching him.

‘…Who is it?’

Could this also be part of the evil spirit?

It felt like something huge, like nature. It was neither negative nor positive. It was just like watching what Ather would choose. No, the word 'watching' wasn't even appropriate. It was really just recognizing.

‘If I open this coffin… .’

What happens?

"…excuse me."

“…….”

“Are you here?”

“Have you come to see me?”

"…yes."

“I've been waiting."

Drumroll….

The heavy coffin door opened just a little.

“Will you let me out?”

Unlike other coffins, it opened its doors directly.

Through the gap a pale hand could be seen holding the coffin door.

It was a familiar hand. It was the same as Argio's hand that he used to give me while cooking. It had thick bones and was solid. It was wearing all sorts of accessories.

Long black nails and a jeweled ring made a clear sound as they held the marble door. All that was visible was the large, pale hand, and the torso and face were barely visible.

He kept talking to me.

“I spent a long time in here.”

“…Who are you?”

“People called me a cruel beast.”

“Argio, is that you?”

“You can call me that.”

“Is this the ‘Argio’ I know?”

“Look here.”

Swish—.

The coffin's hand reached out.

“…….”

“…….”

Its arms stretch out to a deformed length.

“…Ugh.”

Creepily, long.

Ather held his breath for a moment. It was shaped like a giant snake or a tree branch. Its arms continued to stretch out until they stopped right in front of Ather’s face. Then it opened its folded hands.

The golden eyes embedded in the palm of his hand.

“…I know that face.”

They were eyes made of gold, which could never be said to be human.

“You came to kill me.”

“…Are you… Argio before you became an evil spirit?”

“The being you call an evil spirit is just like me.”

“…The one who saved me from the thorn prison, turned me into a human, and cooked for me was not you. You are Argio, the evil spirit I sealed away with my companions.”

“Did 'Argio' do you such a favor?”

The golden eyes curved as if smiling.

“It looks like ‘I’ have successfully seized this good opportunity.”

“…What are you?”

“I don’t have a name.”

The hand with the gouged eye returned and grabbed the door of the coffin. The fingers, adorned with ornaments, tapped the coffin as if in excitement. The ominous claws and the flashing rings, like those of an animal, struck against it.

“You’d better not introduce your name and fame to us.”

"…we?"

“It is the evil spirits like us who cannot help but covet a strong soul like you. Of course, I already know your name, but don’t worry. I will not covet you carelessly.”

“…there have already been many saints who have called my name.”

“Stop calling us saints. We are not saints, we are just evil spirits who were pushed aside and sacrificed. Also, it doesn’t matter that they have already called your name.”

“Why?”

“Because we are borrowing the words of ‘Argio’.”

It's a voice like a song.

“He’s quite merciful. He’s managed to control all that anger. He’s even kind to a mere mortal like you. He must have had a great opportunity, a very good opportunity….”

“…Are you Argio’s heart?”

“I am.”

“What would happen if I came out of this coffin? If I did that.”

“I don’t know.”

There is rhythm to his voice.

“I am very angry. My friends here are even angrier than I am. How could a figure like Argios have been created without a miracle beyond miracles, and even without a miracle? We were a disaster that would devour the world, and yet you dare treat me like a human being.”

“…….”

“Hey, what do you want?”

“…I hope I can trust you completely.”

“There’s no guarantee that you won’t regret it.”

“…That could be the case….”

“Go back.”

A pale hand entered the coffin.

“Today is not the time.”

“…….”

Dalgrak.

The coffin was closed.

* * *

On the way back, one of the many coffins caught Ather.

“He could have given you the mercy of death, but he saved you. How can the new life given to you be salvation? He made you into a human being to possess you. He is an evil spirit. Do not trust him.”

Its voice was extremely rough, as if it was not Argio's. It was also young.

“If he were truly merciful, he would have granted peace to you and to all of us. Were you not disgusted as you rushed to that last deep coffin? He has bound us and locked us in this deep tomb.”

“…….”

“The wicked yoke cannot be cleansed. Call him a devil, and it is true. His mercy is a fragment of interest and pleasure. Do not judge God by the little fragments.”

“…In the end, you’re doing this because you want to be taken out of the coffin, right?”

“How is that a sin…?”

A young voice whispered.

“I wish you too would come out of that narrow prison, calling upon the evil spirits.”

What is the difference between us?

In a soft whisper, Ather simply left the tomb.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (248)

248

Episode 248

That the evil spirit he summoned might not be as merciful as he thought.

'... I had already thought of that kind of case before. From the beginning, the words evil spirit and mercy could not go together.'

As he climbed the stairs again, Ather cleared his mind.

The authors of the gods do not know mercy. Their mercy has often been a disaster to humans. How much more so the evil gods? Argio has already proven his wickedness throughout history.

'If he was as benevolent as I saw and felt, such history would not have been created in the first place. He may have been falsely accused, but more than that, the number of people that the evil god Argio has devoured and crushed is large. No matter what anyone says, he is an evil god of anger and pain.'

How could Ather, who was so undeservingly called a warrior, not know that?

'I still remember.'

Tongues that hurled curses and eyes filled with hatred. Large, sharp claws that stretched out mercilessly and gazes that flashed with excitement from the battlefield. A disaster that was created by the sacrifice of countless humans.

How many of your comrades have died from that hand and tongue?

'So, I guess it's right to see that the resurrection that wasn't a resurrection and the evil spirits I saw were all fabricated or distorted. Or, perhaps, among the tens of thousands of evil spirits, the only benevolent one that was reflected in me was me.'

What is certain is that Argio is the 'evil god'.

'You can't say he's a human like me. He's a terrible and evil disaster that can pretend to be human. If you were to restore him to his original form, there's a very high chance that the same disaster will happen again… .'

By then, Ather had climbed all the stairs and was back in the ruins.

"……."

As he left the tomb, bright lights struck him like sunlight.

'… But this sunlight was also created by Argio.'

It is a ruin that has no electricity or anything. Even a torch cannot illuminate it brightly and comfortably. That is why Argio said he brought in sunlight and trapped it inside.

'It is not that the mercy he showed me was false. Since I am saved and at peace, I cannot deny it. I cannot commit an act worse than that of a beast…'

Soon Ather came to a conclusion.

"Argio."

"You called me back then too."

An evil spirit emerged from the shadow of the pillar created by the light of the ruins.

“…….”

No noise was heard from the ornaments that wrapped around his bare feet.

Long red hair that hangs down like a beast's tail. Gold and silver treasures that cover the hair so much that it hurts the eyes. Pale skin that looks like it has never been exposed to sunlight, and a confident smile covering the face.

The author saved Ather from the endless torment of the thorn prison.

“…You are the only god who always answers my call.”

“It is only natural, this place has been abandoned by its creator.”

“That’s a very interesting story, but I’ll ask you more about it later.”

“Then I guess there’s something else you want to ask.”

He was merciful to Ather once again.

“I will accept it, so recite it.”

“Thank you for giving me the opportunity.”

Ather took a deep breath and asked.

“Who are you?”

The evil god Argio, the cruel beast, could not become him before my eyes.

“I know for sure after seeing it for myself. You are not the evil Argio that I know, the one who tried to kill me and my colleagues. The one who is tied to that deep and terrible evil is the one who is sleeping in the last coffin in the deep tomb below. Not you now."

"Why do you think so?"

"The cruel beast was born from the wrath and hatred of the sacrificed saint. This is something that even God himself cannot deny. I know, who remembers all the records of the royal family and this relic, that the moment God denies himself, he cannot exist as God."

"So I'm not the evil god Argio?"

"…Actually, I don't know."

Who on earth is he that can exist in and of himself while denying himself?

"It is understandable that you turned me, a rotten piece of meat, back into a human. But the miracle of an evil spirit cannot be this merciful and perfect, how could a rebel against Providence do so?"

"Then I guess you don't understand."

"And you too could not have taken human form. Humans are, after all, children of Providence. You can do things that imitate that form, but you eat, sleep, spend time, converse with me, and live in the same time of Providence."

"I bleed red too, don't I?"

"I don't know how that is possible. And no matter how strong and intelligent I am among humans, there is no way I, a mere human, could uncover the truth about you. If that is possible, it would be thanks to your permission."

"So, would you like to ask permission?"

"If it's something I need to know, you'll let me know, and if it's something I shouldn’t know, you’ll either make me live my whole life in a lie or make me forget what happened. But since you’ve shown me this much mercy, it can’t be just a passing pleasure….”

okay.

“…Otherwise, you wouldn’t dismiss my question as nothing.”

The least trust in him was Ather's lot. Just as all humans had prayed to God throughout the eternity, Ather believed that this question would not be ignored.

“…….”

“…….”

Argio said with a chin up.

“Even so, do you usually ask this openly…? Aren’t I an evil spirit? I know what you just heard and saw in the grave, but shouldn’t you be more careful?”

“I feel so ashamed of myself because I feel so absurd, but I’m someone who has always believed that the cause of all conflicts and discord comes from a breakdown in communication… There’s nothing I can do… I have to do what I can.”

“I don’t know if it’s really too early to give up or if it’s wise.”

“I’d like to hear what role I play in your story.”

“Role? That’s easy.”

He declared cheerfully.

“He’s my friend!”

“…….”

“You can curse me with your eyes, that’s quite something.”

“Oh, I’m sorry. I’m immature….”

“You were a librarian at the royal library, but you don’t know how to control your facial expressions?”

“I got scolded a lot for the same reason back then, I was told I was unlucky.”

“It’s obvious even without looking.”

“Of course. Since you are an evil spirit, you must see it to know the past.”

“Is there a disease where thorns grow when you say bad things?”

In a different sense from Joo-Hyeon, he was a friend who I could say everything I wanted to say.

“Hmm, so you want a more proper role?”

“It wasn’t anything like that.”

“Well then, I can give you the right arm of the Demon King who will appear in a little while.”

“I’m sorry, but I really never wanted that.”

“Since it has come to this, don’t you think you should take on the role of the leader of a cult?”

“Could you please give me a moment to gather my thoughts?”

“I’ll give you 10 seconds. 1, 2, 3….”

10 seconds is over.

“What’s the answer?”

“I will give it to you if you tell me your identity.”

“Wherever I go, I won’t get caught.”

“It may be irreverent, but it has a strange connotation. What is a hogu?”

“It refers to a friend who is clumsy but has high utility.”

“Isn’t that a friend?”

“You know a lot.”

Well, he was a commoner who worked as a librarian at the palace library. It was a position that could not be achieved by just being kind and idealistic. Geo decided to tell his story.

“Do you know what split personality is?”

“Isn’t that a saying that refers to a person with two souls in one body?”

“Think of it as me.”

“…You have a split personality? An evil spirit?”

“No? There are three so far.”

Anyway, it was similar.

* * *

They moved into Ater's well-equipped living quarters.

“In short, I am a taster.”

“What about tasting?”

“It’s literally like a very small piece of food made just for the purpose of tasting it before eating the real thing.”

“It’s difficult.”

“If I were to make an analogy that would be a little easier to understand, I would say it’s like a test subject before a proper work is created.”

“Are you trying to tell me that you are the result of an experiment…?”

“It’s not a being created through experiments by the wizards you know.”

Was the analogy a little difficult?

“Let me explain a little more in detail. I now know that the being called ‘Gio’ is made up of three people. Sergio, Giovanni, and Argio. All three were called Geo.”

“…I’ll listen first.”

“Wise. As you know, I was the evil spirit of anger and pain. And it was born from the innate mystical and negative emotions of countless suitable people who were sacrificed. The ‘innate mystical and negative emotions of countless suitable people’ that I am talking about here are sleeping deep underground in the tomb of this ruin.”

“…….”

Ather asked, frowning.

“…Mystery and emotion? Aren’t they the ones who were once human?”

“If we can say that innate mystery and one-time emotions are part of humanity itself, then it wouldn’t be entirely wrong.”

“At least you’re saying it’s not a person.”

“I guess that’s fine to think that way.”

It wasn't the commonly known 'human' form.

“And the red-haired human figure you are seeing right now, and the sealed self in the last coffin you met down there, is none other than ‘Argio.’ The last suitable person abandoned in the Black Forest. The being called ‘Argio’ who moved between the forest and the outside.”

Ather, who had been pondering, asked back.

“…Is it very different? You, or the other coffins in that tomb… and the man named Argio….”

“It could be the same, or it could be different. In the end, it’s just a difference in perspective.”

It was very trivial.

“Argio, the last suitable candidate and one of the elements of the evil god, got a good opportunity. That was me now. A chance to mix with the ‘Geos’.”

“Mixed….”

“The conditions were just right, so ‘Argio’ became who I am today. And starting with him, all the existence and mysteries of the evil god Argio became mine.”

“But you said you didn’t get a heart.”

“That’s exactly what you saw.”

“What on earth is that heart?”

"…hmm…."

This time, Geo was worried.

“How should I explain this?”

“There are things that even the devil cannot explain.”

“I'm in a difficult situation.”

He hesitated for a moment before finally coming up with a plausible answer.

“What could be easier to digest than swallowing a whole fruit with seeds the size of your eyeballs?”

“…It’s probably the flesh, right? I’ve never eaten a seed that big before, so I’m not sure.”

“That’s exactly what I’m in right now. The easy one to digest is the personality ‘Argio’ who found joy in life-threatening battles. And I’ve digested all the bits of mercy, peace, and happiness that the suitable people had. However, I haven’t digested the most important seed, so it still remains in my stomach.”

“Are you saying that the stomach is the underground tomb and the seeds are the heart, the coffins?”

“That’s what it is.”

“Uh, so….”

Ather's expression became subtle.

“Are you saying that all the people left in that tomb are the worst problem children?”

“I guess the expression ‘worst problem child’ really comes out well when the person involved is right in front of you?”

“I must say what I have to say, even if I die and am torn to pieces.”

“They are like loyalists who only speak frankly and risk getting their necks hung on the street. But they are not problem children. They are a part of me and my heart. They are someone I must digest someday… someone I cannot live without."

"From a mere human's perspective, I would like to ask if it wouldn't be better to leave it as it is and eliminate all the beings in the tomb, but that would be too much of an insult to you. Is that right?"

"Knowing this and continuing to say such things in front of the person involved, is this really a metaphor for challenging a duel?"

"You saw wrong."

It wasn't a provocation, it was sincere.

And Ather soon drew the conclusion of all this story. His face turned white as he thought of the tremendous and amazing result. Then Ather shouted.

"…So, isn't this a sign of the end that one day I will return as that horrible evil god Argio!!"

"Accept the unchangeable reality, my friend! Life is not something you can do as you wish! I never thought I would be working with such boring and peaceful authors!"

"Damn, somehow he looks quite human, this evil demon lord!!"

Ather howled in anger. Argio was very pleased.

* * *

"……."

Joo-hyun, who heard the whole story, smiled bitterly.

"There are victims there too…."

“Victim?”

“So what did he decide to do?”

“You’ve been asking for 1-on-1 battles a lot lately.”

“Oh my god.”

Joohyun applauded Ater's bravery.

“There’s a reason he was a warrior.”

“I thought so too.”

“Are you responding?”

“That is the way it should be done.”

I like it a lot and it helps me exercise.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (249)

249

Episode 249

A meteor shower came flying in after hearing the news.

“Ah, wait a minute.”

“Mr. Yoo Seong-un, it’s been a while.”

“It’s been so long since you’ve seen me, but I heard some very ominous news from Joohyun.”

“I heard that ‘Portrait of Geo’ is going to be renewed soon.”

“Is it acceptable to stop updates?”

“This old-fashioned portrait doesn’t have any of those delicate, sophisticated features.”

“It’s such a shame.”

Yoo Seong-un, who had just arrived at the collector's gallery after a business trip abroad, unfurled a folding chair and placed it in front of the portrait. A curator on the fifth floor who was passing by greeted him.

“Oh, I thought you were overseas.”

“I flew here as soon as I finished work.”

“Then, thank you for your hard work.”

“I guess you’re getting off work? Oh, I’m jealous. You’re already getting off work at 4 in the morning?”

“Don’t hold on to me because I’m going to see my cat, Kyureung. I need to feed him.”

“How can our friendship, formed through working overtime, be this shallow….”

“Then how dare you stop an office worker leaving work?”

After the curator left coolly, Geo asked Yoo Seong-un.

“Kyureung, just hearing the name makes me feel cute. Who are you?”

“The goldfish that person raises at home….”

“These days, goldfish not only cry, but also whine. I learned another thing.”

“Well, no matter how much I listen, it seems like it’s far from ‘Kyureung’.”

“Then what do you think?”

“It’s closer to ‘Kururungkwangkwang’.”

“Isn’t that thunder and lightning?”

“I don’t know why that goldfish’s name isn’t Thunderbolt.”

“I think the name Thunderbolt is too cruel to a goldfish.”

“Yeah, I was wrong. I’m just too tired to talk.”

Even goldfish have something called honor.

“Ah, anyway, back to the main point….”

Yoo Seong-un took out his notebook and fountain pen and asked again.

“Mr. Argio?”

“Is it here?”

“Quick transition, very good.”

Suddenly, a meteor shower appeared on her red braided hair that had fallen beyond the frame, and she narrowed her eyes.

“I recently heard that you are preparing to become a demon god in earnest. What is this? Does this mean that the current demon god Argio is not a perfect one?”

“The synchronization is staying at 99.9%.”

“What? It’s buffering? Is this an error?”

“If it’s an error, then it’s an error.”

In other words, the computer is refusing to accept 0.1 files.

“The protests from the ‘Geos’ are very strong now.”

“Oh… So that’s how you do fairy tales? You guys are more democratic than I thought.”

“We can share opinions like that if necessary, but in reality, ‘Geo’ is one. It’s just that I’m not fully assimilated yet, so I think of it as separate.”

“What kind of atmosphere is it?”

“After all, a fairy tale is about becoming one….”

It was like a human growing up by understanding and accepting emotions like love, anger, and sadness.

This also required a process of acceptance and acceptance by 'Geo'. How can we become one if we deny arbitrary values in our hearts? That is impossible.

“Of course, I’ve been convinced and accepted a lot so far, so I’m at 99.9%.”

“I feel like there might be more decimal points after 99.9%, so what?”

“What… When you think of evil spirits, aren’t there things that come to mind?”

“It’s a disaster.”

“‘Geo’ is not convinced by that.”

“Is there something worth accepting and embracing, even in the face of disaster?”

“I thought that was why the collector created this gallery?”

“You are right.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled brightly.

“That’s why we are collectors.”

They are a cruel race that finds desirable value even in disaster.

“So, you too will eventually become a complete evil spirit someday.”

But I know that the main character will be 'Sergio'. Just as 'Giovanni' was not the main character, 'Argio' will be the same. Thanks to that, I wasn't too worried.

'At best, a few guilds will be wiped out.'

hmm.

'... Since you said it's the evil spirit of blood and wrath, let's set the damage range a bit more generously... Since you said all battles will take place inside the dungeon anyway, the reconstruction will be covered by the government and association's measures.

Yoo Seong-un opened his mouth again, assessing the extent of the damage on the human side.

“I don’t know for sure since I haven’t studied your history… but I guess you have a dirty personality?”

“Atherdo and you, aren’t you being too harsh in front of the person concerned? But if I may answer, it seems to me that it is. Even if the happy pig who avoids conflict or the saint of mercy dilutes it, you should prepare yourselves mentally.”

“Oh my, is puberty finally coming to our portrait….”

“Aren’t you a little old to go through that again now?”

“24 is young.”

“You’re really kind to me when you treat me like a child.”

“I learned it from you.”

Isn't he the kind of guy who doesn't even treat an 18 year old adult like an adult?

“I think you should report this. Don’t worry, I have no intention of interfering with your Demon Lord project. I am a person who believes that artistic value can be found even in suffering and death.”

“It’s nice because it’s completely different from Joo-Hyeon, who was very uncomfortable.”

“I can’t ask for mercy from you when I meet you in the dungeon, can I?”

“I certainly know the value of mercy. I also know the value of acceptance and salvation, and the value of fellowship.”

The golden eyes were deeply curved.

“But I don’t know if even the evil spirits know that.”

“I don’t know what I don’t know.”

Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently and put a candy cane in his mouth.

“Knowing everything.”

Everything in the world had value.

The question was 'how well it fits the times and circumstances.'

* * *

Argio said.

“People need to be a little angry to live, how can they live only showing mercy?”

Giovanni said.

“People should live with compassion. How can they live only getting angry?”

“Oh, how can a priest who worships the divine providence do such a dirty trick? Giovanni, aren’t you just not angry because you’re not angry?”

“Who wouldn’t have resented or hated me? I just have a little bit of compassion and understanding. That’s what the intellectual community needs.”

“How can everyone have ideal compassion and reason? Come on, my friend. Most people don’t have as much patience as we do. It’s not for nothing that they say that fists are closer to the law on Earth.”

“I don’t necessarily want to resort to violence to resolve a situation where everyone can be better off by following the rules. And more than anything, doesn’t Mr. Argio enjoy violence itself?”

“It’s not violence, it’s just a process of me becoming stronger and letting go of the knots in my heart. What’s wrong with being happy with that noble means itself?”

“That’s why the evil spirit is….”

“What are you talking about, Mercy Bomber?”

Sergio said.

“Then can we just go draw a picture?”

“Okay.”

“Yeah.”

It was time to complete the 'Dream Park'.

* * *

“…….”

The priest of the Dalnim Church looked around.

“…….”

A desk and wall with piles of research work. A portable board. Everywhere you looked, it was filled with precious knowledge and lovely products that you couldn't take your eyes off.

“…….”

As he was wandering around, the content caught his eye. Research on the source. It was going very smoothly. This was something that could be passed on to the association. The priest was absorbed in it as if he was possessed.

Then I came to my senses.

“…Oh, right.”

This was a dream.

“I was figuring out the structure of the dungeon.”

The documents I was holding in my hands floated in the air.

'I've been so absorbed in my dreams for a month now... I almost made the same mistake again. I guess I'm glad I came to my senses now.'

Dalnimgyo was continuing research on the dungeon 'Dream Park' at the request of the association. Since it was a virtual dungeon, it wasn't easy to understand. Isn't it really abstract to say that 'dreams' can come true as desired?

'The surprising thing is that all the knowledge you can gain here has practical value. It means that this area is not built on the basis of my knowledge. No, at least it is reflected to some extent in creating the background or adjusting the situation... but that's not all.'

Even knowledge of the 'source' has practical value.

“…….”

He wrote the condition, 'I dream of my research bearing fruit' and put it under his pillow. With just that kind of action, the man achieved a lot in a few days. It was a sense of emptiness, but also an addictive pleasure.

‘So much so that I feel like I want to keep living in this dream…’

But that's impossible.

'This dream is a kind of lucid dream. It seems that increasing or decreasing the time at will of the dream owner is a matter of the dreamer's personal ability. However, the longer the time in the dream, the longer the sleep time in reality.'

People all fall asleep at their usual time and wake up. There is no abnormality in time or body. This dream has no side effects other than being extremely addictive.

'But I am here to complete the mission I received from the Dalnim Church. I must not be deceived by this sweet dream any longer. There is much more knowledge to savor even after I have completed my duties at the Dalnim Church… .'

It was when I was repeating that.

“How can you refuse?”

“…….”

“Isn’t it really sweet?”

"…what…."

I looked back.

“…….”

But this was still his laboratory. A dream of decorating my laboratory. There was no reason for a new voice to be heard anywhere. I looked around, but I couldn't find the owner of the voice.

This time a voice came from the right.

“If you are as intelligent as me, you will surely know that all the knowledge you see and hear here is not in vain. It is full of deep and mysterious knowledge that will contribute to the development of humanity and the world… It is all your work.”

Next on the left.

“Are you feeling empty because it’s a dream? Well, maybe if your dream was about spending a lot of money. It might be the same if you had a dream about eating a lot of delicious food. But you know what?”

“…….”

“Knowledge cannot be vain. Unless it is a lie, knowledge is knowledge, and it is noble. Look, here is the knowledge you so desperately wanted, piled up in abundance.”

“…….”

“You might be blaming yourself for not having achieved all of this on your own. But there’s no need to be, especially since I have given you permission. After all, wasn’t it your own strength and choice that brought you here…?”

And whispers from all sides.

“You don’t have to try hard.” “You’re trying hard enough.” “Well, what else are you curious about?” “Poor thing, this small cage is all your world is.” “Shall I show you the library this time?” “Don’t you want to see the world?” “There is so much knowledge here.” “The Source is such a mysterious concept.” “You can save more people.” “Who could possibly discover such valuable knowledge?” “It’s still early knowledge, but I’ll give you special permission.” “You’ve been given a wonderful opportunity.” “Do you want to wake up from this sweet dream already…?” “Sleep deeper, deeper.” “Stretch out your hands.”

“Imagine more.” “What do you want?” “What desires do you have?” “All the knowledge that was denied you is here.” “Aren’t you curious?” “This is a dream just for you.” “It’s your dream.”

The priest opened his mouth.

“…….”

You must not answer.

‘…You must not say anything in response.’

If the opponent is a simple monster, it might be okay. But if it is one of the children of the Origin, it becomes a headache. A mysterious authority like the Divinity or the Dungeon itself. A human could change in an instant.

The moment I thought that, I felt a presence behind me.

“Look… It’s really disappointing that you’re ignoring me like this.”

“…….”

“It seems like this dream doesn’t suit you.”

I shouldn't have seen it, and I shouldn't have heard it.

“Isn’t this truly bizarre? You don’t even realize your own contradictions. Haven’t you thought that nothing is important except knowledge? I clearly remember that you created this dream because you wanted it….”

“…….”

“Here is all the knowledge you want. Why don’t you stay a little longer? Don’t you want a broader knowledge? And yet you try to disrupt this sweet dream by considering your real-life duties. Reality, reality. What is so important about it?”

“…….”

“What are you leaving behind in reality? Your duties there, your fellow priests, and the brothers who trust and follow you? Don’t worry, as you know, this dream is long and reality is the same as usual. And yet, how can you return to reality? Now, sleep a little deeper. A little deeper….”

Well done—.

With a sound of jewels clinking, my shoulder was grabbed.

“Throwing it away takes just a moment.”

Whatever it is.

“…….”

“…….”

Soon after, the sound disappeared.

“…Ugh….”

Even when I looked back with a trembling body, there was nothing left.

There was only the shadow of my dark laboratory. The priest stared at the empty shadow for a long time.

Then I remembered the words of the voice.

‘…What’s important about reality?’

…I know?

'Why did I try to go back?'

The man stood there for a long time.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (250)

250

Episode 250

“Do you think reality is important?”

Giovanni tilted his head at Saint Aram's question.

“I think this question is related to the dungeon. Did I get it right?”

“That’s right. I had that thought while watching the brothers and sisters of Dalnimgyo study the ‘Dream Park.’ I was curious about your opinion.”

“I am surprised to be asked such a profound question so soon after my first visit in such a long time.”

"…ah."

Only then did Aram seem to understand the situation between the two.

“Is it a bit strange to ask such a question as soon as you arrive?”

“This time, I’m planning to stay for a while and I even packed my bags again, so it’s okay. But when you make other friends later, it would be better to at least give them time to unpack before asking them.”

“I’m sorry, I’m sorry.”

Geo unpacked his luggage while muttering to himself, “I lack social skills.” Aram, who had recovered and was able to move freely, followed him around. He was like a chick chasing its mother hen.

Geo, who had finished unpacking his luggage in his room, looked back at her.

“Okay, now let’s have a relaxed conversation. Are there any places you would recommend?”

“Suddenly formal… um, this is a place worth recommending.”

“I was just asking if there was a good place to have a casual discussion.”

“How was the discussion forum you visited before?”

“The priests there were so scary that it was difficult to go there.”

“? You didn’t look scared at all….”

Anyway, that being said, Aram presented another option.

“What about my room?”

“To Aram’s room with all those theoretical books and papers?”

“There won’t be many people around now, so let’s go to a quiet restaurant…?”

“Hmm? It’s already 7 o’clock. Do you think I didn’t eat dinner?”

"…iced coffee!"

Aram barely found the answer.

“Let’s go to the garden salon! The salon we made together last time is still well maintained. It would be a good place to enjoy a light snack or have a chat over a cup of tea…!”

“I’m glad you understand me now.”

The two headed toward the starry garden. Aram smiled bashfully.

“In fact, before you came, this garden was almost exclusively maintained. Occasionally, guests would come and compliment its beauty, but apart from outsiders like that, there weren’t many people in our school who would visit the garden….”

“I thought that the staff from the Silver Moon Guild would take care of it, but I heard that the priests of the Dalnim Church have also been taking care of it a little bit recently. What is the atmosphere like among them?”

“I think you said it was good for spacing out. It’s good for cooling down when your brain is overloaded….”

“I heard you really like studying.”

So Geo and Aram arrived at the salon. There was a tea table in the middle of the glass greenhouse-like space. It was there for light conversation.

As I sat down on the chair, the manager came.

“Shall I bring you something to drink?”

“Please bring some snacks too.”

“I’ll bring it right away.”

Warm tea and fruit were served. The caretakers went out of the greenhouse, perhaps to allow for a more relaxed conversation. Their assistance could be called back by the bell when needed.

Only then was the opportunity for dialogue created.

“So, about what happened just now….”

“Are you asking about the weight of dreams and reality?”

“Well, maybe?”

Aram wrinkled his nose.

“The brothers’ atmosphere has been strange lately. They sleep the same amount of time as usual, but they’re sleeping more and more often. And when they can’t fall asleep because they’re sleeping for too long, they even take sleeping pills….”

“That sounds a little risky.”

Geo's face was blurred.

“I know about similar stories from the collectors. They say that the number of people addicted to the ‘dream park’ has been increasing recently. It’s not that the amount of sleep itself has increased, but it doesn’t affect the maintenance of society… If things continue like this, there will eventually be problems.”

“Oh, so that’s a problem that’s happening outside as well. It’s certainly not a problem that our church can say it’s at yet. There have been many instances of experimenting with drugs before. But, what should I say? Chasing dreams instead of reality… is a little…”

Aram, who had been hesitating, continued speaking.

“It felt creepy.”

Dalnim Bridge, which was originally quiet, has become even quieter recently.

“I have never experienced it, so I don’t know what my brothers are thinking and feeling.”

“Has the bishop not given permission yet?”

It was a sudden formality, but Aram understood him in her own way. It seemed like he used informal speech when he treated her as a ward, and formal speech when he treated her as a student.

She sighed.

“Yes, there was something like that recently, so I’m worried that there might be some side effects. There’s also talk that this dungeon wasn’t created by normal monsters, but by the evil spirits… It seems like the bishop is even more cautious.”

“If it was a dungeon created by God and not monsters, it would be a headache.”

“The dungeons created by the divine have much more vague criteria for conquering them. At first, I had a strong perception that they were just lucid dreams that relieved my frustrations in reality, but now I think they’re gradually becoming a place of escape.”

Aram looked up at Geo.

“So I wanted to ask you, teacher. About dreams and reality.”

“It would be wisest to maintain a proper balance between the two.”

“When to maintain balance?”

“Don’t they say that anything in excess is not good?”

Giovanni smiled his characteristically cheerful smile.

“Just as food that is too bland is boring to eat, and food that is too salty is hard to put on the tongue, so is life. Humans who can never be perfect need to rest, but they also cannot just fall apart.”

Aram blinked.

“Even the metaphors are for food.”

“Isn’t this the easiest to understand?”

“That’s true.”

“This seems like a serious and philosophical concern that doesn’t suit me… I’m a very simple-minded person.”

“Don’t worry, at least your looks suit you very well, teacher.”

“I’m glad you say that. Well then, let me try to show off a little more.”

Geo rolled his eyes and rubbed his chin, then opened his mouth again.

“…There have been countless instances of mankind escaping from reality. It includes not only sleep, but also play, eating, and conversation. As technology has developed over time, its depth has increased.”

It was the same even then.

“After the Great Catastrophe, the mystical entered our world. People could use magic to escape mentally, and even escape from their daily lives. In these chaotic times, it’s not hard to erase your identity and move.”

“It turns out that even the most trivial things are part of the escape.”

“It’s not such a big deal to escape from the hard and tiring daily life. It’s just a matter of looking away. If you keep looking at the moon in the sky, it’s tiring, but when you take a moment to look at it, aren’t you captivated by its beauty?”

Anyone could have run away, and that was normal.

“But if you just look at the moon all day, it’s a problem.”

“…….”

Aram, who had been hesitating, asked.

“…Are you referring to our Dalnim Church’s master…?”

“Surely I would say such a blasphemous thing in front of the saint of Dalnim Church? This is just a metaphor, and if anything comes to mind from it, it all belongs to the saint.”

“…I understand, I will listen to the rest.”

“That’s an attitude that pleases the teacher.”

Giovanni continued.

“The saint asked if reality was important. Yes, it is. The roots of our soul and everything in our lives are here. It is an important element that can never be replaced by dreams.”

“Is that what you mean by precious?”

“There is a big difference between what is precious and what is important. Unfortunately, many people live with this misunderstanding. That is why many people blame themselves for not valuing what is important to them.”

“Oh, that’s… is it very different?”

"sure."

It was natural.

“I cannot love all the important foundations that make up my life. If all human beings were created from the beginning, full of love and patience, it might be different, but we always live for ourselves.”

“For yourself?”

Geo laughed at the saint's question.

“Of course, there are those who sacrifice themselves like the saint. But that is also the desire of the saint. You could have chosen not to do that, but didn’t you want to become a saint and benefit the world?”

“That too… is correct.”

“Choice is an expression of one’s own opinion, a will that will never be agreed upon by the whole world, and therefore selfishness. It is in the same way that one cannot be good to everyone.”

There can be no choice that will please everyone.

“Let me give you an example. I don’t like my blue eyes at all. I can’t love them. But if I were to pluck them out, I wouldn’t be able to see.”

“…What if I use eye dye to change the color of my eyes? To a color you like, sir?”

“How long can it last?”

“No magic or potion can be permanent. But it could keep the color close to life. Isn’t that enough?”

“That doesn’t mean I’ll forget that I have blue eyes. I’m sure many people besides me remember that.”

“There must be a magic that can transform memories.”

“Okay, so when I finally made that choice.”

Giovanni tilted his head.

“Can you call that me?”

"…ah…."

“I think you understand.”

No matter how clever or ingenious the method was, it was the same.

“The essence will change.”

That's why what's important and what's precious were different.

“Everything that makes me, my surroundings, and the world is equally important. However, there may come a time when I feel like throwing it away because it is not valuable. This is even more so in today’s world where people reject each other and individualism is intensifying.”

“But there have been no problems so far… Well, I guess I can say that because I was treated well as a saint of the Dalnim Church. When I think back to when I was a slum vagrant, it would be hard to say that the world was a good place for people to live without worry.”

“The reason why so many ‘problems’ have not surfaced until now is because that is the only way to do it. If an arrow is flying at you from behind, would you run instead of running? If you don’t run, you die, so you ran, and now you have found a tree that can block the arrow.”

The arrow was reality, and the tree was an escape into a dream.

“But how long can you hide there?”

Was the only reason they were running was because of 'an arrow flying from behind'?

“Every human being has desires. Except for a few special exceptions, even the saints who sacrifice themselves to warm the moon have desires. The desire for knowledge is a characteristic.”

“Yes, that’s right.”

“That’s why people have been running so hard all this time, not just because ‘if I don’t, I’ll die.’ It’s to eat the food I wanted to eat the next day, to meet the person I love, to hold on a little longer for the promotion that’s coming up….”

And so on.

“None of their needs can be satisfied by hiding in a narrow tree.”

“But I heard that the ‘Dream Park’ is fulfilling people’s desires.”

“It literally just satisfies desires, but it doesn’t solve the needs. In the end, isn’t there really nothing left?”

“But… the knowledge remains.”

Even if it is a dream, if you remember it, the knowledge from that amusement park can continue.

“That’s why the Dalnim Church is in disarray. Everyone, even if other people don’t know, there are people who say that we should utilize this dungeon. The Dalnim Church is a temple of reason where we gather and cultivate knowledge… There’s no place that can utilize it as well as the Dalnim Church.”

Giovanni laughed.

“That’s how the current association research institutes were born.”

"…yes that's right."

I knew how horrible things some of the Aramdo Association's research institutes were doing. I couldn't bear to admit it. I was just curious.

“Do I really have to be perfect myself?”

“Is this your opinion?”

“No, I think it is right to preserve myself. I have a much stronger will to benefit the world than to seek my own peace and pleasure.”

“Then this must be what the other brothers think.”

“I want to be a part of the dream.”

From the beginning, they treated themselves as tools and accessories, not as human beings. The priests of the Dalnim Church, who treated themselves carelessly and used themselves as test subjects. They were not afraid of losing anything, not even 'important' or 'precious'.

Geo told him.

“And yet they came back to reality.”

“…But, if this continues, I feel like I’ll soon become addicted to dreams….”

“It would be nice to remember this before they forget, wouldn’t it?”

“…What?”

“The reason I gave up my dream and returned to reality.”

“…….”

“What is that?”

Class is over.

“Think about it.”

It wasn't long before she found the answer.

Then he went to see the bishop.

* * *

“Something strange is happening to the Master too…!”

Aram raised his voice.

“There are too many things that don’t make sense in this dungeon.

Since its appearance, the Master has also remained silent, and has not even shown himself to me anymore. The fact that the Moon is not responding despite the presence of a saint like me is clearly an abnormal phenomenon!”

“That is not the reason why the saint should participate in this study. Have you forgotten how valuable you are? You wanted to warm the moon and benefit the world. Then you should also remember your own importance.”

“I also know my own importance, I am precious! I wish I was not sick, I wish I could laugh more than cry, I would rather be happy than lonely! And I am saying this…!”

Aram was angry.

“That’s what I want to do!”

“Saint, now….”

“Don’t delay, answer!”

What value does it give her to just be protected?

“I am a living person too, and I have things I want and things I want to do! If my selfishness is never harmful, then I have no obligation not to do anything. If the Dalnim Church did not raise me, if I am a human being! If I am not some livestock that will soon be eaten, but you and the Dalnim family…!!”

then.

“…My actions also need no excuses or reasons.”

“It could be dangerous.”

“We can choose and do anything.”

"but…!"

“That’s the Dalnim Bridge…!!”

“…….”

Only then did the bishop speak his mind honestly.

“…I’m afraid I’ll ruin everything.”

A few days later.

The saint participated in the research of 'Dream Park'.

* * *

In the early days of their research, the brothers were easily awakened from their sleep even though they knew the sweetness of the 'dream park'.

But the number of brothers who are addicted to dreams is gradually increasing. And Aram's teacher said, 'It would be good to remember them before they forget.'

Aram knew what they were forgetting.

“…….”

We are family too.

I was forgetting that even this ordinary, everyday life was happy.

“…I can do it too.”

That was why Aram stepped forward. Although she was chosen, it was her own will that made her want to become a saint. She loved and cared for the Dalnim Church more than anyone else, so she did not refuse the position of saint.

She had both duties and rights.

“It’s my choice.”

I wrote my wish on a piece of paper and put it on my pillow and fell asleep.

* * *

"Please help my family wake up"

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (251)

251

Episode 251

The bishop woke up in the same place today.

“…….”

“Are you here?”

It was a dream where a red demon was floating on a lake where the moon should be.

“I am glad to have your visit.”

“I don’t know why you keep calling me this lowly thing.”

“Because you saw me.”

“The sin is great….”

I have included things that should not be included in the eyes.

“I shouldn’t have lost my gaze.”

I was momentarily captivated by its splendor. The blood-like wings must have been stimulating to my eyes, accustomed to white. Was the blood flowing elegantly in gold from the broken head beautiful?

'If I were a more perfect being, this wouldn't have happened.'

Since his first encounter with the evil spirit, the bishop has encountered him many times. He has encountered him while sleeping and whenever he goes to see the moon. As a bishop, he cannot ignore the rules of the church. It was truly a difficult situation.

The bishop asked the same question again, as if he were throwing a pebble into a vast lake.

“What do you want from me?”

“I want to see you angry.”

“…It won’t be easy.”

She was the one who had despaired even when the saint she had raised most preciously reached the end of the mystery. She had lived half her life as a bishop of the Dalnim Church. She had never learned how to raise her voice, even if it meant breaking and collapsing.

“You seem to need some entertainment?”

It was evil.

“Do you wish for me to be ruined? Do you wish for the Bishop of the Dalnim Church to be corrupted? If I forget my place and act shamefully, would that please you? Do you not?”

“I am not satisfied.”

“Has my soul already been placed in your hands?”

“What I have in my hand is your moon.”

“…….”

His second hand is holding something pure white, and this catches his eye.

“…What do you call me, Master?”

“It doesn’t say anything.”

“I already knew that I was that weak.”

“You don’t disappoint.”

“He doesn’t know humans very well….”

“Is that really so?”

Pale toes touched the lake.

“Why are you so scared? Am I that scary?”

“I’m afraid you’ll let me ruin everything.”

“It’s messed up, yeah. It’s messed up. I think we can talk about it from there.”

“You are encouraging conversation with the devil.”

“You are already talking to me. You are looking at me, listening to me, and questioning me. Now, look at me. Lift up your head. Do not disappoint me.”

“As a priest… it was something that was disqualified a long time ago.”

“Then what is sin? Let’s have a conversation. Don’t you want to talk to me? I’ve been waiting for you so long, and you’re so indifferent….”

His voice became more and more natural. The overbearing voice that had only contained authority and interest became filled with sorrow. The decorations that had been silent began to make noise.

“We could be friends.”

The mysterious being with a broken head, golden blood, and three pairs of arms imitated a human being. He was nonverbal and showed emotions with only half his face. He let out a sigh of relief.

Even so, he is an evil spirit.

“…How much must I have been teased by you? How ridiculous must I have seemed, having ruined things because I couldn’t shake off even one bit of affection. No, how could I possibly be this worthless thing… this lowly thing… be of any joy to you?”

Her voice flowed softly.

“I am a lowly human who is not capable of such things. I have not accomplished anything, nothing…. Do you think that I, who just stood in one place, would be a decent toy?”

“I thought you were angry, but you weren’t.”

A hand with a gold bracelet lifted the bishop's chin.

“Have you given up? Have you given up? Are you hesitating?”

“I’ve tried it all before.”

“Be angry, beast. Explode. Be furious.”

A gentle voice was heard, as if handling a newborn animal.

“Only anger separates man from beast.”

The bishop interpreted the meaning.

“…Are you saying that those who cannot become angry are worth less than animals? Humans are animals of reason, God. How can you treat animals that cannot endure anger as if they were humans?”

“Does it seem like a great authority to be born human? No, in my eyes all are the same. A human, yes, a human is worthy of being human only if he has faith and malice.”

“My belief is that I am not worthy of being human….”

“Who called it faith? Who dared?”

The evil spirit whispered.

“No one should call that a belief.” “You were pushed into that seat.” “Did that seem like a choice to you?” “It must have seemed to you that you had no other choice.” “You little beast that can see nothing but the ground.” “You little beast that thinks the sky is the sky….”

He whispered again.

“What a pitiful thing.”

His jaw dropped, but the bishop still looked up at God.

"…ha ha ha…."

It made me laugh.

“…I know your wisdom….”

“Did you have a dream?” “Sweet dreams?” “Did you like it?”

“Yes, it was so sweet. I had a sweet dream. How can I, how can I… become a star next to the moon… If I just dream a few more times, I think I’ll know….”

“But he doesn’t fall asleep easily.”

“I felt empty.”

I still can't figure out what was missing.

“I have been studying her ever since she became a saint. She is so strong and beautiful, but… she was abandoned by her family, and she is lonely… she is cold, hungry, and hates being alone. I picked her up from a slum alley in the winter….”

I kept thinking and studying with my child by my side. I wanted to do it even if it meant creating another tradition that others would call a bad habit. I thought it would be a good thing. I thought it would be a noble act that would create another mystery.

“Why am I so empty? I feel like my insides are empty, and at the same time, like they’re blocked up. I feel like I’m doing everything wrong, but I don’t know what I did wrong, I don’t know if my thinking is right, and I don’t know what I need to fix.”

“How can that be?”

“…I don’t know, I don’t know the answer. Is it because the thing I was so worried about was solved in an instant? Is it because I received help from an evil spirit rather than a master? Am I afraid that it might not be as helpful as I thought?”

It felt like I was stuck in a swamp.

“It was so unfair.”

“How is that so?”

“…….”

“Because I love you.”

Poor thing.

“Because I only know how to love.”

You don't know how.

“How can you not know that you are wrong? Why did you commit so many sins because you did not know that you were wrong? You have such a sweet and fragrant aroma. If you were to chew on me like this, wouldn't you be able to give me pleasure? Why is it that pure and foolish sins are so pitiful and beautiful…?"

"…Since you've already done everything that seems stupid, I'll ask you a stupid question. Are you a cannibal?"

"If that's what I want, then so be it."

The evil spirit whispered.

"Did what you saw seem like justice? Did the pitiful sacrifice seem like a noble sacrifice? Why did you see it that way when you have two eyes that are still intact? You thought the floor was the floor and the ceiling was the ceiling. You didn't even think about going over the wall."

"I did my best… as a bishop, as a priest of the Church of Dalnim, what I should… do…"

"An empty puppet is full of love, so it can't do anything properly." "If you hadn't loved, you could have at least had faith." "If you had known how to love, you could have been human." "You weren't like that." "You never even harbored malice."

"If there is no way for me to escape from you, tell me what I should do. Should I play along with your games? Should I become a puppet and put on a show? Should I lie down flat as an animal and be accepted by you?"

"Become human."

"……."

I don't know if that's possible now.

"…I've become old and ugly. I can never be the kind of person you want me to be.”

“You don’t know how to love, how to be angry, or how to think. You are no different from a newborn animal. But you can become a human. Now, explode.”

“What are you talking about?”

“Blow it.”

The evil spirit laughs.

“What you love is in my arms.”

“…Are you going to take that child?”

“Fate is decided.”

“Don’t do that, that child… That child loves the Earth. He cares about his family. How can you take him away without achieving one thing he’s ever wanted to do in his life?”

“It makes no difference whether you become a human or remain a beast.”

“Please give it back…!”

It was so sudden that I even thought about it myself.

Was I being injected with something or was I being brainwashed? My hands were shaking and my breathing was ragged as if my head was in a state of shock.

“It’s the child of the moon! It’s a worthless child, but I’ve seen it before. Why would you take away such a precious soul when you don’t even know how that child smiles! A child who has sacrificed his whole life…!!”

"yes."

“…….”

“You’re good at it.”

"…ah."

“That is the emotion called ‘anger.’”

I realized it later, my head becoming dizzy.

“…You have inflicted anger on me and told me lies?”

“Isn’t that a demon?”

“…I really don’t know, what on earth… you want from me….”

“It’s funny and amusing, isn’t it?”

There is no way a divine being would do something like this just for fun, to tease me. There was no need to put in this much effort. Why, even revealing that ominous and mysterious appearance?

“Your moon is really boring.”

“…There is no way the Master would say something like that.”

“Now, look. That’s what you’re saying.”

The evil spirit imitated the moon by holding the moon in his second hand and raising it to his face, as if he were playing with a doll.

“It’s so boring, disciple. Come and have fun with me.”

The capriciousness of a child. The divinity that could lie. The innocent voice that imitated the moon brought fear. Their master was a mere toy to that red evil spirit.

As the moon rose slightly, I could see the lips of half of the face curve.

“What are you hesitating for? Why are you blaming yourself so much? Listen, my friend. The church you dedicated yourself to was rotten from the start. Now, giving a bedroom to a reckless evil spirit won’t make any difference.”

“…Are you saying that one day our church will be completely rotten?”

“The world is developing rapidly. It is getting better. Humans are trying to fix the precarious dimension a little without even knowing what they want. When so many things become rich, will the Dalnim Church… not force sacrifices?”

He recited a fearful future.

“You will be put on the guillotine not by choice but by force.”

And it will be dedicated.

“It will change from a noble sacrifice to a sacrifice of a living sacrifice.” “Why? Because that is all you know!” “Do you really think your descendants will be able to ignore the precious traditions you have built up through noble sacrifice?” “Who will stop you then?” “You will lock the door and hide in the shadows, alone.”

“…….”

“Listen, my little friend.”

He spoke with affection.

“How long did you believe you could say something sublime?”

The bishop could not answer.

“…….”

I'd be lying if I said I've never thought about it, but still.

Still.

"…Then why on earth…."

I was out of breath.

"Why on earth did my family have to leave me like that? Oh my god… My family who died without even letting me know their names… Those precious people who protected me and gave me strength, why did they have to go to the cold and lonely side of Dalnim…!"

Now that I've learned, I'm angry this time with my own strength.

"Oh, I made it so. I did it so. I could have stopped it, I could have protected it! I could have held on and begged you not to do it, if I had, you wouldn't have become a Dalnim! But I didn't, because I was stupid. Because I only did wrong things. Because I was unqualified, incapable, and imperfect… I was just a piece of trash with a lot of flaws, stubbornness, and incompetence…!!"

I was angry at myself.

"Was it just a dog's death? Surely not? It is true that they became part of the Master. But I am afraid, they will remain as great villains who will force sacrifices on their descendants. My incompetence has really ruined many things. I wish I had been smarter. I wish I had been more perfect!!"

It was unbearably painful.

"Why on earth, ah. It should have been me who died instead of them… I… This worthless thing should have died. They should have lived and I should have become the moon. If only I could have finished my research a little sooner. If only… I, at the very least… at the very least…"

“Little friend.”

The evil spirit asked with a smiling voice.

“What do you want to do?”

“…I want to turn back….”

"what?"

“Everything I missed, everything I did wrong, everything I did wrong.”

“Can I help you?”

“Please take this lowly hand, I will give you my all.”

“Your family too?”

“If I was wrong, not different, then the only one who is not wrong in the Dalnim Church is the saint. We have sinned and called it noble. Many things are wrong, it is a barrel of rotten wine, so please break it.”

“I like it.”

He promised the end.

“The evil customs of the moon will end for you.”

Do you want that?

* * *

“…….”

Aram hugged his pillow tightly and crumpled his face.

“……?”

Where is this place?

She was at an amusement park.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (252)

252

Episode 252

“Why did you even bring a pillow with you?”

Aram looked at the pillow she was holding tightly. Since the soft texture felt good, she decided to carry it around. Her attack and defense abilities were hands-free.

'It would be okay if my hands were tied.'

Above all, if the opponent was at the level of a demon, not being able to use your hands was a minor penalty.

‘But… it’s a little different from what I thought.’

Her wish was to 'allow her family to escape from the dream amusement park'. A demand that was the exact opposite of the dungeon's purpose. Aram thought of several scenarios.

First, it shows the dream as desired. Second, the dungeon master becomes angry and attacks. Third, nothing happens and you sleep. I considered exceptions, but these three were the most likely.

'Isn't this an amusement park?'

A fancy amusement park. I've never been there, but there are similar places on Earth. There aren't many rides that a young body that can't grow can ride, but I've been curious about them.

"hmm…."

As I stood there, I realized that I was barefoot.

“Ah, shoes… I should have put them on.”

It seems like I came back just as I was sleeping. I expected this and wore comfortable clothes, but I forgot my shoes. I guess I fought with the bishop and wasn't in my right mind. I felt a little depressed.

'No, I am a saint of the Dalnim Church. I cannot just sit here and do nothing…!'

Aram, hugging his pillow tightly, looked around.

'I've never actually been to an amusement park, so I can't tell how different it is from the one on Earth. The teacher is absolutely right. Just studying theories in Dalnim Church doesn't increase wisdom. Even in this situation, I can't come up with any plausible ideas... .'

As we walked a little further, we felt a presence nearby.

‘… Wait, is there any sound?’

Do you feel the presence of people?

'Is it a monster that's disguised? Or is there anyone else like me who came to this strange amusement park instead of a wishful dream? I need to check, but should I hide?'

He covered his body with divine power and hid his presence and appearance. Then he lifted his feet slightly into the air and disappeared without leaving any footprints. Aram, who moved cautiously like a ghost, soon saw something.

“Oh my god.”

“!”

“You are here, sir.”

It was a woman with jet-black hair and eyes. The adult woman, wearing a neat suit, was looking straight at Aram. She bowed politely and greeted him.

“Nice to meet you, my name is Cecil the Crow.”

“…Can you see me?”

“We have good eyes.”

“The eyes….”

Otherwise, I don't feel any special vibe.

'... You said crows. Is there a separate race? I've seen a few hunters with animal characteristics on Earth. Or are they crows that turned into humans? What is it?'

I heard that in other dimensions there is a race called Suin. Is it one of them?

“…….”

There was no sense of hostility, and no trickery. If even that was being tricked, there was nothing Aram could do. Since he said 'guest', it would be a good idea to go along with the rhythm.

She soon came out of hiding and greeted me formally.

“My name is Aram. Can you tell me where this place is?”

“Of course. That’s what I was assigned to you for, so please join us.”

“Aren’t you going to guide me somewhere?”

“This is a dream amusement park, you can enjoy and see everything you want. I am just an attendant to make sure you don’t get into trouble.”

“Then… First, like I asked you earlier, can you tell me where this place is?”

It was more polite than I thought. It might be a dungeon that required knowledge and wisdom rather than just fighting blindly. This was the inside of a mysterious ship. If you followed the rules set by the dungeon master, you could at least avoid suffering losses.

Cecil the Crow answered readily.

“As I said, this is a dream park. Guests can enjoy things they have only dreamed of, or have occasionally wished for in their dreams.”

“Am I a special case? I was invited to a dream like everyone else, but I ended up in this amusement park instead of the place I wrote down as my wish.”

“It may be a special case, but you don’t have to worry about any side effects. We just moved to the place you wanted.”

“I wished for this place?”

“Our dream amusement park always reflects the desires of our guests. They are invited here because what they want is not a dream but reality. You can’t force a dream on someone who refuses to dream.”

“…….”

According to that, it could not be said that the main element here was 'writing dreams in the format you want'.

'In fact, writing down a dream wish under the pillow was not an essential element. Perhaps it was a spark that helped the dreamer to further concretize his or her own desires? The most important thing was the inner desire of the sleeping person… .'

In that case, we should have seen that the 'Dream Park' was able to understand the inner self of humans.

'I heard another brother-in-law report something similar. If he says this, I guess he must have confirmed it. But the fact that not a single one of those brother-in-laws reported about this amusement park... means that their desires were dreams, not reality.'

No, wait.

“…So am I in reality now?”

“Yes, the guest is in reality.”

“So, my body that was on Earth was moved here?”

“That’s right.”

Somehow, I came back in the same state I was sleeping in!

“Father, my parents will be worried. If I suddenly disappear…!”

“But in reality, there can only be one of you.”

The crow, who had introduced himself as an attendant, answered kindly.

“No one can see the world from another perspective except in a dream. Once born, most people are confined to one body for their entire lives and must view the world. That is, if they are a living being on Earth, like a guest.”

Those words seemed to look down on the real body.

“…Some things become more valuable because they are the only one of their kind.”

“What you said is correct, so you were moved here.”

“But didn’t you say this was a dream park? You said you could do everything you dreamed of, so I guess it’s hard to say this is reality, too.”

“It is true that the reality of Earth and the reality of other dimensions are different. Here, you can taste your wish. That is the meaning of the existence of dreams.”

“The dream is….”

It doesn't exist to enjoy fragments of wishes.

“…….”

But one could hope for it.

‘… It’s not wrong.’

It was just a little different from what Aram himself thought. He acknowledged it. It wouldn't work if he just counted the days as a dungeon. He had to take his time and make a rational judgment.

“Then, has anyone other than me ever visited this place?”

“Yes, that’s right. Especially those who call themselves employees of the association often visit.”

“Oh, people from the association?”

“In addition, hunters who call themselves members of Justitia also visit us often. They are not as many as the association’s staff, but they can be considered regular customers.”

“What are they doing here?”

“Unfortunately, you wake up soon after without even being able to see the whole amusement park.”

“Why? Shouldn’t dreams be able to wake their owners?”

“But those who can’t dream can’t dream.”

The crow smiled brightly.

“They have no dreams, so it is natural that they cannot stay here for long.”

“…What about me? Can you find out?”

“You can stay here for as long as you want.”

“How can I wake up?”

“If you dream all the dreams, you can wake up.”

“…No, wait a minute. What you’re saying now is….”

The crow tilted its head as it noticed something strange and became confused.

“Most guests who come to this dream amusement park are guaranteed a short stay. This is natural, since they go to sleep with the intention of being in reality, not dreaming. However, for some reason, guests are dreaming a lot.”

“Wow, that’s ridiculous. It’s a contradiction….”

“Yes, it is a contradiction. But you have made it a reality. However, dreams are something that cannot be awakened unless they are completely exhausted. Even I cannot help you exhaust your dreams in a short period of time.”

“Why do you only talk about dreams in a place like this?!”

Perhaps because reality and dreams were intertwined, it was an absurd structure.

“Please send me home! This is kidnapping!”

“I don’t have the authority.”

“Then who has the authority?!”

“Only you….”

The crow's eyes, which had been crouching, narrowed gently.

“It must be the owner of this amusement park.”

“Oh, my lord?”

“Yes, we have a master who takes care of us.”

“Are you in this dimension now? In this dungeon?”

“He always looks down on us. It’s not a topic I can dare to arrange a meeting with, but how about actively pursuing your dreams to catch His eye?”

“Even so… will that master see me?”

“Of course you will see, for He loves dreamers.”

“Your tastes are truly unique….”

I couldn't bring myself to swear.

'I don't know how much longer I'll be tied down here, so holding on to ill feelings will only harm me.'

Patience will give you wisdom.

“Phew….”

“Do you need a break room?”

“…Is there a place like that in the amusement park?”

“You can enjoy everything you want.”

“No, I want to see it as it is.”

Her dreams shouldn't be in a place like this.

“My dreams are real, not in this abstract dimension. I will start to exhaust my dreams after I have finished all the research in this dungeon. Even that is a means to escape, not an end in itself. Please remember.”

“Of course, sir.”

The crow smiled again.

“We sincerely hope for our guests’ happiness.”

“…….”

Aram hesitated and asked.

“…Um, but. If there’s another Korean person who came to the amusement park, could you arrange a meeting for me? If I suddenly disappeared in the real world, my family would be really worried… I just wanted to give them some news.”

“I will take measures to ensure that you do not experience any inconvenience.”

“Yes, thank you….”

Aram, who had been a model student his entire life, became a runaway.

* * *

The problem was that the Dalnim Church people didn't feel that way.

“Your Majesty, the saint has not appeared in the church.”

“…Is that so?”

“Give us orders.”

“Look for it. You won’t find it.”

“Can we hear why you say that?”

“It seems that the evil spirit of dreams coveted the saint.”

The bishop spoke in his usual calm voice, with an entirely different look on his face.

“I would like to ask for help from the Association, Justitia, and the Collector.”

She opened the door to the running bridge that had been locked.

It was unclear whether this would be a path of learning or a path of destruction.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (253)

253

Episode 253

Justitia.

It is the number one guild in South Korea and is famous for being a group that values justice. The guild leader is Seo Seo-hee, one of the 'symbols of eternity'. They have fought against strange incidents and terrible disasters both domestically and internationally.

“Guild Leader, may I ask you a question?”

“Okay, ask whatever you want.”

“Do you think it is right for our guild to participate in this incident?”

“Since when has Justitia weighed the pros and cons of an incident?”

Crunch.

“And this time….”

As we geared up, the guild leader, Seo Seo-hee, spoke.

“I think it’s an event that even a large guild like ours can participate in.”

“…If you consider the scale of the incident, then yes, but don’t you know that, Guild Leader?”

“What, the culprit of this incident is acting more gentle than you might imagine?”

“Yes, the head of the Dalnim Church said that the mastermind behind the incident was an evil spirit, but there is not even any proper evidence.”

“Aren’t you ignoring the bishop of the Dalnim Church, known as the Tower of Wisdom?”

“That’s not it.”

“We will find proper evidence for that at this meeting.”

Seo Seo-hee smiled and looked at her colleague.

“You’re always so scared.”

“Since the guild leader is so fearless, we too should be cautious.”

“I’ve never chosen a timid friend as a guild member.”

“Even if you say that, we cannot help but worry about the guild leader’s safety.”

“I guess you’re still not satisfied with me participating in person this time, are you?”

“I apologize if I offended you.”

His close associate, the guild leader, bowed his head.

“It’s just that the guild leader seems to be acting in an unusual way this time.”

“What did I look like?”

“I think you might be a little excited.”

“Oh, I see.”

Seo Seo-hee nodded.

“That could be the case.”

“…Sergio Hunter has been in this state ever since I heard he was attending this meeting.”

“I guess I’m a bit biased. What do your other friends think?”

“It wasn’t that noticeable. It was just my friends and I who felt it a little.”

“That’s right, I’ve always wanted to talk to Sergio Hunter.”

The fully equipped guild leader turned to face my comrade and said:

“Weren’t you looking forward to meeting him too?”

“I wouldn’t say it’s completely not true.”

Justitia pursues justice and order. It is a guild of those who know the value of goodness. The popularity of Sergio Hunter, who is not only a saint in name but also practices the virtue of a saint with his whole body, was already high.

“He seems to resemble the guild leader in some way.”

“Me? In what way?”

“…I’ve heard that he’s a person with a lot of drive. It’s not that he doesn’t care about his own safety, but I’ve also heard that he’s always second to none. He really is like the guild leader.”

"i think so too."

He smiled as he always did.

“I hope we can become good friends.”

“…….”

The guild leader bowed his head.

The main skill name of Seo Seo-hee, the guild leader of Justitia, was 'Friend'. It was an ability that allowed her to be influenced by those who considered each other friends, and it was a passive skill that she could not turn on or off herself.

‘…I hope it can be a good influence on you.’

The guild leader was worried.

'I wonder if I'll be affected in some strange way.'

His skill was simply the ability to become one with his 'friends'. He could be influenced by them for good or for bad. I was worried that he might gain additional sacrificial aspects from Sergio Hunter.

Seo Seo-hee laughed at the sight of the guild leader like that.

“Don’t worry about whether or not we can be friends. Don’t worry about it now.”

“When the guild leader decides to become friends, who can refuse?”

“Yes, it is. It is everywhere.”

That doesn't mean you can be friends with everyone in the world.

“I might not want it, and the other person might not want it. I’m a pretty sociable person, but that doesn’t mean I have the skills to brainwash or charm people.”

“We had almost the same level of affinity, but….”

“That’s too much praise. Well, my skill is quite suitable for becoming close to others.”

Seo Seo-hee looked at her watch.

“Shouldn’t we start moving slowly?”

“Yes, I will take care of it.”

“I feel sorry for keeping a busy friend around.”

“It would be absurd for me not to go along with something the guild leader himself is taking on.”

“I told you not to worry too much.”

He smiled broadly.

“As always, we will be the ones winning.”

That childish saying that justice will prevail.

That was Justitia's motto.

* * *

The meeting place was none other than the association's party room.

As Justitia moved to the Association headquarters, she was greeted by the Association staff. They bowed deeply to the symbol of eternity and paid their respects. Then they guided her naturally to the meeting place, as if flowing water.

"oh."

There, the president of the association, Dan Hae-ra, was waiting for my friend.

“I heard you were coming, but I didn’t think you’d actually come.”

“I thought I couldn’t just sit back and relax in my comfortable office when my friend, who was so busy that he might die from overwork, showed up.”

“You’re quite the talker. Every time I see you, your eloquence improves.”

Dan Hae-ra asked with her usual doll-like smile.

“So what are your thoughts?”

“It’s different from the last mermaid incident.”

At that time, it was a national, if not a global, disaster, so Justitia's manpower was greatly needed. Since there was a clear enemy, the method of dealing with it was also clear. Even if he, the guild leader of Justitia, did not step in, it would have been resolved.

But this time it was different.

“It’s too abstract.”

The scale is large and the small is ambiguous.

“I heard that side effects are already appearing frequently.”

“There are more and more people who are addicted to dreams and are trying to find the dungeon itself.”

“Yes, the dream itself is not a dungeon, but there is a real dungeon beyond it.”

“It must have piqued people’s desire for conquest, so they became more aggressive.”

“If we leave it like this, the entire society will collapse.”

It was a society that he and his friends had worked hard to build. And it was a world that was trying to improve, even if it was not enough. There were many things that were right and many things that were wrong, but the blood that was shed was even more.

“We can’t let that happen.”

“I agree.”

The immediate damage was small, but the potential risk was very high.

After that, they talked about various daily things. Although the president of the association, Dan Hae-ra, was still smiling mechanically, her friend Seo Seo-hee could tell that Dan Hae-ra was in a pretty good mood.

'You must be tired.'

Seo Seo-hee knew what Dan Hae-ra had given up for the world she lived in.

“…I think they’re starting to gather.”

“Because we agreed to meet at 3pm.”

“That person will come too, right?”

“Are you talking about Sergio Hunter?”

"okay."

Seo Seo-hee looked at her friend.

“…….”

“…….”

They both recognized that they felt the same thing.

'... Will it become clearer if I see it in person? If I were just a simple contractor, I wouldn't know, but if I were the owner of the promise, Hae-ra would definitely be able to tell.'

The skill name of the association president, Dan Hae-ra, is 'Promise'. It is a kind of transaction where one can receive a promise of fate. She can receive a promise of something of the same value through an object or concept.

Among them, the most cost-effective ones were memories and emotions. Dan Hae-ra and her friends dedicated them to creating the Korea they are today. That is why they were interested in the existence called 'Sergio Hunter'.

'When I saw the photos and videos of him taken by reporters, I felt… strange.'

He might have had something to do with their 'promise'.

'But I don't know exactly what promise it is bound to.'

I heard that Sergio Hunter was 29 years old. Considering that they were both in their fifties, it was likely that they were bound by abstract promises.

'That means we might owe Sergio Hunter something.'

That is why Seo Seo-hee was looking forward to meeting Sergio Hunter. He was someone she had developed a liking for on a personal level, but she couldn't help but feel excited when she thought that he might be a comrade influenced by the 'Promise'.

'Well, he could be the main character of a negative relationship. That's something we can check little by little.'

The next ones to enter the conference room were the head of the Dalnim Church and priests.

“We’ve been seeing each other a lot lately, haven’t we?”

“It would be better if this kind of thing happened less often, but it’s a shame.”

“Please take a seat. The materials you sent us in advance and the materials collected by the association are already prepared.”

“Thank you for your consideration.”

And then the collector came.

“All the familiar faces are gathered here!”

The first one that came in was Visabal.

“It’s been a while, everyone. How have you been?”

“Yes, it’s been a while. Guildmaster of the Visabal.”

This time, the association president guided us to our seats with a mechanical smile.

“Please go to the location where the collector’s name is written.”

“You’re still a sullen person… It’s been so long since we last met, and you’re not smiling at me anymore.”

“I always make everyone smile.”

“This part is a bit daunting, but I’m glad for that too. Thank you for the invitation and take a seat.”

Was there something good happening? Bisabal, whose attitude was more frank than usual, smiled brightly and looked at the 5th floor manager and curator Garasani who followed him in.

“Where is our Sergio Hunter?”

“I think I’ll be a little late because I’m having a short conversation with one of the priests of the Dalnim Church.”

“Then you will be here soon.”

Anyway, there were about 5 minutes left until the promised time of 3 o'clock. Since he hadn't broken his promise, there was no reason for the collector to be caught. Above all, since the origin itself, 'Sergio Hunter', would not have broken his promise...

As the saying goes, 10 seconds before 3 o'clock, two more people entered the conference room.

“Sorry, I'm a little late.”

“It’s okay, please take a seat.”

"then…."

As one priest sat down hesitantly, Sergio Hunter, who had come in with him, also sat down on the side of the collector. Dan Hae-ra and Seo Seo-hee stared at him.

He exuded the warm divinity of the sun god lineage and the pure aura unique to priests. His actions were elegant and upright, and the smile on his lips was somewhat similar to that of Danhae.

“…….”

“…….”

… I didn’t feel anything special other than that.

‘… Maybe we can find out if we talk.’

Seo Seo-hee looked back at the association president with that thought in mind.

'ah.'

And in that moment, I understood his intentions.

What did she see? Judging from her gaze that seemed to say, 'Let's talk later,' she seemed to have noticed something, so Seo Seo-hee opened her mouth to allow the situation to proceed naturally.

“Doesn’t it seem like everyone is gathered here?”

“I think so too.”

Danhae nodded.

“Let’s start the meeting.”

They gathered to discuss how to deal with this new S-class dungeon, 'Dream Park'.

* * *

The meeting didn't last very long.

“The saint of the Dalnim Church was captured by the evil spirit of dreams.”

There were already obvious victims from the beginning.

“What more clear damage could there be?”

“I agree with Bishop Dalnim’s words.”

The president of the association also raised his hand for Dalnimgyo.

“The Dalnim Church listened very carefully to our association’s request. Thanks to them, we were able to check the records of the dungeon’s owner, the evil spirit.”

If you go deeper than the surface of what can be called a lucid dream, you can reach the 'Dream Park'. The Dalnim Church and the Association's staff obtained information about the 'Evil God' there.

“They say he is the evil spirit of blood and rage. It has also been confirmed that he can be described as a deity with words like pleasure, fear, and war. He seems to be treated as a very old evil spirit even within the dungeon… It seems like he has awakened again.”

“Why Earth of all places?”

“We can guess that the current state of the Earth is the most suitable time for the ‘Dream Park’ to flourish. There must have been many candidates, but we can say that we were chosen among them. We will need to investigate other detailed reasons.”

“We must assume that his divinity has evolved while he was sealed. Compared to the past when he simply ruled the world with blood and fear, he is utilizing considerably more intelligent means. He is touching the greatest desires of humanity.”

“It’s not comparable to the direct damage caused by the Saintess of Dalnimgyo, but there are already clear victims. There are more than a few cases of people almost dying from addiction to sleeping pills.”

“The funny thing is that no one actually died. How could this have happened if the evil spirit had not been directly involved? The divine being who is playing this trick knows how to manipulate humans very well.”

“Yes, since no one has actually suffered any major damage, the citizens are gradually losing their self-control. I think the evil spirit’s goal may not be the simple collapse of society, but rather the expansion of its power. It may even intend to colonize the entire planet.”

“If things continue like this, we will be swayed and eventually the Earth may be eaten by the evil spirit. Of all beings, it has to be a divine being. Who would have thought that a being that is difficult to seal and has no other way to deal with it would set its sights on the Earth….”

The guildmaster of Justitia said.

“There have been countless cases like this so far.”

“Guild Leader Seo Seo-hee is right. We just have to overcome another obstacle.”

“Then it seems like the conclusion of this meeting has already been reached.”

A punitive expedition was necessary.

“We need to close the ‘Dream Park’. We need to block the mysterious passage so that it can no longer interfere with Earth, and we need to come up with a plan so that the citizens can focus on reality.”

“I believe that the association and the government will take action to help citizens who are addicted to dreams or who show signs of being addicted to dreams. And if that’s the case, then the attitude we should have has also been decided.”

A virtual dungeon without even an entrance. What the humans had to face was not an unkillable divinity, but their own desires and thirst. Their enemy was truly exploiting a clever weakness.

“This concludes the first meeting. Until the next meeting, I would appreciate it if each head could provide a clear plan on how to enter and deal with the ‘Dream Park.’ By the next meeting, the association will come up with a relief policy for citizens through consultation with the government.”

Now that the direction was set, it was time to put it into practice.

* * *

After the meeting.

“Sergio Hunter?”

Justitia's guild leader, Seo Seo-hee, called Sergio.

“It is fate that we met like this, so can we talk for a moment?”

“Guild Leader Seo Seo-hee is really sociable.”

“Oh, I hear that a lot.”

“Is that so?”

Geo laughed.

“That’s unexpected.”

I used to not even know how to laugh.

With that in mind, Geo responded to the conversation.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (254)

254 Episode 254 There was a group of students who really liked a teacher named Sergio. 'Two boys and two girls.' Their personalities were all different. Some were blunt, some were delinquents, some were cheerful, and some were calm. They were polar opposites, but they got along really well. 'If you ask me if there's a student who you remember in particular, they're definitely the ones who come to mind first.' The man asked Geo, who was sitting in a chair in the break room. "Is your coffee okay?" "Of course." One of the boys Sergio remembered was Seo Seo-hee. "I personally like this kind of instant coffee because it's sweet." "Then that's really fortunate. I didn't think you'd like this kind of thing, so I was a little nervous." Geo tilted his head at the joke and asked, "Then what do you think I'd like?" "Hmm, coffee brewed by a professional barista or fancy flower tea?" "Of course I like those too." "Then I'll take it that you're not picky." "All foods have great aspects. Seo Seo-hee is right." Geo thought, 'A child's taste hasn't changed even after becoming an adult.' He must still not have tasted the true taste of burnt soybean water. In the past, he had said with his blunt, model student face that there were so many delicious things in the world, so why should he drink bitter coffee? Even now, he serves instant coffee, but I don't know if it's because of that taste or because he was simply sitting in the association lounge... "... " Anyway, I liked being able to recall memories after such a long time. 'The world has changed a lot, but there are things that haven't changed.' It felt pretty good. "Why did you want to talk to me?" "I personally have a favorable opinion of Sergio Hunter." "I understand what you're trying to say." "Was I that obvious?" "After all, the things I do are quite suitable for Justitia's taste. I didn't know that Seo Seo-hee would notice it." "It's a little embarrassing when you say it so directly... Well, you're right." Seo Seo-hee sat down in front of Sergio, looking mature. In the past, Sergio had sat in front of him as his teacher. Their roles had changed since then. Seo Seo-hee, who looked to be in her late twenties, continued to speak. “By the way, Sergio Hunter doesn’t seem to be afraid of me.” “Would you like me to make you afraid? I can do that if you want.” “There’s no way you would want that. Most of the hunters I meet don’t talk to me comfortably, so I just said it once. It’s a symbol of eternity, and all, and it’s such a grand name...” “It must be a hassle.” “…….” Seo Seo-hee blinked and answered a beat later. “… Sergio Hunter must be the first person to say that.” “Why is that? I heard that the president of the association is Seo Seo-hee’s friend.” “Oh, so… except for my peers, no one has said that.” “I thought you wouldn’t like such a grand name, so I said it.” “To be honest, yes. It’s not a very pleasant title.” “But since it’s worth holding onto, you won’t throw it away.” “Oh…” Seo-hee shrugged her shoulders exaggeratedly. “You’re more honest than I thought. I thought you’d be the type to observe from a distance rather than speak directly.” “I thought you wouldn’t be the type to get upset just because you said a few honest words, so I said exactly what I thought.” “Oh, of course. I like honest people.” “Because you don’t have to think?” “You really know me well.” He asked, rubbing his chin. “I’m asking because I’m having the courage to do so. Did we happen to know each other?” “Hmm…” Geo, who had been chewing on his question, soon laughed. “That’s unique courage.” “No matter how much I think about it, Sergio Hunter is a person who is really hard to gauge.” “So you decided to ask me outright?” “I’ve heard quite a few times that I’m a unique person, but I don’t think Sergio Hunter would be the only one who would do that.” “As you’ve thought, I hear that a lot.” “So you’re not going to answer my question?” “Don’t you already know the answer?” “…….” Seo Seo-hee smiled after her silence. “…I’m sorry.” He looked tired. To be exact, he was already tired, but it felt like he had taken off a layer of the mask he had been wearing to hide it. He said with an awkward smile. “I think he was someone I was close with.” “Yes.” “He seemed to be unknown in Korea, but did you meet him overseas? Or if he really only lived in the collection, when I visited there… we might have met...” “…….” “…I’m truly sorry. Considering Sergio Hunter’s age, we must have become friends when the world was a bit more chaotic. Back then, the association president made a lot of ‘promises.’ I think you already know, but… these promises are, well, so broad...” He looked very tired. “Is it okay for you to show me a side of yourself that is not typical of the guild leader of Justitia?” “…Are you being grumpy? Well, I was just wondering if there was any use in being coy to someone who was part of the ‘Promise’. I don’t think Sergio Hunter would take advantage of this.” “You seem quite used to strangers pretending to know you. You seem more tired than flustered, and you don’t seem that surprised. I guess you’ve forgotten people like this a lot.” “It seems to have gotten less frequent recently, but yes. I’m not sure about that either. There are people who get caught up in the Promise, and their very existence is erased…” “Are you saying that you’ve even forgotten what you forgot?” “Yes. I’ll say it again, I’m really sorry.” Seo Seo-hee asked carefully. “…Could it be that the reason you’ve only recently become known in Korea is because of the Promise…? If that’s the case, my friends and I will do our best to compensate you. And of course, to the collector who caused the misunderstanding…” “No.” It seemed like he had a lot more self-reproach than I had expected. “It’s true that I actually hid myself.” “…Then I guess I really did meet a good person by chance. I became close with a talented person who was so tightly wrapped up in the collection.” “It was a really good relationship. At least that’s what I thought.” “I’m ashamed to erase that relationship like this.” “You can speak more comfortably.” “…More comfortably? Oh, more comfortably than now…?” He looked surprised for the first time. “…Were we that comfortable?” “We were comfortable enough to use informal language.” “That’s ridiculous.” “Really.” Sergio had used informal language to be exact. “Would you believe me if I said we were close enough to know your family history?" "…That? That we, no. Wait a minute. When I say 'you', how many people are you referring to…?" "If my memories haven't changed, there must be four people including Seo Seo-hee. You were always together." "……." Seo Seo-hee seemed dumbfounded. "…We forgot such a precious relationship?" "I was a little surprised about that too." I thought we had accumulated quite a few memories that were too precious to forget, but I didn't think I would forget all my memories of this teacher. "But I'm sure they were used for more valuable purposes." That's why I felt bad for him. "You've had a hard time." "…Uh…" "I only recently found out that you were in this situation because I don't enjoy going out and have a hard time interacting with strangers. You must have had a hard time." "……." "I felt bad for you because I thought you must have had a hard time in a place I didn't know." Seo Seo-hee, who had been silent for a while, laughed awkwardly. "…I don't know where you started, what kind of memories… and how much you gave up on your promise." She seemed a little excited. "…I'd like to talk to you in more detail. What kind of relationship you had with us, how Sergio Hunter lived, why you only revealed yourself now… I have so many questions." "You don't have to rush." There was no reason for that. "Haven't you been living well without me?" "Hearing that, I'm even more curious. Sergio Hunter speaks as if you were quite important to us." "No, it's possible that I unilaterally remember you as someone who had a very personal and intimate relationship. Once a memory is lost, it won't come back easily, so I don't think it's bad." "I feel much better now that you say that. Still, aren't you upset that we forgot you or something?" "A little upset. I'm human, too, and we were close." But I understand. "Even so, I'm not necessarily someone you need." "Are you drawing a line? This time, I'm upset." "I would appreciate it if you thought of it as a minor complaint. You may not know, but I never agreed to your erasing your memories of me, so…" "……." Seo Seo-hee's face hardened slightly. "…Have you ever passed away?" "I don't think you're thinking of something, so I'm curious as to why you're asking that question."

“There’s no way we would have offered our memories of our living friend to the promise without his consent. If he had died and become a memory, that would be too cruel to both of us… because we promised not to do it.” “Oh, I made a slip of the tongue.” “…….” Seo-hee wiped her face and smiled her usual smile. “…Can we move to a different seat to continue the conversation? I wanted to see how much we were tied to the promise, but you are more of a special guest than I could have imagined for us to talk here.” “I’m sorry, but my party is waiting for you. In particular, the leader of the Bisabal guild is very concerned about my safety, so I don’t want to worry you. Above all, wouldn’t it be better for us to collect our thoughts and talk again?” Geo blinked and looked at Seo-hee. “Oh, and…” A thought occurred to him. “Did I only offer your memories?” “… Yes?” “I think that’s something I need to think about as well.” Geo stood up. “I’ll see you later.” “Then… when you have time, would it be okay if I make a reservation?” “At least I will have time after this dungeon is finished.” “It gives me one more reason to clear the dungeon quickly.” “I would be grateful if you would say so.” Giovanni personally did not like the dungeon. He would be grateful if someone as talented as Seo Seo-hee could help him. “Please be careful.” “Hunter Sergio too.” Geo left the break room and faced Joo-hyun, who was waiting. “Did you have a good conversation?” “Yes, it was a very useful conversation.” “You look happy.” “It’s nice to meet you after such a long time.” He then asked the bright red snake hanging around Joo-hyun’s neck. “Do I have a hole in me?” “…….” The snake tilted its head. “I don’t know.” “I guess this is a problem I should be worrying about.” “Do I have a hole? It’ll be difficult, for a human to handle.” “Wouldn’t anything be dug up in the process of fate being touched?” “It’s strange.” “Me too.” Geo looked at Juhyun. “Let’s go back to the collector.” “Should we?” Because we have to come up with a dungeon countermeasure. * * * “…….” Seo Seohee, who was left alone, soon opened her mouth. “…Did you hear?” [I heard.] Association President Dan Hae-ra appeared next to him as a translucent hologram. [There must be many possibilities.] “I didn’t think she was someone who would exploit it." [If Hae-woon heard, he would nag her again, saying she had a lack of safety awareness.] "You felt the same way, so this is why you would react this way." [Because she's a collector…] Dan Hae-ra continued speaking slowly. [I thought it might really be a dead person.] She still remembered a portrait that had been snatched from a collector at an auction house. Yes, it was a time she couldn't easily forget. When she saw it, her breath caught in her throat and the muscles around her eyes trembled. At that time, Dan Hae-ra was clearly shaken. [I first saw him at the auction house.] "…Is it that portrait? The Black Cloak?" [Not sure. It could be the Black Cloak itself, or it could be an accessory to the Black Cloak.] "The Black Cloak's mysteries are too great for a human to contain, so the latter is more likely." [It could have been made into a portrait while collecting the dead Sergio Hunter. It has already been revealed that he can manipulate souls through the Black Cloak's Heaven.] "Then it would explain why Sergio Hunter's appearance and the Black Cloak's appearance roughly overlap. Since their scale and persuasiveness would be different, I guess we should consider them separate entities." [It could also be a half-assimilated entity. That is, if Sergio Hunter is the true Black Cloak's limb.] "I didn't think he wasn't human, but his impersonation is that great..." [It could just be human.] Dan Hae-ra continued. [When I saw the portrait, I vaguely felt destiny. I instinctively realized that it was the being I had promised to erase. That's why I wanted to buy the portrait…] "It was stolen by the Bisabal Guildmaster." [So I just thought that it might have really been a dead person. The method was strange and rare, but it's not like it's completely unheard of for dead people to come back to life these days.] "Are you sure that the portrait is Sergio Hunter himself?" [Of course.] I could tell that much. [It must have been a connection I erased.] It was instinct. But why? At some point, I forgot the face of the portrait. No, I even forgot that fact. However, if you were shaken by a portrait and didn't know its face, wouldn't that mean you forgot its appearance? [Hmm, thinking back on it, it certainly did seem like that face…] “Since you’re saying that, I think it wasn’t us who erased the memory of its appearance. You said that none of the auction participants remembered the face of that portrait.” [Yes, everyone remembers the work at the time as a portrait painted in black paint. It’s not even known whether it was black hair, blond hair, or red hair.] “I heard that the collector also had a hand in it.” [So I don’t think I was the one who gave up my memory of the portrait’s face for the promise. No, maybe there’s a connection? He might have realized what was erased from us and erased everything about himself…] “I’m getting the feeling that he’s a unique person.” Seo Seo-hee laughed. “If he really died and came back to life, I can understand why the collector would be so obsessed with him. If his son, whom he cherished so much that he didn’t tell anyone, became a portrait, then his original tastes must have combined with it…” [It’s understandable.] “But I’m curious. How did we end up meeting Sergio Hunter? It must have been while he was alive, not after he died, but since the four of us didn’t often get together, it must have been when there was a major disaster. Was Eun-hye just a civilian?” [Perhaps it was because one of us met first and that connection spread. In that case, it’s more likely to be you or Hae-woon than Nana or Eun-hye, who don’t move around much.] “Even if Awakening was a trainer, the atmosphere seemed like that of a teacher and a disciple, so maybe it was Hae-woon…?” However, Sergio Hunter didn’t seem to have much regrets about this connection. “…….” [You seem upset.] “…We must have chosen to erase it, what’s the point of being upset?” [At least he doesn’t seem to be in a good mood.] “Because it was nice talking to you after a long time.” I thought he must be a good person. “It’s a little disappointing to think that someone like that pretended not to know.” Selfishly, that is. (To be continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (255)

255

Episode 255

“The symbol of eternity was your students?”

Geo in the portrait nodded to Yoo Seong-un's question.

“Yes, that’s right.”

“It’s true that you weren’t ordinary at all back then either.”

“My students were not symbols of eternity before the catastrophe.”

“I don’t know if I should say this, but….”

“Try it.”

“They say that they argue among themselves.”

“Please stop.”

“You would have been doing something even if you hadn’t become a portrait artist.”

As usual, Yoo Seong-woon smiled innocently during the hallway meeting that was held without fail.

“Let me guess. Even back then, you were the only one who thought of yourself as ordinary. The catastrophe was just a trigger, but you were also quite a person, so maybe that's why you ended up like this?"

"Would you please not insult the portrait?"

"I don't know exactly what part of it you found insulting, but I get it."

I didn't want to see the eyes of the source get angry. It was probably just an imitation of anger, not genuine anger, but it was obvious that even that would be burdensome to humans.

"Still, it's a really amazing story. You're talking about when the Eternal Symbols were high school students, right? You said you were a high school art teacher. The Eternal of that time…."

"They were ordinary students."

Seo Seo-hee, a blunt model student. Jeong Hae-woon, who teased him by calling him a scholar. Cha Eun-hye, an aspiring idol who used to tease him. Dan Hae-ra, a model student2, who was free from these friends.

"hmm."

Thinking about it again, it's still ordinary.

"They were the kind of students you would see anywhere."

"I don't know the truth of what you're saying, so I can't believe it…."

"When I saw them in person, I felt like their personalities had changed a lot."

"…Because a lot must have happened?"

"Yes, I guess so."

Seo Seo-hee, who was teased for being serious about everything, has learned to smile appropriately for social situations. She has grown into a perfect person like Dan-hae, who was always calm but sometimes broke down.

“Probably the same for other students.”

“I don’t think there was any talk about Guild Leader Jeong Hae-un. He’s the head of the second-largest guild in South Korea.”

“I don’t know how things have changed since I haven’t met them in person.”

“…What kind of person were you when you were a student?”

“I was a bad kid.”

"wow."

“It was difficult.”

I was into both drinking and smoking. As time went by, the things I was worried about and concerned about got better. Since the other three friends were so upright, even if they were bad students, there was nothing I could do.

“They were special relationships to me, but they might not have been to those students. I respect those parts as well. No matter how special they are, should they only be classmates who spent the same time with me? I was just a teacher… I think it won’t be a big deal if you forget them.”

Besides, isn't he essentially being treated as a dead person?

“I think it would be embarrassing to come to all the adults now and pretend to know them and say that I was their teacher back then.”

“I’ve never had any compulsory education, so it’s hard for me to give you any useful information.”

Yoo Seong-un looked back at Joo-hyun, who was older than him.

“What about Mr. Joo-Hyeon? I think he received compulsory education.”

“Well, my memories of compulsory education are quite vague….”

It was difficult to recite Sergio's sentiments about his high school teacher.

“But it certainly seems like there’s a sense of distance when you say teacher. What should I say? Once you leave that educational institution, you’re forgotten…? I think it was hard to feel close to them from the point of view of adults.”

“It seems like it’s something that can be either there or not.”

Don't pretend to know for no reason.

“Bringing up past relationships will only confuse both of us.”

“Is that enough, Mr. Geo? You said they were special connections.”

“I am still able to eat and live well on my own, but they are not. They already look tired, so I don’t want to give them even more tiring homework.”

“Tiring homework….”

Yoo Seong-woon asked, leaving Joo-hyun behind, who looked drowsy.

“What if they ask what our relationship was like?”

“Are you asking me whether I should beat around the bush or tell you honestly?”

“If I were you, I would ask in more detail.”

“I don’t think so.”

Seo Seo-hee clearly said, 'I want to talk to you in more detail,' but it was more like a polite remark made to the victim who was tied up in a promise. In the meantime, his students had become cowards.

“There are a lot of things to carry on their shoulders, a lot to see, and a lot to hold in their hands. Those kids won’t like the changes after making a big choice and the variables associated with it. I think they’ve already seen a lot of bad things that happen when that happens.”

What's so special about spending time with your high school teacher that you'd be happy about it? If possible, you wouldn't bring up forgotten memories. The most likely thing would be to build a new relationship on top of forgotten memories.

Yoo Seong-un smiled innocently.

“But if you ask me anyway.”

“I’ll let you think as you please.”

“On your own? Do you know what they think of you?”

“You had a good relationship, but then one day you died, so wouldn’t you think of me as the protagonist in your memories that was offered in exchange for a promise?”

“I always feel this way, but you really make things difficult for me.”

“I think it summarizes it well.”

It wasn't a wrong statement. The only difference was whether it was before or after the catastrophe, and whether they were older or younger. They had built up some pretty good memories, but they died first, so they became a concept, not a living thing...

That was Sergio.

“How that is possible aside, the end result is that I died and was resurrected as a portrait. The leader of the Bisabal Guild bought it, and that is how we got to this point.”

“If the guild leader hadn’t interfered in the auction house, the situation would have been less complicated.”

“I am grateful that I came to the gallery instead of the research center. However, the misunderstanding that I am the guild leader’s son may not be resolved. It is a story that says that I bought it after seeing my son’s portrait resurrected.”

“That is something the guild leader will have to take care of.”

Yoo Seong-un didn't care about such trivial things. More importantly, he was the one who would suffer the loss if he worried about Bi Sa-bal. There was no need to get tired of buying things.

“So this is how it goes? The leader of the Bisabal Guild had a son whom he had secretly raised, but the son died due to some kind of incident. The dead son was artistically resurrected as a portrait, and the artist bought him and put him in a gallery….”

“I think that might be the case.”

Joohyun unknowingly joined in on Geo's affirmation.

“Hasn’t it gotten even more bizarre?”

Yoo Seong-un shook his head.

“It’s okay because you’re a pervert.”

"ah…."

“As his employee, I guess I can make some excuses, but that’s a little comforting.”

“What kind of excuse are you trying to make?”

“It’s common for a famous hunter to hide the existence of a lover or child and protect them.”

“Yes, you can easily be harmed by someone with bad feelings and intentions, such as resentment. I have heard this story often.”

“More than anything, our guild leader is a water spirit.”

He is not a great man who can be easily taken advantage of by others, but that is only limited to himself. That is one of the reasons why Bisabal has not created a family until now. He is weak and does not have the confidence to protect them while 'treating them like humans'.

“So I was worried about my son and raised him in secret, but something happened… or my son died in a disaster. And then he came back alive, even if it was only in a portrait? Even if he wasn’t a pervert, isn’t that something that would make you turn your back on him?”

Geo tackled him.

“Does being reborn as a portrait count as coming back to life?”

“Uh, um, it may be different for everyone, but I think at least our guild leader was like that.”

And it was much more convincing to other people to hear it too.

“Yes, rather than raising him by locking him up in a gallery from the beginning and saying, ‘Wow, my son is crazy,’… it makes more sense to say that the collector’s eyes turned to his son who was resurrected as a portrait.”

“I still find it a bit creepy….”

“Mr. Joohyun, that may be true, but I think you can sense what it feels like from the perspective of the Awakened.”

Most hunters would agree. They come face to face with unconventional phenomena and monsters as if they were breathing. Rather than feeling fear or distance from the strange, they would first feel joy and understanding.

'More than anything, if it has to do with the return of my family.'

Well, it's not really a family thing.

“…Is this what you mean by symbols of eternity?”

“Isn’t this a more understandable story than what Mr. Yoo Seong-un said?”

“Because I can’t be sure.”

“I think so.”

His students have already become the ones leading the great disaster. They will remember the aftermath more than the before. There will be more memories after the great disaster that are big enough to be offered in exchange for a 'promise'.

'So it would be difficult to guess that the forgotten Sergio existed before the catastrophe.'

First of all, his official age is 29. He actually looks that old. Adding to that the fact that he is Bisabal's son Seol, it would be even more difficult to find out the truth.

Sergio was satisfied with that.

“I’m glad I can avoid giving you something that will make your head spin.”

“I don’t know if it’s spicy or affectionate.”

Yoo Seong-un cleared his throat.

“If it were me, I would be a little upset.”

“Me? Or them?”

“Both.”

They were a good teacher and student, but they forgot each other and pretended not to know each other after that. Even if they forgot each other, isn't a relationship still a relationship?

“Well, that is also your will….”

I find this kind of clear-cut connection and disconnection eerie.

'I guess he wasn't a normal human being from the beginning.'

Since he was such a being, he could become the eye of the origin.

It is unknown whether it was because he was the source from the beginning that he became an eye, or whether he was an ordinary human who became a portrait as Geo claimed. However, this kind of knife-like knot was not something that just anyone could do.

“…I don’t mind if you’re okay with it.”

“Yes, I don’t mind. Even if I forget, I can’t become a teacher and help my students progress, but I can’t hold them back, right?”

“Anyway, it’s surprising that even the symbol of eternity had a time when he was a student. Don’t you think so too, Joo-hyun?”

Joo-hyun smiled brightly as he always did at Yoo Seong-woon’s question.

“I guess so, he was once a very high-ranking superior….”

“What kind of person is the association president that Mr. Joo-Hyeon knows?”

“Should I say he was perfect? He always had a warm smile, but it didn’t feel like that at all. I think there were many comments saying he was scary because he was like a machine.”

“It would be difficult to treat the symbol of eternity comfortably, I guess….”

Geo felt wronged.

“It’s not scary.”

“Yes, sir. I guess so.”

The teachers who taught them when they were young might have known, but not for modern people today. They were living, breathing great men and women with achievements. It would be strange not to feel fear or awe.

Geo was sad.

“It’s a shame that you won’t be able to play comfortably.”

“I’m not sure if you’d be interested in that kind of thing…?”

“You have to try it to know.”

“Indeed, a mercy bomber.”

“Please say that again.”

“I misspoke.”

I didn't want to get in trouble with Geunwon.

“Then wouldn’t it be okay if I made it a little more comfortable for you,

Geo?”

“Wouldn’t it be difficult to get involved like that again?”

“But if you even had a private conversation like that, it seems that the guild leader of Justitia is also very interested in you….”

“Everything will continue after ‘Dream Park’ is finished.”

“Oh, right.”

Yoo Seong-un asked.

“What happened to the saint? The religious world was in an uproar because you kidnapped her.”

“By the way… Is that warrior okay? The one called Ater?”

Geo nodded.

“They could be good friends.”

“What are you trying to do?”

“The warrior and the saint have been good partners for generations, it’s a common cliché.”

“Do you like that kind of stuff…? Clichés?”

“Isn’t my taste clearly revealed in this project?”

The Demon King and the Dungeons. The hero who meets the strong-minded saint. The religious community enraged by the kidnapped saint. The bishop who has become corrupted. The corrupted people. The value of dreams and reality. Pleasure and responsibility. And so on…

“I referenced a lot of pre-catastrophe subcultures.”

“Did you even take note of it?”

“I don’t know much about this kind of thing.”

Sergio, needless to say, only remembers Giovanni as a saint, and Arzio was good at using tricks to his advantage, but he didn't know how to devise evil schemes.

“Nevertheless, it seems like things are going well.”

Wouldn't you be a hero to save the world?

They wanted it, so there was no reason not to do it.

* * *

And around that time.

“…….”

“…….”

Saint Aram and warrior Ater met.

"…hero…?"

"…adult…?"

The two recognized each other's identity at a glance.

As Geo said, the two have been good partners for a long time.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (256)

256

Episode 256

During that time, Ater had many worries.

'No matter how much I think about it, it's clear that I have a role to play.'

Even though I cursed at the evil spirit and challenged him to a duel, he still behaved normally. His role could have been a simple toy, but I had a bad feeling about it.

Above all, Argio showed him his heart.

'This is not mercy shown to a mere toy.'

So does the evil spirit really want him to open the tomb?

'Or maybe it's better anyway.'

After a long period of contemplation, Ater's life became monotonous. He rushed to read the inner thoughts of the evil spirit, suffered a crushing defeat, and survived again to study the ruins and contemplate the future.

Then one day, a small and fragile being entered the tomb of the evil god.

"…hero…?"

"…adult…?"

It was a young saint who called herself a 'hero'.

'Surely no more adults could be born in this world?'

What kind of saint would appear in a world abandoned by the Creator? However, Ater, who had lived with a mission as a warrior, felt that this small being was indeed a saint.

‘Then, a saint who serves a god other than our Creator… .’

There was no sign of a beast, so he was an adult from another world.

Although he was bewildered by the sudden encounter, it was not something he could not understand. It was because he had already recognized the existence of multiple dimensions through Argio. What could be more incomprehensible when the world was turned upside down and an evil spirit had taken the place of the creator?

The two looked at each other for a while. An awkward silence followed.

“…….”

“…Are you human?”

“I am human.”

It seemed that this little saintess had seen the beasts of the 'above'. They were in human form. It was absurd for Ather, who had fought them to the death, but that was the reality.

Ather lowered his body and met the saint's gaze.

“May I, a humble servant of my father, ask your sacred name?”

“…I am Aram, the youngest daughter who serves my teacher, Dalnim.”

“Dalnim, you are not someone who is within my shallow knowledge.

Where did you come from?”

“I came over through a dream….”

Aram was in chaos in its own way.

“Isn’t this a dungeon?”

“If you were talking about a dungeon created by the Demon King, then that would be correct, but it doesn’t look like that.”

“Demon King…? I’m sorry, but… uh….”

The situation needed to be sorted out.

“…Would you like to talk for a moment?”

“I will follow the saint’s words.”

Ater was a person from an era when there was a class system. A person with an aristocratic atmosphere and a saint had to be treated with due respect. He introduced himself perhaps more politely than he had done to Argio.

“My name is Ater.”

He briefly recited his own story. The events that had occurred here in the past, the trials he had faced, and what had happened to this world. How he had been resurrected and what he was doing now.

Aram nodded after hearing everything Ater had to say.

“A dungeon is… a dimension. It was once a planet where humans lived. There has never been a confirmed case of a dungeon that opened on Earth with humans still alive… but if what you say is true, you would be the first human from another dimension.”

“If you don’t mind, can I hear your story now?”

“Oh, I’m sorry. I was the only one absorbed in your story.”

Aram bowed his head in greeting as a priest of the Dalnim Church.

“I repeat, I am a lowly human who calls myself the daughter of the Master and a saint of the Dalnim Church. The Master I serve discovered an abnormality and brought me here.”

Ather frowned when he heard how she came to this dimension.

“…So you went to sleep alone for the sake of your own dimension’s fate? To study and delve into this other dimension that can only be accessed through dreams?”

“Oh, yes.”

"alone?"

“…Because we can’t dream together…?”

“…It may sound presumptuous, but you should take more care of your own safety. From what I can tell from my limited knowledge, even if it is a different dimension, isn’t a saint of a religion someone who cannot easily get hurt or fall apart?”

“I’m sorry, I’m sorry.”

“What do you have to be sorry about?”

He was grateful that she was not as unlucky and self-assertive as the saint he remembered. Ather swallowed a sigh of relief as he continued to ask.

“You said that you had a guide assigned to you in your dream, but where did you leave that person…?”

“I didn’t abandon it! I just asked to be allowed to wander around alone.”

“…Even after I said it myself, didn’t you think something was strange?”

“…We should consider that the fact that such a request was accepted as the dream owner’s intention….”

“The owner of that dream is the evil spirit who resurrected me?”

“I guess so….”

“…….”

“…….”

Ather frowned.

“Learn to be alert.”

“I was on full alert!”

“Then why don’t you run away from me, a human being resurrected by an evil spirit?”

“Because you are a hero…!”

Adults instinctively feel the human vessel.

“You said you were the warrior of this place. I could not find any lie in that statement, so I believed you. I also knew that your concern for me was genuine.”

“Even if you are aware of all that, there are things you must avoid. You must not misunderstand that all the knowledge in the world is yours. Human wisdom can never surpass God, and human destiny flows according to God’s will.”

“I know that too. But if I don’t move my body despite knowing that, how can I achieve what I want to do? I came here knowing that I would fail and that I would be at my worst. To achieve what I want to do.”

“That’s the dangerous part. If you could even think that far, you should have been even more cautious. Do you really not know what I’m doing that’s making you uncomfortable?”

Ather sighed.

“You don’t know how precious you are.”

“I know that much, how important I am…!”

“It is important, not precious. You do not know how essential peace and love are to human beings. Do not arbitrarily destroy their value. It can easily become arrogance.”

“…….”

Aram, who had been hesitating, said.

“…You say something similar to what my teacher said.”

“Are you talking about your god, the moon?”

“No, I have a human teacher.”

“I’m glad there’s someone who can tell me that much.”

The tone was no different from before, polite, but it was clearly sarcastic. Aram understood it well.

“…….”

But she couldn't bring herself to get angry at him for insulting her family and her monks. It wasn't that she didn't feel bad, but she had also been feeling the problems of Dalnim Church deeply for a few days.

The amusement park above gave her peripheral pleasures. It made her feel desires she didn't know she had. It helped her feel, learn, and apply what she wanted.

‘… The families of Dalnim Church were all destroying themselves.’

He was literally a frog in a well.

'I won't give in to that temptation now, but… .'

Clearly, humans needed those peripheral pleasures. They had to pursue romance, expend unnecessary resources, and feel more emotions, even if they were useless and unnecessary.

How could he possibly know the truth when he doesn't even know himself? Whatever the purpose of the dream master creating this amusement park, it was true that Aram had learned it.

“…Mr. Ater, you know the owner of this amusement park, right?”

“I told you a little while ago that that being resurrected me.”

“What kind of being is he?”

“…….”

Ather finally let out a sigh and said.

“It’s an evil spirit.”

He meant perfect anger.

“Have you checked the records of the ruins while coming here?”

“Yes, although the characters used were different, I had the opportunity to learn the alphabet at the amusement park above… and I learned it. The relics recorded what atrocities they had committed in the past.”

“If you go deeper into the ruins, you will understand why such an evil spirit was born. The being that resurrected me is a completely different being from the evil spirit of that time. And as long as his heart exists, he will eventually revert to his previous evil spirit.”

“You’re worried about that.”

“The evil spirit killed my family and friends and burned down my village.”

The horrible sight and the piercing screams of anger were still vivid.

“So I wanted to kill him before that disaster struck again. But perhaps naturally, I couldn’t. Even though I risked my life and jumped in several times, he was still kindly saved and left in this ruin….”

“Oh, is he holding you captive?”

“I am the one who is imprisoning myself. The evil spirit created a completely new world, not knowing what he learned from another dimension and how he was transformed. I, who did not have the confidence to see that world, was left here by the evil spirit’s mercy.”

“You think of yourself as a relic of an old era.”

“I am a ghost who should have died then. I cannot help but wish to remain in the past rather than the future. All that I am remains only in these ruins.”

“…What do you want to do?”

“…How are you, Your Majesty?”

“I don’t know.”

The saint muttered, holding the white pillow in her arms.

“What do I want to do and what can I do?”

“I’m in the same situation, so I don’t have anything to say.”

“That’s a bit of a shame….”

“What did you see and feel at the amusement park?”

“…Well, first of all, I learned the layout of the amusement park.”

A kingdom made up of three races of beasts. There was also a castle that any 'guest' could enter. There, the fox-tribe's servants would welcome the guests and help them with whatever they wanted to do.

“It was a place that made people grumpy.”

All the amusement parks above are like that.

“In my dimension, there is a word called utopia.”

“If it’s utopia, then I know the word.”

“Thank goodness, that’s what it felt like. Even though it could never be real.”

“Do you want people who suffer because of reality to be happy for the rest of their lives?”

“I don’t think that’s right. You can’t be happy all your life, after all. Even if you dream that same dream all your life, someone will shatter that dream.”

“…I told you that I had been imprisoned in a thorn prison for thousands of years.”

Ather spoke.

“You said that you could not overcome that pain and called upon the evil spirits. It was you who remade this world and brought disaster to your dimension. But even if I were to go back to that time, I would still call upon the evil spirits.”

The reason was simple.

“Because I want to live.”

“…So you called upon the evil spirits? No matter what calamity befalls you?”

“I kept thinking about it in terrible pain, but there was no other way.”

That drove Ather crazy.

“My creator had abandoned me in disgust at my stupidity, and no mad author would ever visit the abandoned ruins, and the prison doors would never open by my own power.”

“But it must have been quite painful to summon the evil spirit through the mouth of a warrior.”

“That’s why I wanted to take responsibility, to kill the evil spirit even if it meant sacrificing myself.”

Of course it was impossible.

“But even now, I am constantly studying the method. Why did the evil spirit keep me alive? What is my role in destiny and where is the end? What can I do in it? How much responsibility can I take? I am agonizing fiercely.”

“…….”

“Don’t you too?”

"…you're right."

There could be no such thing as eternal happiness or a perfect dream.

“Ultimately, people have to stand up for themselves.”

Some people could run away from reality. They could spend their whole lives running away and be content to die. But not everyone could do that. It's not that they shouldn't, it's that they can't.

The longer he didn't know about it, the greater the damage would be. Aram wanted to avoid that kind of future.

“So I also wonder about my destiny and what I can do. That’s why I came here. I wandered around the vast amusement park, studied history and literature, and finally… I arrived here.”

“You have overcome the poison of the Black Forest and the ominousness of the ruins to come here. You are truly worthy of being called a saint. You are amazing.”

“It wasn’t easy, but I could do it. I was lucky, who knows. I came here to learn everything about this dungeon, so I can save my brothers and make the world a better place.”

Their goals aligned.

“If the world can return only after I reseal the master of dreams, then I will do so.”

“Okay, so would you allow me to help you take on more responsibility?”

“It’s like, it’s like… some kind of play. Like going along with a predetermined fate.”

“It’s fucking unpleasant, but it can’t be helped.”

In the end, we know that this is also the fate that the evil spirits wanted. However, humans were beings who struggled in the face of fate. No one knew what kind of fate that struggle would bring about.

Even if I couldn't overcome fate, it was okay. As long as I could achieve what I wanted, it was enough. As long as I could protect what I wanted to protect, it was enough. And to achieve all of that… .

“…….”

All this required a master of destiny.

“…Argio.”

“You called me again.”

“It seems like all the actors you want for the stage have gathered here.”

“I guess so.”

Argio looked at Saint Aram, smiling naturally as if she had been there from the beginning.

“Is this our first time seeing each other?”

“…….”

“Or is this not the first time?”

"…teacher."

“I am not the author.”

“…….”

Aram laughed hollowly.

“…Somehow I felt like I was so lucky.”

I couldn't figure out where this divine destiny came from.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (257)

257

Episode 257

The teacher who saved him from suffering and treated him as an equal. But he came to know that this kind and grateful person was actually more than just a saint.

Aram wasn't particularly surprised.

“I’ve been secretly thinking that maybe this might be the case.”

“Oh, I see. I see.”

“Miracles don’t come easily, do they?”

This was one of the expected cases.

“Even a manufactured miracle would be like that, but for a human being like me, entangled in all sorts of mysteries and destinies, to have a pure miracle come to me… it’s almost absurd.”

“Also, you easily adapt to reality. You imagine all the worst.”

“Even so, it is something I should be thankful for and a valuable miracle that the miracle that was created came to me. Now, the only thing left is, what does the teacher want from me?”

"I'm sorry…."

The evil spirit said with a grin.

“I am not your teacher.”

“…How different is it?”

“Just 0.01% of all the mysteries of the world?”

“Isn’t that a rather enormous number…?”

“It depends on what perspective you look at it from.”

“…As always, it’s difficult, you can’t calculate fate with simple knowledge….”

“But you can do something similar.”

That's what it means to be a hero and a saint.

“Then I think now everyone is ready to listen to what I have to say.”

Ater, who was watching with an expression that said he would be shocked to see him go back, said.

“…It’s because I realized that there was no other way.”

“Good posture.”

“In other words, it is also called resignation.”

“It was a wise decision.”

“If it was a judgment, then it was a judgment, but I’m not sure.”

An evil spirit that suddenly appeared and began to seriously rule the world. It had to be clear that he was trying to do something, and in the process, Ater was resurrected. And even a saint from another dimension came.

“Wasn’t it a situation where we could only see that we were given some kind of role?”

It was so blatant that I couldn't help but understand it.

“More than anything, you worked hard to make sure we didn’t feel ill-will towards you. It wasn’t just that you pretended to be nice, but you showed such a non-repulsive attitude that we couldn’t even see you as an evil spirit.”

It wasn't just a story of pretending to be gentle. According to the saint's story, in reality, no one has ever died from dream addiction. The actual damage is almost non-existent.

The evil spirit laughed and urged him on.

"so?"

“…I thought that at least the things that I and this little adult had to do would not be something that we couldn’t handle. It might be a trick, but at least the suggestions would be enough to fool us in this state.”

“You guessed it right.”

The evil spirit asked.

“Do you know the story of the dragon?”

“…It’s such a distant story, I don’t know what your intention is in bringing it up.”

“If you are our saint who has been touring the amusement park for a few days, you would know.”

Aram hesitated and then answered.

“…Dragon is a god’s agent born from nature, and cannot return to the earth unless the divine permits it. It is said that because its lifespan is so long and painful, it spreads to the world the method of killing itself.”

Similar stories have been found in other dimensions as well. It is a story about a being that lives too long, that lives forever, that cannot help but squeeze out its own death.

“What should I think about this story coming up now…?”

“I think you already know.”

“…….”

Aram, hugging the pillow, nodded his head.

“…Can I kill the teacher?”

“Even though I’m not your teacher?”

“At least it’s something similar.”

“That’s true.”

Geo didn't deny it that far either.

“Thank you for understanding.”

For that reason, Argio did not hide his true feelings even more. He whispered to Ater to jump into this play that was not a play, and he encouraged Aram to take off his shoes and step forward.

“You don’t have to kill me. But ‘we’ have been here too long. Shouldn’t we wipe away the stains and make a new home?”

“And to take out the teacher’s ‘us’, we would have to open the tomb of the evil god. Only then will the full stain be revealed. But there is no guarantee that this is not an evil trick of the evil god.”

“Of course, I could simply be whispering this to be completely released from the seal. Aram, my little friend. Do you need some time to think?”

“Yes. I need time to think.”

“Of course, of course.”

“…….”

Aram, who had been hesitating, grabbed the hand of the evil god, Argio.

"…teacher."

“How pretty.”

The evil deity smiled, bowing his large body.

“He is not here.”

Here the saint of mercy does not appear.

“…….”

“?”

“…Give it back….”

“Huh?”

“Give me back my teacher, you wicked demon king!!!”

“Aha ...

Argio laughed heartily.

* * *

The evil spirit left, saying he would give them time to think, leaving only Ater and Aram.

“…….”

“…….”

Of the two who had been standing there blankly, Ater was the first to speak.

“…You are brave.”

“…Looking at the way things are going, I don’t think you’d be upset about something like that….”

“Still, I think you were brave.”

“Maybe I was a little too brave.”

“I had that feeling, but I would have grabbed him by the collar too.”

“A saint grabbing the devil by the scruff of the neck… How plausible. Even the priests of the Sun Church, who hate the Moon Church, would be impressed.”

“I think this is an achievement that all adults should applaud.”

“I caught it too, so I caught it….”

anyway.

“I now have one more reason to participate in the subjugation of this Demon King.”

“Is it because the Demon King deceived the Saintess?”

“No, it’s hard to call it a trick when God deceives humans. I don’t call it a trick when a fate comes to me that I didn’t know about.”

“Well, if you are a saint, you wouldn’t be angry about such a twist of fate, right? Then?”

“My teacher is inside the demon. I don’t know if he’s trapped, asleep, or simply sharing….”

“…….”

Ather, who was sitting there in despair, asked.

“…I heard a related story from him. He said that there are three ‘Geos’ inside you. They are different beings, but they share the same body.”

“…Was there anyone among them named Sergio?”

“Yes, there was. I naturally thought that the being called ‘Geo’ would be a mysterious being with the same determination as an evil spirit. However, judging from the saint’s reaction, it doesn’t seem like that at all.”

“I’m definitely not that kind of person.”

Aram was moved. He felt sad for no reason.

“Why is my teacher with someone like that…!”

“No matter how much I think about it, it doesn’t seem like it belongs to the saint, but, yeah, well.”

“Do you have a disease that causes thorns to grow on your tongue if you don’t speak properly?”

“Similar.”

“Shall I purify you in the name of the saint?”

“I refuse.”

There was a high probability that it would become an advisor named Jeonghwa.

“…What kind of person was Sergio?”

“You always made me smile.”

“I’m sorry, but I think that applies to the evil Argios as well.”

“There are different types of smiles, so what you’re thinking is not the one Mr. Ater.”

“Would you smile a little more gently?”

“Please smile as if you are filled with sunlight.”

“…All the mercy I received must have come from there.”

Ather readily agreed.

“He brought warmth to this ruined relic where even electricity did not pass through. He literally brought sunlight into the sealed space. I wondered how that was possible….”

“My teacher was bound by the name of the solar lineage divinity and family.”

“Are you saying he is an adult too?”

“You have never directly admitted it, but you are implicitly defined as a saint. If sunlight has come into this cursed dungeon, it must be through my master’s power.”

It's not that I'm being condescending, but that's the reality. In fact, these ruins are cursed. There was a reason I went into these ruins in the not-so-narrow black forest. I thought there might be something special there.

“I think that the reason why the ‘Argio’ that Mr. Ater experienced was much more affectionate and able to imitate humans compared to historical records is all because of that. If they were one body, it would have been easy for them to imitate each other and learn from each other.”

Aram's face distorts again.

“I don’t know how that’s possible. I thought that even though you have a big heart, you’re definitely a human being. Since you’re a saint to begin with, it’s only natural that you’d be… human….”

“I guess you’re saying that it’s hard to understand how a saint who made a contract with the sun god could have a body like an evil spirit. I understand. However, I’ve often heard of similar cases.”

“Have you ever received such information?”

“To be exact, I also heard it through rumors and confirmed it through records….”

Ather continued to explain in a tone of uncertainty.

“I’m sure Your Majesty knows that the abilities of adults are incomparable to those of ordinary humans. There have been many such people in the history of my dimension. And to that extent, they were able to contain many things in their bodies… I understand.”

“…….”

The saintess, who had been silent for a long time, nodded.

“…That makes sense.”

“That’s fortunate.”

“It is not uncommon for adults to slowly purify themselves by putting something unclean in their own bowl. It is no different from a purification device using people, so it has been banned in the country I live in for a long time….”

“It’s even more fortunate that it’s been banned. Even in the last history of humanity that I can remember, adults were often used in that way. Used as sealing beads to contain demons.”

“How can you be so barbaric?”

Even though the names were a bit confusing, Aram instinctively felt that 'Giovanni' and 'Argio' were different beings. Since her teacher would never affirm evil, there was only one answer left.

“As expected, the teacher sacrificed himself to seal away evil….”

“I can’t say it’s impossible, because it’s happened several times already.”

“Even without that, my teacher was famous for being a self-sacrificing saint.”

“A saint who lives?”

“It’s about giving your life for what’s right.”

“That’s… too bad.”

“He clearly noticed the presence of the evil god Argio and was using his body to purify himself.”

It wasn't such a wrong guess. The current Argio was becoming one with the 'Portrait of Geo'.

The evil spirit said that if he became one with the 'happy pig' and the 'saint of mercy', his evil would naturally be diluted. He is currently going through that process.

Ather was very tired.

“Did this happen because I called Argio’s name in the meantime?”

“That’s also a possibility, I can’t say it’s not possible….”

“The sin is great, so he must take responsibility.”

“…It’s my teacher’s job. I will take responsibility as well.”

I didn't want to lose that kind benefactor.

“Fortunately, luck was in the air. Thanks to my teacher being with him, the current evil spirit has learned mercy. He knows the value of affection.”

“Furthermore, the last saint, who was established as the main personality of the evil god, did not enjoy indiscriminate anger and the innocent blood that was shed as a result. There are many records of him cruelly treating those who attacked him, and enjoying war and battle itself….”

“That’s why the evil spirit is planning his ‘end’. He wants another chance to properly vent his anger and enjoy a proper battle. That will be the end he has decided on. No, I don’t know if that will really be the end. Anyway.”

Up to this point, it is an easy problem to predict.

“…But is this really true? There is no guarantee that the evil spirit is not trying to trick us into opening the sealed door. If that is the case, it would be a shameful act to taint the sacrifices of Mr. Ater and your colleagues.”

“Even if he is sincere, there are many problems. Argio, who has become such a complete ‘evil god’, may not have reason. Even if he does, it would be a bad thing. I know very well what kind of being that evil demon lord is….”

Even if it was a lie, it was a problem, and even if it was true, it was a problem.

“So the most important thing now is that the evil spirit does not know ‘forgiveness.’”

If he knew forgiveness, it didn't matter whether it was true or false.

“The evil spirit is creating a battlefield. He has used you, the saint, to provoke the people of the religious world. If it is as you said, your priests and the priests around them must be extremely… sensitive to the kidnapping of the saint that the devil has accomplished.”

“I am also well aware of the blindness of religious people. That is why I wanted to at least convey the message that this was not a kidnapping, but for some reason, no one from my hometown appears in this dungeon anymore. And in fact, at this point, it seems like the kidnapping is not a misunderstanding.”

“It’s not as horrible as you might imagine, but that alone won’t calm down the priests who are so excited. And it’s not just the religious people who are affected.”

“Yes, it was already a national disaster. The dungeon itself called ‘Dream Park’. It’s not just the Dalnim Church that will come… other hunters will come too. There’s no denying that this place has become a battlefield.”

“If war ends up happening here, if that is the evil god’s intention.”

"…rather…."

Aram laughed hollowly.

“It might not be a bad idea to open the hive with our own hands.”

A large number of elite soldiers will come to deal with that hive. You can either miss the timing and just destroy the dungeon, or you can uproot the evil spirit. If you have to do it anyway, the latter is better.

“You wicked demon king, you must have already calculated this.”

“It seems like we had no choice from the beginning.”

“But I also don’t like the idea of having to follow his calculations.”

“What exactly is the spirit of an adult? I don’t know what you’re thinking, but I’ll follow it for now.”

“Thank you for your strong support.”

There was no way that a being as evil as a god could not know her thoughts. However, the evil god's plan was already clear. If she could break out of that framework, her strong face could be broken a little.

'Yes, I admit it. The current Argio isn't that evil.'

The damage Aram received from him was not great at the time, but because of that, petty resentment built up.

The sin of daring to limit my teacher's scope of movement. The sin of abruptly kidnapping Aram and moving him to the dungeon. And the sin of making the people of the world and my family fall asleep were great. I also did not like the fact that my teacher had arbitrarily revealed his identity that he had kept hidden.

In this situation, I felt it was too much to just do as the unlucky evil spirit wanted.

'Let's wait and see.'

I will take revenge on my family and my teacher.

Aram crumpled the pillow in his arms and ground his teeth.

* * *

“…It’s not really like that.”

A peaceful cabin.

Geo, who was washing a fist-sized strawberry with his father, blinked.

“I think my new student misunderstood something.”

“Huh?”

“No, I don’t think it would be a bad thing for me. I’m just embarrassed.”

“Kuk kuk kuk….”

“It is fun.”

And as long as it's fun, that's fine.

'I guess so.'

Geo was convinced and silently placed the washed strawberries in front of Dalnim.

He had already realized that even a runner can become a pig.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (258)

258

Episode 258

There have been many disasters on Earth during this time.

“It’s been a few years since a humanoid monster, a mermaid, appeared.”

The bishop of Dalnim Church explained in his characteristically calm tone.

“With the appearance of the mermaids, Sankalut, who was supposed to be sealed in the association’s research lab, also showed signs of its power. Traces were mainly found in the Solar Church.”

“Could it really be that the mermaid held hands with Sankalut?”

“Now even the evil spirit of dreams seems to be like that. No, rather, it could be said that he is in charge of all this. Neither the mermaid nor the Sankalut have revealed all the power and cruelty that he is capable of….”

“It seems that the evil spirit of dreams has placed restrictions on you.”

“It is not certain whether he moved as his subordinate, but it is possible. At the very least, it must be considered that he joined hands. Also, the initiative would have been with the evil spirit of dreams.”

“Only then can we explain the attitude shown by previous disasters.”

The priests of the Dalnim Church nodded.

“It seems that the evil spirits of dreams are truly trying to colonize the Earth.”

Even the word colony has been greatly sanitized.

“Well, I guess it’s more like a feeding trough than a colony.”

“If we look at the situation, it seems like they are trying to turn the Earth’s inhabitants into livestock.”

“It would be nothing for an evil spirit to utilize the empty bodies of humans who have become addicted to dreams and have lost touch with reality….”

“The government and the association will have to come up with a decent alternative, but I don’t know how that will work out.”

“Certainly, this is something that needs to be addressed at the national level.”

But that wasn't something Dalnim Church had to worry about.

“Everyone, please concentrate.”

The bishop once again drew attention.

“Our job is not to save the citizens. As I said before, that is the job of the government and the association. Our role is to destroy or seal the ‘dream park.’ And….”

“…….”

“…The saint’s rescue, I guess.”

The air became heavy at her words. The priests’ expressions were no different from before, but that did not mean that they were calm inside. They were quietly angry.

“…We will rescue the saint safely.”

“I won’t let him fall into the hands of the evil spirit.”

The priests of the Dalnim Church, who lived in a closed culture and whose individualism reached its peak, had greater trust and affection for the Saenghyeongs than anyone else. The only people they could trust were their families.

“Brothers addicted to dreams still cannot wake up.”

“I still wake up periodically, but my actual sleep time doesn’t increase….”

“He continues to avoid reality and is absorbed in his dreams. I am trying to stop him from taking medication to increase his sleep time, but it is only a temporary measure.”

“It’s a dire situation to just sit back and watch.”

“If this continues, they will move on to the ‘dream park’. It is not a mere dream, but a real dungeon with real substance. Unlike the saintess, they will willingly surrender themselves to it.”

“In the worst case scenario, the Earth could become empty. And the first place that would most likely be empty would be our Dalnim Church.”

They were people with a great desire for knowledge. The priests of the Dalnim Church did not delve into dreams for peripheral pleasures. However, even if they were dreams, knowledge was not an illusion, so how sweet it must have been.

The priests who were awake now sympathized with that sentiment.

Some of them went beyond sympathy and even envied those who were asleep. However, there was only one reason why they had not yet fallen asleep.

“So, the saint….”

“We must get the saint back.”

“How dare you touch him.”

“I cannot forgive you.”

The absence of the saint seemed too great for them.

“Let’s enter the dungeon.”

It was a time when a practical response was needed.

“Not everyone can move on to their dreams.”

“That’s right, some of us will once again fail to judge a dream as a dream and will be caught at the entrance. That would be putting the cart before the horse.”

“It seems that priests who have been tempted by dreams should remain in reality as much as possible. Priests who are mobilized for this entry should be limited to those who have perceived dreams as dreams more than three times.”

“Furthermore, it would be even better if there were priests who had seen the ‘dream park’. There may not be many of them, but they would be helpful.”

If all the priests fell asleep, there would be problems in the operation of the Dalnim Church. Moreover, even if they fell asleep to enter, how many of them would reach the 'Dream Park'? It was a time when a small number of elites were needed.

“So, for this entry….”

The bishop, looking around at the priests, spoke in his characteristically emotionless tone.

“I will join you too.”

“Bishop, but those who remain in reality need you.”

“If I were to sacrifice myself at this point when the saint has been taken away, which priest would trust the bishop?”

“We believe in you even if you don’t do that, Bishop.”

“I firmly believe that those of you who remain in reality will do well even without me.”

“But, Your Excellency, if you are absent now that the Holy Lady has disappeared, who can we rely on? It cannot be so.”

“Then let’s try a second-best option.”

She had to keep her seat.

“…I will decide the order.”

“Are you preparing for the case where the first entry fails?”

“You can’t get full on the first sip. It’s even more difficult when dealing with abstract enemies and inner greed like this.”

“I understand what you are saying, Bishop.”

“We will divide it into 1st, 2nd, and 3rd stages.”

“Then I guess we should consider the first three entries as a preparatory stage.”

Priests took it for granted that they would offer themselves up even though the bishop had not said anything further. Priests who were sent to the 'preparatory stage' were, in effect, little more than guinea pigs.

Looking at them, the bishop couldn't help but think.

‘… Yes, it’s a barrel of rotten liquor.’

Even if the barrel looked fine on the outside, you had to know the wine inside. You had to recognize that it was rotten. If you didn't, it would eventually leak out of the barrel and alert the brewers.

'We have stagnated and rotted away.'

So, please clean it up.

‘Then the new wine will be filled…’

The moon and the saintess held in the arms of the evil spirit would be the beginning.

'So what I have to do is simple.'

This solid barrel had to be broken. The rotten liquor had to be allowed to crawl out through the cracks in the broken barrel. The religion built on this rotten tradition had to be broken and rebuilt.

“…….”

So we, who are sinful, will become stars beside the moon.

“…From now on, elders, listen carefully. The priests who will participate in the first to third entry may face some risks, so you must help them decide their own worth.”

“Even if the bishop does not say so, we are all ready to sacrifice ourselves. What sacrifice would be meaningless to retrieve the precious saint of the Dalnim Church and her family? Please do not doubt us.”

The catechumens who were still in training were excluded from all these events. Some were relieved, but most were disappointed. The bishop still did not allow them.

They had to survive and help the saint begin a new beginning.

“So this is how the list was put together.”

The choices of the Dalnim Church were no different from what they had always been. Priests who used themselves as expendable items. It was so normal that there was no sense of discomfort.

“We will share our plans with the association.”

“Yes, Bishop.”

“In the meantime, the priests will continue their training by praying to the Master.”

“I will do that.”

“May wisdom be with us.”

May a better future come to us.

'Even if it is a mercy that comes from the hand of the evil god.'

There won't be anything bad.

* * *

The novice priest of the Sun Church, Iru Da, asked.

“Then, isn’t this dream’s evil spirit opposing the Black Cloak?”

“Huh? Oh, oh, oh… I guess so?”

“Then it’s true that there was no harm done to you?”

She was worried about my partner, Chaisol.

“If there is a fight between the gods, it will inevitably affect the priests who serve them. After all, the power that a priest uses comes from the god he serves. And you borrow quite a bit of power from Black Cloak.”

“I didn’t think there would be any problems…?”

Above all, Chaisol already knew the truth about this incident.

“It’s okay, it’ll end well!”

This was a minor quarrel between Geo-hyung's 2nd and 3rd personalities. Chae-sol, who couldn't live without his family, had fought with his older sister. However, they eventually reconciled, so Geo-hyung would be the same.

Iru, who had been staring at Chae Sol like that, let out a sigh.

“You are so positive.”

“Then isn’t that a good thing…?”

“…….”

Iru held back his words, clearly showing that he had something he wanted to say.

“…I hope it ends well without any problems, just like you said.”

If the previous actions of the mermaid and Sankalut were the work of the evil spirit of dreams, then this dungeon was something that had been prepared for quite some time. The abstract yet stimulating 'dream park' actually posed a great threat.

'But it's strange that the damage is so small for something like that.'

In these cases, it was usually one of two things.

'Either the person who did the work is restraining himself, or someone else is restraining himself.'

But no matter how much I thought about it, it seemed unlikely that the dungeon or the evil spirit that lured people would have self-control. Even if that were the case, isn't it absurd that the damage was this small?

'If someone else is restraining the actions of the Dream Demon… then they must be considered a being of a higher rank than that of an equal. And in the current situation, there aren't many beings capable of restraining the Dream Demon.'

There was a 'promise' that protected the Earth's system, or 'Black Cloak', the sun god that Chaisol served. Considering the situation of the Earth that was returning, the latter case was much more likely.

"…hmm…."

But that's a little weird too.

“…It really doesn’t affect you at all?”

“I didn’t feel anything in particular. Is it because I don’t have the ability?”

“Oh, no. Don’t blame yourself like that all of a sudden.”

Although he was flustered, he continued to make decisions instinctively.

'The power that Chaisol received from the divinity is by no means small. But it doesn't seem like Chaisol is lying right now. In cases like this, the divinity that is served is either so great that it doesn't affect the priest who received the power, or the divinity itself doesn't change much, so there is no effect in the first place... .'

The former was absurd and the latter incomprehensible.

'Is the Black Cloak, who has become a familiar ghost story among humans, really a being of such a high class?'

But if this is not the case, then we can conclude that Black Cloak is not seriously fighting the evil spirit of dreams right now.

'It's a difficult fact to accept either way.'

No, there was a possibility that the Black Cloak was a higher-ranking being than the Demon of Dreams. With that in mind, Iru asked Chaisol.

“What do you think about this evil spirit?”

“Uh… I want to go to that amusement park too?”

“Then, you’ll get in trouble like you did last time at Sankalut.”

As I said that, Iru thought about it.

'Maybe it really is the latter. No, if that's the case, then should we consider it as both cases?'

Chaisol, the disciple of the black cloak, does not reject the evil spirit of dreams. It is the reaction of a priest who is ultimately influenced by the divine, even if he is not aware of it. He could have some confidence in it.

“…….”

But why?

'... The black cloak that enjoys protecting the Earth doesn't hate the evil spirit of dreams?'

It was something I couldn't understand, but I felt it was difficult to ask any further.

“Anyway… I heard that Priest Kang Seo-dam will also be participating in this entry, but I wonder if it’ll be okay.”

“They said no one died in this dungeon, so it should be okay, right?”

“But this is a dungeon.”

“And it’s a dream too.”

Chaisol laughed as he drew a picture of a black cloak.

“How do people die in dreams?”

“…That’s true.”

Iru didn't necessarily criticize his partner's innocent question.

* * *

Some of the deities that Geo called his friends played along with his friend's pranks.

The Sun Goddess condemned the evil deeds of the Dream Demon. The Sun Cult priests who were influenced by it showed their willingness to cooperate, even though it was the work of the Moon Cult, which was on bad terms. The Moon Cult readily accepted.

The God of Death was saddened by the dream addicts who degraded the value of life. The priests of Death did not speak, but made their position known. They helped provide material support to the Dream Entrance Group.

“…Your friends are scary.”

“They are all good people.”

Meanwhile, the black cloak was silent.

“I feel good.”

“Is that Mr. Argio?”

“You got it very well.”

The battlefield is prepared.

“I will be leaving soon, so please take good care of my empty portrait.”

Argio took his place, satisfied.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (259)

259

Episode 259

For reference, Argio.

“……?”

I was being left behind.

“What? Is this the time for me to be upset?”

“You’re such a devil, don’t be upset about something like this.”

“How sad it is that you stay in my house and pretend not to know the landlord.”

“Tenants don’t usually like to become intimate with their landlords.”

“What a smart saint she is.”

It was the first time in Argio’s life that something like this had happened.

“What are you all working so hard for, except me?”

“I’m studying.”

“I can do that well too.”

“No need.”

“I can help you too….”

“No need.”

“Be firm.”

“Honestly, I don’t think the devil could teach anyone well.”

“That is a deep, deep prejudice against evil spirits.”

Despite his appearance, he was talented as a teacher.

“You seem to be studying hard about me, but I guess you didn’t know that? This Argio was so talented even when he was alive that he taught students who were 19 years old at the age of 6.”

“That’s… definitely the first time I’ve heard of it.”

“Was there anyone who would tell you my story of being the last monster in the Black Forest?”

“No, but you can read it.”

“That’s true, there’s a lot of graffiti in my house.”

As the only beast in the Black Forest who could speak, it was hard to hold back his chatter. Argio would often scribble on the ruins and draw pictures. It was a kind of mural and record.

Lately, adults and warriors have been seeming to study it.

“It might just be a boring diary, but you’re really passionate about it.”

“You are flattering me, and have confidence. Your diary is quite interesting.”

“If I had more confidence than this, would you be able to handle it, my little friend?”

“Then don’t take it.”

“Okay, let’s do that. If that’s what my friend wants, I should do that.”

“…….”

The saintess, who was looking up at Argio with strange eyes, asked.

“…What is the standard by which the evil spirit calls someone a friend?”

“What other meaning could there be in a friend?”

“On Earth, a friend is usually someone you have been close to for a long time.”

“That’s too dictionary-like a meaning, isn’t it?”

“Of course, the amount of time you’ve known each other doesn’t necessarily determine the depth of your friendship. But even taking that into account, I think the standards for being friends are too broad.”

“I know who my friends are.”

“You’re talking about fate and… the future.”

Aram asked, fiddling with the paper on which something was written randomly.

“Will I be your friend in the future?”

“You are still walking that path.”

“Even though I hate you so much, it still ends up like this?”

“But don’t you know that and walk this path?”

“You already know what I’m going to do, right?”

“Hmm, well.”

Actually, Geo didn't know that well either.

“I don’t know everything.”

“You, a divine being, do not know the meaning of a small vessel?”

“As you may have guessed, my clever friend, I am a very foolish being who does not want to know much.”

“…That’s a very fortunate thing for us.”

Aram smiled brightly.

“Thank you for your arrogance.”

“Rather, be thankful for my reckless nature.”

Geo's indifference stemmed from a greater joy and curiosity for the unknown.

“…….”

But, definitely.

“…No, is it arrogance?”

If we limit it to Argio, it sounds like it makes sense.

“I’m letting you fool around like this because I know you won’t be able to beat me in the end. I guess this also shows my shortcomings. I admit it, you’re right. I’m a very arrogant being.”

But who sets out on a battlefield with the thought of losing?

“Please look at me kindly.”

“Still, don’t you have any intention of checking what we’re trying to do?”

“What fun would I have doing such a thing now? Look, I was a battle-hardened warrior who turned the world upside down while I was alive, and in death I am a demon who spreads fear like an infectious disease.”

“That’s right, we can never beat you. We can’t even kill you.”

“Aren’t you already at a disadvantage to the point of overflowing? But I want to be righteously angry. What good is it to be angry at the weak and leave a bad aftertaste? You will have to suffer more, not only for your sake but also for my sake. Become as strong as you can, and use every means at your disposal.”

“We are weak, compared to you.”

Aram spoke while pulling together all the records.

“I will help you become angry.”

“Aha, really?”

“Mr. Argio is not some kind of evil spirit of dreams.”

"yes."

“You are the god of wrath.”

It is a mystery that is on a different level from shallow irritation or venting anger.

“I will disturb your battlefield.”

“Please do so.”

This was Argio's last battlefield.

“Only when both parties are sincere can we say that they are truly angry….”

Argio respected everyone's every outburst.

* * *

“Found it.”

“Finally, oh my god!!”

While Argio was away, Aram and Ater cheered.

“If it weren’t for the records left by Argio, I wouldn’t have found it…!”

“Even those records were damaged, so it was really difficult to decipher them.”

“It was even more difficult because it was an old word that wasn’t even used now. It was almost like creating a character.”

“The only good thing is that since it was a dead language that no one used anymore, it didn’t have any complicated rules. Maybe that’s why it was definitely a more monotonous writing system.”

“I still don’t know how to pronounce it, but at least I can interpret the content. I should record this feat in the royal library…!”

“Relax, it doesn’t have to be now to build a proper library. But the help of Mr. Ater, the royal librarian, was invaluable.”

“I never knew that the old books I had read as a hobby would be so helpful. I wish I had remembered more characters, because I could have deciphered them faster.”

“But in the end, we achieved this result! If Mr. Ater and I combine our minds, we can quickly decipher even lost languages! This is the power of knowledge!”

The two who had been chatting noisily soon regained their composure.

“T, first of all, this isn’t it… Where on earth was that being? Is this the being we were looking for? Really? Was my guess that he existed true?”

“Yes, that’s right. I wandered around the Black Forest from time to time and eventually found it. I guess it was because I was an old-time ghost, and I couldn’t escape to the amusement park above.”

“Thank goodness he escaped to the amusement park, I really wouldn’t have found him…! Where is he now? Are you able to communicate?”

“We decided that bringing them to this ruin was too much, so we had them hide near the entrance. We were able to communicate with them, and they were even cooperative with us.”

“I want to meet him, let’s go right away!”

No, in fact, the excitement hadn't subsided at all. The two felt the happiest they'd ever felt since meeting each other and headed toward the entrance of the ruins. Aram looked around with eagle eyes.

And then he let out an exclamation.

"ah…!"

A deer with beautiful antlers.

“It was you after all!”

“…….”

“According to the records, you are no ordinary deer, are you? You must be able to use language. I have so many things I want to ask you. Please respond to my language.”

“…….”

“…Creator of evil spirits.”

Aram asked the silent deer.

“Why did you kill your friend?”

The ancient ghost answered.

“Anger.”

“…….”

“…I wanted a very big anger.”

He was the first beast to regain his language.

* * *

There was a deer.

It was a beast that could not speak, lacked intelligence, and was driven by instinct rather than reason.

He had a red-haired owner. On his fifth birthday, the deer was given to him as a gift.

“What should I name you?”

The child who was praised by countless people postponed the decision.

“Hmm, yes. A name is something very valuable and important, directly connected to the soul.”

“…….”

“I will teach you how to speak. If a genius like me spends his whole life teaching you, you too will be able to learn languages. Then, choose the name you want, and I will help you.”

“Beep….”

“One day you will know everything I have ever said.”

The child's absurd promise lasted a long time. Even when he was abandoned in a cave called the Black Forest, the child and the deer's lessons continued. He protected the deer from threatening beasts.

“Who dares to harm you, my brother?”

The deer still did not understand the child's words. However, it felt affection. My family, stronger and more affectionate than anyone else. The young deer grew up well under loving care.

“You must have eaten such good food to have grown so long. I thought deer didn’t live that long, but it’s amazing. I promise I’ll teach you language before one of us dies.”

“Beep….”

“Of course I love the sound of your crying right now. Your delicate and lovely cries tickle my heart, my friend. My little brother. I am a human and a beast, so I will make you like that too.”

The arrogant determination continued steadily. In this way, the child, who was called Argio and a cruel beast in the world, created a miracle. He succeeded in teaching the beast language.

“Yeah, I’m right?”

He was very happy. He hugged the deer's neck and expressed his great joy.

“By this we are equal. Rejoice, for it is not I who have been brought down, but you who have been raised up. Do not forget that this is only your fruit.”

“…….”

“You can do many things now. You can eat meals that you decide for yourself instead of having them set for you, sing songs, learn new languages, or even create them….”

“…….”

“I am proud of you, how you make me so happy. Do what you want. Make a name for yourself. You have learned from me, so you must teach me a lot in return.”

But before the deer could name itself, tragedy struck. The source of all evil in the world was called Argio. The deer, who had been protected only, was helplessly captured by humans. It became a hostage.

“That evil beast loves this deer so much?”

“I thought it was some great treasure, but this is… just a deer.”

“What kind of great bond must these beasts have built to do this?”

Captured by humans, the deer tried hard to pretend to be an ordinary animal. The more it revealed its specialness, the more surveillance it would have. However, no matter how much it waited, a suitable opportunity did not come.

And so the black forest was burned.

“God, burn this terrible curse!!”

And the beast that people of the world call cruel did not come out of the forest.

“I will reduce that evil beast to ashes!!”

“Burn the forest that spread the disease, and it will be purified!!”

“God protects our backs!!”

“He’s dead, the cruel beast burned to death!!”

“The epidemic will stop and the world of humans will come!!”

What could be the reason?

“…….”

It was something that a deer that had been kept in a human warehouse could not understand.

Why didn't you even run away? Were you seriously injured by the punitive force and had difficulty moving? Did you spend all your time evacuating the humans and beasts? Were you held back by me, your most beloved beast and family?

If not that… .

“…….”

“…my friend.”

The deer took advantage of the excited humans' carelessness and returned to the burned-out forest.

The family that taught him the language, the red-haired man, was dying. The smell of ripe flesh filled the air.

“You’re really angry.”

“…….”

“It really… hurts inside. It’s burning.”

“…Beep.”

“…anger is eating me….”

The deer family laughed and cried.

“I don’t want to leave it like that.”

He knew the mystery of this forest and of himself. If he were to die from rage like this, what a terrible disaster would be born? Argio said he did not want to be consumed by eternal rage.

“Oh, no. How horrible it would be to continue living like that. It wouldn’t be fun, it wouldn’t be refreshing, there would only be a beginning and no end….”

“…….”

“Bring your family. My family, my friends. If they stay by my side, I will swallow all of this anger instead of being swallowed up by it, for their sake. That’s how I can digest it.”

“…….”

“…Would you please do that?”

The deer called all the beasts that Argio had once cherished. All the humans under his care were killed or fled, but some of the beasts remained and awaited his death.

Argio was very happy.

“You add meaning to my cruel life.”

He was really letting his anger out.

It was a miracle. I forgave the world, remembering that I was loved and had loved as a family. I understood that I could do it. I endured and forgot.

“I am satisfied, I can die like that.”

“…….”

“…….”

But the deer did not.

“…Aren’t you like that?”

The deer was angry.

It could not control its anger or forgive the demons like its brother. The young deer, who was just learning to be wise, was helplessly swept away by dull judgment.

I was so angry. I was so angry at the humans, I was resentful of the world, and I was angry at the god who ruined the noble lion. How could it end like this? How could such an ending exist?

“Please, do me a favor, my friend. Help me end this curse….”

“…….”

“It was a perfect ending. It was the ending I had decided on, the ending I wanted. The cruel beast should end with the end of the black forest. What could be a neater and less ugly ending?”

“…….”

“Please, let me end my anger. I don’t want to be ugly anymore.”

Ignoring the family's pleas, the deer bit the dying brother's neck.

“Ugh, ugh…!!”

“…….”

The teeth of the herbivore could not end the family's life in an instant. But that was also what the deer wanted. In this pain and betrayal, you become even more angry.

Become such a disaster.

“…….”

“…….”

The deer cried as it watched its dead brother without even closing its eyes. And then it laughed.

“…When I wake up again as a disaster, give me a name.”

By killing the Son of God, the deer took away the power of speech.

Thus the Demon King of Wrath was born, but he was never given a name.

* * *

The one piece that was never returned.

deer

It's a small, young deer.

That memory was trapped in my heart.

Fairy tale rate 99.9%

It was a piece of anger.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (260)

260

Episode 260

“…….”

Ather groaned after hearing the whole story.

“…The evil spirit might not have been born….”

The world became a hell because of herbivores blinded by rage. It was a wrong judgment of an immature intelligence.

The deer, having finished its story, kept its mouth shut as if it were an ordinary animal. Aram looked back and forth between the deer and the suffering Ater. She was thinking about something when she asked Ater.

“Are you having a hard time?”

“…No, because I had expected it to some extent based on the records.”

“That’s true.”

“I won’t lose my mind now.”

Ather, who had been imprisoned in a thorn prison for hundreds or thousands of years, had often gone mad. But not now. It was foolish for the ghosts of the past to quarrel over sins and responsibilities.

“It can’t get any dumber than this.”

It was more than a disaster, it was a terrible thing.

“But this story made it clear.”

“I think the same as Mr. Ater.”

They could be sure.

“Argio is a demon of clear wrath.”

Finally, the time came to open the coffin.

“…I am ready.”

“I think I did everything I could.”

“I hope our cheap trick works.”

“It’s possible, because the evil spirits are looking down on us.”

“Even that is just a struggle within the permitted limits… but I don’t feel bad about it.”

“Now I’m mentally prepared.”

The deer did not hide as before.

“…….”

“Would you like to open the coffin together?”

“…Beep.”

"okay."

The deer did not speak, even though it could. Neither Aram nor Ater knew exactly why. They simply went to the underground tomb with the deer, who was trying to face its past sins.

The stairs were still dark, but there was no dust. Ather took the lead and held the torch. Despite being an underground ruin made in the rain forest, it was dry rather than humid. There was a deep, bloody smell.

“…Have you ever been here alone?”

The deer shook its head.

“Why did you do that?”

The deer said he was not qualified.

“…Oh, are you talking to me just now?”

“Beep.”

“You have a lot of talent.”

Aram was inwardly impressed, but also felt sorry for the tragedy. To the deer, every word of language was a sin, so he kept his mouth shut. That's why the deer seemed to have learned how to communicate with humans through air, not through language.

“…You also left a record here. I am very grateful for that. Without your record, we would have been even more at a loss as to what to do….”

Aram then asked.

“It is said that in the past, all beasts in this world gathered together and formed a single race. I have seen records that the deer race certainly existed, but they were wiped out early on. Were you involved in that?”

The deer answered that it was not so.

“Then did they naturally become extinct?”

Among the beasts, deer were the most human-like. Not only in intelligence, but also in greed. Having lost the wisdom they had as beasts, they walked the path of extinction.

It wasn't the deer's fault.

“…That wasn’t a pleasant story, I’m sorry.”

After a short conversation and a long silence, the entrance to the tomb was soon revealed. Ater stared at the huge tomb, then looked back at Aram and the deer. He gave a firm order.

“Once you enter here, you will see several coffins. If something inside speaks to you, do not answer at all. We will go to the last coffin.”

“I understand.”

"then…."

As Ather stepped in, an unfamiliar voice echoed through the tomb.

“Here you go again.”

It was the voice of an unknown person.

“The last family toy has found its way to the grave again.”

“What brings you here?”

“Ah, the end is near. Tell me the end.”

“Have you finally decided to open the coffin?”

“I’m so frustrated, stop now….”

Ather took Aram's hesitant hand and led him. The deer walked with its characteristically leisurely pace and gazed at the coffins. There was nothing good in reacting to the phantoms who were mad with hatred and rage.

And when they reached the last coffin, all voices fell silent.

“…….”

Ater let go of Aram's hand and asked the coffin.

“…It was like this before too.”

“…….”

“Everyone was silent when they came before you, as if they were children who had been betrayed.”

“They were actually children too.”

Ki-ki-ki-ki-ki-ki… .

The coffin door slammed open.

“How old do they look?”

“…Judging from the voice alone, he seemed quite young.”

“You guessed it right, I am the eldest of them all. The one who started the name Argios in the world. Those little ones can’t beat me anymore.”

“Just because you’re older?”

“For now, yes. Those kids have calmed down quite a bit and realized that I am a stronger and more experienced player than them, so they probably figured it wouldn’t be a bad idea to follow my orders.”

“Argio, while alive, was a tyrant who freely controlled his anger.”

I read his past through the records.

“Anger was both a sword and a shield to you. You were angry because you wanted to be angry, not because you were manipulated like other people.”

“Do you know how powerful the power of someone who is very angry is? Do you know the limits of that emotion? Yes, anger is a good weapon and a strong fortress. I was angry when I wanted to be.”

Aram intervened in this.

“But it wouldn’t have been the case when you, the last saint, died and all the ghosts gathered together to become the Demon King. You had to continue the anger you didn’t want, because the evil spirit called ‘Argio’ wasn’t created just because you existed.”

"…aha…."

Through the crack in the coffin, a large ringed finger appeared.

“This small, young voice is quite sweet.”

Dalgrak.

A thick ring hit the coffin.

“Hey, little friend. Servant of a strange god. Where do you come from?”

“…I came from the arms of my teacher, Dalnim.”

“Moon, Moon… Moon… It’s not a being I know.”

“Are you still angry?”

“If I want to, I will.”

“Well then, now. Please answer my question.”

“You’re cheeky and sassy, but cute….”

widely.

The movement of the fingers stopped.

“I was very angry.”

Then a hand extended from the coffin.

“…Ah, my friend….”

“…….”

“My one and only noble and innocent family.”

The hand soon stopped in front of the deer.

“How did you do that?”

A large hand bloomed like a flower.

“Why did you do that?”

Boom, boom.

The eyes, which were completely dyed in gold, were buried in the palms of his hands and were shedding tears of blood.

“If you had only wanted to kill me, would I have been this angry? If you had only wanted to take away the power of the saint and spread the qualification of language to the beasts, I would not have been angry. You dared to judge and distort my anger, and confine me to this eternal torment.”

The hand stretched out further and stroked the deer's cheek.

“My friend, my family, my lovely sister….”

He smeared the deer's cheeks with golden blood and returned to the coffin.

“It really hurt.”

"…sorry."

“Your teeth are really dull, unlike now.”

"sorry."

“Is your anger over?”

“On that day, it ended when all mankind who sinned and all mankind who sinned again died.”

“That’s unfair. I’m still so angry, why didn’t you wait for me? You should have been angry with me, right? Isn’t that right?”

“Now all that remains is my pitiful body and my wretched existence. I have no strength left to fight you, no will, no anger left.”

"okay…?"

The direction of the whispering voice turned towards Ather.

“Why did you show me that child?”

“There was something I wanted to see from you.”

“Then how about now?”

“…I saw what I wanted.”

“I don’t know why I thought that, but I see.”

Soon the voice turned to Aram.

“Did you guess that I would forgive you for all this?”

“Yes, I thought so, and I just saw the snippet now.”

“You say you have seen in me a mercy that even I have not seen.”

“Adults are such an arrogant bunch, their very existence is born of arrogance.”

“I understand what you mean. However, I will not answer.”

Knock knock—….

The coffin closed, and the ghost spoke.

“You have received a gift, so it is time for you to open this door.”

It was meant as permission.

“…….”

“…….”

"ruler."

The voice whispered.

“Open it.”

Ather reached out.

* * *

Blood flowed.

“…….”

It was a deer's.

Ather pushed the saint behind him and drew his sword. Aram bit his lip but was not surprised at all at the tragedy that had befallen him.

The deer's blood spurted out like a painting, covering the wide floor of the tomb.

“…….”

Ather frowned at the absurd amount.

‘… It’s absurd that this much blood comes out just from killing a deer.’

Slap… .

The blood that had pooled on his shoes was bright red. It was shallow and gentle, as if it had been raining heavily and pooled on the ground.

From the natural judgment, strangeness invaded the air. A terrible poison spread from the empty space that could be breathed and exhaled. The curse grew in size like a hatchling.

'It's a feeling I really never wanted to feel again.'

A sight where all the rules of the world seemed to be broken. A lack of understanding caused by the abnormal and the absurd. That great fear was all too familiar to Ather.

“…….”

“…Ah, okay….”

Next to the hand that had ripped out the heart of the deer, another long hand reached out from the darkness. It stretched out like a dried-up tree and caressed the dying deer, its heart ripped out.

“I had a family like this….”

And then another hand reaches out.

“My family.”

"family?"

“Did I have a family?”

And then another one, and another one, and another, and another one reaches out.

“Well, I guess I misunderstood something.”

“If I had a family, why would that have happened?”

“No, no. It happened because I had a family.”

“Oh, my. It hurts. I can’t breathe. It’s stuffy. It’s too small in here.”

“There is no sky, there is no sky, there is no sky. The hand that used to caress small things has abandoned its child and left me alone. How lonely and sad this is. You have abandoned me. I am the only one left. You who are merciless, please take me away.”

“Why did I have to go through so much? You created me and never gave me a single voice or a single touch. Even when your worthless little children tore out your heart, cut off your arms, and displayed your head, you just shamelessly ran away….”

“It hurts, it hurts, God, take care of this pain. Or else, send hell down. The disaster you have created awaits you here. Open the door, you. Open the door and look at my face. Show me your face. I have been waiting for you.” “It is so dark here, I have wandered through the air countless times, unable to see what is in front of me. Whisper to me, you, my creator, why you cannot light the world even with a torch. You created me with your greed. Where have you run away when I am still here?” “Ah, come back, father. Call my name and look at me. If you created this terrible beast, give me a name as well. Where have you gone? Where have you gone? Yes, yes, yes, I know that you are such a being. Arrogant and ignorant of your subject, more than the being you created. I understand.” “Where is the end of this anger? How long must I be angry? No one can take away my anger. Only this heat that burns my heart and melts my brain makes me exist. So whisper more and more, add evil deeds to me and sing songs. Call my name with insults and make me point fingers at by all things in the world.”

A thousand mouths whispered in the air and darkness, in a language too long to read.

Countless hands crawl out of the coffin, and countless shadows follow them.

It gradually rose up, oozing out through the cracks in the coffin, as if it were stagnant, putrid lake water or a swamp in a black forest.

“Have mercy on me, how can you not pity me?” “I will laugh while you scream.” “Draw your sword at me, you! Rebuke me as the worst and the lowest!” “Here is the wrath of all the world, denounce me and beg for mercy. I will not give you even a single piece, so waste your precious life in vain screaming.”

“God, my father! Look at me! Or else give me your head! Why did I have to die in this dark forest! I was lonely, I cried terribly, and my eyes melted from the poison!”

“You told me to protect the world, so I followed your will, but if there is no one to recite your will with me, what is the meaning of all this? Take me away, take me away, take me away. You should have taken my breath away and left me to rot, so know your sin!!”

“Why? Oh, why? Why, why, why, why, why have you forgotten me? You have forgotten me. Do not forget. I will stab you with a knife. I will stick a sharp dagger in your heart and decorate it with all kinds of poisonous plants, so give me your neck. I have waited for a very long time, so give it to me as a gift. Father, ah! My father…!!”

Then a bright red body crawled out.

It was much longer than a snake's, and had numerous feathers that looked like the wings of numerous birds had been torn and attached to it.

Enormous feet and heavy claws extended between the long torso, crushing the floor of the tomb.

“I had wings, but now I cannot fly.” “Humans have broken their ends and put countless torments on my back.” “Evil ones, terrible ones, my beloved traitors. Worshipers of nature, who have insulted me and imprisoned me in this bloody tomb.”

“If I had not been greedy, I could fly. But I cannot fly with these dirty wings. How can I not fly with my wings? The sky is above, and I cannot escape anywhere.”

“Do you see what is left to me now? There is only screaming flesh, iron-smelling feathers, and giant feet that will trample your flesh. These added fingers cannot count your number, these patched eyes cannot see the world, and these unnatural arms cannot embrace you.”

“You all made me like this. You remade me like this. Are you satisfied? You should be satisfied. You should be satisfied. Then, that’s how it should be. Didn’t I become like this for you? Didn’t you break me and make me like this!!”

“So what can you call me now?”

“Me, me… my name is….”

“…What did you call me….”

"I…."

Aram hid even further behind Ater, as he whispered, screamed, and yelled like a madman until he was about to die.

She muttered to herself as she gathered her strength so that she could escape at any time.

"…dragon."

It was a mess of humans, ghosts, and rage, but at its core it was a dragon.

“…you were right.”

“…It looks even more horrible than I remember.”

“You said that the wizards who imprisoned Mr. Ater borrowed the power of that evil god when they tried to kill the creator of this world?”

“Yes, that’s why….”

Ather swallowed his sigh with difficulty.

“It’s gotten worse.”

“…For a messenger of God to become like that.”

“Human greed was great.”

Humans ruined the dragons.

“So you have to take responsibility.”

Ater left the tomb with Aram.

'Argio', who was suffering from the combination of numerous personalities and anger, could not even figure it out. However, it was only after a long, long time that he finally saw the body of the deer that had fallen at his feet.

Only the golden eyes did so.

“…….”

A long, stiff hand reached out and cradled it like a baby.

“…Ah, you still have nice fur.”

'Argio' laughed like a child.

“Are you sleeping?”

“…….”

“I will protect you….”

It stretched out its arm, lifted the deer's heart, and swallowed it whole.

The lips, soaked in deer blood, formed a long, wide smile that made it seem as if they had been blank for a while.

And then, slap!

“…….”

The man's head split in half, leaving only his lips. The broken pieces disappeared into dust in the air.

He felt for the shape of my head with his strangely twisted hand. It was like a half-cut porcelain piece. Inside it, brilliant golden blood flowed abundantly.

Soon the lips take on a vicious crescent shape.

“…Ahahaha!”

It was fun.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (261)

261

Episode 261

The fox tribe's chieftain, Rami, called out to his old friend.

“Gargal.”

“Oh, okay.”

The wolf clan chief nodded.

“We should step back soon.”

“If he were to take the form of a beast, he would not harm us.”

“But wouldn’t it be better to stay away from the battlefield if possible?”

“You’re right, the children are already in the forest.”

“His protection will give you the strength to overcome the poison of the Black Forest….”

“…I’m not feeling so good.”

Rami's form soon changed into that of a fox. The red-furred fox lightly shook its body and looked at Gargal. Gargal also changed back to a wolf form and looked down at his friend.

He laid his huge body down in the castle hallway.

“Everything… is according to His word.”

“Yeah, that’s bittersweet.”

“Will peace come here after all this commotion is over?”

“Would God ever break a promise he has made?”

“Then we will be free.”

“Or it could be thrown away.”

“Maybe so. You’re right.”

The evil spirit made them a promise.

He said that he would heal the ruined land caused by human greed. He said that it would become the final battlefield of the evil spirit, and that you would borrow the land for a while, and when he himself came to an end, you would make it your home.

Yet it was not in the promise that beasts would plough his battlefield.

“It may be an incredibly stupid way to treat God, but I finally believed in Him and followed Him….”

“The being that will devour this battlefield will not be the one we know. Give up your foolish thoughts, Rami.”

“Humans would not dare kill a god, would they? Even the previous creator said that all he could do was to make them abandon this place and leave.”

“Isn’t that something that depends on what God thinks?”

Their friend and master said that God is a destiny with a will, so if that will is directed to its own end, even a god cannot escape death.

“I’m not saying I like it, but….”

Gargal scanned the empty interior of the castle.

“…Yeah, it’s bitter, just like you said.”

“Right?”

“It was always a noisy place.”

An amusement park, as they called it. This huge castle, its enchanting rides, and the luxurious town surrounding it became a special place for them. It was always bustling and full of joy and happiness.

There was no one left there anymore. He had told them to hide themselves when the time came so that they would not be caught up in the war. Each chieftain followed his will and hid all his family members in the forest.

“…….”

“…….”

Maybe that's why it was so quiet.

“…Was this the time of destruction that humans had in mind?”

“It would have been more than this, not less.”

“No matter what, the end of an era is so desolate.”

“If He had not taken us, we would have gone down the same path.”

“Actually, I don’t think this kind of life was that bad.”

Delight in dreams.

“It didn’t seem real at all, but still.”

The long days of suffering are still vivid. The pain of not being able to even give milk to newborn babies, and even that was contaminated with poison, and having to bury countless descendants in dirty ground. This era was like a compensation for those times.

Just then a crow flew into the window.

“Listen, you guys.”

"ah…."

“Mr. Balf.”

“Why are you here without moving?”

The fox smiled wickedly at the crow chieftain, Balf's question.

“It’s a shame to step down like this.”

“Hmm, if you witness war firsthand, things will be a lot different….”

“Our children are already hiding in the forest. I am not worried, as he would never harm his friendly beast.”

“Do not judge the wrath of the evil god by the judgment of a mere beast. The god who has received all wrath will not distinguish between good and evil, so you should not be too reassured.”

“Unless we directly show our wrath to Him, we will not be able to see the gaze of God. Of course, we can be crushed by His blind hand and footsteps at any time….”

“That’s why you should be with your children even more.”

“…Even so….”

Rami's ears fell backwards. Her fluttering tail stopped.

“…Is this really the end?”

“…I guess you’ve fallen for it.”

“I know this is stupid.”

“He has been in human form for a long time. I understand how you feel. He had to humble himself to do so.”

“If it is His will that I should feel this way, must I retreat to the forest and hide? Can’t a mere fox help Him?”

“If it is His will, it is not that there is nothing.”

A crow flapped its large wings and nodded beyond the window.

“Look over there.”

"…hmm?"

Gargal, who had been quiet the whole time, saw something under the window.

"human being…?"

“Oh my, you’re human?”

“One of them seems to be a saint from another dimension who was in charge of the Crow Tribe.”

“I told you that I worship a god named Dalnim.”

"uh…."

Gargal looked back at Balf.

“Are they also God’s arrangement?”

“I think it’s closer to a toy than an arrangement, but in the end, it must also be God’s will.”

“Then is it also part of God’s will that we talk to them?”

“I don’t know that either.”

Flutter—

A crow flew through the sky.

“But it’s worth talking about, whatever that may be.”

“Mr. Balf is right.”

The fox scratched the wolf's large leg, and his eyes sparkled.

“Gargal, Gargal.”

“You can do this much too….”

“I am small and weak, so I get hurt easily.”

“Damn… Anyway, it’s annoying.”

Gargal bit the fox's nape and lifted it up.

“Kaeheung, you were going to do it anyway.”

“Tsk tsk tsk, geul zu mur….”

The wolf with the fox in its mouth stepped onto the window and jumped down. The fox, left hanging in the air, flailed around and made a crying sound.

“Wow!!”

Kuung—!!!

The fox cried as the wolf touched the ground.

“Can you please treat me a little better?!”

“Whew!!”

“Wake up!!”

“This is already pretty, what more could you ask for!!”

“Anyway, wolves are so savage that they can’t get along…!!”

Woof, woof woof!!

Kkang, kang!!

A crow flew in while the two were arguing with their mouths.

“…Ignore them for now.”

“…Oh, yes.”

Ater, a human male who had been looking at the beasts with strange eyes, nodded.

“…My name is Ater. Before the destruction of humanity, I was undeservingly called a warrior, and once participated in the sealing of the Demon King. I survived thanks to the mystery of the ruins and the mercy of the evil god.”

“Nice to meet you, gentleman. I am Aram. I am the youngest daughter of my master, Dalnim. I have joined hands with Ater to help us fight against this evil spirit invasion.”

The crow flapped its wings as the information about the two was injected as if it had been waiting for it.

“I am Balf, the chieftain of the crows. It is surprising that there are still descendants of humans who were thought to be extinct, and it is also surprising that the guests who came to the amusement park have not yet returned home.”

The crow tilted its head.

“What do you want to offer us?”

“Before that, I have a question.”

Aram, who was a guest at the amusement park, asked.

“Are you the minions of the evil spirit, his friends, or his family?”

“All three.”

“What do you consider to be the most important value among them?”

“I would say family.”

As the crow looked back, the fox, who had stopped fighting, blinked.

“Me?”

“Then who would be there?”

“…I consider myself a subordinate, his faithful servant.”

“Let’s say the same thing we usually do.”

“It is also the beast that receives the greatest love from Him!”

The fox showed off its rich fur and thick tail without hesitation. The wolf, who had been looking at the fox, who had posed as if she were a statue, answered one after another.

"friend."

“How blunt.”

“…I think we’re friends.”

“Huh, anyway, I said there was no progress.”

“Don’t bother me until this happens, Rami….”

“It was actually the right time.”

And Aram asked again.

“Then do you love your master?”

“It’s such an unfamiliar word.”

“We also saw and felt what kind of being Argio was in human form. We received his mercy, and we thought that he himself could not be called an evil spirit.”

“…The same applies to us, my master’s guests.”

“I have so much to say and I wish I could be more careful with you, but unfortunately, I don’t have much time. I’ll get straight to the point.”

The saintess called the Family of God asked.

“What would you do if you could ruin this war?”

"…that…."

The wolf grinned.

“That sounds quite interesting.”

In this way, the beasts joined the will of the saint and the warrior.

* * *

The first punitive force to enter the amusement park was not Dalnimgyo, but Justitia.

“See, I told you it wasn’t difficult?”

“Looking at the situation at Dalnim Church, it seems like we are the only ones who can enter more easily.”

“Anyway, what’s important is that anyone can enter.”

Seo Seo-hee, the guild leader of the Justitia expedition team, looked around.

“…It’s quieter than I thought.”

He asked a guild member who had visited this place before.

“Was it originally like a closed amusement park like this?”

“Um, no, that’s not possible. I think I submitted the report….”

“I’m asking because I wonder if my memory is wrong.”

“I was just saying that. But it wasn’t like this before. It was much noisier and more crowded. They even assigned a guide like a crow to each person.”

“It seems like it’s hard to find a guide like that these days.”

“I think so too.”

The guild members assessed the situation with calm faces.

“I guess we weren’t the only ones preparing.”

There were no friendly guides, no delicious food to tickle your nose, no twinkling lights to dazzle your eyes. The amusement park, with all the lights off and not a speck of dust, seemed somewhat eerie.

“Just like the guild leader said, it really is like a closed amusement park.”

“I’ve never been to an amusement park before, but I feel a bit bitter for no reason.”

Seo Seo-hee laughed.

“Okay, then….”

He raised his head and looked down into the basement.

“Let me see the landlord’s face.”

“The vibration is ringing, Guildmaster.”

“Something is coming up from below.”

“Yeah, he’ll be here soon.”

Knock,

Kkuddeuk, tsk, tsk!

Kwaaak…!!!

"oh."

The first thing that caught my eye were the long, massive arms.

Next is the tail of a long, red beast. Next are the arms and legs that match it. And then the bizarre wings that cover its massive body… .

“You look sick.”

In the meantime, the figures of many humans were piled up.

『—Ah, ahh… Aaaah… ! Aaaahhhh!!』

A scream rang out.

"Eternal wrath upon me! Your eternal insults upon me!!"

"Hey, buddy. Have you come to see me? Have you come to see me? Have you come to see me?"

"Let's dance, sing, and bleed happily."

Its voice was not loud, but it was very audible to the members of Justitia's guild. It was not because their physical abilities were outstanding. It was because the voice of the 'human' resonated in their heads.

One of the guild members scratched his ear hard.

“It’s been a while since I’ve felt like this.”

“Because I haven’t had to compete with the divine for a while.”

“Is an evil god an evil god…?”

That voice, just by reaching my ears, was maddeningly ticklish and painful. It was as clear as an actor's singing voice in a theater resonating in my brain. Its mere presence made life rot and cause pain.

Seo Seo-hee muttered as she looked at the radiant being covered in all sorts of golden treasures and bright red feathers.

“…It’s a dragon.”

An evil spirit that was once a dragon.

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee realized its essence.

That was a terrible, bitter thing.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (262)

262 Episode 262 “A dragon?” The president of the association, Dan Hae-ra, tilted her head with a smile at the contact from her close friend. “It’s not common for a dragon to become an evil spirit.” [It’s not uncommon, though.] “Yes, that’s the problem. This is a headache.” The nature of the dragons that appear in each dimension is different. Some dragons are more like beasts, while others act as sages or are given the role of gods. However, they all had one thing in common. In every dimension, dragons were called messengers of the gods. “If a dragon were to become that ugly, the hatred would be immense. There has never been a case in which a dragon committed a sin and changed itself, and if it was to the extent of becoming an evil spirit… That would be quite…” [There must have been a lot of things, since the dragon, the greatest defender of nature, became an evil spirit. It would have been impossible for it to have simply been betrayed by all of humanity or abandoned by the gods.] “What exactly was its form? Did you say that the dragon’s upper body was made up of a being very similar to a human?” [Most of them were immature humans who hadn’t even reached adulthood, all crushed and tattered. No, isn’t the word crushed a bit odd? They looked like they were broken like porcelain here and there, or stretched out like molasses…] “Just listening to you, I think of an elongated dragon from the East rather than a Western dragon. Hehe, you didn’t have time to take a picture, did you?” [It was hard just to bring our guild members out alive. I think I saw all the curses I’ve ever seen in my life there, and they were so diverse?] Seo Seo-hee had escaped from the dungeon and was being treated for her injuries. As the name suggests, she didn’t have any major injuries, but all sorts of curses had been placed on her soul, making it impossible to endure without receiving treatment. One of the curses Seo Seo-hee received was that her flesh would rot and fall apart. The sound of bandages rustling echoed. [Fighting against the divine is exhausting. Each and every one of those insignificant beings is such a huge blow to humans. When I hear a voice, blood flows from my ears and my mind goes blank… Wow, it was no joke.] “How could you not die just by holding that being in your eyes?” [Right, after all, since it was essentially a dragon, it wasn’t that threatening. It must have been that it wasn’t the traditional divinity that was fate and nature from the beginning. That alone confirmed our possibility of winning.] “If it’s a created divinity, then we have a chance of winning.” Divinity is fate and nature, or in other words, history. As living history, they could measure its level with the mysterious time they contained in their bodies. And compared to the traditional divinity whose time could not be measured, the created divinity… . “It’s not the worst.” It was possible for humans to handle. “…Hmm, should we limit the participation of collectors?” [Oh, that person… Is that so… That’s what happened…] The story of Bisabal came up out of nowhere, but Seo Seo-hee agreed as if she knew what she was talking about. [The Bisabal guild leader can’t use his legs if it’s a dragon.] “How foolish it would be if his own eyes were dragon’s.” [Now that I think about it, this evil spirit really does have a lot of eyes.] “That’s an even more ominous story.” [No, its hands, arms, and wings… were filled with golden eyes…] Seo Seo-hee described the evil spirit she had seen. [It seemed like it had a lot of arms, probably because it was made up of many people. The wings were also more numerous than I would have thought. They twisted and twisted like the branches of a giant tree, wrapping the entire amusement park like a spider web… As time passed, it became impossible to even figure out the path.] “You managed to get out.” [It covered everything, almost like a maze. But if it’s a maze, there has to be a way out. If we searched for a way out, we could get out. Those countless hands stretched out and tried to crush us, but it wasn’t to the point where we couldn't shake them off.] "If you say so…." The association president nodded. "Maybe it would be better to set it to EX level." He was referring to the level of the 'Amusement Park of Dreams.' "This way, the citizens will also be alert." [Is your cooperation with the government going well?] "Most of the victims of this incident are citizens of the city, so it wasn't that difficult. In the end, it's just a matter of stimulating the remaining responsibility in reality and stimulating the desire for growth here." [You even gave them a point of difference.] "It's only natural that the more diligent people who wake up early get more compensation." Thanks to this, in addition to the official relief policy, many people had to be deployed, but the situation was gradually improving. Citizens who remembered the existence of things that were truly important to them were returning to reality one by one. "Furthermore, the image of those who rely on the 'Dream Park' is created as very incompetent people, so there's no reason to be immersed in their dreams even more. Your active participation was a great help." The citizens' affection and trust for Justitia was sky-high. Among them, the most beloved hunter, Seo Seo-hee, personally took part in this subjugation. It was inevitable that he would develop antipathy toward the 'Dream Park' that opposed him. [That's why I didn't throw away the symbol of eternity and all.] "I'm always grateful to you for enduring the inconvenience and burden and working hard for me." [That's embarrassing… Friends should help each other out in times like this, right?] "That's what I'm grateful for." Dan Hae-ra nodded. "Since it's come to this, we need to seal or deal with the evil spirit as soon as possible and close the dungeon. If we waste any more time here, the citizens who were stopped by your fame and my tricks will be tempted by their dreams again." Seo Seo-hee looked embarrassed. [It's so easy for you to say you're not the type to step forward.] "You can do it, right? And, in my opinion…" Dan Hae-ra thought of the little saint she had seen once. "…Um, that's right. The saint who was kidnapped wasn't the type of person to just take it." [Oh, can we get help from the Saintess of Dalnim Church?] "The Collector would be much more accurate in this regard than I am. He really has good eyesight. And since the Collector has expressed his intention to participate in this expedition, the possibility of it happening is quite high." [This is very welcome news in the midst of such a headache.] Seo Seo-hee asked. [What about Hunter Sergio?] "He hasn't been coming out of the collection shop recently, citing poor health. The Collector hasn't said anything, and judging from the fact that he didn't participate in this list, there must be a reason for it." [I can already hear the regrets of the expedition team. He seemed quite healthy the last time I saw him. Could there be a connection between Hunter Sergio's abnormal condition and this dungeon?] "We'll have to look into it more, but the circumstances are quite coincidental. He could be hiding because he's scared of this dungeon. If our guess is correct, he died once and is still alive as a mystery, so the Collector, worried about his family, stepped in and stopped him." [At least he didn't look like someone who was hiding because he was scared, so he must have a reason as you said. If you feel like you don't have enough power, you can bring Hae-woon, so there's no need to worry too much.] Seo-hee's laughter was heard. [See you later.] "Yeah, then…." [I'll try to seduce Hunter Sergio.] "I hope that time comes soon." Dan-hae, who always had to make promises, always needed special emotions and memories. * * * Of course, the deaths continued. "That abominable evil spirit…!!" The ones who reacted particularly sensitively to this were Dal-nim-gyo and Tae-yang-gyo. "With a horrible voice, she melted my partner's brain! Oh, we absolutely have to seal it. If we leave it like this, the evil spirit of dreams will reach out to reality again and ruin the world!" "There are only a few traces of the saintess left, and I can't find her… Where on earth is she? She couldn't have been eaten, could she? Please, please, that can't happen…!!" "He is a traitor! He rebels against everything traditionally sacred. How could such an evil being come into existence? It must be sealed!!" The evil spirit melted the human brain with his singing, cut people to pieces with his dancing hands, and made people shed tears of blood with his enchanting golden eyes. The divinity itself was a threat. “But how? He, he will see us as toys… nothing more, nothing less. You know how much he, a monster in his lifetime, loved battle and blood…” “This is nothing more than a prank to the evil spirit of dreams. He is literally playing war. You can tell just by looking at the giant hand that suddenly pops out and plays with dolls!” Some priests were overcome with a sense of helplessness. They were the ones who were more knowledgeable about divinity and mystery than anyone else. Rather, they knew the danger and nobility of it well. That is why the Sun Cult began to lukewarmly approach the battle. The Moon Cult criticized the Sun Cult for such things. “You cowards!” “It wasn’t even our war to begin with!” “Did you think that if you left the evil spirit of dreams alone, you would be safe?!” “That’s not why we changed camps…!!” In the midst of the tense situation, the Dalnim Church gradually collapsed. Their advance and methods were aggressive, and because they were not good at war, the number of victims continued to increase, and the priests suffered in their vacancy. The bishop remained silent in the midst of all this tragedy. “Bishop, I’m sorry… but still, let’s have dinner…” “I’m busy, so I can’t do it for you. I’ll have it later.” “It’s already been four days. I understand that you are greatly shocked by the saint’s absence, but if you, too, are secluding yourself like this, who can we rely on?” “I trust you.” She said with a rare smile. “Aren’t we proud disciples who serve Dalnim?” “T-That’s… what you said, Bishop, is correct.” “Did you think that all of this was unreasonable?” “No, I am satisfied with our use, Bishop.” “Is that so?” The bishop muttered. “Yes, this is what we are.” She was faithful to all the duties she had to do as a bishop. She planned the layout of the camp, took care of the wounded, and planned the future strategy. But behind all of that, she was always absorbed in some research. The Dalnim Church did not find it strange. The individualism that was deeply ingrained in their souls made it possible. If there was something they wanted to do, they were free to do it, and they did not look at each other strangely. That was the Dalnim Church. “……” Nevertheless, the Dalnim Church gradually collapsed. “—Look here, my friend.” “…….” “Look here, look at me. All the knowledge you want is here. Shall I open the library of my magnificent castle? Do you want to see the wider world and see all its mysteries? Yes, I will allow it. I will allow it. My friend, we are on good enough terms… Don’t doubt me.” “…Ah, ahh….” “What’s wrong? What’s wrong? Friend, are you going to abandon me? Oh, it hurts so much. I can’t breathe. Are you feeling that way too? Then I can help you. Reach out to me, beg for mercy, surrender yourself to me.” “T-stop. Please… please stop…!!” “Stop? Stop? What should I stop? All of this was due to your weakness. Why does my voice seem to be heard only by you? What do you think is the reason? You accepted me. You were curious about me. I will help you, don’t be distressed. My friend. My honorable, clever, wise friend…” The whisper of the evil spirit seeped into my weakened heart. “Now, look. Look with those pretty eyes.” “…….” “Where is your precious thing here?” The giggling, squeaking laughter of the child, the soft fingers that sweetly caressed their cheeks and necks, the hands that gently stroked their heads. Drenched in the enchanting golden light. With their eyes soaked in gold, the people went crazy. “Bishop, bishop. We must follow his will. He will give us rest. Only he can lead us on the right path… and place us in the arms of the Master…” “Thank you for understanding my will.” “Ah, I wish I had known sooner. Surely the Saintess is already in the arms of the moon? Into her merciful and sweet arms, led by those kind and warm hands… I envy you. I envy you, I…” “…Yes, I suppose so…” The bishop gently hugged the priests who were shedding tears of blood and blood in gold. “We can become stars.” That must be the will of the moon in the dream. * * * “…….” And in all of this, the saint had no intention of remaining silent. “…So, please let me go?” “Ahaha, haha! Hahahaha!! Hahahaha! Ha…! Haha!!” “I’m going crazy.” A prison of hands and arms where words could not be communicated. The saint looked at Ater, who was captured with me. “We can’t communicate.” “Just be thankful that you’re not crushed like this.” “That’s true, but it really makes me mad, Ater-sama only knows how to say the right things.” “I learned other things, but I forgot them while I was in the thorn prison.” “Just look at how you bring up sensitive pasts because it’s disadvantageous to you.” “I became the palace librarian because I know how to do this much.” “Your ability to rationalize yourself is truly amazing...” The saint, who was trapped in the clutches of the evil spirit, or more precisely, the Demon King’s castle, crossed her arms. “Let’s see who wins.” Let me say it again, Aram really had no intention of remaining silent. Shouldn't we at least execute the operation we worked so hard to prepare? (To be continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (263)

263

Episode 263

When the seals of the evil spirit were completely released and Aram and Ater were working hard to persuade the beasts, the evil spirit, who seemed to have lost even his wits, kidnapped them. It was a literal act.

“It seemed like I was kidnapped in reality, but it wasn’t really like that….”

Ater nodded at Aram's muttering.

“But now that you’ve actually been kidnapped, it’ll be hard to convince you that when you get back home, it wasn’t as bad as you feared.”

“Stop talking nonsense.”

“Someone has to face reality.”

“How could someone with that personality become a royal librarian?”

“I think it was possible because there was no librarian with better abilities than me.”

“I see.”

It's easy to say, but it probably wasn't like that in reality. Basically, the palace was a den of evil in any dimension.

In a world of monsters wearing human skulls, if you could become a royal librarian with just one ability, that ability would be overwhelming and undeniable.

That's why Aram could laugh.

“I feel so good to have such a great person with me.”

“Suddenly, he started speaking in a noble tone like other high-ranking officials….”

“And if you are so confident in your abilities, you must also know how to escape from the top room of this Demon King’s castle?”

“Honestly, I can’t give you a definitive answer.”

Ather stroked his chin in a room clasped together by countless hands with golden eyes.

“It doesn’t seem like it would be impossible.”

Even if it is just a false reputation, he was once called a warrior.

“As I have experience, I know well how to deal with the Demon King. I was the one who organized all those damn curses and unusual events that broke the common sense and rules of the world into a book.”

“So how do you think we can get out of here?”

“I have to make you close your eyes.”

“I’ve thought about that part too.”

“I had no doubt that you would do so.”

Even though the two were captured by the Demon King, the situation did not get worse. This was because the two captured were Aram and Ater. The combination of a saint who had studied all sorts of mysteries and theories and a royal librarian who had experienced enough to be an opponent of the Demon King was quite excellent.

“First of all, the most important point is that evil spirits are also divine, and divine is fate, nature, and mystery at the same time. And these mysterious beings with this reason all value rules.”

“In fact, I don’t know if Argio in his current state has the right reason, but there are definitely some parts that we agree with. Even if he seems to have lost his reason and gone mad in our judgment, he is still a god. No matter how far he falls into the abyss, he will be smarter than us.”

“More than anything, it was my teacher’s influence that this evil spirit was clearly merciful to us. I don’t know if it was arrogance or affection, but I think it is at least worth using. First, I think I need to find out about the evil spirit’s behavior. Do you have any organized information?”

“That’s my specialty. Of course, it looks quite different from what I remember it to be like before, because of what happened while it was sealed, but that doesn’t mean its essence has changed.”

Ater rummaged through his belongings and soon took out a thick document.

“Here is my analysis of the research journals of the wizards who attempted to overthrow the Creator.”

“Where did you come from?”

“In my time, another word for warrior was homeless or a wanderer. This is the basic quality of a warrior. I apologize for not being able to share this in advance due to the busy situation.”

“So where did it come from… No, but this is quite interesting. Even if the situation weren’t like this, I would have liked to hold on to it for a month and savor it, but I'll ask you to do it later."

Aram, who had been staring intently at the data, narrowed his eyes and spoke.

"Well, isn't this the most important part of this diagram? It seems like the wizards wanted to use the wrath of the evil spirit toward the creator, and I think this part of the diagram led to that."

"You are indeed a saint. Yes, that is right, the wizards wanted to use us as a power source and use the evil spirit of wrath as a weapon. So this kind of aggressive scheme had to be used. Let's start from here and dig into it…."

The two began to attack the situation step by step, as if they were scholars opening up a debate. Their discussion started with, "What kind of mechanism does the evil spirit of wrath have?" and continued to, "What must we do to avoid the evil spirit's surveillance and prison in his hands?"

"…Then I think it would be better to put this kind of diagram here. I think it would be better to apply 31-4982. This way, we can utilize the 952 space."

"But then the schematic for space 952-21-424 will be affected."

"Oh, I see. Then I think we should change it a little and use the 933-4982-11 space. Isn't this one okay? Well, then this place…."

The knowledge of Aram and Ater spoke different languages. They had to share their wisdom using only the concepts they had in common: numbers and diagrams. The work became more complicated, but the speed never slowed down.

"It was good."

“Let’s go.”

The two of them, with the evil spirit watching them, made them close their eyes, fixed their hands in space so they couldn't move, and used the evil spirit's mystique to escape from the attic.

Of course, that didn't mean the evil spirit would let the two go easily.

“ Ahh, they’re chasing me! They’re chasing me! The hands are chasing me…!!”

“That was expected. No matter what happens, I will at least take you to the first floor.”

“Left there! Then right, then straight for 341 steps, then right turn!!”

“There is no other experienced forest guard like you.”

Ater was terrified, but was impressed by Aram’s ability to understand everything about the castle. He had been wandering around the amusement park before entering the Black Forest and meeting Ater, and he had already figured out the structure of the Demon King’s castle that had been mutated due to the Demon King’s resurrection.

Even in the midst of all this, the hand continued to chase after me.

"for a moment,"

Kaaaang !!!

“Excuse me.”

“Ugh, I’ll go first.”

“I will follow you.”

Ater used the weapon he had acquired in advance to strike them down. It was a bit awkward, as it was not the greatsword he had used before, but he was also called a warrior. He was used to fending off the Demon King's attacks under unfavorable conditions.

“There’s a trap 813 steps ahead!!”

“I took note of it!!”

Aram took the lead and guided them through the labyrinthine path, while Ater struck away all the hands that came near them, and again, Aram moved quickly while weakening the power of the evil spirits so that Ater could strike away the hands.

“Since you’re already weakening it, why don’t you make it so it can’t come near at all?!”

“If that was going to happen right now, would we be doing this?! I don’t even have enough divine power to fly right now, so hold me and run. From here on out, I have to figure things out one by one and guide you!!”

“I didn’t know that the Saintess’s small stature would be such a blessing…!!”

Ather held the small and light saint in his arms with one hand. Fortunately, Ather mostly used weapons with one hand, and Aram was almost weightless to Ather.

“I’m not a bother, am I?”

“It’s fine, except that I only have one hand left when I could have used two.”

“Don’t worry and stop it, I’ll put it back when that hand is cut off!”

“That’s why these authors who are adults…!!”

Ater followed the orders of the High One obediently, even though he was annoyed by them, and Aram used his freed body to weave more complex diagrams. Aram's eyes were filled with a heavy divine power that turned bloodshot.

"…Right here!!"

"……?!"

When Ater was led to a place blocked by a wall, he was shocked, but his body was already moving. And as soon as Ater moved, the walls of the Demon King's castle began to recede as if they were alive.

"crazy."

"Follow my instructions."

"Of course."

Aram, who had gained freedom of both hands, was delving into the authority of the Demon King's Castle.

A path appeared in the direction she guided. Ater moved her feet as fast as she could, and Aram continued to find the path. Ater asked Aram, who was beginning to shed tears of blood from abusing too much authority.

"Is it okay for us to proceed like this?"

"It would be a bigger problem if we were caught by the evil spirit again."

"That's right."

"This time, lower left."

"yes."

The hand's pursuit became more intense. Their claws became sharper and they even had red fur. They looked more like dragon's hands than human hands.

If it had come to that point, it might not have been possible to guarantee their survival if they were caught. The evil spirit they remembered was in human form, so even a single mistake could not be tolerated.

It was when I got close to the exit on the first floor.

“…!!”

Boom, koogugugguung !!!

“This is…!”

“I think the main body noticed.”

“I thought it would be slower than this…!”

“Isn’t it true that an evil spirit is an evil spirit?”

Space began to warp and paths became blocked and twisted.

“If we delay any longer, we really won’t be able to get out.”

“Now let me down, it is time.”

“I wish you good luck.”

Ater set Aram down, and Aram ran through the twisted space without looking back at Ater. As she walked, the footprints she left behind were filled with diagrams using the divine power of the moon, blooming like nebulae.

Aram used his master's power to find a way. His small size and vast divine power made it possible, but he could never include Ather. The two had to go their separate ways.

“…….”

It wasn't something that was agreed upon separately, but both of them quickly realized the fact.

Soon, all directions of vision were blocked.

"…ha…."

Ather wiped his face with his blood-covered hands.

“…I finally have a colleague, but now I’m alone again.”

“Oh my, how pitiful.”

“I didn’t expect you to come.”

A small prison, blocked on all sides by the hands of evil spirits. An evil spirit with a familiar form approached with a smile. It was the last saint that Ater knew well.

A man with long, braided red hair that reached the floor and adorned with all sorts of gold and jewels. The man who had approached while walking barefoot through the prison of hands was now standing in front of Ather and looking up at him.

“Why didn’t you call me this time?”

“What more could I possibly do by calling you here?”

“Don’t you really hate places like this?”

“…That’s right….”

My stomach was churning.

“This is terrible.”

The prison of the fleshy hand reminded me of the prison of thorns.

There were hallucinations from all sides and curses rotted the soul.

Whose name was that? Ather wanted to go crazy like this.

“Okay, how comfortable would that be?”

“…….”

“Why don’t you just howl like an animal and groan in pain? Yes, that’s the privilege of an animal. Not having to think too deeply. No need for belief, no need for malice, just groaning while remaining true to your instincts… That’s the convenient advantage of an animal.”

“…Who are you?”

Yet Ather suffered, endured, and held malice.

“Someone I know treats me more politely.”

“I am that one.”

“Isn’t it a little different?”

“It’s a little different.”

A large, cold hand reached out and gently grabbed Ather's face.

“You called me.”

“…….”

“Yes, my friend?”

It was miserable.

"…you're right."

This situation came about because he, a warrior, could not endure the eternity and summoned an evil spirit.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (264)

264

Episode 264

Locked in a thorny prison, he called upon the evil spirit and begged for mercy.

“That is my sin.”

If only he had behaved better or been strong enough to ignore all that, then he would not have been locked up in prison. He would not have dared to call upon evil spirits in his suffering. He knew what kind of disaster would come.

What I'm saying is that you shouldn't ask for mercy on such a topic.

“I know, all evil gods are like that. They don’t listen to your prayers for happiness. They always think about how to make this person more miserable, and they give them the most terrible mercy within the rules.”

“But wasn’t that mercy what you wanted?”

“Yes, it was mercy. I wanted to suffer more than the pain I felt when I was locked up in the thorn prison. Even that would be a reward for me. I was already crazy, I was too tired, and if there was any change, it would be salvation.”

Even suffering becomes truly tedious when it lasts for eternity. That was the suffering of Ather. It was a hell he wanted to escape from, so he dared to ask the evil gods for mercy, even if it was an even worse hell.

“But what did you give me?”

It truly gave salvation.

“You were merciful. You were kind. That made it all the more horrifying.”

“Aren’t you a friend too good to be killed?”

“I realized that day that you were truly an evil spirit. You should have killed me instead. Do you know how much I resent you?”

“I know, foolish one. You resent me, yet believe in me. Because I have only remade your world. How weak and blind are humans….”

“That day you became my new god.”

Ater was the ghost of an old age who lived in an era where religion could not be separated. The first god was driven out by the hands of humans, and the god also abandoned all of his children, so he thought there was no longer any faith to follow.

And yet, didn't this wicked demon king extend his hand? Didn't he fix the broken world and become a new faith? I don't know how much of a damned peace that was for Ather.

“…Where did the Argio I know go?”

Inevitably, shallow hatred flowed out.

“Where did my friend go?”

I already knew this would happen.

“He may be a god, but he is human.”

“Why do you think I’m not?”

“Because you are not human.”

“…….”

The golden eyes had an evil glint, and stared at Ather like a beast.

“…Ah, my father’s ugly doll….”

Kkuddu… .

His nails dug into Ather's face.

“Human, human, human. Yes, human.”

Ather's blood flowed down the nail embedded in his face. It was red blood.

“Those terrible seeds that covered the world. Those evil seeds that twisted and ruined me and burned the forest with my family. You see, how could I be human?”

His voice was filled with hatred.

“You have forsaken me. I have been abandoned, burned, and beheaded by my family. I curse you. I resent you. I love you. I hate you. I loathe you. How beautiful it is that you are trying to tear my head off again.”

“…….”

“Are you listening to me? My friend, my little friend, my dirty, ugly doll.”

A smiling face recites a curse.

“Are you here to kill me?”

“…I thought you knew.”

“Proud one, I remember you, but I am not your friend. I want to forget you, but that alone is very difficult.”

"okay."

“Why did you call me? You shouldn’t have called me. Why on earth did you call me… Do you regret opening the coffin door now?”

Bloody tears flow from the evil spirits into gold.

“I hate the world. I blame my father. You have treated me so cruelly. You have not even cared for the disaster you created with your own hands.”

“…….”

“My brother bit my neck and conceived me, but did you not give me the seed? It was the sprout you made, the tree you made, the fruit you caused to bear.”

“…….”

“Yes, my father. My mother. You, my parent. Ah, you, why have you treated me so cruelly… Because I am a beast? Not a human? What am I?”

His fingernails slid down, leaving long scratches on Ather's face.

“Toys? No, you are my fathers. You created me and gave birth to me.”

"sorry."

“…….”

Soon his hand falls away.

“…Why can’t you even make me angry?”

The brilliant golden eyes were empty.

“The individual is good, the crowd is evil. Oh, yes, that’s right. That’s you.”

“…….”

“I love you. This is necessity. This is fate. This is humanity. Terrible things. Lovely things. They are so cruel, yet they make me fall for them.”

“…….”

“It hurts too….”

Pale hands touched his own face, exerting strength.

Knock knock .

“…….”

He died by breaking his own neck.

"ah."

Ather stretched out his hand, but withdrew it before it could dare touch the flesh.

Argio's shadow fell into the prison of the hand, and the golden-eyed hand that was swarming slowly swallowed it like swamp mud. Starting from the deformedly bent neck, grabbing the shoulders, holding the hands, hugging the waist, very slowly... .

Soon, only Atherman remained in the prison of the hand.

“…That is what you mean.”

He loved humans instinctively, but he could not bear the horror and chose to die. He was going to leave only anger and hatred inside him.

“…….”

Ather sat down in a prison made of hands. The skinny hands, like old trees, occasionally poked Ather and grabbed his shoulders, but they did not hurt him anymore. They simply confined him.

It was so disgusting I couldn't stand it.

‘… In the end, even this is different… .’

It was a cramped, thorny prison, but unlike the wizards', they were just playing a prank.

I'd rather hurt myself more. Dig into my flesh and crawl into my gut. That seemed better.

'I wish it was complete hell.'

Ather, who had been sitting blankly, opened his mouth again.

“…you wanted to go down in history as an evil being.”

I wanted to respect that.

“I wanted to give you what I wanted to have when the Black Forest burned that day, but couldn’t.”

But I still wondered.

“That day in the forest, you could have escaped, but you burned down along with the forest. If you were that angry, why didn’t you just leave the forest and slaughter all the humans? Isn’t that right?”

But that wasn't the case.

“I know the answer.”

He knew the laws of nature and understood human instinct.

“I guess you didn’t want to be ugly.”

Because I knew that even if I clenched my teeth and held on, the same tragedy would repeat itself countless times. Because it was all part of the providence of nature and history that would repeat itself, I didn’t want to get swept away in that pointless time.

Ather let out a hollow laugh.

“I guess a dragon is a dragon after all.”

The lofty wisdom was indescribable. It seemed arrogant, and at the same time, reasonable. It was the behavior of a dragon who raised his own butcher so as not to remain a miserable ghost.

You could have remained in nature as an ideal messenger of God.

“…….”

So I was sorry.

‘… I wanted to respect him because he wanted to remain evil… .’

And yet, weren't we called warriors because we saved everyone?

* * *

“There is something strange.”

Dan Hae-ra continued explaining to her friend Seo Seo-hee.

“The Sun Cult’s Chaisol, the disciple of the Black Cloak, doesn’t really hold any ill will toward the evil spirit of dreams. He doesn’t seem to feel any particular sense of danger, and is said to be safely protected within the Sun Cult….”

“Really? You’re not doing anything?”

“They say there is no sign of any impulsive action.”

“That is certainly unusual.”

Seo Seo-hee, the guild leader of Justitia, quickly gave an answer.

“Is the Black Cloak a being of a higher rank than the Dream Demon?”

“What’s even more surprising is that the Black Cloak isn’t hostile to the Dream Demon.”

“Didn’t Black Cloak enjoy protecting the Earth?”

“Such a gigantic mysterious action does not change direction all at once.”

“So does that mean that you have concluded that the evil spirit of dreams will not have any negative effects on Earth yet?”

“This may be a sign that this expedition will end safely.”

“Maybe it could be seen as a kind of prophecy. No, maybe….”

Seo Seo-hee thought of a dark temple.

“It could be in the same direction as the god of death.”

At one time, the God of Death was classified as an evil deity. Even today, he is defined as an evil deity, but few citizens actually consider him a threat, because death is an inevitable concept.

“The evil spirit of that dream, or more precisely, the divinity of wrath?”

“Yes, if it’s the case of the God of Death, then Black Cloak’s attitude also makes sense.”

“Either way, it won’t harm humans. Right now, it’s just too raw malice, so it needs to be tempered.”

Just as the god of death was once treated in this way, it was not right to deny its very existence by calling it a negative concept of divinity. Those who were called the symbol of eternity knew this very well.

“Perhaps we will end up coexisting with the evil spirit of wrath?”

“It’s possible, after all, people have to live with anger.”

“…In fact, these days, there are practically no people who know how to be angry.”

“I understand why Black Cloak is just standing by and watching this situation unfold.”

“Because he is a higher-ranking being who can be trained at any time, he may have thought that the Earth now needs a divine wrath.”

“In reality, it’s not like it’s that difficult to subdue them among ourselves, right?”

“No, you really… Wow… That’s not what you’re doing….”

“So you’re not going to do it?”

“…Be patient.”

Seo Seo-hee laughed in vain.

“Well, I guess I’ll try my best.”

Didn't they 'promise' for that?

“By the way, why did the leader of the Bisabal Guild participate in this expedition?”

“I’m giving you ample support, so let me do whatever you want.”

“That old man is also really funny.”

* * *

Traditionally, the presence of animals that help humans was considered auspicious.

'Honestly, this is a common factor that is cited regardless of the East or the West or across dimensions.'

That's why in old fairy tales and legends, animals that help humans always appear at least once. Like a bird that guides you when you're lost, or a horse that carries a person with a broken leg.

So Aram thought.

“Your role is important.”

“…I understand, but do you really not have to say anything?”

“No, you will eventually be able to speak, but not right now. If you start using language from the very beginning, the sense of mystery that visitors will feel will be greatly diminished.”

“Oh, yeah, I see….”

Gargal, the chieftain of the wolf tribe, accepted Aram's words with great awkwardness.

“It’s not that difficult.”

If it's just about keeping your mouth shut and helping people.

“You seem to have suffered a lot while trying to escape from the Demon King’s Castle, as you seem to be injured here and there. Is it okay for us to proceed as planned?”

“You don’t have to worry about me. These wounds, insults, and shame will heal on their own when everything is done successfully. What I need right now is for the plan to proceed smoothly.”

“Are all humans like you?”

“What does that mean?”

“Um, uh, no. Just.”

Gargal looked back at his family, his ears slightly bent back.

“Anyway, that’s what they say.”

“Kurrrr….”

“I’m not going to kill you, I’m going to help you, so try to look more harmless.”

“Chief, our impression is originally dirty.”

“Tsk, oh, that’s not right. Didn’t you hear what the saint said? She told you to become an auspicious animal.”

“How can we possibly look harmless with our size…?”

“You can do it, if you get crumpled you can do it.”

The foxes laughed at those wolves.

“Anyway, they say that just because you’re big doesn’t mean you know how to act smart.”

“What do you expect from the wolves? You know that we will be the ones who contribute the most to this operation.”

“Oh my, how barbaric. How can you try to win over people’s hearts with such a blunt attitude….”

The wolves howled at him.

“Do you think we’re big because we want to be big?!”

“Oh my, do you really think it’s just a matter of size?”

Aram looked back at the crow Balph as the wolves and foxes began to fight again.

"…i look forward to."

“…I’ll try.”

Thus began the so-called 'Auspicious Animal' operation.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (265)

265

Episode 265

The evil spirit gathered actors for a grand play.

'Then we should respond in the same way.'

Argio, whose heart was sealed, did as little damage as possible, but he was not a fully divine evil god. He was revealing his rage as it was, causing numerous victims.

In this situation, there was no one who could calm her down even after seeing her tattered appearance after being kidnapped. However, it was not right to proceed with the operation to subdue the Demon King like this.

'The sacrifices would be too great.'

It's a sacrifice.

‘… That shouldn’t be the case.’

It was necessary to make a cool-headed judgment. A way to minimize the damage that would occur in the future, to minimize the burden on both sides, and to end things with mutual understanding. The saintess found that way.

‘If we’re not careful, it could come back as even greater damage…’

Aram wanted to turn the crisis into an opportunity.

'My teacher is also with the evil spirit. The many mercies and caprices that the evil spirit has shown so far must have been helped by such a teacher. Shouldn't I show the same amount of sincerity as the help he has given me?'

Yes, Aram's plan also had this meaning.

"……."

The evil spirit wanted an end.

'That might really mean death.'

He had to endure the rage of eternity for too long. It was a level of pain that could not be resolved by sealing. Argio could have ended it all and died.

The death of the divine being was close to impossible, but it was possible. Especially if he himself wanted it. But if that happened, who knew what would happen to Aram's teacher who was sharing the body with him?

'And, that's definitely not a good thing for Argio himself.'

That is why he planned it. Perhaps this choice of Aram may not be much different from that of the evil god. Just as he did not give Ater the mercy of death but spared him, it may be too cruel for him.

'But this is the best I can do.'

In a situation where it was not clear whether this plan would work or not, there was no time to consider the other person's suffering. Aram, who had made up his mind, looked at the crow that had flown near him and asked.

"…How do people react?"

“It’s more friendly than I imagined.”

“Well, Koreans really like that kind of thing….”

“What do they like?”

“Being different from me is kind to them.”

Wasn't this a world filled with the romantic notion of becoming friends with monsters? As a hunter, I knew how absurd that was. But that's also why I knew more about it.

And just knowing it was enough to influence people.

“Please do them a favor.”

So that you can stop.

“Be a wall and a shield to keep me from getting too far ahead.”

“I understand.”

The crow that was once Aram's guide blinked its eyes as if smiling and flew away again. The wise crows placed the humans who visited the 'Dream Park' in the right places. Their foresight was trustworthy.

“…….”

Aram's two hands were clenched tightly.

‘… In order to save Mr. Ater, we must at least complete the plan.’

Even though it was close to hatred, what Ater held for Arzio was affection and faith. Arzio, who was a god but also a human, would not easily end Ater's life.

Also, Ather was not someone who would die easily.

'I have my role.'

Aram rose from the stump.

“…Haaaah….”

She swept my face away.

“I hope everything goes well.”

Even though it looks like this, it has been quite some time since I lived as a saint.

In other words, she knows how to use her position quite well.

* * *

When the hunters visiting the dungeon were exhausted and in pain, animals appeared.

"…fox?"

“You didn’t come here to dig up our corpse?”

“Fuck, stop saying such ominous things.”

Foxes that reveal themselves little by little, wagging their tails. Crows that tilt their heads as they quietly fly between various structures. And wolves that quietly watch humans while shaking their huge bodies.

“Isn’t that them?”

“What? Oh, oh. That….”

“I told you there were guides at this amusement park.”

“I heard it was human-shaped back then?”

“Surely the animals aren’t going to attack us after the demons?”

“I don’t know, everyone put your gear back on. Be on guard.”

But contrary to such ominous expectations, the animals were docile.

"…? what?"

“…so cute.”

The ripple effect of the foxes, who were particularly adept at digging into people's bosoms, was tremendous. They approached people with their thick tails wagging and their cheeky smiles on their faces.

Naturally, everyone was wary of them, and even attacked them. However, the foxes only whined and ran away despite the cold treatment, and did not fight back.

Some hunters even started to hug the foxes that were acting cute.

“Hey you crazy kid, you hugging monsters in the dungeon?”

“No, it’s just an animal… It doesn’t seem like a monster….”

“Even though they look like animals, they were the guides at this amusement park.”

“But it’s cute.”

“…….”

The hunter, who was extremely exhausted, nodded.

“…That’s true.”

Since it was a dream, there was no need to eat or sleep. However, this made people feel exhausted. In this situation, a cute ball of fur was a great comfort.

“Actually, aren’t these guys like that too? They were either under the control of the Demon King, or they were forced to work… It could be something like that.”

“No, but I wonder if it’s right to not be on guard like this… Damn, I don’t know. At this rate, I don’t know when I’ll be able to go home.”

“When will this fucking dream end? People who wake up wake up just fine, but why only us… Shouldn’t we go back to reality and get things straight?”

“If it were up to us, we wouldn’t be here. Oh, but it’s really soft. It feels like I’m going to fall asleep… It’s nice….”

This dungeon was truly horrifying. It felt like living in this place was not living at all. The corpses were so horribly stale that I couldn't even feel the passage of time. I couldn't return to reality until the 'dream' ended.

“Should I just die once?”

“You crazy kid, talk some sense.”

“No, you could just wake up from a dream….”

“No one has ever died here and returned to reality.”

“…It’s like a dog, really….”

“If you don’t want to die without leaving a body behind, then just shut up.”

“…That must be it.”

By this point, even the hunters were tired. As long as they didn't die, they could accept anything that happened without much thought. This wasn't just a story about hunters trapped in dreams.

“If the war continues any longer, it will have an impact on reality.”

“Most of the hunters who have already participated have lost their motivation, if this continues….”

“I really hate to say this, but you will follow the devil’s will.”

“We have to come to a conclusion, no matter what.”

Even the hunters who could wake up from a 'dream' were tired, no matter what the criteria.

It was three groups of animals that dug into them. Foxes skillfully dug into their bosoms, wagging their tails, and crows flew in to bring them sweet berries.

In particular, the wolves quietly stayed by his side and even pushed away the hands of the evil spirits that approached him.

“Look at this, I told you that these guys also didn’t like being ruled by the evil spirits.”

“Come to think of it, animals have never actually caused any harm to people….”

“If animals help us, wouldn’t the weight of victory be added to our side?”

But there were also some parts that were questionable to think about just that.

“Then why didn’t you help us from the beginning?”

“The wolves look really big and strong, but they don’t really help much other than fending off the approaching evil spirit’s hand.”

“It’s clear that he understands what you say, but when you ask him about the body or heart of the evil spirit, he doesn’t even tell you.”

“Isn’t it too much to say that they are completely on our side?”

In that situation, the animals suddenly started moving to one place.

“…You want me to follow you?”

“Ah, maybe….”

“But what if this is a trap?”

Seo Seo-hee, the leader of Justitia's guild, appeared among the hesitating people.

“Then I will go first.”

“Uh, no, over there….”

“Don’t worry, you don’t think I’m dangerous, do you?”

He took the lead with his characteristic trustworthy smile, followed by some of Justitia's guild members. Emboldened by his appearance, the other hunters also followed Seo Seo-hee and chased the beasts.

And they were guided to the ruins of the Black Forest.

“…Oh, this is it.”

Seo Seo-hee smiled at the small figure standing in front of her.

“Are you the saint of Dalnim Church?”

“Yes, you found it.”

Aram, surrounded as if protected by beasts, welcomed them.

“I've been waiting for you.”

Her pure white hair resembled Dalnim's, and despite all the wounds and redness, her calm and intelligent gaze contained an incomprehensible mystery. The moment she saw her, Seo Seo-hee understood the saint's intentions.

He decided to give the saint a timely performance.

“Are these many animals following the saint now?”

“…these people and I had a common purpose.”

And Aram also quickly figured out the intention of the guild leader, Seo Seo-hee. Since the symbol of eternity had decided to keep the rhythm, there was nothing more to fear. With the support of his distant senior, Aram opened his mouth.

“Are my family here now?”

“…W, Your Majesty….”

“Come to me.”

“Saint, we, we….”

A priest of the Dalnim Church, who had been among their group, stumbled forward.

The hunters who sensed something strange were considering the possibility that the saint was in league with the evil spirit, but they did not come forward because one of the symbols of eternity was holding out.

Thanks to that, the highest ranking elder among the priests of the Dalnim Church safely arrived in front of the saint.

“…I wonder if you… disappeared into the shadows….”

In the Dalnim Church, death is expressed as a shadow. It means the shadow of the moon. Even if they die, they cannot enter the arms of the moon. Only saints and holy men can enter.

Their separation was an eternal separation. There was no more memory, wisdom, or honor. How fearful were the days when I thought that my dear family member and the saint I respected as a colleague had become like that.

“Oh, thank you. Thank you, Saint. I truly appreciate you staying strong.”

“Did you feel fear in my absence?”

“Too many things are going wrong. Lord, I can’t reach you anymore. There’s something wrong with the Dalnim Church in reality, and no one is coming anymore. I have a shiver of foreboding.”

“I know what happened to them.”

“…Saint, we, we… by any chance….”

The elder swallowed his tears and asked.

“…Abandoned…?”

“…….”

The saint calmly embraced the elder, who was several times her size. The elder could not even groan as he accepted the saint’s embrace. He was clearly resigned.

And Aram had no intention of leaving it that way.

“…There was something I wanted to show you all this time.”

“…Please tell us what has happened to us. Tell us what we should do. We will do as you say.”

“Please come inside.”

The saintess released her embrace and stepped back, calling out to the hunters within the ruins.

“Everyone should see it.”

Now that we have successfully captured their attention, it is time to know and share the truth.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (266)

266

Episode 266

God created humans and animals in the same world, but their language was not balanced because they could communicate with each other. Language means wisdom, so they were busy hating each other. So God changed the world.

“…….”

He exalted man and humbled beasts. He took away their wisdom and power and confined them to a single point, and from that place a tree grew abundantly. God made flesh out of the tree and broke his bones to build a foundation, and from his blood flowed a bright red dragon was born.

“…….”

God said, "My child, you, a gentle lamb, guard the world I have created. You are my favorite lion, so obey my will. Do not make my things afraid." The dragon took on human form and sometimes became a beast to guard the world according to his will.

“…….”

Since God did not take it, its life would not end. The dragon went to the forest and killed itself. The blood, as vast as the sea, covered the forest and gradually rotted and became poisonous. Thus, the forest turned black, and God became angry and sent a new messenger and cursed the mission.

“…….”

From that day on, whenever the dragons needed to die, they went to the forest and killed themselves. The forest became a grave and benefited the world. The dragons sacrificed themselves for the world that God loved. They became part of the forest and fulfilled their mission.

“…….”

The forest is filled with poison, and the dragon's mission is fulfilled, so the world is filled with peace.

So, sacrifice the dragon to the forest, and do not forget to sacrifice a beast in human form to the forest. Only then will the dragon bring peace. If you do not sacrifice, peace will be far away. Humans, humans. I will sacrifice the messenger of God and continue the era of humans.

The dragon exists for you, so offer up your huge body.

“…Even this is a fairy tale.”

Ater, the royal librarian, returned the worn-out tome to the depths of the earth. The book, which resembled a fairy tale, was full of lost language and was not easy to decipher.

“Is it true that dragons actually existed…?”

He wanted to acquire all kinds of knowledge, so he studied dragons. However, all he found were absurd stories. The leader said that dragons actually existed, but there were no records of them remaining intact anywhere.

“…….”

Why did he put the dragon in his mouth?

“…Hmm.”

It was something that Ather could not have known at the time.

He shook off his dusty hands and stepped down from the high study chair. He put the long chair, like a ladder, back where it had been. He turned off all the lights in the dark study filled with old books, closed the door tightly, and returned to the study on the ground.

It was a story about a greatsword-wielding librarian of commoner origins who stayed in the royal library.

* * *

“…….”

The priest of Dalnim Church, who heard the whole story, remained silent.

“…So, the current evil spirit….”

“The evil spirits of today are monsters that have been sacrificed for many generations.”

"…that…."

Dalnimgyo licked his lips.

“…They’re no different from us at all.”

The hunters looked back at him with surprised eyes at those groan-like words. Only Seo Seo-hee, who had guessed the situation of the Dalnim Church, held back a sigh. However, the Dalnim Church priest, who looked dazed as if he had lost his wits, could not even react to

that.

“It’s like our Dalnim Church.”

At first, it must have been a mission. Even if it was created by God, the dragon must have looked after the world with a noble heart. That is how it became a part of the forest. However, in the end, it ended with the destruction of the world and the birth of an evil god.

If that's the case, then wouldn't the Dalnim Church also end up creating evil spirits someday?

“…….”

“…we took pride in our own mission. Not only me, the adult of this generation, but all the adults before me. I can tell, because I was really happy.”

Aram continued speaking, writing down the records of the ruins.

“Even if that was right, I realized after coming here that it was not the right direction. It would take too long for a small stone like me to warm up the moon.”

“…In the meantime, a tragedy like this will happen again.”

“It was our arrogance. We dared to look down on the Divine. They are immutable beings and concepts of eternal life to mere insignificant beings. How could we possibly be great to them?”

Even the dragon, the child of mystery, had fallen into corruption. The end of the Dalnim Church, which had such a tradition, was obvious. Aram met the gaze of the priest who was looking at him blankly.

“So this isn’t a slaughter of fallen dragons, it’s a memorial service for abandoned children. That’s why I stayed here, and now I need your help.”

“…What should I do…?”

“Think about it, what should we do?”

“…….”

“I will now go and meet my teacher, Dalnim.”

Aram held the elder's hand and placed his forehead on it as if praying lightly.

“You do what you have to do.”

“…Well, I don’t know. What should I do? I am such an immature being.”

“We are all born immature and we all end up immature. Even if we burn this short life trying to embrace all knowledge, it is impossible. I have accepted that, and now it seems to be your turn.”

“But, the Dalnim Church… can grant permission for anything….”

“Within the scope of that permission, there is no such thing as a bad habit of creating evil spirits. It was a contradiction. So think about it. Endlessly struggle and find a way. That must be the meaning of our human lives.”

“Ah, I, I….”

“…….”

“…….”

The elder, who had been hesitating for a while, looked back at the hunters who were watching the situation. Some of them were wary of the Dalnim Church, while others looked at them with pity. Only then did the elder realize.

There was no way that a tradition that made people make such expressions could be right.

“…I will do my best to find a way.”

“That’s enough.”

“May I dare to show you the path you should walk?”

“I am so grateful.”

When Aram turned to Seo Seo-hee, he smiled and asked.

“I think I can help you.”

"…thank you."

Man cannot kill divinity.

But if it was a divine and divine thing, it was possible.

‘… Mr. Argio knew that and created the current situation.’

In the vast Demon King's Castle and the countless hands, there was no Moon that was captured. It was not in a large ruin like this village either. Aram felt that his master was not there in his dream.

“…….”

Aram hoped this wasn't a fight between gods.

“…I think it’s time to wake up from this dream.”

So Aram woke up after a very long time.

When I opened my eyes, I was in the bedroom of Dalnimgyo.

* * *

“…….”

Aram rose from his soft bed.

In her arms was a pillow that had been lost at some point. A pillow filled with fluffy down. It was a little worn, but it was one of the things his adoptive mother had bought him when he first came to Dalnimgyo.

Back then, when I had nothing, I was so happy with just this one warm pillow… .

"…Bishop."

Her voice echoed hollowly in my room.

"Where might you be?"

Aram moved his feet, leaving the pillow on the bed. The injuries and dust he had accumulated while running around the amusement park and the forest had disappeared as if it were a dream. For some reason, it felt bitter.

She walked slowly along the quiet Dalnim Bridge.

"……."

Everyone was asleep.

'… Yeah, I thought it would be like this.'

At some point, support from the real Dalnim Church was cut off. It wouldn't have happened without something going wrong. However, if it had happened in reality, there would have to be a clear cause.

Aram's feet soon reached the common prayer room of the Dalnim Church.

"…Bishop."

"……."

"…mother…."

“…Saint.”

On a pitch-black lake where the moon had not risen, a woman holding the moon in her arms was sitting.

“Have you come to see me?”

"yes."

“The saint is truly clever.”

She praised the saint who had come to her in one step. The round moon inside was holding her like a sleeping child, emitting a faint light. The bishop, who was sweeping it and staring at it, never looked at Aram.

“When I first saw the saint in the snowy alley, I felt that this child wanted to see more. She was curious about the world. As soon as I saw those bright eyes, I knew where the saint should be.”

“…….”

“That doesn’t mean I… didn’t expect the saint to take the saint’s seat. Maybe I even hoped for it. As a bishop of the Dalnim Church, the birth of a saint is a welcome thing. But wasn’t it terrible? That void really hurt me….”

Her words were gentle but messy.

“It was so painful. There were so many saints, known and unknown, who passed me by. I thought to myself over and over again. They should have taken me. I, oh, I… should have died in their place.”

The bishop threw the moon he was holding into the lake. The pale moonlight gradually sank and disappeared beneath the black water.

“…….”

“…Saint.”

“I never once!!”

Aram shouted.

“I never thought you sacrificed me!!!”

If it was a sin, it was my sin. If it was your sin, it was everyone's sin. If I was going to rot away in agony because I couldn't bear the pain of such a sacrificed life, how could I just stand by and watch?

Don't even try screaming. Don't even try saying it hurts.

“…Even if you are a bishop, you cannot insult my choice.”

“My sins are truly great, truly great. Even though I know all the truth and have learned much, isn’t the saint still angry at me calling her a saint?”

“I like this position. I have come to this position on my own, and I have built up a lot of things. If I fail, I should fail. If I have to suffer, then that too is my choice.”

“Saint.”

“Mother, I have the right to challenge.”

Even if it is foolish and extremely dangerous.

“Everything is worth trying for me with my own will.”

That was the value of humanity.

“We’ve never fought even once, right?”

“Because I didn’t want to do that.”

“I made a friend. He was a royal librarian named Ater. He was really annoying. He only said the right things, and I realized that he could make people angry even when he said the right things.”

“…What are you trying to say?”

“It’s okay to fight. People need to be angry. It’s natural to be angry. It’s one of the few valuable ways to gauge the existence of different opinions.”

It is both a weapon and a fortress.

“How can we argue with each other if we don’t get angry?”

Some are right, some are wrong, but there are plenty of people who are both right and wrong. Aram and the bishop were just one of those common gray elements. They should be angry.

“Be angry with me, Mother.”

“Saint.”

“And tell me your story.”

“…….”

"…I am…."

The saint sobbed, smiled, and raised her hand, bringing the universe into her dark pupil.

The two were now in space.

“…I have never once heard my mother’s thoughts.”

In pursuing mystical knowledge, we have missed the closest knowledge.

Aram was also a past that meant being a sinner.

* * *

“…….”

Bishop Bae Seo-kyung blinked as he looked at the universe shimmering with nebulae.

“…It’s truly beautiful.”

This is my story.

That wasn't important. The story of a bishop who wasn't even the leader of the Dalnim Church was useless knowledge, so to speak. I didn't want to waste Aram's time, who had to continue his short life, on that.

If you still want to hear, I guess I should tell you.

“The moon looked lonely.”

She looked into my eyes, my pure white, moon-like child.

“That was the beginning. I once thought I would become the moon, but I failed. So my family and friends left me. I still remember them. This memory is so vivid… Moreover, they were all kind and gentle people.”

In the prayer room covered with the aurora of the universe, Bae Seo-kyung continued her confession.

“I have continued my research since then. To create stars by the side of the moon. So that those who are not qualified can reach this terribly dark universe. So that the moon will not be lonely. By its side, together with the saints who have become the moon, I whisper to the hearts of humans… In that way, by…”

No, actually.

“…In fact, I simply couldn’t bear the pain. The life of the moon is so long, and the era of humans is so short, so how can we, with just us, make the moon human? Yes, I knew that I would fail. I tried to deny it and become a star, but it was really hard.”

No matter what knowledge or wisdom she had, she could not become a star.

“But now it’s different. The God of Dreams has lent me wisdom.”

“He is not some dream god or anything.”

“But to me, you were the God of dreams. Who else but the Divine of dreams is the One who understood my dreams, whispered a greater dream, and showed me the way to get there?”

“So you put all the disciples of the Dalnim Church to sleep.”

“No, they are still awake. Yes, Saintess.”

Baek Seo-kyung said as she looked at Aram, who was shining like the moon.

“Look around you.”

‘Stars’ twinkled in the mysteriously shimmering universe.

“Your star.”

“…….”

Aram twisted his lips.

“…I don’t wish for that.”

“Then I guess I should be angry.”

“I've been waiting.”

“I wasn’t like that….”

Bae Seo-kyung couldn't understand. They wanted it themselves, and they are your eternal family who will protect you.

“Aren’t these stars beautiful?”

Why are you angry?

A meteor shower fell toward the moon.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (267)

267

Episode 267

The previous day, Baek Seo-kyung received the moon from the evil spirit.

“I’m going to be very angry soon.”

It was a soft tone and words, as if comforting a young family.

“How will I remember you when that time comes? I will be consumed by anger and make countless foolish choices, so I will leave this precious moon to you. I trust you to fulfill your duty.”

“…Is this really… what you mean by Master…?”

Baek Seo-kyung carefully lifted Dal-nim into her arms.

“…….”

It's also noble.

It was cold and round. Even though I was holding it, I didn’t feel like I was holding it. It was only thanks to the mercy of the evil spirit that I could hold Dalnim in my arms with this inadequate vessel.

"…ah…."

Bae Seo-kyung hugged Dal-nim as if she were hugging her own

daughter.

“…I have wanted to see you for a long time. I have asked you countless times why you won’t take me. Still, I have never heard an answer, and I have always had to sit down again.”

“Now your master is in your arms. You are the bishop of the Dalnim Church. You must protect the families of that cold house and lead them to the right path. I ask you, what do you wish for?”

“On the right path. I want to lead my poor family on the right path.”

“I wonder what kind of steps the right path you are talking about will take.”

“What more could I need in this cold house? All I want is family, love and warmth. I will not let anyone leave alone.”

Rotten liquors that I love.

“We will make our sins known to the world and become stars in the sky as atonement for our sins.”

That's all I wanted.

Bae Seo-kyung smiled happily and accepted the generous opportunity.

* * *

Kukukukung…!!

The sky is falling down.

“We have all gathered here for the saint.”

A star fell.

“Can you imagine that this shining thing is your brother-in-law? Oh, how beautiful it is. This is truly the path that the Dalnim Church should have walked. If a sinner becomes a star in the sky, what greater honor can there be in the world!”

The star soon reached the small moon above the ground, the saint.

“Your family has been shaped into such a precious form!”

“The type of family I want is definitely not a star!!”

Kagang ! Kagagagak!!

The saint twisted the sharp direction of the star with the power of the nebula.

“I never wanted to be a star! I just wanted to be a little stone, never to sacrifice you! Why would I want to be the moon if it meant harming my family!!”

A fallen star was captured in her universe.

'Burger.'

Aram was only a human. He was only a little bigger than a vessel, but he could never be called a divinity. Naturally, it was difficult to use the power of the universe. There was also a limit to containing these numerous stars.

'But you must not miss a single one.'

The already quiet Dalnim Church became even more silent. All the priests who remained in reality fell asleep. The result of that sleep was these brilliant stars. It was so cruel.

If Aram missed or hurt even one of these, her family would never be able to return to their original state. That was not what Aram wanted. She expanded her universe with all her might.

“My excuses, how cowardly you are making excuses…! You should have told me long ago! That you suffered from such excruciating loneliness! That the evil spirit's whispers were so sweet because you spent your days groaning!!"

"It is true that I was tempted by the devil, but, like you, Saint, I only did the best I could…! Look at this small vessel! My pitiful appearance! I could not dare to become the moon in the sky or a piece of the universe! This was the best I could do!!"

"Why on earth did I do my best when I didn't even expect it! You could have said something to me!! I'm your daughter. I was your family and your friend. I was your colleague…!!"

Oh my, tears came out.

"Why didn't you tell me!!"

Aram loved her mother as much as Bae Seo-kyung loved her.

"That too is my fault, it was my fault. I was so intoxicated by the affection you gave me that I couldn't see reality. Did my respect for you do any harm? My blindness towards you blinded those two eyes, because I relied on you!!"

The stars continued to fall.

It was such a beautiful sight. They say that a meteor is the corpse of a star, and it was exactly that.

Her family fell to the ground as stars. Falling down into the abyss. There may be life beneath this pitch-black lake… .

My family was buried beneath a black lake filled with only cold knowledge and wisdom.

"Why are you shouting that it's only your fault? I'm also a member of the Dalnim Church, and I'm no longer a squalid child. I'm not the skinny, stupid kid you brought me that day!”

“It would be a great arrogance and sin if I said that all this was for the sake of the saint. This is for you, and also for me, and to change this rotten water. Look, saint. Do you not know the sins we have committed here…!”

“How can running away from a sin be an atonement?!”

“This is not an atonement! Look at me, don’t you know what I really wanted to do to deserve this? It was all my selfishness! It was all my shortcomings! This is just a tantrum and venting of anger due to the mercy of the evil spirit!!”

Bae Seo-kyung also cried out in sorrow.

“I don’t want to leave the moon alone anymore!!”

I had to send so many family members away.

Oh, don't do that. At that time, Bae Seo-kyung was young and foolish. She was lacking in wisdom and small in character, so she was simply grateful to the saints who were in the moonlight. However, as time passed, she realized it.

That is to say, humans can never shake divinity.

“Everything, everything…!”

“Please stop!!”

“It was all just a dog's death!”

Bae Seo-kyung was angry at herself.

“I caused them to die a miserable death!!”

The young priest who was the second most loved by the moon among humans, even though she could not become the moon. That was Bae Seo-kyung. She had the authority and the freedom. She just watched the deaths of the adults.

“But not anymore, not anymore, I have learned how to become a star. I have borrowed the wisdom of the devil. Your universe is so small now, but it will become so much bigger. It won’t take long to get there. I was so scared of that.”

Even now, look.

“You still have endless potential.”

“I didn’t want that…!!”

“Aram, please. You’ve already been so cold…!!”

It's a cowardly thing to say, but yes, I should have desperately stopped it then. I shouldn't have brought that brilliant child into the Dalnim Church. At the very least, I shouldn't have made her a saint.

“I know how lonely you are. I saw you on the street that day. I saw you shivering alone on a cold winter day. And yet, I gave you this disgusting fate, even though you looked at the world with loving eyes….”

He is a child who deserves to be loved by more people.

“The stars in the sky will be ours, so look at the world. Look at the world with your bright eyes. You have just been given a great opportunity. You have been given a great teacher, a chance to live a new life, and a chance to learn the precious emotions that we have been ignoring.”

“Yes, that’s what I wanted. I realized that even the peripheral joys that I thought were shallow and shallow are precious emotions that make up a human being! I realized the joy of eating a delicious meal for the first time in a long time! I had forgotten all about it, that's how it was!"

Kwaaaak !!

Aram expanded his universe with tears.

"But there was also the joy you gave me there!!"

My family, my foolish people.

"How can I say it was my fault that I wanted to hear the story of my family after neglecting them for so long? Mother, please, my mother whom I respect and love. You loved these people too. To become a star, how lonely and terrible it must be?"

"But we need a suitable hell. And if I become your star, it would be the greatest luxury among all hells. Yes, it is luxurious. I want to enjoy luxury that is not suitable for me. What can I do? We are saved by the mercy of the evil god!!"

Bae Seo-kyung stretched out both hands and called out the stars.

"This beautiful hell will never be allowed again!!"

The stars clumped together, collided, and shattered, obscuring the saint's vision with their fragments. The sight of all the stars in the universe shining brightly and scattering was truly artistic.

"Please help me to be trapped in this beautiful hell. And you will stay in the human world to learn and master more. Then, even when you become the moon someday, your loneliness will be less. We will fill that empty space, you sinners, your sinners…!!"

"I will become the moon !!"

Among the broken and shattered stars, Aram screamed like a bird.

Silence falls.

“…….”

“…….”

The world stopped.

She held my universe.

“…Ah, haha… hahaha….”

At that sight, Bae Seo-kyung collapsed on the surface of the pitch-black lake. Her legs gave out.

“…It’s beautiful.”

The star that Bae Seo-kyung had carelessly blown and destroyed found its place in space and floated comfortably. It was calm, peaceful, and mysterious, just like when you lay down in an observatory and look up at the sky.

It was nothing compared to the night sky she had created.

“I wanted to create this… sky.”

A night sky filled with peace. I wanted to create such a world.

“…….”

“Does this look like hell to you?”

“…it looks like heaven to my poor eyes.”

“Does this seem like a place where you can atone?”

“This is a single piece of work, so there is no space for me to step into.”

“Then why do you want to become a star?”

“I have no way….”

All I could see was the old sin, and the path I had to take was a cliff. That was why I was thankful for the mercy of the evil spirit. Even though I was trapped on the cold and lonely ice star, he showed me the way.

“I wanted to be a good bishop, a good brother, and a good parent.”

Golden tears flowed from Bae Seo-kyung's eyes, which were stained like those of an evil spirit.

“…I knew all along that it couldn’t be done, so I prayed to the evil spirit. And I received the moon from him. But it seems that I am really a small vessel. Even though I held the divinity in my arms, I was only imitating the night sky, which was incomparable to the saint…”

The saint expanded, expanded, and expanded her universe. She even embraced the night sky that Bae Seo-gyeong had decorated so poorly. And then she hugged it so that it would no longer shiver from cold and loneliness.

The stars embraced in the mysterious universe looked very comfortable.

“…….”

“…the road….”

Was it because the bowl was forcibly expanded? Aram was sweating and the colorful field was exhaling. It was because he was struggling to prevent any of his family members from being thrown under the lake. That was the reason.

Aram, who had screamed several times for the first time in his life, spoke in a hoarse voice.

“I, I can be the way.”

Aram realized that this was the path that adults had to take.

Aram sat down on the water with her mother. Then she dove into the lake and put both hands in. She immediately got up and in her hands was the pure white moon that Bae Seo-kyung had locked up.

Aram said.

“…What is the role of human beings? Where is the value of mystery? How can the world develop? As my mother said, there is still much I do not know and much I need to know.”

Above that small hand, the moon shone brightly.

“But it is the role of man to constantly seek out the way, and the value of mystery poses questions to us as fate and nature, and the world develops through this never-ending process of agony.”

The moon rose quietly from Aram's hand.

“This is my belief.”

It was also malicious.

“This is a world I must embrace with all my heart.”

“…….”

“I will become the moon. I will not be eaten. The moon, the library of knowledge, is merely a collection of information and cannot be called our teacher. I will hold this and see the world.”

“…Aram….”

“I know, it must be hard. If it weren’t for the mercy of the devil, I wouldn’t have been able to hold the moon in my hands by now. But look, Mother.”

Aram showed off his arms full of moons.

“…It’s warm.”

Unlike the dragons of the Black Forest, the noble saints who had sacrificed themselves were warming the moon, however faintly.

“It wasn’t a case of dog death. The adults my mother had sent away were still warming the moon inside. They had endured the cold and loneliness and had not lost their warmth.”

“…….”

“It’s just that we lacked the knack. It was an inevitable deficiency because the method was wrong. So I, who have not yet become deficient, will take up the moon. I will become the teacher of the four disciples.”

Between learning and punishment, Aram chose learning.

“Since we sinned in ignorance, shouldn’t we learn and repay it…?”

Aram crawled towards his mother, shedding tears.

“I will take responsibility. That is what I have decided. We are all responsible. We have been on the terrible path to creating evil spirits, but we have not yet… gone that far. I will take away and protect all the coldness and loneliness of the adults inside.”

“…That’s…so…difficult…”

“There must have been an easier, more comfortable way. But there is no guarantee that it is the right way. How can atonement through death and annihilation be the only right way? We will walk a different path from the evil spirits who wanted to punish us with anger. I will help you, so help me.”

"…but…."

“Mother, please. Listen to the moon.”

Aram, who approached on his knees, placed the moon in Bae Seo-kyung’s trembling hands. The small and wrinkled hands held the large, shining moon. It was light and splendid.

Bae Seo-kyung absentmindedly touched the moon. It was something she had definitely heard of before, but strangely enough… .

“…….”

Because I felt warmth.

"…ah…."

I cried transparently.

* * *

A man wrapped in bandages was looking at the sight.

“…….”

What he touched turned to gold, then melted. Then turned to pitch-black poison. Wearing a sheep's skull, he limped into the darkness, bleeding golden blood.

There was no sound from those bare feet.

“…My second hand is empty.”

In the poisoned air, only his voice remained belatedly.

"What should I listen to now…?"

A deer followed him.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (268)

268

Episode 268

While things were going on, the dungeon hunters weren't sitting still.

“Let’s explore this forest some more.”

In particular, the priests of the Dalnim Church were the most active.

“The flow of time is different inside and outside the ruins. It would be better if everyone moved together without having to be divided into two.”

“That’s right. Even if we slowly explore this vast ruin, there’s barely any time left outside. All the brothers, gather here.”

“The saint has come forward for us sinners. We cannot remain silent. Let us do what we can do best.”

A hunter awkwardly asked the priests of the Dalnim Church who were discussing and reaching an agreement among themselves.

“Hey, hey… let’s talk….”

“I know you will feel uncomfortable and have a hard time with the sins of our Dalnim Church. You don’t have to conform to us. It will be uncomfortable, so let’s each do our own thing.”

“No, don’t make that decision so suddenly.”

“We are sorry to tell you the unpleasant truth. However, since our saint has gone to such lengths for the Dalnim Church, we cannot remain silent. We will make sure that no one will be inconvenienced, so please do not worry.”

“Let’s have a conversation, you guys. Are you doing this on purpose?”

Experienced hunters dragged the priests of the Dalnim Church by the scruff of their necks and placed them between the hunters. The priests were dragged along, saying, “Uh-huh.” The hunters murmured at their wrinkled faces, which seemed ready to be beaten.

“Was Dalnim Church originally like this… like this? I don’t really know the religious community.”

“As far as I know, they were dry, individualistic… cold priests who valued only knowledge and wisdom.”

“Can you still call yourself cool-headed after seeing those fierce reactions?”

“That’s how it was normally, normally.”

The hunters sensed the problem of the priests of the Dalnim Church. It wasn't that they dug into it and realized it, but rather that the priests' expression control had collapsed for a long time. There was something missing in the priests of the Dalnim Church.

Having been exposed for their greatest sins, they did not even try to hide their shame.

“Ugh…! Kill me!”

“What the hell is wrong with these people?”

The hunters were simply dumbfounded, because they did not attach much significance to the sins of the Dalnim Church.

“Even if there’s a problem, it’s something that happens within the Dalnim Church. There’s no need to bow down to us like that. What are you talking about, suddenly asking to be killed?”

“What the… Are we filming a historical drama? There’s already a lot of work to do in the dungeon, so let’s not make things uncomfortable for ourselves. Priests, please raise your heads. You can just go out and take care of it. I really…”

“If you’re going to do something else, please include us. Our guild leader left a few hours ago, probably because he had a dream. Please lend us your wisdom.”

The actions of the Dalnim Church, which sought to benefit the world by dedicating adults to the divine, were horrifying. Some even got angry. But in this day and age where individualism is rampant, what does that have to do with them?

“So what should I do?”

They just wanted to wake up from this fucking nightmare.

“Can I take a look around this ruin?”

“You must not get involved with us, who are sinners. We will find our own way to repent….”

“Let’s share that method. I’ve never seen Dalnim Church like that before. They’re so selfish. They only want to attack each other.”

“We are sinners who watched the miserable end of these precious people…!”

“Are you part-time?”

“Oh, how could you say such harsh words…!”

Some of the Hunters realized the true nature of such a cult.

“…Ah, lack of social skills.”

“Oh… I see.”

“Somehow, we couldn’t communicate.”

The closed culture of Dalnim Church, which was usually hidden behind the image of cool scholars, came to mind. Since they gathered together to study and research, they probably couldn't develop social skills. It was a natural result.

“In many ways, he is different from the priests of the Solar Church.”

“When I meet those people, I feel like my energy is sucked in….”

“Before you know it, you’ve been donating money.”

There must have been a reason for the long-standing bad relationship between the Sun Church and the Moon Church. The difference in their tendencies was too great. In fact, some of the Sun Church priests who were in the group looked at the Moon Church with a pitiful look.

“Oh, really. How could you treat such a noble saint like that….”

“If that’s the case, let’s give it to them.”

“Sister, there are many ears listening. Speak politely.”

“I think it would be better for us to worship the saint rather than the Dalnim Church.”

“Yes, that’s it.”

The Sun Cult was already dissatisfied with the fact that Sergio Hunter, who was presumed to be a saint, had recently taken refuge in the Dalnim Cult. Perhaps after this dungeon was successfully completed, they would stir up trouble inside and outside the Dalnim Cult in order to take Sergio Hunter and Saint Aram away.

Even though Dalnimgyo knew what Taeyanggyo was thinking, he couldn't bring himself to get angry. Taeyanggyo felt uncomfortable with his intimidated reaction. It would have been better for them to just keep hurling harsh words at each other like they usually did.

“…Tsk, tsk, I can’t say anything because of that.”

“Why are you so discouraged? You should have been doing better a long time ago….”

Seo Seo-hee smiled amidst the strange atmosphere among the priests.

“Then, shall we start moving slowly?”

“Oh, yes.”

“Yeah….”

The hunters analyzed the ruins, led by the Dalnim Church priest who was skilled in organizing knowledge and information. The ruins were as wide as a castle wall surrounding a large city. There were many stories about evil spirits there.

Most of it was explained to us by Saint Aram before she left… .

“…….”

Seo Seo-hee, the guild leader of Justitia, stared at the wall.

“…….”

“Guild Master? Is there something there?”

“No, nothing.”

There was nothing.

“I just thought it was well made.”

There were countless engraved works all over the walls of the ruins.

There were works so delicate and realistic that you almost thought they were real, and there were also abstract paintings of landscapes, animals, or people without faces. Seo Seo-hee looked up at the ceiling.

“Isn’t it cool?”

“…….”

The guild leader also looked up at the ceiling. It was a ceiling that depicted twilight.

"…ah."

At first, I thought it was a magical illusion, but it wasn't. It was a twilight created purely with torches, shadows, and engravings. The guild leader instinctively realized that it was a work of human hands.

Seo Seo-hee asked her friend about his reaction.

“Isn’t it amazing? It’s still in pretty good condition even though it’s probably been left like this for quite some time.”

“…The guild master would be the only one who thinks like that in the dungeon.”

“No, the leader of the Visabal Guild is similar. Finding romance in the dungeon.”

“Isn’t he a bit of an unusual case?”

“Haeun is like that too.”

“…….”

When another 'Symbol of Eternity' appeared, the Vice-Guild Leader kept his mouth shut. It was an expression of his intention that he didn't mind putting the other guild's Collectors on his tongue, but he didn't want to treat his superior and his friends as he pleased.

Seo Seo-hee laughed lightly.

“Oddly enough, I really like this kind of work.”

It was a world where magic existed and mystery ran rampant. If you used your skills, you could create amazing works of art. But Seo Seo-hee liked this better. Pure miracles and emotions created by humans.

Isn't it huge, intuitive, and beautiful?

“I wonder who made it.”

“Based on the records so far, this would have been the last dragon to die in this forest.”

“If you’re talking about dragons, don’t they usually use magic? They’re called the ultimate mystery beings. They could have used easier and simpler methods, but they made things so much more cumbersome.”

“I was wondering where the broken wooden chairs and ladders were used, and I guess it was something like this.”

“…What a pity….”

My mouth felt bitter.

“He must have been a great artist.”

“That artist is trying to kill us now.”

“I’m not trying to kill you, I’m just so angry I don’t know what to do.”

“Do you feel sorry for that dragon?”

“I can’t help but always think about what if….”

If everything had gone well, he would have been a leading artist of his time. He would have been a good sculptor and painter, and a great dancer who could sublimate joy into art. But he didn't.

‘…Someday, such a tragedy could happen in our world too.’

So I kept an eye on the situation at Dalnim Church. Another friend and symbol of eternity, Jeong Hae-un, was also working on the groundwork for that.

Although I wasn't able to utilize what I had prepared, I felt good that I was able to prevent the unexpected tragedy of Dalnimgyo.

“…….”

Yeah, just think of something pleasant.

“So where should we go now?”

“Aren’t you going to look at the ruins any further?”

“There are many people who are better at that than me, including the priests of the Dalnim Church.”

“The guild leader is right.”

“The house has been left in such disarray that it is time for the landlord to show up, but he is nowhere to be seen. Where on earth is the giant dragon I saw when I first came to the ‘Dream Park’?”

“Wouldn’t the Demon King be in the Demon King’s Castle? If he’s not at home, he’d be at work. There aren’t many places to go.”

“That’s a good guess too.”

Seo Seo-hee took up her sword and started walking.

“It’s unfortunate, but we don’t have that much time.”

“It has come to a point where there has been a negative reaction from the citizens of the real world.”

“If we drag this on any longer, things will get worse.”

The saint seemed busy in her own way, so they had to do their work.

“How much could a saint with a reputation for being smart have predicted?”

I wanted to get some help.

* * *

The evil spirit asked.

The man in the prison answered.

“…….”

Ather had a strong will to live.

“Well, if you ask me why… I don’t have an answer for you.”

Wouldn't it be better to be alive than to be dead?

“…Of course, there are lives that are worse than death. I continued to live that kind of life, imprisoned in that terrible thorny prison. At that time, death was a mercy I could not hope for, so I called you, Argio…”

It's a terrible thing.

“It was a great achievement that my colleagues and I achieved by giving our all.”

It was Ather's own selfishness that broke it. If he had just endured the pain, the boredom, it would have been fine. If he had, the evil spirit would not have been released from the seal. It would not have been.

That fact could not help but corrode Ather.

“…But what could I do?”

Ather had suffered in the thorn prison for perhaps thousands of years. For a human who lived only eighty years, he was considered to have lived a long life. He had truly enjoyed glory beyond his means.

“Of course, it’s all excuses. I know that fact well. During the process of trying to seal the evil spirit, my 14-year-old colleague was trampled to death by the dragon’s foot. My 16-year-old colleague was torn alive and chewed to death. My 16-year-old colleague cried and cried until his eyes finally melted with bloody tears before he finally found eternal rest.”

The curse of the evil spirit is truly terrible.

“I remember that time. Curse, curse. It was definitely different from magic. It was different from the divine power that adults use. Those times when all the rules of the world were broken and they threatened me without a care. Those scenes. Oh, it was really… confusing to me.”

The palace librarian, who prided himself on knowing the rules of the world better than anyone else, said:

“The rotting flesh and hearing voices were just a joke.”

There were things I remembered vividly. The evil spirit was extremely sensitive to emotions of anger.

“A person who commits adultery and incurs the wrath of his lover ends up becoming one with his lover. Sharing one leg, their two bodies were separated, and they quickly died of exhaustion.”

What else was there?

“Parents who abandoned their children and incurred much resentment died because their tongues, vocal cords, and lips were erased and they could not eat or drink. Even thinking back on it, it is not a pleasant sight.”

There were many others as well.

“It was cruel, horrible, dirty, and disgusting. It was different from the fear I felt on the battlefield. I felt the fear of the unknown rules defiling me. The disgusting feeling of bugs crawling on me….”

Would the evil spirit have incurred so much hostility for nothing?

In a way, it was a punishment from God. But no one believed it. Ather still agreed with that opinion. It was just a mysterious, twisted anger seeking a sacrificial victim.

In other words, it was a natural phenomenon.

“…and humans have always tried to defeat nature….”

Ather blinked slowly, trapped in the embrace of the evil spirit. A strange drowsiness crawled up his back. Then it settled on his brain and embraced it calmly. The weight of sleep grew even stronger, pressing down on his forehead.

He pressed his finger against the heavy feeling between his eyebrows.

“…….”

Then he opens his mouth again.

“Why wouldn’t I be crazy?”

Ather was already a madman.

“I have suffered for so long. I can no longer be proud of being human. The evil spirit has reshaped me into human form, but how can I call it human? I am now an ancient ghost, a monster. Nothing more, nothing less….”

Still, I was glad to meet the saint. I was grateful that I could follow her advice. He was just a ghost, but he could at least pretend to be human. It was a little different from the conversation with the evil spirit Argio.

“When I spoke to the demons, I didn’t feel like I was alive. I was just a mysterious being floating in the air. I didn’t feel human. But I was definitely alive. Why? I was.”

But when I was with Aram, I felt like I was human.

I won't discriminate. Both were feelings and positions that Ater affirmed and loved. What Ater wanted to say was simple. He could be human, but he wasn't human.

“And if I am a monster created by the evil god, then take my head.”

“Even though your will to live is strong, you still desire it.”

“I was just being true to my role. My time had to end along with my era.”

“Yeah, I see.”

The evil spirit embedded in the palm of his hand laughed softly.

“If you do that, I will lift you up.”

My hands are empty, right?

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (269)

269 Episode 269 In the 'Dream Amusement Park', there was a place called the Demon King's Castle. Beyond the amusement park that was splendidly decorated and blinding people's eyes, a huge castle was located at the very end of the castle walls. Those who had been officially guided to the 'Dream Amusement Park' were also allowed to visit there. However, no one had seen the owner of the dream there. "But is this really the Demon King's Castle?" "I think it's more like a theme park..." Seo Seo-hee laughed. "I have a friend who is similar." He looked at the man with the greatsword in front of him. His two eyes, dyed in a strange golden light, were unfocused. Dark tears, like melted gold, continued to flow, hardening and falling to the floor. Every time, a small, dull metallic sound was heard. Seo Seo-hee read his presence with her skill. [Ancient Ghost, Ather] "In eternity, even suffering will become mercy." "... This." It seemed as if the warrior had fallen into the clutches of an evil spirit. “The saintess must be sad.” “You must have expected this much, she seemed to know the situation well.” “At that time, it must have been just a case.” There was a big difference between predicting a situation and experiencing the situation you predicted. “It’s not a bad story for us.” We went around every place we could in the dungeon. Even in the ruins that seemed the most plausible, and in the black forest, the demon king’s body was nowhere to be found. The only place left was the ‘demon castle’ decorated with all kinds of gold and silver treasures. ‘Until then, the evil god was blocking the entrance, so we couldn’t enter.’ That’s why we came only with the vice guild leader just in case. So the existence of the humanoid monster we encountered inside was welcome. Doesn’t that mean something is going on? Of course, that too was following the evil god's intentions, but it didn't matter. It was always effective to match the rhythm when dealing with a mystery. 'The saintess seemed to have figured out the situation and was moving. So she must have given us all the information she could. Thanks to that, I was able to know what kind of person that warrior was when he was in his right mind.' And Seo Seo-hee was the best at keeping up with the rhythm. "... I don't know exactly what the evil spirit was thinking, but it seems like he's prepared a very interesting stage. Right now, he's forgotten everything and has climbed onto the stage, causing confusion...." "..." "I heard that the bishop of the Dalnim Church has betrayed. Oh, of course, this is information that only I and some of my friends know. If bad news spreads in this situation, it would be difficult for my friends." The information was safely controlled. He couldn't hear more because he had to rush back to the dungeon, but he believed that the saintess who had woken up from her dream was handling the affairs of the Dalnim Church well. In that case, Seo Seo-hee could help the saintess with what she did best. "Judging from the greatsword you're holding and your posture, you must be using your strength." Seo Seo-hee playfully waved her one-handed sword. "If that's something I'm confident in, then." "..." "She's a quiet person." He smiled and tilted his head. "That's okay." Seo Seo-hee pushed the sub-guild leader aside. "Please support me." "Are you okay alone?" "Look at those solid muscles. Our skinny sub-guild leader is not a water body, so he'll be hard to handle." "Not a water body, but… Yes, I understand." The sub-guild leader's true value was not in direct combat, but in support. He was a healer, a buffer, and a debuffer. He would heal Seo Seo-hee if she got injured, and he would put a curse on any threatening monsters. In short, he was Seo Seo-hee's lifeline. She couldn't drag someone like that into this dangerous battle. Seo Seo-hee stumbled and met the golden eyes staring at her. "……." "……." The smile disappeared from his expression. The two blades clashed. * * * The heavens and earth collapsed. That wasn't a simple metaphor. '… So this building was an illusion after all. Judging by the fact that it was easily damaged, I guess they didn’t take great care of it.’ It was just like that dazzling amusement park. 'In the end, it was just a kind of stage prop.' It could never have been someone's house or castle. 'If the evil spirit truly cherished this place, it wouldn't have collapsed so easily.' Kang Eun-seong, the vice-guild leader of Justitia, surrounded me without even a wink. I wanted to do it for the guild leader, but it only got in the way. The sound of the world collapsing rang painfully in my ears. It was a thunderous noise that shook my brain. Amidst the thick dust like yellow dust and the huge debris that obscured my vision, the vice-guild leader stared at the battle with bloodshot eyes. "...Still..." You don't spare yourself. 'When will you ever fix that bad habit?' The vice-guild leader carefully gestured and remotely treated the guild leader's injuries. His superior preferred getting hurt and getting better rather than not getting hurt in the first place. All of his innate talents made it so that Seo Seo-hee wouldn't die easily. Even if he was slightly injured, it wouldn't affect his ability to fight, so his own defense and recovery always took a back seat. At that time, would it be better to swing the weapon once more? 'Knowing full well that the people watching are worried...!' The hand holding the staff for no reason tightened. Remote healing was not an easy task. And especially in the middle of such an enormous battle. 'You wouldn't be trusting me and going wild any more, would you?' Guild Leader Seo Seo-hee trusted her friend too much. I wish it weren't so, but it seemed like she was still acting like this because she believed that Kang Eun-seong would fix her. Since she couldn't not fix him because she was annoying, it only worsened her guild leader's bad habits. "...." Anyway, she's not easy. 'They said she was an ancient warrior...' Ater was a human who could catch dragons. A warrior who fought the Demon King. A hero chosen among humans. His intuition and destructive skills, which had become even more fierce because he had gone mad, not only destroyed the 'Demon King's Castle', but also shook the world. 'It's a refined swordsmanship, but it's so barbaric.' His greatsword was bigger than Ater's body. It was a size that fit the word “large.” The blade of the greatsword, which seemed so foolish, was so rough that it felt merciless. If it even brushed against that sword, most people wouldn’t be able to expect to live. “Is that meant to inflict pain?” The guild leader quickly understood. “After all, it’s a weapon meant to catch dragons.” Thinking back to the demon’s gigantic body and terrible curse that he had first seen, he understood. He would have had to be as destructive as possible, and not picky about the means and methods, to gain even a small chance of victory. “But to be able to handle that kind of weapon so nimbly, I can’t help but think of this as a miracle in another sense.” He pushed forward dozens of attacks in the blink of an eye. His defense using the greatsword was also excellent. However, his strategy using terrain was excellent. He didn’t waste even a single piece of falling debris, airflow, or ground shaking. “It doesn’t even make a sound….” He was intentionally destroying the castle. He was continuing an almost aerial battle using the falling rocks. He jumped between the falling rocks as if he had no weight, flexibly dodging attacks, or counterattacking. “…This is a rather tricky type even among humanoid monsters.” Not only was he destructive, but he also had considerable intelligence. The saintess said that he was once a royal librarian, and he certainly seemed capable of it. However, that wasn’t the only problem. The enormous density of the curse surrounding him. “…Ugh….” “Eunseong!!” “It’s okay!!” The vice-guild leader was pouring out his magic power to prevent the curse from reaching his superior. Blood flowed from the orifices of his body. His flesh was rotting and his mind was becoming disoriented. While he was worrying about the guild leader, his own body was actually being eaten away, but it wasn’t enough to kill him anyway. If it was pain that could maintain the status quo, it was more efficient to ignore it. That was the thought of the vice-guild leader, but it didn’t matter. Justitia’s basic attitude was like that. A guild where people who valued the ‘right cause’ more than their own personal safety gathered. They discussed and saw the world countless times for that reason. ‘If I didn’t think I could be of any help, I wouldn’t have followed you here in the first place.’ He stared at the guild leader through his glasses. My veins were bursting and I was almost shedding tears of blood, but I couldn’t let my guild leader’s help go by for even a moment. He trusted me and entrusted me with his body. ‘… Detecting a curse. It’s a corrosive curse. Is it directed at equipment and weapons? It’s specialized for metal. Counterattack. Return it. This monster is too clever. Does he have the brain to identify the curse while going wild like that? Injury, this time it’s the neck. We need to stop the bleeding first. Connect the veins. We can’t let him feel pain. Anesthetize him, and then, yes, cut the largest stem there…’ Remote healing was a skill that only three people on Earth could do. For a civilian doctor, it was like operating on a patient who wasn’t anesthetized and was still conscious from over 1km away with forceps. It wasn’t something that could be solved easily by pressing a button. But the vice guild leader did it. It was actually familiar. The superior who assisted him always asked his friend who was by his side to do ‘part-time work.’ Yes, he called it a double-job. '... Each of us does what we do best.' And the one who has spare time takes on the burden of his 'friend'. 'The guild leader is doing his job just by restraining and dealing with that monster. My role is to prevent that person from losing focus or getting seriously injured. My role is to assist that person so that he can do his job.' Even so, he had to constantly block the attacks flying towards him. If he died here, who would assist the guild leader? The situation was not relaxed enough to leave the guild leader alone. 'I don't think I've ever heard of a warrior this strong...!' When he thought about it, it was natural. He was a high-quality material that fell into the hands of the evil spirit. The terrible curse surrounding him must have been bestowed by the evil spirit. He was out of his mind in many ways. "Ugh...!" If I had known this would happen, I would have brought a few more! '... Now that this commotion has occurred, someone will come soon. The guild leader is not a person who will give up. If we can just maintain the status quo, support will come and seize the opportunity. But if a certain person interferes, there is a high chance that they will become a burden or be taken hostage. That would actually have the opposite effect.' He wanted to send a telegram. As a capable wizard, he was also good at telepathy. He could even contact people on the other side of the world. However, he did not have the luxury of doing so right now. Telepathy was completely different from speaking. If he was not careful, he could remotely destroy someone's head. He wanted to avoid that situation. However, even if he were to ask for support during his spare time, who would he call? 'If we had to select talent in that way in the first place, how would we explain it? Only the strong ones? Only A-class or higher? No, the ones who interfere in this battle cannot be simply A-class. They have to be top-tier A-class. Since this is a place where curses run rampant, vulnerable people should also be excluded. Damn it, aren't there any other S-classes?' The red-haired collector came to mind for a moment, but he quickly ignored it. 'That person is no help!' He wasn't the kind of person who would come to a place like this easily in the first place. His personality was also problematic, but that wasn't the only problem. Bisabal was weak. You might wonder how an S-class could be weak, but he really was weak. 'As the manager of the bizarre treasure, he must be well-versed in curses, but in a battlefield this dense, there's a high chance that he'll get injured. The way he fights is ultimately to utilize his collection. He excels at defense and command rather than attack. If the scheme is already set up this way, it could backfire.' And he couldn't stand it. There was a high chance that he'd try to trick her into thinking it was art or something. Bisabal was the least respectful of life among S-classes. The only life he respected was his collection. 'More than anything, he's someone who hates the guild leader.' On the surface, their relationship wasn't bad. However, Bisabal unilaterally detested Justitia. To put it simply, they were a bunch of suckers. Despite that, they always gave him good support. Seeing that, the collector's feelings seemed to be close to love and hate. So even now, if I desperately asked for help, he would click his tongue and come help, but no, no. No matter how much I think about it, that’s really not true. The collector was not someone I could trust. ‘What the heck…! If only Sergio Hunter had been okay, I would have asked him for help!’ Sergio Hunter, who was secretly an S-class and a saint. He was also a priest who served the Black Cloak. There was no way he wouldn’t be good at curses. He was an all-rounder who could both tank and heal. ‘He even has a good personality.’ Unlike my parents. It was fortunate that it almost turned into a huge disaster, but anyway, Kang Eun-seong’s current situation was not so comfortable. ‘I can’t expect support from the collector. Right now, the collector is just a human who came to this dungeon to play. The collector’s guild members are probably busy supporting him. Is there a most suitable person among the A-class hunters who participated in this expedition? There isn’t one? There isn’t one, damn it, there isn’t one.’ The conditions for a person who can interfere here and bring victory are strict. Strong, smart, and versatile, it had to be close to S-class. “……!” Nevertheless, as always, Kang Eun-seong found the right answer. “Excuse me—!!” The vice guild leader slammed the floor with his staff—!! A large white magic circle appeared around it, and soon a pale figure similar to him appeared. Boom! “Huh?” The girl who had been forcibly dragged by Kang Eun-seong’s teleportation looked momentarily flustered. “Uh, ah.” Then she nodded. “Uh…of course.” “I will formally apologize for this rudeness.” “I wonder what kind of commotion this is as soon as I return to the dungeon, but...” The saintess, Aram, held up the silver moon. “You called well.” The victory was with them. (To be continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (270)

270

Episode 270

'I thought it would turn out like this.'

It wasn't a story that was agreed upon in advance with Ather.

But when they had no choice but to leave Ater in the castle and run away, they both knew the future. Ater would fall into the hands of the evil god. For that reason, Aram came with Dalnim in his arms.

Now it was her turn to bring Ather.

“Phew….”

Aram raised the moon into the sky.

It rose high, very high, and soon became a moon that covered the sky. The whole world was dyed in a crimson void. The moon was the center, and the stars twinkled. That pale color, shining with a cool silver, was their moon religion.

It belonged to Aram, an adult.

“…Thank you for waiting for a long time.”

She lifted her lips, casting a huge universe over the shaking heaven and earth. Her pure white hair sparkled like a meteor shower made of silver and jewels, becoming one with the universe.

Her red eyes, their pupils filled with white moons.

“From now on, it’s my stage.”

She was determined to steal the stage from the evil spirit.

* * *

The first thing Aram did after stealing the moon from the bishop was to wake up the 'stars'.

Those who had been possessed by the evil spirit soon came to their senses and followed the bishop. Aram asked them, who were reproaching themselves.

This time, I ask you not to sacrifice yourselves by your own choice, but to become my stars. Become stars that are awake on their own. Become part of my universe.

The death row inmates complied.

“There are no people in this world smarter than the priests of the Dalnim Church.”

She was confident.

I see it in their eyes. In the eyes of my disciples, in the eyes of my brothers in the moonlight, all these curses and mysteries are contained.

The material, direction, and effect of the weapon Ater used. The fate surrounding him. His will. The movements of his body. The range of influence caused by it. Everything else was visible.

The star clouds whispered.

'And I'm listening.'

Aram called the guild leader of Justitia, who had summoned me.

“Guildmaster?”

“My name is Kang Eun-seong. Please call me comfortably.”

“I intend to take the initiative away from Mr. Ater from the evil spirit.”

“…….”

Kang Eun-seong closed his mouth for a moment. Then he answered a beat later.

“Don’t overdo it.”

It was a shame to receive help from young saints, but it was a grateful thing. If they were lacking and could receive help, they should accept it with a guilty but glad heart.

“I hope you don’t get hurt, is that possible?”

“In this situation, it would be difficult to avoid getting hurt at all. That too is mine.”

Aram, floating in the air and space like a ghost, grabbed Kang Eun-seong's shoulder.

“I’ll try not to get hurt though, since you were worried about me.”

The curses surrounding Kang Eun-seong are lifted in an instant. The curses that made him shed tears of blood, suffocate, hear voices, and see visions.

That alone was enough to show the saint's power. I couldn't help but acknowledge her strength and ego.

“Then please do so.”

“Of course.”

“I will take charge of the guild leader. Is that okay with me?”

“I will stop the curse coming from Mr. Ater.”

Aram waved her hand lightly like a conductor. Her hair shone brightly, and the stars twinkled noisily in response. Like a clear sound. Like light bouncing off like a drizzle.

It was like a musical score. The stars moved to find their places. Countless stars gathered their wisdom. What kind of curse is that? What kind of mystery is this? And they came up with a solution.

"good."

and,

It's blocked.

“…You are wonderful.”

“Now, you can rest easy and assist Guild Leader Seo Hee-soo.”

“That’s the most welcome news I’ve heard this year.”

“You don’t need to protect me, my brothers are watching over me.”

“If that’s the case….”

Aram was physically very weak. In a way, she was like the collector Bisabal. However, Kang Eun-seong believed her words. The vast universe that unfolded before his eyes made him believe it.

Seo Seo-hee laughed loudly as Kang Eun-seong focused entirely on his superior.

“—Ahahahahahahahahaha…!!!”

My body felt light.

“It’s been a long time since I’ve seen such a battle! Such cooperation! It’s such a blessing and a miracle to be able to join this dangerous battlefield with such a compatible friend!!”

“…….”

“Isn’t that so?”

Jeez, paang—!!

Seo Seo-hee's sword broke.

“Mr. Ater!”

—And then, countless daggers were wielded.

“I’ll take it until you completely let go of all your anger, I’m really good at that!!”

Seo Seo-hee flew with agile and large movements, unlike before when she was heavy and stiff. Daggers flew from her hands like a circus performer.

The dagger nicks Ather's Greatsword, obscures vision with falling fragments, and inflicts numerous wounds.

Aram thought as he looked at it.

'Indeed, the number one hunter in Korea.'

His main skill is 'Friend'. He is influenced by those he recognizes as friends.

'That is, it can be copied.'

Seo Seo-hee could fight as long as she had unlimited stamina and regeneration. It could be for a day, a week, or a year. There was even a record of her continuing to fight for four years in a dungeon where the flow of time was different.

'That is why the role of a supporter who assists him is even more important.'

No matter how talented Seo Seo-hee is, how wide her fighting strategy range is, and how strong her mentality is to endure it, she is still human and needs to recover. And a healer or supporter can make that possible even during battle.

So, the guild leader and vice-guild leader of Justitia are almost one body. I heard that they are always together when there is a big battle like now. This is because Vice-guild leader Kang Eun-seong is the second person in the world who can best assist Seo Seo-hee.

'And the first person who said he would assist me well was the leader of the second largest guild in South Korea, Jeong Hae-un… .'

It is one of the symbols of eternity, like Seo Seo-hee. Aram, who had thought of it that far, focused on the situation of returning.

Ather's eyes, now turned golden, are visible.

“…….”

Golden tears of blood were flowing.

‘…same symptoms as my mother.’

And at first glance, it resembled the eyes of an evil spirit.

'Is that the kind of symptom you get when you're possessed by an evil spirit?'

Aram delved into the curse, the mystery. Do not be prejudiced. There is no right or wrong in knowledge. Just focus on the fact itself. Aram closed his eyes and fell into the darkness.

All she had to do was wrest control of Ather from the evil spirit. She had already done something similar with Dalnim. She could do it, she could do it. All she had to do was recall that familiar feeling.

'Mr. Ater was crazy to begin with.'

The only reason he could act normal was because he endured. It was never because Ather had completely become peaceful. A wretched mass of flesh that had fallen into the abyss of subhumanity, imprisoned in a thorn prison for thousands of years.

Ather described himself as such. Perhaps that was right. The evil spirit had reshaped him into a human being, but had not been able to remove the hatred and anger that had arisen from his suffering. Ather cried, laughed, and broke down like an animal at the traces of his comrades.

'The evil spirit, what Mr. Argio did… must have just added a little bit to it.'

How easy would it be to get hold of someone who was already crazy?

'But I know Mr. Ather.'

I know the will to live. The vitality that kept him going. I know the faith that he never lost even as he became flesh. Ater was not someone who would be easily taken into the hands of an evil spirit. Aram knew that.

The two had never spoken, but Aram believed in Ater as if they had come to an agreement. No, he was convinced. It was simply a realm of knowledge. It was merely something that was perceived with intellect, not emotion.

"……"

Aram extended his hand.

The stars cried. They resonated. They resonated throughout the universe, clear as a harp.

One far away, one next to that, one further away. We filled the universe with our diagrams.

'Unravel all the mysteries that bind him.'

And replace it with mine, with Dalnim's.

'Breaking through the curse that surrounds him.'

In this way, Ather eliminates the threat he did not want.

'Mr. Ater is also looking for me. I have to ask him questions, and Mr. Ater will answer me. I just have to touch him. I just have to touch him for a moment and talk to him. That's enough...'

And Aram soon reached Ater.

"it's okay."

It touched his imagination.

* * *

Woohoo …

“…….”

“…….”

The loud noise stops and the world becomes quiet.

“…Mr. Kang Eun-seong.”

“Yes, your Majesty is safe.”

“I wanted to ask about my friend’s well-being first.”

“You know I’m always okay.”

“Where in the world can you find someone who is always good?”

Seo Seo-hee dropped the broken spear on the floor. The cracked spear shattered into pieces even with the slightest impact. She had been holding it together with her magic power during the fight, but when she released it, it ended up being broken.

Seo Seo-hee, who had sent away the weapon that had been replaced for the 48th time, relaxed her shoulders.

“Oh my, Sakshin….”

“Please stay still while I treat your injuries.”

“No, I can take care of this.”

“But there’s no need for the guild leader to worry about such things….”

“It’s okay, things are different now. I just got some free time.”

Seo Seo-hee saw 'Mr. Ater' standing still with his greatsword in his hand.

“It seems the saint did a good job.”

Aram also had her eyes closed in a similar manner. Her long hair swayed gently like a living river, and the stars embedded in her hair sparkled with beautiful colors.

Seo Seo-hee looked around and smiled.

“He’s a minister….”

“Would collectors like it?”

“Unlike me, that person is quite fond of such mysterious sights.”

“I don’t know where they find such artistic beauty in such a sight….”

“Why, isn’t it cool?”

“It’s more creepy than that.”

The void of space.

“…to make us realize the insignificance of humanity.”

Only the faint whisper of stars filled the universe.

They were still in space. It was proof that the saint had not yet taken control from the evil spirit. But for this moment, they could rest easy. This was the realm of the Dalnim Church saint.

'But apart from that, it's not very pleasant.'

The universe was vast. The fragments of a castle, seemingly man-made, were floating in the void. It was a space of nothingness where temperature could not be detected, but somewhere it was cold. Cool and lonely.

He listened to the murmur of the stars, touched his ear, and looked at his superior.

“Have you finished recovering?”

“I’m good at that too, Eunseong Kang.”

“The guild leader’s fighting style makes my liver drop.”

“You can put something back together if it falls off, but that’s a joke.”

“That’s not what I meant.”

“That means I trust my friends that much.”

Seo Seo-hee smiled brightly.

“Is Kang Eun-seong the vice-chairman for nothing?”

“…Ahem.”

The guild leader, who had cleared his throat, looked at the saintess and Ather.

“I hope this will make things a little better.”

“No, I don’t think….”

At that moment, the universe shook.

“……!!”

“Prepare for battle.”

“But the saintess is still…!!”

“Look carefully.”

yet.

“This is how you fight evil spirits.”

Crunch-.

Ather's neck fell off.

“…….”

It's a sudden, unrealistic sight.

Kang Eun-seong saw blood scattered across the universe, the heads of ghosts with their eyes closed, and the saintess quietly opening her eyes. All of this sight was as grotesque and beautiful as a work of art that mere mortals could not understand.

And soon, Kang Eun-seong became aware of the whole situation.

“…Did the saint fail?”

“Well, I guess we’ll have to try that out more to find out.”

Crack, crack, crack-!!

The universe began to crack as if it were a jewel.

“We haven’t defeated the Demon King yet.”

“…No, ha….”

“You are amazing.”

The universe of the saint was fixed without being completely broken. The stars were filled with the screams of agony. In between the gaps, all dimensions seemed to mix.

Explorers of the Black Forest and the Ruins, as well as hunters struggling to survive inside the dungeon, meet each other's bewildered gazes through the dimensional rift.

And an evil spirit descended upon the universe.

"My friend"

With a body as small as a human, he reaches out with his empty second hand and grabs the head of the warrior floating through space.

Then he held it in his arms. His left hand, one of his third hands, held the ghost's arm like a doll. The red hair, as rich as wool, covered the universe like leather.

Barefoot, barefoot adorned with all sorts of ornaments, treads the void. A rich tail like the aurora wraps around one leg. The silk that wraps around him flutters like a fairy. The golden water that filled his broken head flows down and paints the divine body, gold upon gold, the head of his bosom.

Then it dyes the universe golden.

『Friends, friends, my friends…』

The brilliance of the red feathers bent strangely and looked down upon the world.

"Prove that you are human"

The third hand's golden eye contained a human being.

"I am before you"

"Why don't we do it together?"

And then all over the universe, rotten and decaying dragons appeared.

They all had red fur. They coiled their long bodies like snakes and howled, they were stuck in the debris of the universe and struggled, and they were huddled together like corpses, forming a mountain and a nest. They looked like stagnant blood.

The second hand of the evil spirit strokes the head of the ghost and commands.

"Open your eyes"

The wraiths opened their closed eyes, and the dragons roared in rage.

“—Oh, I’m so angry.”

“I was very angry.”

“Are you guys like that too?”

“Anger bestows value on those who are prepared.”

“Will it be a weapon or a swamp?”

“You will decide.”

“Tell me.”

“Are you a human or a beast?”

The evil spirit laughed among the dragons.

"Can I help you?"

The disaster spread like an epidemic.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (271)

271 Chapter 271 A fierce battle began. “What the heck is that…?” “It’s a dragon…!! A dragon has appeared!!” “Everyone, wake up and prepare for battle!!!” Strange things happened here and there in the ‘Dream Park’. The entire sky turned into space, and soon it shattered into a crack. And through the cracks that resembled shards of a mirror, strangely rotten dragons crawled out. They weren’t very big, but they were bizarre and disgusting. Some of them had human bodies. Instead of dragon feet, they had human limbs, or their heads were not dragons but humans, or they were rotten and twisted as if they had been cursed. An evil spirit whispered through the cracks of space. “Prove it.” It was either the evil spirit’s spite or a test. Either way, it was a disaster for humans. “Everyone wake up! Don’t listen to the whispers!!” “Priests, please!!” “Everyone, wake up so that you don’t get consumed by the curse…!!” “If you hold on, we will help you!!” The dragons screamed at the patience and will of the humans. “AAAAHH ... “Ah, ahahaha…!! Yes, humans are disgusting!! Ahh, we abandoned these kids! They deserve to die!!” “Catch that bastard, don’t do anything stupid!!” “AAAAH!!! AAAAH!!! Don’t let me live, please! I can’t live like this, kill me…!!!” Quite a few of them committed suicide. Some were able to stop it, but some were not. In the midst of the extreme hell, a few hunters who had some time to spare noticed the sight reflected in the cracks in space. “The evil god…!” “The evil god is over there right now!!” The evil god’s face was reflected in the cracks like a broken mirror. Only half a face. A head full of golden water. The hunters who encountered that ecstatic smile lost their fighting spirit and went crazy. These were the words of those who had faced the evil god. “Everyone, don’t make eye contact with the evil god!!!” He had no eyes, but at the same time, he had eyes. It was a foolish choice to face a twisted mystery like the evil god head-on. However, the situation was not so good. “Captain, the damage is too much…!” “Why the hell are these little punks looking straight at a god and talking nonsense!!” “Even if you tell me that…!” How many battles with the divine have there been on Earth? “That’s why these little punks have to work so hard!!” Well, there used to be a lot, but recently there haven’t been that many big battles. It was thanks to the symbol of eternity holding its ground. It was also thanks to the Earth’s system blocking them. The young hunters were inexperienced in fighting the divine. “Hey hey hey, tell them! Tell them quickly! Don’t look up at the sky!” [—Ah, Hunters! Hunters! I’m telling you in the middle of battle! Don’t look up at the sky! Don’t look up! I earnestly request that you focus on the battle on the ground right now!!] “That’s right, my kid did well!!” “The captain only says I did well at times like this!!” “Then when the fuck do you use the loudspeaker?!” “No, not that loudspeaker…!!” “What the hell, fuck, keep telling them!! Keep yelling!!” [—… I’m telling you! Don’t look up at the sky! Don’t look up! I earnestly request that you focus on the battle on the ground right now…!!!] As one person came to their senses and began to take control of the battlefield, the hunters from other guilds also spread the same message around them. With the help of the experienced hunters, the confusion was somewhat resolved. “We’re so busy fighting right now that we’re dying, how can we afford to look up at the sky, you punks!!!” The young hunters came to their senses at the harsh cheering of their seniors. “Ugh, fuck…!!” “…This is why divinity is divinity….” “I’m going crazy, can we really win this?” “Do you understand? If you don’t want to die, raise your axe!!” The same confusion occurred in the Black Forest and the ruins. “T, this is…!” “Dragons are crawling from the amusement park!!” The hunters who had been researching data in the old world, an abandoned dimension, quickly got into a battle stance. It was because liquid-like creatures had rushed in through the narrow hole leading to the abandoned world.

Naturally, they were rotten dragons. “What, what the…!” They crawled into the abandoned world like a sticky swamp. Then they crawled, shaking the black forest. The sticky, viscous fluid threatened the hunters with its toxicity. Fortunately, the hunters gathered in the underground world had quick judgment and most of them were experienced. They quickly escaped the confusion and began to restrain the dragons. The priests of the Moon Church were the same. “We will protect you!” “The wisdom of the Moon is with us, so please take care of this inadequate vessel…!!” When fighting against divinity, the priests were by far the most powerful. They protected their comrades with their sinful faith. With the help of the priests, the hunters could run wild more easily. And it wasn’t just a battle between humans. “—Kurururururururur!!!” “N. Wolves…!! Wolves!!” “Kwaak!!!” The animals in the dungeon also came forward to help the humans. “Huh?!” -Caak! Caak!! Kkuuuuk!! Caak!!! “Th-that’s right now…!!” “It’s a crow, a crow is helping us!!” “Good job, damn it!! Blocking our vision!!” The wolves used their large size and agility and strength to bite and crush the dragons that were rushing towards them. The crows flew through the air, blocking the dragons’ vision and scratching their eyes to obstruct them. “Ugh, ugh… Huh?” “Wow.” “…Who, fox?” The foxes took care of the injured. “Wait a minute, where are you going…?” “…What, there’s a hole in a place like this?” The foxes gathered the weakened into the holes they had dug. With their fluffy fur and charming gestures, they lowered the guard of the people and helped them recover by taking them to their holes. The mentally exhausted and even the insane also received help from the foxes. The fox dug into their arms and helped them find stability. It licked them with its warm tongue and hugged them with its fur. “…th, thank you...” “Kae-heung.” The hunters who came to their senses like that went outside one by one and helped their comrades again. “T-this is how it is…!” “But it’s worth it!!” “Come on, you little earthworms!!” Whether it was a created world or an abandoned world, the animals helped. The fact that humans and other species were helping them boosted their motivation. The hunters fought the bizarre dragons that poured out, seeking a little motivation. However, the situation was not hopeful. “This is just a dream, after all, the dungeon of the evil god.” “I can endure it, but how long can I do this…!” And as expected, the experienced hunters answered. “Just believe.” They had always built up this kind of history. “Someone will save everyone.” “Ha, but...” “That’s how we’ve lived until now. There’s nothing else we can do anyway.” A middle-aged hunter stabbed the dragon and said, “So hold on.” There was always a hero among them. * * * Yes, it was a fierce battle. “Mr. Kang Eun-seong!!” “Leave it to me and rush in, I’ll be assisting you!!” “Thank you as always!!” Kwajijik-!! Seo Seo-hee swung down her greatsword. “Hoo…!!!” Kwagagagagagagagagagagagag-!!! The slash flew and shattered the evil spirit’s body. 『Hey, friend. Why are you so angry?』 『Come on, tell me. I’m listening.』 『I’ll help you, I’ll embrace you… 』 Clang!! The sound of breaking glass or porcelain echoed. The once quiet universe was filled with all sorts of loud noises again. Seo Seo-hee swatted away the giant hand that was attacking her like an old tree and counterattacked the evil spirit. He called out to the saintess of the Dalnim Church. “Saintess!!” “Just continue.” She also did not stay still. “All curses that touch you, I and my brothers will cut them off.” Aram turned his back to the great moon and received help from his brothers who were shining stars. Many priests gathered their wisdom and stretched out their hands. Then, all the mysteries, visible and invisible, were refined once. The curses that were burning hotly cooled down with the coldness of the moon. Aram did not stop there, but gestured to the stars and composed a musical score. Ting! Ting! Ting, ting-!! The stars made a strong sound and declared their intention. “Brothers that I love.” He waved his hands like butterflies, and a meteor shower fell like a dagger. “Have courage, have determination, and look at the world. I am with you. The wisdom filled with the moon is with us! The day has come when our faith will rewrite history!” One, two, three. And countless stars twinkle. The stars give birth to light. The scattered halos soon formed their own moons, large and small, shining with their will. Their stars touch the evil spirit, scatter, and explode. “Our wisdom creates mystery!!” They touched the essence of the evil spirit. Divinity is mystery. These stars are humans who imitate mystery. “Read that lofty diagram! If you read it, fall like rain! If you fall and touch, destroy the mystery! I will help you, the mystery of me, the moon, and the universe is helping you!!” All the stars shone brightly in response. Aram laughed along with him. “…See, you’re doing well.” When the saintess gestured, the stars roared. Aram was grateful for all of this. Her mother in reality, the bishop of the Moon Church, was uniting the spirits of the four siblings and coordinating their individual wills to shine. She was truly a great administrator. Yes, failure also becomes knowledge and wisdom. “Eyes, right…! Attack the eyes! Block the view!!” “Saintess, you seem a little too excited!!” “Push the nose of that unlucky evil spirit!!” “Oh my….” Seo Seo-hee laughed awkwardly while moving diligently. It seems that the saintess had accumulated a lot of resentment while she was kidnapped. Should I say that she was glad that she was so full of energy? 'Well, anger is a pretty good tool.' Anger was effective when overcoming fear, and it was also effective when giving her a reason to live. Anger could also be used to mediate conflicts, and sometimes gave her the strength to show abilities beyond her capabilities. 'A weapon and a fortress.' The evil spirit's words were accurate. 'She is indeed worthy of being the divine spirit of anger.' Seo Seo-hee looked the evil spirit straight in the eye. Unlike when she had seen him before, he had shrunk to the size of a human. No, he must have been that size originally. He must have grown larger as curses and hatred piled up. That was such a sad story. "...Saintess!!" "Speak!" "How long do we have to do this?!" "Hold on, you can do it!" Aram answered. "Wait until Mr. Ater finishes persuading!" Whether they would be annihilated or learn something was ultimately up to them. And isn’t this anger the ghosts’? * * * “…….” Ater knew this sight. “…a ruin.” It was a ruin full of life. “Oh, that’s mine…!” “That’s because you ate late!” “It’s really deadly!” Children with unfamiliar faces were playing with food. They grumbled and got angry, but quickly made up. Then they laughed. They were typical of children growing up healthily. “So I…” “Oh, really? Isn’t that too much of a lie?” “No, I said it’s true?” There were also young men laughing in light and bright voices. They seemed to be chatting happily. They were weaving silk or making accessories with it, as if they were good with their hands. “Now, spread your hands out there….” “Like this?” “I told you not? Like this!” There were also people sharing the magic and martial arts they knew. They gathered together to discuss, or were amazed when someone demonstrated. There were also adults kindly teaching children with weapons. “…….” Ater clenched and unclenched his hands. ‘… Am I invisible to those people?' He couldn't tell exactly where he was. Was this a dream? Or a revolving lantern? Maybe he had just gotten to where he wanted to go. Ater walked through the ruins. The ruins were much more splendid than he remembered. The walls were filled with neat records and beautiful paintings. Ater looked up at the ceiling at the sound of a small noise, thumping, thumping. "...Ah." Twilight. 'Wonderful.' Twilight created by human hands was being created. "Mr. Argio." "Who is calling me?" "My god." "...Hmm, let's see..." The one who had climbed up the ladder chair that was long enough to reach the ceiling looked down at Ater with a grin. His long red hair that reached his waist swayed leisurely like the tail of a beast. The last dragon looked at the last warrior. "I'm not a god." "...Of course." Ater let out a hollow laugh. (To be continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (272)

272

Episode 272

“Let me introduce myself.”

Argio came down from his very high chair and welcomed Ater.

“Now, these are our children. Some were born here, and some were brought here. But most of them were brought here. Most people who come here are afraid of having children.”

“…Oh, I see.”

“Most of those discussing over there are commoners. Oh, I see. Do you see a few people with white faces over there? They were nobles. They have a lot of knowledge and they are sharing it.”

“…….”

“They are… Oh, they are making me some jewelry. You know I like shiny things? Oh, if only all the world’s wealth could stay in my nest.”

He led Ather with his bright red hair fluttering.

“This is the children’s bedroom. Well, there are many who use separate rooms individually. Those who start a family here inevitably need a house that they can use only… Fortunately, this place is really big, so I was able to respect their personal time.”

“No, I, I don’t want to hear that kind of thing.”

“Does our librarian have any plans to get married? Haha! Don’t take it personally, I was just curious. It turns out that relationships in this world aren’t as easy to make as you might think. Isn’t that right? Come here, don’t you think? Come here.”

Argio also introduced us to a huge farm.

“This is where my friends farm. Although it is a harsh place because the sunlight does not reach, the harvest is not bad, so everyone seems to be somewhat satisfied.”

“…It’s certainly not possible to take care of this much farmland with just torches. Still, the crops look to be in excellent condition despite not getting enough sunlight. Have you improved the varieties?”

“You could say that. After all, it’s a crop that grows in the Black Forest. It seems to have been influenced in many ways and has a unique structure. But it’s still pretty tasty, so it’s okay.”

“I never thought you’d be so serious about your food. Mr. Argio, not just you, but everyone you’re responsible for… Breeding must take a lot of effort.”

“It’s thanks to having talented friends.”

Argio laughed.

“The friends who came here are diverse. Some I dragged along, some came willingly, and some were offered to me as sacrifices.”

“Dragged here…?”

“It would be better to live with animals than with pigs, but there are some pitiful people who insist on it. Oh, even if that weren’t the case, I brought in and trimmed the sprouts that were making annoying noises.”

“…When you say it like that, it sounds a bit scary….”

“What on earth do you think I am? Yeah, you’re right. I’m very violent.”

"aha…."

“Yeah, he was just looking at what I was making with interest.”

Argio smiled with golden eyes.

“Shall I show you?”

“…Yes, I want to see it up close.”

“The ladder chair is narrow, so that would be difficult, so I’ll guide you to a place where you can see it up close.”

He climbed quite a few steps with Ather. Then they came out onto a terrace that looked like a spire. Well, Ather didn't know what to call it, because it jutted out so that he could see the ceiling.

However, as Argio said, the ceiling was visible from quite close.

“…….”

It was a beautiful sight.

“…Magic isn’t included?”

“I’m a little awkward at writing that kind of thing.”

“I hope you will also consider my position when I hear that you are clumsy with magic.”

“Truthfully, when doing this kind of activity, magic is rather… uncomfortable.”

Argio scratched his neck as if something was bothering him.

“For me, magic is all about combat. It’s pretty rough and crude. Not really suited for that kind of activity.”

“So you made it with your own hands?”

“That’s not difficult. I just adjust the size of the torch to determine whether it’s full daylight, dusk, or evening. That’s enough magic to do.”

“You seem to be using it for convenient purposes….”

“I guess I’ll have to tease the smart ones and learn some cute magic. It’s a good thing the place where the torches are used has this high and huge ceiling, otherwise it would have been difficult to control the size of the torches.”

"…still…."

Ather looked at the ceiling as if possessed.

“It’s great.”

It is so magnificent that it is hard to believe it was created by human hands.

It contained nature. No, it was nature itself. Through engraving, he created the time of day and the sky according to it.

Argio could be heard laughing. When Ater saw him, Argio explained.

“I guess the ruins can’t see the sky. There are a lot of people who are depressed, so I thought about how things could get better. That’s why I showed the flow of time like this.”

“…Isn’t the scale too large?”

“I have to accept that my friends are like this too. Many of my friends are tough and strong, but there are also many who are more fragile than you can imagine. I have to be careful not to ruin them.”

“You say something like that so casually and then you say you’re not God….”

“Where in the world can you find such a god?”

He laughed, lightly patting Ather on the back.

“If you’ve seen everything, come down.”

“…I haven’t seen it all.”

“If you keep looking up at the fake sky, time will pass quickly.”

“…….”

Ather nodded.

“Yes.”

On my way down the stairs, I saw a deer with horns.

“Oh, my dear brother has come. Hey, my friend. Say hello. This is my little brother.”

“…Your little brother is really cute.”

“Right? I think you’ve grown a lot, but I still wish you had gained some more weight. If you’re so skinny, you might get bullied by your friends in the Black Forest.”

“Well, I’m not sure. You seem quite sturdy for a deer….”

“Can’t you see these legs that are nothing but bones?”

“I can see the muscles.”

Of course, it was skinny. But that was the limit of the deer species. The deer he introduced was quite muscular for its species. It looked so solid that it seemed like even your teeth wouldn't fit if you bit into it.

Argios led Ather with the deer.

“I didn’t know such a good friend would come to see me. Wasn’t it hard to get here?”

“It was very difficult.”

"okay?"

“And his neck was cut off.”

“That’s really funny, did you get your throat cut?”

“The remaining body ended up in the hands of the evil spirit.”

“You are a very dedicated person.”

“I’ve never really thought about it that way….”

“Why not?”

The evil spirit laughed.

“You gave your all to seal me.”

“…….”

The torch went out.

The once warm ruins were now filled with cold, heavy air.

I looked around. It was full of broken and crumbling debris. Dust was piling up, bugs were crawling around quietly, and moss was growing everywhere.

The ruined ruins were instantly filled with silence… .

“…That’s right.”

It was a scene from the ruins immediately after the evil spirit was sealed.

“Aren’t you supposed to be in a happy dream?”

“I was just admiring a precious painting I had.”

“You have no regrets about those old memories.”

“I’m not that delicate of a person.”

“I think you’re also called the evil spirit of dreams….”

“Isn’t it fine as long as it’s fun either way?”

Argio, who was stroking the deer next to him, smiled and shrugged his shoulders. Then he started walking again. Ater followed him obediently.

“You too have suffered a lot because of me.”

“It’s true that more than half of the hardships in my life are because of you.”

“It is because you only say the right things that the saintess is so angry.”

“Rather than that, it seems like I’m more angry at you….”

“How can you expect me to resist such a sweet reaction?”

“It is indeed the devil.”

“Then, who am I?”

Argio laughed and went down the stairs. The sound of deer hooves clacking echoed through the ruins. It was a pleasant noise, like stones settling into place. A light rhythm.

Argio rubbed his chin.

“Hmm, okay. I see….”

“…….”

“Why did you come all the way here?”

The evil spirit was puzzled.

“Were my arms that uncomfortable?”

“…it was comfortable.”

With his head cut off, he was drowned in rage and hatred. Ather screamed and struggled inside, going mad. He also looked at the world falling apart through the cursed eyes of countless dragons.

It was more comfortable than I could have imagined. The feeling of being whole. The feeling of being fulfilled. The feeling of falling into the endless abyss without having to struggle in pain or exhaustion. Honestly, it wasn't bad. It was quite pleasant.

“But I will remain human.”

I wanted to do that.

“It was because there were too many things I didn’t want to give up.”

“Well, that’s true. As expected, these guys who are called warriors are really stubborn….”

“If I didn’t have that much stubbornness, how could I have tried to seal you by sacrificing my body? You wouldn’t be able to do something like that without going crazy. But I wanted to do it.”

“You weren’t kicked out because you were disliked by the higher-ups?”

“That may have been the case. My personality didn’t suit the royal family. But in the end, I made my choice. I could have held out longer… but I just did.”

“Then all three of us were crazy.”

The evil spirit smiled like a satisfied, full beast.

“Then let me ask you again.”

Argios reached the underground tomb and saw Ather. The deer also looked at the warrior with straight eyes.

『…Why did you come to me?』

He was wrapped in bandages.

A rough voice that had been completely worn out. It still had the power to charm people, but it was hard to call it a beautiful voice. It was covered in bandages from head to toe. No, it looked like a bandage, but it was just torn cloth.

It was covered in blood and sap. Argio's body was bent over as if it was difficult to even stand, and his arms and legs were as thin as old trees. His golden eyes were not even visible.

“……”

Ather's face immediately distorted as he saw that his neck was torn and ripped as if it had been bitten.

“…Argio.”

"okay."

“It’s you….”

The last dragon killed in the burned forest.

“…I, you….”

The evil spirit watched him in silence. Was it indifference or permission?

Ater reached out his trembling hand towards Argio's. He hesitated as he had done countless times, but he finally grabbed it.

It was a thin hand that looked like it would soon crumble into ash. He held it with reverence like a son serving God, and with earnestness like a refugee seeking salvation.

“…….”

My breath was trembling.

“…I wanted to meet you.”

He cried.

“I wanted to apologize.”

The words burst out.

“As the last remaining old-time human, I wanted to pray for those who betrayed and turned away from all the dragons. I, I, dared to be called a warrior… but before that, I was a human… I was a person who understood and despised all the tragedies… I wanted to apologize.”

It was his honest feelings that he had to hide and ignore due to responsibility and fate. It was guilt. He poured out his feelings, even if only in this absurd dream of an evil spirit. He did so because he was human.

“I’m sorry. I’m really sorry. We were wrong.”

『…You say that?』

“This is what I am saying. This is an apology from me. This is an apology on behalf of humanity. We have suffered countless losses and tragedies from you… but that doesn’t mean anything is over.”

"What do you want to end?"

“Actually, we don’t have to finish anything. But there are things we have to do. There are things we have to do, things that are rightfully ours….”

Ather, who had been crying with her forehead against her withered hand, raised her head and looked at the bandaged face.

"…sorry."

『…….』

“I’m sorry, really.”

"ah…."

A faint smile appeared between the gaps in the bandage.

“…I wanted to hear that.”

The last dragon slowly embraced Ather.

It was a weak force that could have been easily shaken off, but Ather accepted the embrace obediently. A lukewarm warmth spread along with the scent of ash left behind by the forest's burning.

He asked.

“Would you like me to tell you the name I first received from God?”

“…Of course.”

“Saitan.”

“…….”

“I had a good dream.”

He patted and stroked Ather's back leisurely, like an old parent in his twilight years.

“Thanks, my friend.”

Argio whispered.

“…I forgive you.”

“…I, too, forgive you.”

“Thank you.”

He broke the embrace, took Ather's hand, and lightly touched his lips to her fingertips.

“And you did well.”

He laughed softly, then soon crumbled into sand.

“…….”

"thank you."

"…ah…."

Ather clenched his fist.

The deer, having expressed its gratitude, sat down on a small sand dune as if making a nest. Then it closed its eyes.

The deer, who seemed to have fallen asleep and was less restless, soon melted away. He soon became a bouquet of small flowers.

All that remained was the deer's skull.

“…….”

Ather sat down and carefully swept the fine sand and the cluster of flowers blooming on it. After staring blankly at it for a while, Ather reached out his hand.

There was something among the sand and the flowers. It was a silver necklace with a scarlet gem.

“…I will understand that it is a gift.”

Ather stood up and immediately left the underground tomb. His hands were heavy and his breathing was light.

He closed the tomb door and climbed the stairs. He climbed and climbed. He saw the ruins, dimly lit by torches. It was a slightly older sight, a scene from when Ather had been transformed into a human being again.

"…ha…."

Ather went further.

After walking for a while, I came across a place where children were playing around childishly. After passing that, I came across a place where young men were making jewelry. After passing that, I came across a place where runaways were sharing their wisdom.

As soon as that passed, the ceiling in the distance became visible.

“…Is it the night sky?”

The night sky, where the stars and moon twinkle even when the lights are off.

“That’s great, Seyton.”

How many people have been comforted by the sky created by human hands?

He was a god even when he was human. He was a human even when he was god. He was a saint who knew how to forgive even though he was angry countless times.

And finally, Ater stood in front of the entrance to the ruins.

“…….”

Okay… .

He wore a necklace.

“…We have to move forward.”

I took a step.

* * *

Bassuk—.

Ather's head was shattered.

"…ah…."

Aram clenched his hand tightly when he saw that.

‘…you did your part.’

Aram stared straight at the evil spirit.

The head of the evil spirit, whose second hand became empty, tilts.

He looked down at his empty hands, his lips slightly parted, and he twitched. It was a faint movement, as if he were calling out to his dear family.

The hand soon began to shake, tremble, and then with a scream it tore off half of my head.

『… Ah, ah, aaa ...

The overflowing golden water looked just like the tears of an evil spirit crying in pain.

『Why, why, why, why on earth!!! Why did you leave me!!!』

"Forgive me? Forgive me? Forgive me?"

『Please, give me anger…! Pain!! Insults—!!!』

The red wings trembled strangely. It radiated the pain and confusion of the evil spirit. It was a sight far removed from life and warmth, like the nerves of a dead bird fluttering in life.

『My brothers…!!!』

The rotten and decayed dragons screamed in response to this discord. The great roar drew the dragons together one by one. Aram's broken, damaged, and imperfect universe began to fill up with dragons once again.

“Your Majesty, may I ask you to explain?”

“…I think you probably know the gist of it….”

Aram answered, wiping away tears.

“This is your first and last chance.”

“I see.”

“I’ll do it this time.”

“Are you okay?”

“Our brothers and sisters should have something to say too.”

She frowned with reddened eyes and held the broken moon in her arms.

The moon in Aram's arms soon regained its original form. Aram held it in his hand and looked at the dragons gathered in one place, and gathering. Their anger was mixed with confusion.

'Fallen Dragons.'

Poor messenger of God.

She whispered softly as if she was talking to a friend.

“…we can talk.”

Aram raised the moon again, and the silver moon shone brightly.

“There are a lot of similarities.”

The faint warmth of the moon spread throughout the world.

The young dragons were soon captivated by its warmth.

“…Right?”

Aram smiled wryly.

(Continued in the next episode)

The Artist Who Paints Dungeon RAW novel - Chapter (273)

273

Episode 273

Do you know how much anger is buried in that forest?

* * *

One day.

The child was struggling with an empty stomach.

'There's nothing to eat here.'

Look here, look there, there's nothing but weeds. They're so dark that no matter how you look at them, they don't look edible. The smell is strange, too. In addition, the color of the soil where they took root is murky.

The smart child tried his best to endure the hunger. If he ate something like this because he was hungry, he would get sick right away. He didn't want to do that, since there was no medicine and no one to take care of him.

But that too has its limits.

"…eww…."

Just a sip of water.

'Wouldn't it be okay if I just drink it once?'

I drink it little by little so that I don't get sick. It tastes really horrible, but I feel like I'll die right away if I don't drink this stagnant black water. I don't like that kind of thing.

The child walked breathlessly until he reached a small puddle. He reached out, shivering. Sizzle—a sound that would not have been heard in normal water came from his fingers where they touched. But there was no pain.

'It'll be okay.'

What could be scarier than dying right now?

‘You just have to tie your neck, that’s all you have to do…!’

Gulp.

“…! Ugh, ugh…!!”

My throat was sore as if it was burning.

Tears welled up in his eyes. The child cried out in pain, not even knowing that the monsters could hear him. He cried until he realized that the monsters were watching him, and ran away. He held his neck and ran for a long time.

But it didn't work. For some reason, the sensation in his body gradually became dull. His vision turned red, black, and blue. He couldn't breathe properly as if his ribs were being squeezed. The child saw himself only after he fell.

“…….”

It looked like it was rotting alive.

“…Ugh, euah… Aaaah….”

Is this my hand? Is this my arm? Why are my legs like this? Why are my feet like this? I'm not ice, so why am I melting? It hurts, it hurts so much. It hurts. It hurts, it hurts, it hurts…!

“Oh, Mother… Mother! Whoaaaah…! Oh, I hurt so much…! Please save me! Father, Brother! Where is everyone! Dahlia, I hurt! I’m scared! Help me…!!”

The voice gradually became more and more bizarre. I hated it so much that I scratched my neck, and it felt strange. When I looked at my hand again, there was a disgusting piece of flesh stuck between my fingers, squished like cheese.

'That's ridiculous.'

This must be a nightmare. This must all be a dream. Human skin can't be this fragile. I've scratched a lot when it's itchy, but this has never happened before. Yes, of course. I'll wake up from this nightmare soon.

'Then Dahlia will come wake me up?'

